

Post-Interview

Self Scorecard

How it works

After your next job interview, ask yourself the key questions on the next few pages, but remember: phrase your questions in the third person.

This approach has been proven by researchers to yield better advice.

Question One

(Your name),

How well do you feel you presented your unique value?

Question Two

(Your name),

Is there anything else you wish you had shared? Why?

Question Three

(Your name),

If you had the chance to redo that interview, is there anything you would do differently? Why?

What to do next

Look at your answers. If you find you left anything important unsaid, put it in a follow-up message or make a note to mention it in any future interviews.

If you feel confident that you showed what you can offer, then you've done what you can!
