Week 2: Letting Curiosity Lead

What question have I avoided asking about this situation?

If I approached this with curiosity instead of certainty, what would I want to understand?

What information might I still be missing?

Where might someone else see this differently than I do?

What question would widen this conversation?

What assumption would curiosity challenge first?

If I stepped back for a moment, what would I want to explore before deciding?

Curiosity slows certainty.

A better question often reveals a better frame.
