A. No, they're issued to the officer. They're going to be on the inventory.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. They were taken into the sheriff's office inventory and then issued to the officer that won it.

A. That's correct.

Did I touch on the fact that Watson will make a decision regardless whether it's against policy or procedure?

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. I think in general that was clear, but are there specific instances that you can reference that you didn't reference last time?

A. No. I just want to make sure I hit that --

Q. You did.

A. It's so frequent, though, that --

Q. What is the effect on the agency when the sheriff doesn't follow the agency's own policy?

A. Well, what it does is, it sets the tone of the only consistency is inconsistency, right? And when the sheriff isn't following his own policies and procedures, what message is that sending down to the troops?

It sends a horrible message down saying I don't have to follow policy and procedure, but I'm going to hold you to it; and when you aren't held to it, when you violate that, I'm going to write you up.

Q. Would it also lead people to the conclusion that -- wouldn't it also lead to the natural conclusion that if you follow a policy, that the sheriff might still discipline you or you might meet criticism or demotion or job problems because you followed policy that the sheriff no longer wants to have be the policy?

A. It's almost as if you're expected to think like him. And if it is any perceived disrespect or embarrassment, you're going to be talked to about it, if not hit with some sort of discipline.

We just had a recent case, the Glen Stanley internal investigation, which is closed -- which I suggest you pull a copy of that -- where the sheriff goes outside the disciplinary matrix.

We have a matrix that says this is Level Two, Level Three, Level Four or Five, and this is -- you know, you got a Level Two, you get this many points. This many points is from A to B, and he'll just add C in there.

Q. And in this particular investigation was it to the officer's detriment?

A. Yes.

Q. Is this recourse for the officer under those circumstances? Can the officer appeal that decision? Do they have -- do they enforce the matrix as it exists, or are they simply subject to the sheriff's rulings?

A. Only if they meet the standards set forth in the sheriff's board, which is greater than a two-day suspension. In this case it was one-day suspension, but they put the guy on 12 months of disciplinary probation. And I believe, if you go back and you look at what a Level Three violation is, 12 months of disciplinary probation is not allowed.

And then what you do when you put somebody on disciplinary probation is, the next time they wear the wrong color socks or doing something that's in violation, then they're not eligible for a career service board.

It's almost like you're setting up them for the next violation, to render them ineffective in a career service board.

Q. And because it's a one-day suspension, it's not appealable?

A. Correct.

We touched on changing past practice without really any discussion with anyone.

Q. Correct. Yes.

A. We touched on Watson and Decoursey routinely holding paperwork and not signing it, essentially neglecting the duties of moving the institution along.

And we -- I know we discussed not reducing things to writing, and we discussed the staffing shortages. So I think that kind of cleans up what I can remember from the last one.

Q. Was there anything additional in response to the question, are you aware of anything immoral, unethical, or illegal, that occurred in the sheriff's office while you were there --

A. Well --

Q. -- that we didn't cover last time?

A. I think that's where we're going to move in to the next section.

Q. Okay.

A. So the sheriff is a steward of the taxpayer's money. Would you agree with that?

Q. Agreed.

A. When he came into office, there were two vehicles that were provided that were left by Darnell and Huckstep. They were not happy with those vehicles even though they were functioning vehicles, and they immediately purchased two black Tahoes; and they were high-end Tahoes to the tune of in the mid 70s. And then, of course, all the equipment and everything had to go in on top of that, so you're talking probably upwards of 90-plus thousand dollars just because they wanted new vehicles. That was kind of like the first thing. Everybody kind of questioned that.

And then he had the badges removed from them that say like "High Country" to make it look like it wasn't, you know, an expensive vehicle as it was, but everybody knew what time of day it was. They saw the badges on there. Everybody knew what was going on. You could see it.

So that was kind of, in my opinion, something that the fleet department should have set back and assessed and advised the sheriff, "Hey, if we want new vehicles, this is where our budget is. This is how much money we have left. If we make this purchase, then we can't purchase these four cars instead of these two Tahoes."

That didn't happen. He immediately ordered the vehicle. I don't think they came off state contract. I think they got one at the local Chevrolet dealership. Or I don't know where they got them form; you'd have to pull that. One was 74. The other one was 77 or somewhere in there. They were both in the mid 70s. So that was one thing that kind of came up.

So there were some Nissans that were purchased, and I believe they were for the drug task force or somebody, I think, after I had left. And there was an allegation they were purchased from Gainesville Nissan, and his son is one of the sales managers at Gainesville Nissan.

Q. Those type of contract purchases would be normally not done through Gainesville Nissan? They'd be done through state contract?

A. Generally, yes, unless there is a specific reason. Like, I know Darnell, when we purchased Harleys, the state contract price was, say -- I'm just throwing a number out there -- 17,000, but Gainesville

Harley said, hey, we'll sell them to you for 15.5. The sheriff felt we should keep our money local, and she was actually saving money and was being a good steward of the taxpayers' money and purchased the Harleys there.

But as far as going outside of that, the only thing I know of going outside was that some vehicles were purchased from Southeast Car Agency, especially when it came to things like the trucks for the aviation unit, where we could get something that was used; we didn't buy them new. They weren't new vehicles. They were used vehicles.

But there was some allegations that the Nissans came purchased from his son; and I don't have any evidence to substantiate that, but you could certainly run that down.

One of the tasks that I was given fairly early on was -- the office of professional standards was housed within the main sheriff's office at 2621 Southeast Hawthorne Road. And the office of professional standards has a door that goes right into the sheriff's suite, and that was so that the captain of OPS could go in and confer with the sheriff because the captain was direct report to the sheriff. It had been set like that since I've been there. That was always OPS. Some years prior to that, it was at the jail.

He had me -- he directed me to have OPS relocated back to the office -- the department of the jail, and he then commanded those offices for himself and had them remodeled where he made a rather large office for himself and spent a significant amount of money remodeling that office and then purchased some furniture to fill that office.

Q. Was the furniture purchased off of state contract?

A. I was told it was purchased offline. He went online and bought it because he got a better deal. To what that was, what that P.O. looked like, I have no idea.

Q. Would that be unusual?

A. That would be unusual.

Q. Outside the standard procedures of the sheriff's office to purchase furniture?

A. Correct, because every time we've purchased furniture -- like we purchased tables like these, chairs like these that sit in the squad room that I'm sure you've been to. All those were purchased through a vendor that we've got. And every time we've had to purchase something, A and B has to come to us with a book like this and said, here's what's available. This is what we can purchase. So to purchase furniture outside that realm, to my knowledge, had never been done.

Q. Okay.

A. There was a lot of controversy surrounding expenditures plastering his name on the building.

Q. Where are those?

A. On one occasion it didn't look right, and he bought it again.

Okay. You're aware of it. We'll move on.

On the back of everybody's vest said "sheriff" just like the cars say "sheriff" on it. It doesn't mean that you are the sheriff. It just indicates like police, sheriff. All those were ordered to be removed and replaced with deputies.

Q. Was it on the cars as well as the uniforms?

A. It was not on the cars. It was just on the uniforms.

Q. Did anybody -- with regard to this, did anybody confer or look at the Florida Statutes to ensure that the officers would be properly marked for the purposes of fleeing or attempting to elude or resisting arrest with or without violence, to ensure that the standards that are set forth in the statutes would be met?

A. I brought that specific statute that you're referring to to the attention of the undersheriff and said, "There's really no reason for this. It doesn't designate them as the sheriff, but, you know, it's for the purposes of authority."

And the response was, "There's only one sheriff, and that's the guy that signs in green ink. Everybody else is a deputy," and that was the reason for the switch.

But again, you have whatever those patches were, ten, eight, twelve dollars times how many, 300 patches. Again, it's just another tick of expenditures that didn't need to happen.

Q. Understood.

A. The sheriff and the undersheriff has continued to disregard Florida Statute 112 on numerous occasions, which obviously stemmed from the lawsuits that are out there pending.

Q. Do you have any information to indicate whether their disregard of 112 procedures and rights that are contained in Florida Statute 112 are based upon ignorance, that they don't understand them? Or is it based on an intentional act that they don't care to provide those rights and meet their responsibilities?

A. Personally, I believe they don't care.

Q. So at the time these violations have occurred, are the rights of the officers and responsibilities of the agency being brought to the attention of the individuals who are doing this and being told we don't care?

A. My understanding was 112 violation was raised; and then when the interview was stopped, that individual was charged with insubordination. And 112 clearly says that that can't happen.

Q. Which officer was charged with insubordination because they refused to be interviewed?

A. I believe it was Frank Williams, but I would have to go back and look. I'd have to do some additional research on that.

Q. I may need you to follow up on that if you can identify any particular officer who was -- I'm saying charged, but that's probably not the right word -- was given -- an OPS investigation was instituted for insubordination or insubordination was added to the current charged violations?

A. I believe if you pull the Glen Stanley case, and you pull a recording of the Loudermill that went along with the Glen Stanley case, the general counsel -- essentially, the argument was being made that truthfulness did not occur, that the officer actually -- it was alleged that the officer did not -- and I don't have first-hand knowledge of it, but from my understanding, is that the officer didn't do something and, in the actual packet, said that they had done it, they had sent an email.

The undersheriff indicated on his recommendation that it was truthfulness, that it didn't occur; and when the disciplinary rep went to make the argument that it was not truthfulness, the general counsel said, "Well, what charge do you think was appropriate?"

So I would encourage you to go back and listen to that audio recording of that Loudermill. In other words, you're going to get charged with something, and we're going to find something to fit.

Q. Okay. Understood.

A. I would encourage you to probably pull his calendar, Watson's calendar, and his gas receipts. On the very early part of his tenure he was there a lot. I know he was there a lot because I was there a lot, and I saw him a lot from very early in the morning, 5:00, 6:00 -- I think we discussed that last time -- until 8:00, 9:00 at night.

It got to the point where we needed the sheriff to approve something or do something, again, because we couldn't approve anything, the sheriff is not here. The sheriff is not here. The sheriff is not here. Where is he? Is he working? Is he not working? It seemed like he was never around.

So I would encourage you to probably pull his calendar for --

Q. What month and years?

A. I would say July '21 and after.

Q. Is there some incident you can point to where his attendance to the office stopped? Was it sudden, or was it gradual?

A. It was gradual. It seemed like he gradually was not there more and more, and he was unavailable, which then just stalemated --

Q. Right, because everything has to go through him.

A. Everything has to go through him, and then everything just slows to a crawl, at best a crawl.

The sheriff's son, Clovis Watson, IV, was the subject of numerous traffic stops and some criminal acts with GPD. This information was forwarded to the sheriff, but he never seemed to rectify it with his son. It continued to happen.

He was stopped a couple of times by our deputies for traffic violations. We did a DUI checkpoint down on South 13th Street where his son was completely irate and completely out of line just coming to pick somebody up that we had dealt with. I called the sheriff and he said, okay, and that was the end of it.

It was like his son could just do whatever he wanted to because his dad was the sheriff. There was no -- it was a very poor reflection on the sheriff, very poor reflection on the sheriff.

We talked about fails to process paperwork.

I think Ed Bennett -- you might want to talk to Ed Bennett about the disapproval of secondary employment at the academy.

Q. With regard to that, are you aware that the academy became short of staff because of the sheriff disapproving secondary employment?

A. I can't swear to that.

Q. We'd have to check with the academy?

A. You'd have to check with the academy. I would imagine it severely impacted it; but to what extent, I can't speculate.

Q. Understood.

A. The sheriff seems to make decisions based on emotion quite a bit rather than, you know, actual facts. The sheriff demoted Mat Yakubsin from lieutenant back to sergeant for essentially liking a Facebook post. Let me back up.

He demoted him, but he ordered me to demote him. So I had to call him and tell him, "Hey, look, you're demoted because you liked a Facebook post."

Q. Was that formal discipline?

A. He was on probation.

Q. So he was already on disciplinarian probation?

A. No, he was on new-hire -- promotional probation.

Q. I see. So he could be demoted back to his prior rank without any discipline occurring?

A. Correct.

Q. And does that cause him to lose pay?

A. It does cause him to lose pay.

Q. How much, roughly?

A. I'd have to go back and look at the scales. I mean, you can make a request for the pay changes in HTE. A minimum of five percent; but Yakubsin was not that tenured of a sergeant, so potentially ten percent more. I don't know the exact numbers on Yakubsin.

Q. And you know the basis for that demotion was liking a Facebook post because you were instructed to tell him why he was being demoted by the sheriff?

A. I was instructed by the sheriff to demote him back to sergeant; and the sheriff had told me that, "He liked that Facebook post, and I'm going to demote him."

Now, keep in mind everybody else that also liked that Facebook post -- it surrounded a lieutenant Facebook post from the jail that was subsequently terminated. Howard, I believe, is his name, received corrective counseling for that, but Yakubsin was demoted.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Did that go through an OPS review?

A. Oh, no.

Q. So there's no documentation on any of it?

A. No.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. Did Yakubsin get corrective counseling?

A. I believe he may have, but he was hit with a demotion and the corrective counseling where everybody else was just hit with the corrective counseling. In other words, I felt as if the demotion was excessive in comparison to what had been handed out to everybody else. That's kind of where I was going with that.

We discussed the negligent promotions last time.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. While we're on that topic --

A. Which topic?

Q. Negligent promotion. You mentioned Cleveland Cox. Talk about your knowledge about what happened when he tried out for the SWAT team?

A. He tried out for the SWAT team. He wasn't recommended, and then he was appointed by recommendation of the undersheriff.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Also, what the consequence was to the person who did not want him appointed to the SWAT team.

A. Oh, he adamantly opposed it. He was -- I can't remember if it was Josh Crews or Rich Howell at the time.

Q. Josh Crews.

A. Josh Crews absolutely did not want him to the point he wanted to go meet with the undersheriff, and I think he did meet with undersheriff about it; but the decision was made that he did not get his number one and number two picks, and he got Cleveland Cox. And Cleveland Cox was almost promoted at the recommendation of the sheriff.

Q. What happened with Josh Crews with his relationship with the SWAT team after he didn't want Cleveland Cox on there?

A. I'd have to go back and scroll and think about the timeline, but I can tell you, if you're referring to his removal from the SWAT team, his removal from the SWAT team, I do not believe, was tied to that incident.

We had a SWAT call-out in Monteoca, and the sheriff and undersheriff were there. And Josh Crews was insubordinate to me; and the sheriff found out about it, and the sheriff removed him from the SWAT team based on that incident.

Q. Were those two things occurring closely in time, the Cleveland Cox incident and Monteoca incident?

A. I believe the Cleveland Cox thing was a couple months afterwards. It could have been pretty close. It could have been pretty close.

Q. I don't know the answer, but my understanding is that the delivery of the information that Cleveland Cox would be assigned to the SWAT team and the removal of then lieutenant -- captain, sergeant, I'm not sure --

A. Lieutenant Josh Crews.

Q. -- Lieutenant Crews were delivered at the same time.

A. It may have been. It could have been in close proximity, and I can see how maybe he could correlate that if it was in close proximity, but my knowledge of the incident, it was really based on Lieutenant Crews' insubordination. Because I was ordered by the sheriff to conduct -- to basically put gas on the house with the hopes that the guy would come out, and Josh Crews came over to me and said, "I hope it's not a tactic," and he was rather nasty about it.

I'm not on the SWAT team. I've never been on the SWAT team, and I don't pretend to be on the SWAT team. So when it comes to SWAT-related matters, I would defer to Josh. Josh has got the knowledge. He's been on there a long time, along with his brother. His brother is no longer with us. He's retired. But I had a direct order from the sheriff that this is the way we're going to proceed, and Josh didn't agree with it.

Q. Let me make sure I understand the sheriff is directing a tactic to remove an individual from a home that a SWAT team is doing?

A. To put gas in there, yes.

Q. But is the sheriff qualified to make a decision about a tactic to remove a barricaded subject?

A. In my opinion, no, and that just falls on the back of what I just said. I'm a major. And even when I was a captain over those units, if I called you as my SWAT commander, and you said, "This is what we need to do," I'm going to defer to you. As long as we're not violating policy, we're not violating the law, and we're not creating some additional liability for the sheriff, I'm going to defer to you because that's your area of expertise.

Q. But doesn't it create liability if the sheriff, who is not qualified, is directing a tactic to be used in an extremely dangerous situation?

A. Oh, absolutely. The direction should not have come from the sheriff. The sheriff should have let Josh Crews run the incident, is what it comes down to.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. What was the barricaded subject?

A. There was another individual in the house. I think it was domestic.

Q. So the bad guy wasn't the only one in the house?

A. Correct.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. I guess you're probably the wrong person to ask, but do we put gas in the house when there's more than one person in the house?

A. Generally, no, but I would defer to Josh Crews and let him discuss that incident in greater detail.

Q. And the insubordination that Josh demonstrated during that incident, was he ever a subject of formal discipline? Or was it just we're going to discipline him by removing him from the SWAT team?

A. He got a corrective counseling from me for his insubordination, but then the sheriff removed him as the SWAT team commander.

Q. Did they put gas in the house?

A. I don't remember. That was very early on in the tenure of the administration.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Did the sheriff give a reason why he wanted the gas? Did he have some place to go?

A. Uh-uh. It was clear he was trying to direct the incident where he didn't have the experience to direct the incident.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:
Q. Was the sheriff at the scene?
A. He was, and the undersheriff. They both showed up. And, you know, to be fair, normally the sheriff and the undersheriff, the major does not show up to SWAT teams. You know, normally we're behind the phone somewhere, and we're letting those people run those operations; but that's not the way the sheriff wanted it run.
The captain was there. I was there. Captain Bella Blizzard was there. I was there. Decoursey was there. The sheriff was there. And I think probably Josh felt like he wasn't being allowed to operate under the parameters that he normally operates because his decision-making was being impeded by us.
BY MR. KRAMER:
Q. And that's what lead to his insubordination.
A. Correct.
Q. That's also consistent with what you've previously testified to, that all the decisions are being made by the sheriff to operational and tactical decisions.
A. That is correct.
BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. Were you familiar or did we talk about it last time, about the Cleveland Cox investigation that went through the office of professional standards?

A. I was aware.

Q. Do you know what happened with that eventually, or why it was terminated?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Is there some connection or familial connection between the undersheriff and Cleveland Cox?

A. We speculated that there was, but we -- I don't know of one, but it seemed to be really out of character that he was placed on the SWAT team and he was promoted against the objections of essentially everyone.

Q. Was he also assigned to CID?

A. He was.

Q. Against the objections?

A. He was. It was a pattern existing with Cleveland Cox, but I don't know what the connection is.

MR. KRAMER: I want to talk about time.

We can go off the record.

(An off-the-record discussion was had.)

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. All we were discussing is how much time we have remaining before our other witnesses to need to appear.

A. Eric Hutchison was promoted to the rank of acting lieutenant when he wasn't on the eligibility list. I would suggest you pull the employee profile and the eligibility list. When that was called to the sheriff's attention, that he wasn't eligible for promotion, the sheriff did act and rescinded that; but then here recently Scott Bonafide has been promoted to an active lieutenant, and he's been moved to civil.

As you're aware, civil is a completely different animal than any other part of the sheriff's office. You deal with evicting people and serving papers that can and cannot be served at certain times of day. To my knowledge, Scott has no knowledge of the civil process.

I did mention Rashawn Flanders. I do not have that paperwork that I thought I had.

The last one is Pat Ford Thomas. Michelle Clement was the division manager, and she was removed for seemingly no reason and moved over to the contract monitor at the jail, which she's got zero experience at. She was removed from her role as a division manager, and she was replaced with Pat Ford Thomas.

Pat Ford Thomas is the wife of Dave Thomas, who, interestingly enough, was one of the very core group of people in Watson's campaign.

Q. We're going to speak with Michelle Clement. We just haven't gotten her scheduled yet.

A. Okay. I have for you a copy of one of the personnel orders that went out, and as you can see, the quantity of moves that were made at one time are significant; and that's not one of them, but the reason why that's significant is because I have this to go along with it, which is completely out of character, which has everybody's picture and where they're going, where you can definitely see folks --

MR. KRAMER: All right. We'll make this an exhibit to your statement.

That's all I have. I'm sure if something else comes up, I may think of something or whatever.

(Exhibit 1 was marked for identification.)

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. One last question I've got. When transfers and things were made, were the positions that they went to, were they resumed made for? Or were persons just told, you're going here, and you're going here?

A. Under the Darnell administration, generally, what would happen would be, an open position announcement would come out: Any interested deputy sheriff that wishes to apply to be a detective, please submit your name to ISIS, which is our internal system. Interviews are conducted, and then somebody would be selected from the list.

Under the Watson administration, that pretty much went out the window. He just made moves willie-nillie as he felt necessary with no rhyme or reason is really the short answer.

MR. KRAMER: Thank you. We may be talking to you further.

Q. Did you get that from him?

A. That's just the perception.

And let me say that we have forms that, obviously, go up to certain levels, and some of the forms go to the sheriff. For instance, if you have a -- if you win a prize, for example -- I'm sure you guys have heard of SWAT Roundup.

We had an incident where a couple of guys won some rifles at SWAT Roundup, and guns, which I'm sure you're familiar always happens. And history has always been when that item comes back, that the sheriff has allowed the person to keep it. We fill out a form that basically says, "Hey, I received this as essentially gratuity. What do you want to do with it?" and history had always been ever since I've been there that the employee was just allowed to keep it.

Those forms sat for months and months and months, and we continuously asked and asked and asked; and the paper was never being processed, which seemed to be the history of things like secondary employment forms.

In other words, I work for Home Depot. I have to fill out a form saying I work for Home Depot, I work five to ten hours a week. You know, it doesn't conflict, I won't be doing any law enforcement action, blah, blah, blah, and it gets approved all the way up to the sheriff. Those type of forms just sit.

It's like there's a neglect to fill those forms out and get them back to people, especially when it comes to the folks that live in reduced rent apartments; because those reduced rent apartments are really considered secondary employment, and now we have people who come back and fill out the form, say, "Hey, I have this secondary employment. I live at ABC Apartment Complex," and those forms never get processed.

Lately -- I've been gone, but lately -- I'm sure you guys can follow up with it -- some secondary employment has been approved, but it's been very sporadic; and then others, it's been straight-up denied. And those denials have come on the backs of years and years and years of approval.

In other words, I might be teaching at the academy. I taught at the academy for 15 years, let's say, and then all of a sudden this year it's a denial for no reason, and there's no reason given.

Q. Is that detrimental to the functioning of the sheriff's office?

A. The academy, absolutely, because we have an agreement with the academy that we're going to provide people to teach the recruits.

Q. Well, maybe I'm being too obtuse. If employees are being mistreated and treated very differently than they have been by prior administrations without any explanation, does that create an environment where employees are likely to remain?

A. Absolutely not. What happens is too often -- I'm sure you guys are aware that law enforcement salaries are not that high, and almost everybody has got some sort of secondary employment whether it be at the academy or whether they have a business. Like we have several folks that have lawn maintain businesses, you know, and they thrive on those businesses, especially during the summer months when grass cutting is frequent. And when those forms aren't being approved, then you get into a situation where am I allowed to continue my business that I invested all this capital in, or what do I need to do? Do I need to quit and just move on?

And I'm sure if you pull the vacancy rate, the FT vacancies on January 5th of 2021, you pull the FT vacancy rate as of today, you'll see that they're vastly different.

Q. Just so I understand, do those supplemental employment forms have to be yearly?

A. They do.

Q. So even if you've had the same position for years and years, it has to be approved every year?

A. Every calendar year.

Q. Is it October 1? January 1?

A. January 1, if my memory recalls. I think it's January 1.

Q. Would your understanding be, there would be individuals who would resubmit after January 1 and would not get an answer for five, six, seven months?

A. Lengthy amounts of times or outright denials with no excuse, or no response, really. And, you know, the academy relies on those folks to teach recruits.

Q. Right.

A. I do believe we discussed that it could be found in one of the audio recordings that the undersheriff said that nothing is final until it's in green ink.

Q. Correct.

A. So that just kind of plays into that.

Q. And, also, I want to follow up on that issue. I want to make sure I understand what you're telling me, which is that -- and I'll use my organization as an example. We have -- I delegate control out to supervisors because I am physically incapable of making timely decisions in 20,000 cases of prosecution per year, and that is necessary for the proper functioning of the agency.

A. That is correct. I felt as if I had less decision-making authority as a major than I did as a lieutenant under the Darnell administration, which chokes the entire operation.

Q. So the same is true at the sheriff's office, and probably on a much larger scale than my organization. I have 135 employees, and the sheriff's office has how many employees?

A. About 960.

Q. Nine hundred sixty employees, and then essentially day-to-day decision making is being made by the sheriff?

A. Essentially.

Q. And that has prevented the sheriff's office's proper functioning because decision-making is delayed, and this -- what you've been talking about, this example of additional employment, is just maybe one example of delay.

A. It is one example, yes.

Q. And there are many others?

A. Right.

Q. And I don't know if you can speak to this, but is one of those examples, would it be assisting other agencies?

A. Yes.

Q. And are you aware during the time you were at the sheriff's office of a change in the decision-making process by which the sheriff's office decided whether or not to assist other agencies?

A. Absolutely.

Q. And if you could clarify. Does the sheriff's office have obligations, contractual and grant-oriented obligations, to provide assistance to regional agencies with equipment and expertise that those agencies would not have?

A. Absolutely.

Q. And could you explain what happened while you were there? What was the change from the prior administration? How did that affect things?

A. So operationally when I was the patrol support lieutenant, which was over all the special teams, Bradford County would call and say, "Hey, we've got an incident up here. We need the SWAT team."

So we're part of a region. The SWAT team is a regional team. There's funding that comes out of --

I can't remember the abbreviation, but it is -- there's funding that comes out. They fund some equipment, and that is really meant so that when Bradford County calls, or Union County folks that don't have a SWAT team, we go up there and we handle it.

And usually the protocol was, they would call. The captain would say, "Hey, Union County has a SWAT call-out." I would notify the SWAT guys, and then they would go.

The captain would then turn around and notify the chain upwards, "Hey, this is what's happened. I'm just kind of letting you know that Bradford County has called, or Union County has called, and they need the SWAT team."

That's been the practice for years. I mean, time was of the essence when you're talking about calling out a SWAT team. If we're not calling them for some preplanned event three days from now, then we don't have time to sit around and talk and have approval. It's go.

That completely changed under the Watson administration. He simply demanded that, in order for any asset to leave this county, that that sheriff that was requesting or that chief that was requesting the equipment called him first, which severely choked the response time.

So it was a complete spin. It was something we weren't used to, but he wanted the sheriff of Bradford County, Union County to call him and ask for the equipment before we were authorized.

Q. And what if he wasn't available?

A. (Shrugs shoulders.)

Q. You're holding up your hands and saying there's no answer for that?

A. There's no answer for that because we weren't authorized to proceed.

Q. So, for instance, just an instance that I was personally involved in was, there was an officer-involved shooting in Levy County, and they only have maybe four deputies on the road at any one time. I don't know if you're aware of this incident.

A. Correct.

Q. And when three of the officers were involved in a shooting, then they had no -- essentially, one deputy remaining on the road. They requested assistance from the Alachua County Sheriff's Office. Would that assistance request have to go through the sheriff himself?

A. It would.

Q. Would you agree that under those circumstances where a county was essentially now --

A. Vacant.

Q. -- had no law enforcement available, that time is of the essence?

A. Yeah, it is essential. And I'll follow up with another example.

The two deputies that were shot in Gilchrist County under the Darnell administration. As soon as that happened, everybody started rolling. We rolled the command -- I mean, we had the mobile command bus. We had schedules done to start covering the county, and then we just started notifying the sheriff, "Hey, this is what we're doing. This is how we're taking care of them." It was almost the information was flowing upward rather than flowing downward.

And under the Watson administration it's completely immerse. It's not allowed to happen in that manner. And the folks who may call 911 in Gilchrist County, now that there's no deputies available, they rely on our assistance. And we have the resources to provide to Gilchrist County or to Union County that Union County or Gilchrist County doesn't otherwise have.

MR. KRAMER: All right. Let's go back to things that you may -- unless you wanted to follow up. I'm sorry.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Has he ever denied one of those requests that you know of?

A. Yes.

Q. Which one?

A. There was an incident where University of Florida had called and requested the use of the jail vans. There was something going on at the Reitz Union. I think Darren Baxley had called and requested the jail vans. Don't quote me. I think it was Darren Baxley, deputy chief. Sheriff Watson refused to let them utilize the jail vans.

All that is, is a transport function. It's not like we were sending personnel. You know, we send in a couple of people to operate the vans, but we weren't sending crowd management. We weren't getting involved with their business on campus. They were just simply asking for assistance because, again, the university, you know, they've only got 80 FTEs, you know, somewhere in there. They don't have the capacity to deal with 15 or 20 arrestees at the same time. It would impact them severely to have to deal with that, and we had the resources. I didn't understand what the purpose of withholding a jail van was.

Q. When you say impact severely, would that mean creating an unsafe environment for the remainder of the students and faculty on campus?

A. Potentially. I mean, it depends on how the incident goes. If you got all your guys on the incident tied up with 10-15, or arrestees, if you will, and then they need to focus their attention somewhere else, next thing you know, you divert your attention to the people that need to go. Now you have an unsafe number of officers with the arrestees; or do the officers stay with the arrestees, and now you've neglected this? You have to make a decision.

You've only got so many personnel. The jail van would have been very quick, easy. You bring the jail vans over, put them in the jail vans, pat them down, get them in there, at least hold them there for a few minutes or get them out of there, whatever they decided to do. It was a relatively simple request.

There was some issues surrounding the drug task force, which I'm sure you're aware of, and the sheriff not wanting anyone to operate in the county.

Q. Were you an employee of the sheriff's office at the time that the sheriff directed the removal of all the equipment from the drug task force?

A. No, but my understanding is it was done in the middle of the night under some covert operation, was the rumor.

Q. Correct. I just didn't know if you were personally involved.

A. I was not.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Were you there when Nassau County requested assistance on an officer-involved shooting, and it was denied?

A. Actually, yes. I believe I was.

Q. Do we know why?

A. I don't know why.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. But that denial would have come from the sheriff?

A. It come from the sheriff. No cop, working cop, like even coming up through the ranks, when they had something like that, would deny that type of assistance. Those are the things -- when things were choked, it chokes to the point where it doesn't -- it doesn't run efficiently.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. And for the record, let me correct that. It may have been an officer-involved shooting, but actually the deputy had been shot; and they had a subject cornered, and they were asking for assistance from SWAT teams.

A. Correct. Correct.

MR. KRAMER: Anything further on what he's said so far?

THE WITNESS: One of the things that -- you know, you talk about assets. The SWAT team is one of them, but more frequently the helicopter is something that -- you know, we have an aviation unit. And folks in Putnam County and Columbia County, you know, they rely on that air support. You know, one helicopter there, arguably, is equivalent of 15 or 20 units on the ground.

Those requests were frequently -- we ran into problems where there would be a pursuit at, say, 2:00 in the morning, and they're calling and asking for our assistance. And then you have to make the decision, do I say, okay, go ahead and go, and then get chewed out the next day because they didn't -- because that sheriff didn't call our sheriff at 2:00 in the morning?

I mean, that's the type of slow-down we're talking about, to the point where you might as well not even send them at that point. It's almost rendering it useless.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. And it's 2:00 in the morning. Is Sheriff Watson available to answer another sheriff's call?

A. I don't know. I never called him at 2:00 in the morning.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. You mentioned earlier about the funding. If I recall from my days with RDS --

A. RDSTF, yeah, that's it.

Q. Regional Domestic Security Task Force. That's where a lot of Alachua's money came from. Or I say a lot. That's basically --

A. A significant amount of money.

Q. They were given a lot of money to create those regional units in case of -- for the region.

A. Right.

Q. And that was the understanding, that the money is given to you, but you need to be available if the region needs you.

A. The BearCat. I believe the BearCat was portioned with RDSTF money; or a portion of it was purchased with it, and you know how expensive those are.

The bomb team is another RDSTF, you know.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Let me ask you this. Are these requests reduced in any way to writing, or would there be any evidence of the request existing at all?

A. Usually -- from my recollection, usually when something breaks off, it's a phone call saying, "We need SWAT."

Q. Let me ask you this --

A. There could be a Teletype follow-up, though. I don't know.

Q. Would there be text messaging? Like, for instance, might you send a text message to the sheriff "We've received request from Scott for SWAT in Union County"?

A. Oh, I'm sure, but I never really directly contacted the sheriff. That was the undersheriff. I would call him, the undersheriff. I mean, he would answer his phone.

Q. But if -- you would agree those communications would be records at the agency?

A. There should be records at the agency.

Q. But if those records were not being -- they may not be preserved.

A. They should be preserved. Because there was a point in time when we all got iPhones -- you get into the debate of the iPhone or the Android, right? The iPhone is a blue, which is MMS; and then you have the Android, which is an SMS message. From my understanding, the SMS messages are recorded through your carrier, but the MMS are not because they're run on data and not run on cellular.

Q. But if the sheriff didn't allow the recording devices on his phone, there would be no record of those requests being made to the sheriff, correct?

A. I know that the phone that I had had recording because that was all enabled by Scott Shelpman, if my memory serves me correctly.

Q. Understood. Let's move on to the next item that you were concerned that we had missed due to our time constraints.

A. We discussed briefly Michelle Shirfield last time. She had posted some items on Facebook that could be seen by some folks as slanted to one racial side, if you will. That was brought to Watson's attention, and our understanding is that she was given a corrective counseling for that. Nobody ever saw the corrective counseling.

And then the order was basically given, you know, for Facebook or for violations of social media, that was -- that was the -- what should be done, give them a corrective counseling and go through progressive discipline.

And I think there's a couple open cases right now -- or I don't know if they're open or closed.

So Frank Williams and Kevin Davis are under investigation, or open at the moment, for things that I think were far less controversial, and they were placed on admin suspension and been sitting at the house for months.

Q. And let me ask you because I don't know the answer to this. This individual -- and you said her name was Michelle?

A. Shirfield.

Q. Shirfield? Is she African American?

A. She is.

Q. And the posts that you're referencing, they were -- I don't know the posts. Were they racially inappropriate?

A. It was more of a supporting a racial position, and I believe Kevin Davis could speak more on that.

Q. Is it your understanding that a formal complaint was made either to her supervisor or to the office of professional standards so that discipline should have been initiated?

A. I told the sheriff directly about the violation, and Bobby Stafford told the sheriff directly about the violation.

Q. But as far as I understand -- and my understanding of discipline is developing -- is that the way the discipline would be initiated, it would be either through the office of professional standards or through her supervisor.

A. Correct.

Q. So you gave that information to the sheriff?

A. Correct.

Q. And your understanding is that no discipline was initiated; or if there was any discipline, it was informal in the form of a corrective counseling?

A. It was informal in the form of a corrective counseling, but nobody seen that. I'm sure if you pull her file you would either see a corrective counseling or not see a corrective counseling, but she reported directly to the sheriff.

Q. When someone receives corrective counseling, is it discipline?

A. It's considered informal discipline.

Q. But it should remain in the employee file for one year?

A. That's correct. Oftentimes it's not removed. You have to go back in there and say, hey, that needs to come out.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. Do you know if Kevin Davis made a complaint about that to OPS or through the sheriff suite?

A. I don't think so because he had already known that it was brought to the attention of the sheriff and Bobby Stafford.

Q. Do you know about any complaint that Kevin Davis took to OPS?

A. I know he made a complaint. I don't remember what it surrounded; but I do remember him taking a complaint, and it was basically like disregarded.

Q. If somebody takes a complaint to OPS, should a case number be drawn?

A. Oh, absolutely, or they say this is really not -- there's a list of standards that OPS will investigate these certain things or as directed by the sheriff.

So they'll look at it, and they'll say we'll take and we're going to pull a case number, or they'll say we're going to defer it back to the division commander and let the employee supervisor handle it.

MR. KRAMER: Any other questions on that particular issue?

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Thank you for the clarification. Was there anything else?

A. Did we discuss the bargaining process with the re-openers and the unfair labor practice?

Q. You did. You informed us that one of the reasons why you left the sheriff's office was that you advised them, essentially, that what they were doing was in violation of the National Labor Standards Act.

A. Oh, that's right. I gave you the form. Okay.

So I gave the set of text messages last time between the undersheriff and I.

Q. Yes.

A. The sergeants and lieutenants ratified their contract. The deputies did not ratify their contract. And there was an extended period of time; I don't recall the exact settlement dates, maybe July, August the following year. So we're talking about ten, eleven months later that ultimately we were going to go to a hearing at the sheriff's office.

And right before that began and the sheriff was coming to sit down and testify, if my memory serves me correctly, he wanted to have a discussion. And then that was ultimately settled, and a substantial check was written for attorney's fees. You may want to pull a copy of that.

Q. Who was the attorney that would have received the fees?

A. It would be the PBA.

Q. Would it be the PBA itself, or would it be paid directly to a particular attorney?

MS. WEBSTER: Do you want me to answer?

MR. KRAMER: No, you can tell him.

THE WITNESS: The check was written to the PBA.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. For the attorney's fees?

A. For the attorney's fees.

Q. Incurred because of the actions that you've already described in your previous testimony where the sheriff was essentially acting in violation of the National Labor Standards Act of essentially just refusing to negotiate in good faith.

A. That is correct. And that surrounded the take-home cars, which I believe we talked about last time.

Q. Correct.

A. All those things wrapped up.

Q. He withdrew all the articles. That's the phraseology you used.

A. Everything was TA'd. We were getting ready to go to a vote on Thursday and Friday. On Monday, October 18th, I got a call that he withdrew all the articles.

I said, "Wait a minute. We know this vote is coming. We can't do this."

I brought it to his attention, and the sheriff made the unilateral decision to pull that. I said, "You can't do that. You're going to refuse to sign a contract after it's already been agreed upon."

And in his text messages, which I presented to you last time, I was told that my interpretation was not consistent with the decision of the sheriff.

MR. KRAMER: Anything else?

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Next.

A. We talked about the SWAT rifles.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Where are those rifles now, Major?

A. So those rifles were not given to the employee personally. They were issued to the employee that won them with the understanding that when they retire they will be able to keep them. That was the decision that was made, if my memory serves me correctly; but that's probably not in writing anywhere, I promise you that, because nothing hardly ever gets reduced to writing.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Well, they wouldn't have gone to the inventory? Doesn't every officer have an inventory?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. And if they're not on the inventory, and they're in the officer's possession --

A. No, they're issued to the officer. They're going to be on the inventory.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. They were taken into the sheriff's office inventory and then issued to the officer that won it.

A. That's correct.

Did I touch on the fact that Watson will make a decision regardless whether it's against policy or procedure?

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. I think in general that was clear, but are there specific instances that you can reference that you didn't reference last time?

A. No. I just want to make sure I hit that --

Q. You did.

A. It's so frequent, though, that --

Q. What is the effect on the agency when the sheriff doesn't follow the agency's own policy?

A. Well, what it does is, it sets the tone of the only consistency is inconsistency, right? And when the sheriff isn't following his own policies and procedures, what message is that sending down to the troops?

It sends a horrible message down saying I don't have to follow policy and procedure, but I'm going to hold you to it; and when you aren't held to it, when you violate that, I'm going to write you up.

Q. Would it also lead people to the conclusion that -- wouldn't it also lead to the natural conclusion that if you follow a policy, that the sheriff might still discipline you or you might meet criticism or demotion or job problems because you followed policy that the sheriff no longer wants to have be the policy?

A. It's almost as if you're expected to think like him. And if it is any perceived disrespect or embarrassment, you're going to be talked to about it, if not hit with some sort of discipline.

We just had a recent case, the Glen Stanley

internal investigation, which is closed -- which I suggest you pull a copy of that -- where the sheriff goes outside the disciplinary matrix.

We have a matrix that says this is Level Two, Level Three, Level Four or Five, and this is -- you know, you got a Level Two, you get this many points. This many points is from A to B, and he'll just add C in there.

Q. And in this particular investigation was it to the officer's detriment?

A. Yes.

Q. Is this recourse for the officer under those circumstances? Can the officer appeal that decision? Do they have -- do they enforce the matrix as it exists, or are they simply subject to the sheriff's rulings?

A. Only if they meet the standards set forth in the sheriff's board, which is greater than a two-day suspension. In this case it was one-day suspension, but they put the guy on 12 months of disciplinary probation. And I believe, if you go back and you look at what a Level Three violation is, 12 months of disciplinary probation is not allowed.

And then what you do when you put somebody on disciplinary probation is, the next time they wear the wrong color socks or doing something that's in violation, then they're not eligible for a career service board.

It's almost like you're setting up them for the next violation, to render them ineffective in a career service board.

Q. And because it's a one-day suspension, it's not appealable?

A. Correct.

We touched on changing past practice without really any discussion with anyone.

Q. Correct. Yes.

A. We touched on Watson and Decoursey routinely holding paperwork and not signing it, essentially neglecting the duties of moving the institution along.

And we -- I know we discussed not reducing things to writing, and we discussed the staffing shortages. So I think that kind of cleans up what I can remember from the last one.

Q. Was there anything additional in response to the question, are you aware of anything immoral, unethical, or illegal, that occurred in the sheriff's office while you were there --

A. Well --

Q. -- that we didn't cover last time?

A. I think that's where we're going to move in to the next section.

Q. Okay.

A. So the sheriff is a steward of the taxpayer's money. Would you agree with that?

Q. Agreed.

A. When he came into office, there were two vehicles that were provided that were left by Darnell and Huckstep. They were not happy with those vehicles even though they were functioning vehicles, and they immediately purchased two black Tahoes; and they were high-end Tahoes to the tune of in the mid 70s. And then, of course, all the equipment and everything had to go in on top of that, so you're talking probably upwards of 90-plus thousand dollars just because they wanted new vehicles. That was kind of like the first thing. Everybody kind of questioned that.

And then he had the badges removed from them that say like "High Country" to make it look like it wasn't, you know, an expensive vehicle as it was, but everybody knew what time of day it was. They saw the badges on there. Everybody knew what was going on. You could see it.

So that was kind of, in my opinion, something that the fleet department should have set back and assessed and advised the sheriff, "Hey, if we want new vehicles, this is where our budget is. This is how much money we have left. If we make this purchase, then we can't purchase these four cars instead of these two Tahoes."

That didn't happen. He immediately ordered the vehicle. I don't think they came off state contract. I think they got one at the local Chevrolet dealership. Or I don't know where they got them form; you'd have to pull that. One was 74. The other one was 77 or somewhere in there. They were both in the mid 70s. So that was one thing that kind of came up.

So there were some Nissans that were purchased, and I believe they were for the drug task force or somebody, I think, after I had left. And there was an allegation they were purchased from Gainesville Nissan, and his son is one of the sales managers at Gainesville Nissan.

Q. Those type of contract purchases would be normally not done through Gainesville Nissan? They'd be done through state contract?

A. Generally, yes, unless there is a specific reason. Like, I know Darnell, when we purchased Harleys, the state contract price was, say -- I'm just throwing a number out there -- 17,000, but Gainesville

Harley said, hey, we'll sell them to you for 15.5. The sheriff felt we should keep our money local, and she was actually saving money and was being a good steward of the taxpayers' money and purchased the Harleys there.

But as far as going outside of that, the only thing I know of going outside was that some vehicles were purchased from Southeast Car Agency, especially when it came to things like the trucks for the aviation unit, where we could get something that was used; we didn't buy them new. They weren't new vehicles. They were used vehicles.

But there was some allegations that the Nissans came purchased from his son; and I don't have any evidence to substantiate that, but you could certainly run that down.

One of the tasks that I was given fairly early on was -- the office of professional standards was housed within the main sheriff's office at 2621 Southeast Hawthorne Road. And the office of professional standards has a door that goes right into the sheriff's suite, and that was so that the captain of OPS could go in and confer with the sheriff because the captain was direct report to the sheriff. It had been set like that since I've been there. That was always OPS. Some years prior to that, it was at the jail.

He had me -- he directed me to have OPS relocated back to the office -- the department of the jail, and he then commanded those offices for himself and had them remodeled where he made a rather large office for himself and spent a significant amount of money remodeling that office and then purchased some furniture to fill that office.

Q. Was the furniture purchased off of state contract?

A. I was told it was purchased offline. He went online and bought it because he got a better deal. To what that was, what that P.O. looked like, I have no idea.

Q. Would that be unusual?

A. That would be unusual.

Q. Outside the standard procedures of the sheriff's office to purchase furniture?

A. Correct, because every time we've purchased furniture -- like we purchased tables like these, chairs like these that sit in the squad room that I'm sure you've been to. All those were purchased through a vendor that we've got. And every time we've had to purchase something, A and B has to come to us with a book like this and said, here's what's available. This is what we can purchase. So to purchase furniture outside that realm, to my knowledge, had never been done.

Q. Okay.

A. There was a lot of controversy surrounding expenditures plastering his name on the building.

Q. Where are those?

A. On one occasion it didn't look right, and he bought it again.

Okay. You're aware of it. We'll move on.

On the back of everybody's vest said "sheriff" just like the cars say "sheriff" on it. It doesn't mean that you are the sheriff. It just indicates like police, sheriff. All those were ordered to be removed and replaced with deputies.

Q. Was it on the cars as well as the uniforms?

A. It was not on the cars. It was just on the uniforms.

Q. Did anybody -- with regard to this, did anybody confer or look at the Florida Statutes to ensure that the officers would be properly marked for the purposes of fleeing or attempting to elude or resisting arrest with or without violence, to ensure that the standards that are set forth in the statutes would be met?

A. I brought that specific statute that you're referring to to the attention of the undersheriff and said, "There's really no reason for this. It doesn't designate them as the sheriff, but, you know, it's for the purposes of authority."

And the response was, "There's only one sheriff, and that's the guy that signs in green ink. Everybody else is a deputy," and that was the reason for the switch.

But again, you have whatever those patches were, ten, eight, twelve dollars times how many, 300 patches. Again, it's just another tick of expenditures that didn't need to happen.

Q. Understood.

A. The sheriff and the undersheriff has continued to disregard Florida Statute 112 on numerous occasions, which obviously stemmed from the lawsuits that are out there pending.

Q. Do you have any information to indicate whether their disregard of 112 procedures and rights that are contained in Florida Statute 112 are based upon ignorance, that they don't understand them? Or is it based on an intentional act that they don't care to provide those rights and meet their responsibilities?

A. Personally, I believe they don't care.

Q. So at the time these violations have occurred, are the rights of the officers and responsibilities of the agency being brought to the attention of the individuals who are doing this and being told we don't care?

A. My understanding was 112 violation was raised; and then when the interview was stopped, that individual was charged with insubordination. And 112 clearly says that that can't happen.

Q. Which officer was charged with insubordination because they refused to be interviewed?

A. I believe it was Frank Williams, but I would have to go back and look. I'd have to do some additional research on that.

Q. I may need you to follow up on that if you can identify any particular officer who was -- I'm saying charged, but that's probably not the right word -- was given -- an OPS investigation was instituted for insubordination or insubordination was added to the current charged violations?

A. I believe if you pull the Glen Stanley case, and you pull a recording of the Loudermill that went along with the Glen Stanley case, the general counsel -- essentially, the argument was being made that truthfulness did not occur, that the officer actually -- it was alleged that the officer did not -- and I don't have first-hand knowledge of it, but from my understanding, is that the officer didn't do something and, in the actual packet, said that they had done it, they had sent an email.

The undersheriff indicated on his recommendation that it was truthfulness, that it didn't occur; and when the disciplinary rep went to make the argument that it was not truthfulness, the general counsel said, "Well, what charge do you think was appropriate?"

So I would encourage you to go back and listen to that audio recording of that Loudermill. In other words, you're going to get charged with something, and we're going to find something to fit.

Q. Okay. Understood.

A. I would encourage you to probably pull his calendar, Watson's calendar, and his gas receipts. On the very early part of his tenure he was there a lot. I know he was there a lot because I was there a lot, and I saw him a lot from very early in the morning, 5:00, 6:00 -- I think we discussed that last time -- until 8:00, 9:00 at night.

It got to the point where we needed the sheriff to approve something or do something, again, because we couldn't approve anything, the sheriff is not here. The sheriff is not here. The sheriff is not here. Where is he? Is he working? Is he not working? It seemed like he was never around.

So I would encourage you to probably pull his calendar for --

Q. What month and years?

A. I would say July '21 and after.

Q. Is there some incident you can point to where his attendance to the office stopped? Was it sudden, or was it gradual?

A. It was gradual. It seemed like he gradually was not there more and more, and he was unavailable, which then just stalemated --

Q. Right, because everything has to go through him.

A. Everything has to go through him, and then everything just slows to a crawl, at best a crawl.

The sheriff's son, Clovis Watson, IV, was the subject of numerous traffic stops and some criminal acts with GPD. This information was forwarded to the sheriff, but he never seemed to rectify it with his son. It continued to happen.

He was stopped a couple of times by our deputies for traffic violations. We did a DUI checkpoint down on South 13th Street where his son was completely irate and completely out of line just coming to pick somebody up that we had dealt with. I called the sheriff and he said, okay, and that was the end of it.

It was like his son could just do whatever he wanted to because his dad was the sheriff. There was no -- it was a very poor reflection on the sheriff, very poor reflection on the sheriff.

We talked about fails to process paperwork.

I think Ed Bennett -- you might want to talk to Ed Bennett about the disapproval of secondary employment at the academy.

Q. With regard to that, are you aware that the academy became short of staff because of the sheriff disapproving secondary employment?

A. I can't swear to that.

Q. We'd have to check with the academy?

A. You'd have to check with the academy. I would imagine it severely impacted it; but to what extent, I can't speculate.

Q. Understood.

A. The sheriff seems to make decisions based on emotion quite a bit rather than, you know, actual facts. The sheriff demoted Mat Yakubsin from lieutenant back to sergeant for essentially liking a Facebook post. Let me back up.

He demoted him, but he ordered me to demote him. So I had to call him and tell him, "Hey, look, you're demoted because you liked a Facebook post."

Q. Was that formal discipline?

A. He was on probation.

Q. So he was already on disciplinarian probation?

A. No, he was on new-hire -- promotional probation.

Q. I see. So he could be demoted back to his prior rank without any discipline occurring?

A. Correct.

Q. And does that cause him to lose pay?

A. It does cause him to lose pay.

Q. How much, roughly?

A. I'd have to go back and look at the scales. I mean, you can make a request for the pay changes in HTE. A minimum of five percent; but Yakubsin was not that tenured of a sergeant, so potentially ten percent more. I don't know the exact numbers on Yakubsin.

Q. And you know the basis for that demotion was liking a Facebook post because you were instructed to tell him why he was being demoted by the sheriff?

A. I was instructed by the sheriff to demote him back to sergeant; and the sheriff had told me that, "He liked that Facebook post, and I'm going to demote him."

Now, keep in mind everybody else that also liked that Facebook post -- it surrounded a lieutenant Facebook post from the jail that was subsequently terminated. Howard, I believe, is his name, received corrective counseling for that, but Yakubsin was demoted.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Did that go through an OPS review?

A. Oh, no.

Q. So there's no documentation on any of it?

A. No.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. Did Yakubsin get corrective counseling?

A. I believe he may have, but he was hit with a demotion and the corrective counseling where everybody else was just hit with the corrective counseling. In other words, I felt as if the demotion was excessive in comparison to what had been handed out to everybody else. That's kind of where I was going with that.

We discussed the negligent promotions last time.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. While we're on that topic --

A. Which topic?

Q. Negligent promotion. You mentioned Cleveland Cox. Talk about your knowledge about what happened when he tried out for the SWAT team?

A. He tried out for the SWAT team. He wasn't recommended, and then he was appointed by recommendation of the undersheriff.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Also, what the consequence was to the person who did not want him appointed to the SWAT team.

A. Oh, he adamantly opposed it. He was -- I can't remember if it was Josh Crews or Rich Howell at the time.

Q. Josh Crews.

A. Josh Crews absolutely did not want him to the point he wanted to go meet with the undersheriff, and I think he did meet with undersheriff about it; but the decision was made that he did not get his number one and number two picks, and he got Cleveland Cox. And Cleveland Cox was almost promoted at the recommendation of the sheriff.

Q. What happened with Josh Crews with his relationship with the SWAT team after he didn't want Cleveland Cox on there?

A. I'd have to go back and scroll and think about the timeline, but I can tell you, if you're referring to his removal from the SWAT team, his removal from the SWAT team, I do not believe, was tied to that incident.

We had a SWAT call-out in Monteoca, and the sheriff and undersheriff were there. And Josh Crews was insubordinate to me; and the sheriff found out about it, and the sheriff removed him from the SWAT team based on that incident.

Q. Were those two things occurring closely in time, the Cleveland Cox incident and Monteoca incident?

A. I believe the Cleveland Cox thing was a couple months afterwards. It could have been pretty close. It could have been pretty close.

Q. I don't know the answer, but my understanding is that the delivery of the information that Cleveland Cox would be assigned to the SWAT team and the removal of then lieutenant -- captain, sergeant, I'm not sure --

A. Lieutenant Josh Crews.

Q. -- Lieutenant Crews were delivered at the same time.

A. It may have been. It could have been in close proximity, and I can see how maybe he could correlate that if it was in close proximity, but my knowledge of the incident, it was really based on Lieutenant Crews' insubordination. Because I was ordered by the sheriff to conduct -- to basically put gas on the house with the hopes that the guy would come out, and Josh Crews came over to me and said, "I hope it's not a tactic," and he was rather nasty about it.

I'm not on the SWAT team. I've never been on the SWAT team, and I don't pretend to be on the SWAT team. So when it comes to SWAT-related matters, I would defer to Josh. Josh has got the knowledge. He's been on there a long time, along with his brother. His brother is no longer with us. He's retired. But I had a direct order from the sheriff that this is the way we're going to proceed, and Josh didn't agree with it.

Q. Let me make sure I understand the sheriff is directing a tactic to remove an individual from a home that a SWAT team is doing?

A. To put gas in there, yes.

Q. But is the sheriff qualified to make a decision about a tactic to remove a barricaded subject?

A. In my opinion, no, and that just falls on the back of what I just said. I'm a major. And even when I was a captain over those units, if I called you as my SWAT commander, and you said, "This is what we need to do," I'm going to defer to you. As long as we're not violating policy, we're not violating the law, and we're not creating some additional liability for the sheriff, I'm going to defer to you because that's your area of expertise.

Q. But doesn't it create liability if the sheriff, who is not qualified, is directing a tactic to be used in an extremely dangerous situation?

A. Oh, absolutely. The direction should not have come from the sheriff. The sheriff should have let Josh Crews run the incident, is what it comes down to.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. What was the barricaded subject?

A. There was another individual in the house. I think it was domestic.

Q. So the bad guy wasn't the only one in the house?

A. Correct.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. I guess you're probably the wrong person to ask, but do we put gas in the house when there's more than one person in the house?

A. Generally, no, but I would defer to Josh Crews and let him discuss that incident in greater detail.

Q. And the insubordination that Josh demonstrated during that incident, was he ever a subject of formal discipline? Or was it just we're going to discipline him by removing him from the SWAT team?

A. He got a corrective counseling from me for his insubordination, but then the sheriff removed him as the SWAT team commander.

Q. Did they put gas in the house?

A. I don't remember. That was very early on in the tenure of the administration.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Did the sheriff give a reason why he wanted the gas? Did he have some place to go?

A. Uh-uh. It was clear he was trying to direct the incident where he didn't have the experience to direct the incident.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:
Q. Was the sheriff at the scene?
A. He was, and the undersheriff. They both showed up. And, you know, to be fair, normally the sheriff and the undersheriff, the major does not show up to SWAT teams. You know, normally we're behind the phone somewhere, and we're letting those people run those operations; but that's not the way the sheriff wanted it run.
The captain was there. I was there. Captain Bella Blizzard was there. I was there. Decoursey was there. The sheriff was there. And I think probably Josh felt like he wasn't being allowed to operate under the parameters that he normally operates because his decision-making was being impeded by us.
BY MR. KRAMER:
Q. And that's what lead to his insubordination.
A. Correct.
Q. That's also consistent with what you've previously testified to, that all the decisions are being made by the sheriff to operational and tactical decisions.
A. That is correct.
BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. Were you familiar or did we talk about it last time, about the Cleveland Cox investigation that went through the office of professional standards?

A. I was aware.

Q. Do you know what happened with that eventually, or why it was terminated?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Is there some connection or familial connection between the undersheriff and Cleveland Cox?

A. We speculated that there was, but we -- I don't know of one, but it seemed to be really out of character that he was placed on the SWAT team and he was promoted against the objections of essentially everyone.

Q. Was he also assigned to CID?

A. He was.

Q. Against the objections?

A. He was. It was a pattern existing with Cleveland Cox, but I don't know what the connection is.

MR. KRAMER: I want to talk about time.

We can go off the record.

(An off-the-record discussion was had.)

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. All we were discussing is how much time we have remaining before our other witnesses to need to appear.

A. Eric Hutchison was promoted to the rank of acting lieutenant when he wasn't on the eligibility list. I would suggest you pull the employee profile and the eligibility list. When that was called to the sheriff's attention, that he wasn't eligible for promotion, the sheriff did act and rescinded that; but then here recently Scott Bonafide has been promoted to an active lieutenant, and he's been moved to civil.

As you're aware, civil is a completely different animal than any other part of the sheriff's office. You deal with evicting people and serving papers that can and cannot be served at certain times of day. To my knowledge, Scott has no knowledge of the civil process.

I did mention Rashawn Flanders. I do not have that paperwork that I thought I had.

The last one is Pat Ford Thomas. Michelle Clement was the division manager, and she was removed for seemingly no reason and moved over to the contract monitor at the jail, which she's got zero experience at. She was removed from her role as a division manager, and she was replaced with Pat Ford Thomas.

Pat Ford Thomas is the wife of Dave Thomas,

who, interestingly enough, was one of the very core group of people in Watson's campaign.

Q. We're going to speak with Michelle Clement. We just haven't gotten her scheduled yet.

A. Okay. I have for you a copy of one of the personnel orders that went out, and as you can see, the quantity of moves that were made at one time are significant; and that's not one of them, but the reason why that's significant is because I have this to go along with it, which is completely out of character, which has everybody's picture and where they're going, where you can definitely see folks --

MR. KRAMER: All right. We'll make this an exhibit to your statement.

That's all I have. I'm sure if something else comes up, I may think of something or whatever.

(Exhibit 1 was marked for identification.)

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. One last question I've got. When transfers and things were made, were the positions that they went to, were they resumed made for? Or were persons just told, you're going here, and you're going here?

A. Under the Darnell administration, generally, what would happen would be, an open position announcement would come out: Any interested deputy sheriff that wishes to apply to be a detective, please submit your name to ISIS, which is our internal system. Interviews are conducted, and then somebody would be selected from the list.

Under the Watson administration, that pretty much went out the window. He just made moves willie-nillie as he felt necessary with no rhyme or reason is really the short answer.

MR. KRAMER: Thank you. We may be talking to you further.

blah, blah, blah, and it gets approved all the way up to the sheriff. Those type of forms just sit.

It's like there's a neglect to fill those forms out and get them back to people, especially when it comes to the folks that live in reduced rent apartments; because those reduced rent apartments are really considered secondary employment, and now we have people who come back and fill out the form, say, "Hey, I have this secondary employment. I live at ABC Apartment Complex," and those forms never get processed.

Lately -- I've been gone, but lately -- I'm sure you guys can follow up with it -- some secondary employment has been approved, but it's been very sporadic; and then others, it's been straight-up denied. And those denials have come on the backs of years and years and years of approval.

In other words, I might be teaching at the academy. I taught at the academy for 15 years, let's say, and then all of a sudden this year it's a denial for no reason, and there's no reason given.

Q. Is that detrimental to the functioning of the sheriff's office?

A. The academy, absolutely, because we have an agreement with the academy that we're going to provide people to teach the recruits.

Q. Well, maybe I'm being too obtuse. If employees are being mistreated and treated very differently than they have been by prior administrations without any explanation, does that create an environment where employees are likely to remain?

A. Absolutely not. What happens is too often -- I'm sure you guys are aware that law enforcement salaries are not that high, and almost everybody has got some sort of secondary employment whether it be at the academy or whether they have a business. Like we have several folks that have lawn maintain businesses, you know, and they thrive on those businesses, especially during the summer months when grass cutting is frequent. And when those forms aren't being approved, then you get into a situation where am I allowed to continue my business that I invested all this capital in, or what do I need to do? Do I need to quit and just move on?

And I'm sure if you pull the vacancy rate, the FT vacancies on January 5th of 2021, you pull the FT vacancy rate as of today, you'll see that they're vastly different.

Q. Just so I understand, do those supplemental employment forms have to be yearly?

A. They do.

Q. So even if you've had the same position for years and years, it has to be approved every year?

A. Every calendar year.

Q. Is it October 1? January 1?

A. January 1, if my memory recalls. I think it's January 1.

Q. Would your understanding be, there would be individuals who would resubmit after January 1 and would not get an answer for five, six, seven months?

A. Lengthy amounts of times or outright denials with no excuse, or no response, really. And, you know, the academy relies on those folks to teach recruits.

Q. Right.

A. I do believe we discussed that it could be found in one of the audio recordings that the undersheriff said that nothing is final until it's in green ink.

Q. Correct.

A. So that just kind of plays into that.

Q. And, also, I want to follow up on that issue. I want to make sure I understand what you're telling me, which is that -- and I'll use my organization as an example. We have -- I delegate control out to supervisors because I am physically incapable of making timely decisions in 20,000 cases of prosecution per year, and that is necessary for the proper functioning of the agency.

A. That is correct. I felt as if I had less decision-making authority as a major than I did as a lieutenant under the Darnell administration, which chokes the entire operation.

Q. So the same is true at the sheriff's office, and probably on a much larger scale than my organization. I have 135 employees, and the sheriff's office has how many employees?

A. About 960.

Q. Nine hundred sixty employees, and then essentially day-to-day decision making is being made by the sheriff?

A. Essentially.

Q. And that has prevented the sheriff's office's proper functioning because decision-making is delayed, and this -- what you've been talking about, this example of additional employment, is just maybe one example of delay.

A. It is one example, yes.

Q. And there are many others?

A. Right.

Q. And I don't know if you can speak to this, but is one of those examples, would it be assisting other agencies?

A. Yes.

Q. And are you aware during the time you were at the sheriff's office of a change in the decision-making process by which the sheriff's office decided whether or not to assist other agencies?

A. Absolutely.

Q. And if you could clarify. Does the sheriff's office have obligations, contractual and grant-oriented obligations, to provide assistance to regional agencies with equipment and expertise that those agencies would not have?

A. Absolutely.

Q. And could you explain what happened while you were there? What was the change from the prior administration? How did that affect things?

A. So operationally when I was the patrol support lieutenant, which was over all the special teams, Bradford County would call and say, "Hey, we've got an incident up here. We need the SWAT team."

So we're part of a region. The SWAT team is a regional team. There's funding that comes out of --

I can't remember the abbreviation, but it is -- there's funding that comes out. They fund some equipment, and that is really meant so that when Bradford County calls, or Union County folks that don't have a SWAT team, we go up there and we handle it.

And usually the protocol was, they would call. The captain would say, "Hey, Union County has a SWAT call-out." I would notify the SWAT guys, and then they would go.

The captain would then turn around and notify the chain upwards, "Hey, this is what's happened. I'm just kind of letting you know that Bradford County has called, or Union County has called, and they need the SWAT team."

That's been the practice for years. I mean, time was of the essence when you're talking about calling out a SWAT team. If we're not calling them for some preplanned event three days from now, then we don't have time to sit around and talk and have approval. It's go.

That completely changed under the Watson administration. He simply demanded that, in order for any asset to leave this county, that that sheriff that was requesting or that chief that was requesting the equipment called him first, which severely choked the response time.

So it was a complete spin. It was something we weren't used to, but he wanted the sheriff of Bradford County, Union County to call him and ask for the equipment before we were authorized.

Q. And what if he wasn't available?

A. (Shrugs shoulders.)

Q. You're holding up your hands and saying there's no answer for that?

A. There's no answer for that because we weren't authorized to proceed.

Q. So, for instance, just an instance that I was personally involved in was, there was an officer-involved shooting in Levy County, and they only have maybe four deputies on the road at any one time. I don't know if you're aware of this incident.

A. Correct.

Q. And when three of the officers were involved in a shooting, then they had no -- essentially, one deputy remaining on the road. They requested assistance from the Alachua County Sheriff's Office. Would that assistance request have to go through the sheriff himself?

A. It would.

Q. Would you agree that under those circumstances where a county was essentially now --

A. Vacant.

Q. -- had no law enforcement available, that time is of the essence?

A. Yeah, it is essential. And I'll follow up with another example.

The two deputies that were shot in Gilchrist County under the Darnell administration. As soon as that happened, everybody started rolling. We rolled the command -- I mean, we had the mobile command bus. We had schedules done to start covering the county, and then we just started notifying the sheriff, "Hey, this is what we're doing. This is how we're taking care of them." It was almost the information was flowing upward rather than flowing downward.

And under the Watson administration it's completely immerse. It's not allowed to happen in that manner. And the folks who may call 911 in Gilchrist County, now that there's no deputies available, they rely on our assistance. And we have the resources to provide to Gilchrist County or to Union County that Union County or Gilchrist County doesn't otherwise have.

MR. KRAMER: All right. Let's go back to things that you may -- unless you wanted to follow up. I'm sorry.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Has he ever denied one of those requests that you know of?

A. Yes.

Q. Which one?

A. There was an incident where University of Florida had called and requested the use of the jail vans. There was something going on at the Reitz Union. I think Darren Baxley had called and requested the jail vans. Don't quote me. I think it was Darren Baxley, deputy chief. Sheriff Watson refused to let them utilize the jail vans.

All that is, is a transport function. It's not like we were sending personnel. You know, we send in a couple of people to operate the vans, but we weren't sending crowd management. We weren't getting involved with their business on campus. They were just simply asking for assistance because, again, the university, you know, they've only got 80 FTEs, you know, somewhere in there. They don't have the capacity to deal with 15 or 20 arrestees at the same time. It would impact them severely to have to deal with that, and we had the resources. I didn't understand what the purpose of withholding a jail van was.

Q. When you say impact severely, would that mean creating an unsafe environment for the remainder of the students and faculty on campus?

A. Potentially. I mean, it depends on how the incident goes. If you got all your guys on the incident tied up with 10-15, or arrestees, if you will, and then they need to focus their attention somewhere else, next thing you know, you divert your attention to the people that need to go. Now you have an unsafe number of officers with the arrestees; or do the officers stay with the arrestees, and now you've neglected this? You have to make a decision.

You've only got so many personnel. The jail van would have been very quick, easy. You bring the jail vans over, put them in the jail vans, pat them down, get them in there, at least hold them there for a few minutes or get them out of there, whatever they decided to do. It was a relatively simple request.

There was some issues surrounding the drug task force, which I'm sure you're aware of, and the sheriff not wanting anyone to operate in the county.

Q. Were you an employee of the sheriff's office at the time that the sheriff directed the removal of all the equipment from the drug task force?

A. No, but my understanding is it was done in the middle of the night under some covert operation, was the rumor.

Q. Correct. I just didn't know if you were personally involved.

A. I was not.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Were you there when Nassau County requested assistance on an officer-involved shooting, and it was denied?

A. Actually, yes. I believe I was.

Q. Do we know why?

A. I don't know why.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. But that denial would have come from the sheriff?

A. It come from the sheriff. No cop, working cop, like even coming up through the ranks, when they had something like that, would deny that type of assistance. Those are the things -- when things were choked, it chokes to the point where it doesn't -- it doesn't run efficiently.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. And for the record, let me correct that. It may have been an officer-involved shooting, but actually the deputy had been shot; and they had a subject cornered, and they were asking for assistance from SWAT teams.

A. Correct. Correct.

MR. KRAMER: Anything further on what he's said so far?

THE WITNESS: One of the things that -- you know, you talk about assets. The SWAT team is one of them, but more frequently the helicopter is something that -- you know, we have an aviation unit. And folks in Putnam County and Columbia County, you know, they rely on that air support. You know, one helicopter there, arguably, is equivalent of 15 or 20 units on the ground.

Those requests were frequently -- we ran into problems where there would be a pursuit at, say, 2:00 in the morning, and they're calling and asking for our assistance. And then you have to make the decision, do I say, okay, go ahead and go, and then get chewed out the next day because they didn't -- because that sheriff didn't call our sheriff at 2:00 in the morning?

I mean, that's the type of slow-down we're talking about, to the point where you might as well not even send them at that point. It's almost rendering it useless.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. And it's 2:00 in the morning. Is Sheriff Watson available to answer another sheriff's call?

A. I don't know. I never called him at 2:00 in the morning.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. You mentioned earlier about the funding. If I recall from my days with RDS --

A. RDSTF, yeah, that's it.

Q. Regional Domestic Security Task Force. That's where a lot of Alachua's money came from. Or I say a lot. That's basically --

A. A significant amount of money.

Q. They were given a lot of money to create those regional units in case of -- for the region.

A. Right.

Q. And that was the understanding, that the money is given to you, but you need to be available if the region needs you.

A. The BearCat. I believe the BearCat was portioned with RDSTF money; or a portion of it was purchased with it, and you know how expensive those are.

The bomb team is another RDSTF, you know.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Let me ask you this. Are these requests reduced in any way to writing, or would there be any evidence of the request existing at all?

A. Usually -- from my recollection, usually when something breaks off, it's a phone call saying, "We need SWAT."

Q. Let me ask you this --

A. There could be a Teletype follow-up, though. I don't know.

Q. Would there be text messaging? Like, for instance, might you send a text message to the sheriff "We've received request from Scott for SWAT in Union County"?

A. Oh, I'm sure, but I never really directly contacted the sheriff. That was the undersheriff. I would call him, the undersheriff. I mean, he would answer his phone.

Q. But if -- you would agree those communications would be records at the agency?

A. There should be records at the agency.

Q. But if those records were not being -- they may not be preserved.

A. They should be preserved. Because there was a point in time when we all got iPhones -- you get into the debate of the iPhone or the Android, right? The iPhone is a blue, which is MMS; and then you have the Android, which is an SMS message. From my understanding, the SMS messages are recorded through your carrier, but the MMS are not because they're run on data and not run on cellular.

Q. But if the sheriff didn't allow the recording devices on his phone, there would be no record of those requests being made to the sheriff, correct?

A. I know that the phone that I had had recording because that was all enabled by Scott Shelpman, if my memory serves me correctly.

Q. Understood. Let's move on to the next item that you were concerned that we had missed due to our time constraints.

A. We discussed briefly Michelle Shirfield last time. She had posted some items on Facebook that could be seen by some folks as slanted to one racial side, if you will. That was brought to Watson's attention, and our understanding is that she was given a corrective counseling for that. Nobody ever saw the corrective counseling.

And then the order was basically given, you know, for Facebook or for violations of social media, that was -- that was the -- what should be done, give them a corrective counseling and go through progressive discipline.

And I think there's a couple open cases right now -- or I don't know if they're open or closed.

So Frank Williams and Kevin Davis are under investigation, or open at the moment, for things that I think were far less controversial, and they were placed on admin suspension and been sitting at the house for months.

Q. And let me ask you because I don't know the answer to this. This individual -- and you said her name was Michelle?

A. Shirfield.

Q. Shirfield? Is she African American?

A. She is.

Q. And the posts that you're referencing, they were -- I don't know the posts. Were they racially inappropriate?

A. It was more of a supporting a racial position, and I believe Kevin Davis could speak more on that.

Q. Is it your understanding that a formal complaint was made either to her supervisor or to the office of professional standards so that discipline should have been initiated?

A. I told the sheriff directly about the violation, and Bobby Stafford told the sheriff directly about the violation.

Q. But as far as I understand -- and my understanding of discipline is developing -- is that the way the discipline would be initiated, it would be either through the office of professional standards or through her supervisor.

A. Correct.

Q. So you gave that information to the sheriff?

A. Correct.

Q. And your understanding is that no discipline was initiated; or if there was any discipline, it was informal in the form of a corrective counseling?

A. It was informal in the form of a corrective counseling, but nobody seen that. I'm sure if you pull her file you would either see a corrective counseling or not see a corrective counseling, but she reported directly to the sheriff.

Q. When someone receives corrective counseling, is it discipline?

A. It's considered informal discipline.

Q. But it should remain in the employee file for one year?

A. That's correct. Oftentimes it's not removed. You have to go back in there and say, hey, that needs to come out.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. Do you know if Kevin Davis made a complaint about that to OPS or through the sheriff suite?

A. I don't think so because he had already known that it was brought to the attention of the sheriff and Bobby Stafford.

Q. Do you know about any complaint that Kevin Davis took to OPS?

A. I know he made a complaint. I don't remember what it surrounded; but I do remember him taking a complaint, and it was basically like disregarded.

Q. If somebody takes a complaint to OPS, should a case number be drawn?

A. Oh, absolutely, or they say this is really not -- there's a list of standards that OPS will investigate these certain things or as directed by the sheriff.

So they'll look at it, and they'll say we'll take and we're going to pull a case number, or they'll say we're going to defer it back to the division commander and let the employee supervisor handle it.

MR. KRAMER: Any other questions on that particular issue?

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Thank you for the clarification. Was there anything else?

A. Did we discuss the bargaining process with the re-openers and the unfair labor practice?

Q. You did. You informed us that one of the reasons why you left the sheriff's office was that you advised them, essentially, that what they were doing was in violation of the National Labor Standards Act.

A. Oh, that's right. I gave you the form. Okay.

So I gave the set of text messages last time between the undersheriff and I.

Q. Yes.

A. The sergeants and lieutenants ratified their contract. The deputies did not ratify their contract. And there was an extended period of time; I don't recall the exact settlement dates, maybe July, August the following year. So we're talking about ten, eleven months later that ultimately we were going to go to a hearing at the sheriff's office.

And right before that began and the sheriff was coming to sit down and testify, if my memory serves me correctly, he wanted to have a discussion. And then that was ultimately settled, and a substantial check was written for attorney's fees. You may want to pull a copy of that.

Q. Who was the attorney that would have received the fees?

A. It would be the PBA.

Q. Would it be the PBA itself, or would it be paid directly to a particular attorney?

MS. WEBSTER: Do you want me to answer?

MR. KRAMER: No, you can tell him.

THE WITNESS: The check was written to the PBA.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. For the attorney's fees?

A. For the attorney's fees.

Q. Incurred because of the actions that you've already described in your previous testimony where the sheriff was essentially acting in violation of the National Labor Standards Act of essentially just refusing to negotiate in good faith.

A. That is correct. And that surrounded the take-home cars, which I believe we talked about last time.

Q. Correct.

A. All those things wrapped up.

Q. He withdrew all the articles. That's the phraseology you used.

A. Everything was TA'd. We were getting ready to go to a vote on Thursday and Friday. On Monday, October 18th, I got a call that he withdrew all the articles.

I said, "Wait a minute. We know this vote is coming. We can't do this."

I brought it to his attention, and the sheriff made the unilateral decision to pull that. I said, "You can't do that. You're going to refuse to sign a contract after it's already been agreed upon."

And in his text messages, which I presented to you last time, I was told that my interpretation was not consistent with the decision of the sheriff.

MR. KRAMER: Anything else?

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Next.

A. We talked about the SWAT rifles.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Where are those rifles now, Major?

A. So those rifles were not given to the employee personally. They were issued to the employee that won them with the understanding that when they retire they will be able to keep them. That was the decision that was made, if my memory serves me correctly; but that's probably not in writing anywhere, I promise you that, because nothing hardly ever gets reduced to writing.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Well, they wouldn't have gone to the inventory? Doesn't every officer have an inventory?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. And if they're not on the inventory, and they're in the officer's possession --

A. No, they're issued to the officer. They're going to be on the inventory.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. They were taken into the sheriff's office inventory and then issued to the officer that won it.

A. That's correct.

Did I touch on the fact that Watson will make a decision regardless whether it's against policy or procedure?

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. I think in general that was clear, but are there specific instances that you can reference that you didn't reference last time?

A. No. I just want to make sure I hit that --

Q. You did.

A. It's so frequent, though, that --

Q. What is the effect on the agency when the sheriff doesn't follow the agency's own policy?

A. Well, what it does is, it sets the tone of the only consistency is inconsistency, right? And when the sheriff isn't following his own policies and procedures, what message is that sending down to the troops?

It sends a horrible message down saying I don't have to follow policy and procedure, but I'm going to hold you to it; and when you aren't held to it, when you violate that, I'm going to write you up.

Q. Would it also lead people to the conclusion that -- wouldn't it also lead to the natural conclusion that if you follow a policy, that the sheriff might still discipline you or you might meet criticism or demotion or job problems because you followed policy that the sheriff no longer wants to have be the policy?

A. It's almost as if you're expected to think like him. And if it is any perceived disrespect or embarrassment, you're going to be talked to about it, if not hit with some sort of discipline.

We just had a recent case, the Glen Stanley

internal investigation, which is closed -- which I suggest you pull a copy of that -- where the sheriff goes outside the disciplinary matrix.

We have a matrix that says this is Level Two, Level Three, Level Four or Five, and this is -- you know, you got a Level Two, you get this many points. This many points is from A to B, and he'll just add C in there.

Q. And in this particular investigation was it to the officer's detriment?

A. Yes.

Q. Is this recourse for the officer under those circumstances? Can the officer appeal that decision? Do they have -- do they enforce the matrix as it exists, or are they simply subject to the sheriff's rulings?

A. Only if they meet the standards set forth in the sheriff's board, which is greater than a two-day suspension. In this case it was one-day suspension, but they put the guy on 12 months of disciplinary probation. And I believe, if you go back and you look at what a Level Three violation is, 12 months of disciplinary probation is not allowed.

And then what you do when you put somebody on disciplinary probation is, the next time they wear the wrong color socks or doing something that's in violation, then they're not eligible for a career service board.

It's almost like you're setting up them for the next violation, to render them ineffective in a career service board.

Q. And because it's a one-day suspension, it's not appealable?

A. Correct.

We touched on changing past practice without really any discussion with anyone.

Q. Correct. Yes.

A. We touched on Watson and Decoursey routinely holding paperwork and not signing it, essentially neglecting the duties of moving the institution along.

And we -- I know we discussed not reducing things to writing, and we discussed the staffing shortages. So I think that kind of cleans up what I can remember from the last one.

Q. Was there anything additional in response to the question, are you aware of anything immoral, unethical, or illegal, that occurred in the sheriff's office while you were there --

A. Well --

Q. -- that we didn't cover last time?

A. I think that's where we're going to move in to the next section.

Q. Okay.

A. So the sheriff is a steward of the taxpayer's money. Would you agree with that?

Q. Agreed.

A. When he came into office, there were two vehicles that were provided that were left by Darnell and Huckstep. They were not happy with those vehicles even though they were functioning vehicles, and they immediately purchased two black Tahoes; and they were high-end Tahoes to the tune of in the mid 70s. And then, of course, all the equipment and everything had to go in on top of that, so you're talking probably upwards of 90-plus thousand dollars just because they wanted new vehicles. That was kind of like the first thing. Everybody kind of questioned that.

And then he had the badges removed from them that say like "High Country" to make it look like it wasn't, you know, an expensive vehicle as it was, but everybody knew what time of day it was. They saw the badges on there. Everybody knew what was going on. You could see it.

So that was kind of, in my opinion, something that the fleet department should have set back and assessed and advised the sheriff, "Hey, if we want new vehicles, this is where our budget is. This is how much money we have left. If we make this purchase, then we can't purchase these four cars instead of these two Tahoes."

That didn't happen. He immediately ordered the vehicle. I don't think they came off state contract. I think they got one at the local Chevrolet dealership. Or I don't know where they got them form; you'd have to pull that. One was 74. The other one was 77 or somewhere in there. They were both in the mid 70s. So that was one thing that kind of came up.

So there were some Nissans that were purchased, and I believe they were for the drug task force or somebody, I think, after I had left. And there was an allegation they were purchased from Gainesville Nissan, and his son is one of the sales managers at Gainesville Nissan.

Q. Those type of contract purchases would be normally not done through Gainesville Nissan? They'd be done through state contract?

A. Generally, yes, unless there is a specific reason. Like, I know Darnell, when we purchased Harleys, the state contract price was, say -- I'm just throwing a number out there -- 17,000, but Gainesville

Harley said, hey, we'll sell them to you for 15.5. The sheriff felt we should keep our money local, and she was actually saving money and was being a good steward of the taxpayers' money and purchased the Harleys there.

But as far as going outside of that, the only thing I know of going outside was that some vehicles were purchased from Southeast Car Agency, especially when it came to things like the trucks for the aviation unit, where we could get something that was used; we didn't buy them new. They weren't new vehicles. They were used vehicles.

But there was some allegations that the Nissans came purchased from his son; and I don't have any evidence to substantiate that, but you could certainly run that down.

One of the tasks that I was given fairly early on was -- the office of professional standards was housed within the main sheriff's office at 2621 Southeast Hawthorne Road. And the office of professional standards has a door that goes right into the sheriff's suite, and that was so that the captain of OPS could go in and confer with the sheriff because the captain was direct report to the sheriff. It had been set like that since I've been there. That was always OPS. Some years prior to that, it was at the jail.

He had me -- he directed me to have OPS relocated back to the office -- the department of the jail, and he then commanded those offices for himself and had them remodeled where he made a rather large office for himself and spent a significant amount of money remodeling that office and then purchased some furniture to fill that office.

Q. Was the furniture purchased off of state contract?

A. I was told it was purchased offline. He went online and bought it because he got a better deal. To what that was, what that P.O. looked like, I have no idea.

Q. Would that be unusual?

A. That would be unusual.

Q. Outside the standard procedures of the sheriff's office to purchase furniture?

A. Correct, because every time we've purchased furniture -- like we purchased tables like these, chairs like these that sit in the squad room that I'm sure you've been to. All those were purchased through a vendor that we've got. And every time we've had to purchase something, A and B has to come to us with a book like this and said, here's what's available. This is what we can purchase. So to purchase furniture outside that realm, to my knowledge, had never been done.

Q. Okay.

A. There was a lot of controversy surrounding expenditures plastering his name on the building.

Q. Where are those?

A. On one occasion it didn't look right, and he bought it again.

Okay. You're aware of it. We'll move on.

On the back of everybody's vest said "sheriff" just like the cars say "sheriff" on it. It doesn't mean that you are the sheriff. It just indicates like police, sheriff. All those were ordered to be removed and replaced with deputies.

Q. Was it on the cars as well as the uniforms?

A. It was not on the cars. It was just on the uniforms.

Q. Did anybody -- with regard to this, did anybody confer or look at the Florida Statutes to ensure that the officers would be properly marked for the purposes of fleeing or attempting to elude or resisting arrest with or without violence, to ensure that the standards that are set forth in the statutes would be met?

A. I brought that specific statute that you're referring to to the attention of the undersheriff and said, "There's really no reason for this. It doesn't designate them as the sheriff, but, you know, it's for the purposes of authority."

And the response was, "There's only one sheriff, and that's the guy that signs in green ink. Everybody else is a deputy," and that was the reason for the switch.

But again, you have whatever those patches were, ten, eight, twelve dollars times how many, 300 patches. Again, it's just another tick of expenditures that didn't need to happen.

Q. Understood.

A. The sheriff and the undersheriff has continued to disregard Florida Statute 112 on numerous occasions, which obviously stemmed from the lawsuits that are out there pending.

Q. Do you have any information to indicate whether their disregard of 112 procedures and rights that are contained in Florida Statute 112 are based upon ignorance, that they don't understand them? Or is it based on an intentional act that they don't care to provide those rights and meet their responsibilities?

A. Personally, I believe they don't care.

Q. So at the time these violations have occurred, are the rights of the officers and responsibilities of the agency being brought to the attention of the individuals who are doing this and being told we don't care?

A. My understanding was 112 violation was raised; and then when the interview was stopped, that individual was charged with insubordination. And 112 clearly says that that can't happen.

Q. Which officer was charged with insubordination because they refused to be interviewed?

A. I believe it was Frank Williams, but I would have to go back and look. I'd have to do some additional research on that.

Q. I may need you to follow up on that if you can identify any particular officer who was -- I'm saying charged, but that's probably not the right word -- was given -- an OPS investigation was instituted for insubordination or insubordination was added to the current charged violations?

A. I believe if you pull the Glen Stanley case, and you pull a recording of the Loudermill that went along with the Glen Stanley case, the general counsel -- essentially, the argument was being made that truthfulness did not occur, that the officer actually -- it was alleged that the officer did not -- and I don't have first-hand knowledge of it, but from my understanding, is that the officer didn't do something and, in the actual packet, said that they had done it, they had sent an email.

The undersheriff indicated on his recommendation that it was truthfulness, that it didn't occur; and when the disciplinary rep went to make the argument that it was not truthfulness, the general counsel said, "Well, what charge do you think was appropriate?"

So I would encourage you to go back and listen to that audio recording of that Loudermill. In other words, you're going to get charged with something, and we're going to find something to fit.

Q. Okay. Understood.

A. I would encourage you to probably pull his calendar, Watson's calendar, and his gas receipts. On the very early part of his tenure he was there a lot. I know he was there a lot because I was there a lot, and I saw him a lot from very early in the morning, 5:00, 6:00 -- I think we discussed that last time -- until 8:00, 9:00 at night.

It got to the point where we needed the sheriff to approve something or do something, again, because we couldn't approve anything, the sheriff is not here. The sheriff is not here. The sheriff is not here. Where is he? Is he working? Is he not working? It seemed like he was never around.

So I would encourage you to probably pull his calendar for --

Q. What month and years?

A. I would say July '21 and after.

Q. Is there some incident you can point to where his attendance to the office stopped? Was it sudden, or was it gradual?

A. It was gradual. It seemed like he gradually was not there more and more, and he was unavailable, which then just stalemated --

Q. Right, because everything has to go through him.

A. Everything has to go through him, and then everything just slows to a crawl, at best a crawl.

The sheriff's son, Clovis Watson, IV, was the subject of numerous traffic stops and some criminal acts with GPD. This information was forwarded to the sheriff, but he never seemed to rectify it with his son. It continued to happen.

He was stopped a couple of times by our deputies for traffic violations. We did a DUI checkpoint down on South 13th Street where his son was completely irate and completely out of line just coming to pick somebody up that we had dealt with. I called the sheriff and he said, okay, and that was the end of it.

It was like his son could just do whatever he wanted to because his dad was the sheriff. There was no -- it was a very poor reflection on the sheriff, very poor reflection on the sheriff.

We talked about fails to process paperwork.

I think Ed Bennett -- you might want to talk to Ed Bennett about the disapproval of secondary employment at the academy.

Q. With regard to that, are you aware that the academy became short of staff because of the sheriff disapproving secondary employment?

A. I can't swear to that.

Q. We'd have to check with the academy?

A. You'd have to check with the academy. I would imagine it severely impacted it; but to what extent, I can't speculate.

Q. Understood.

A. The sheriff seems to make decisions based on emotion quite a bit rather than, you know, actual facts. The sheriff demoted Mat Yakubsin from lieutenant back to sergeant for essentially liking a Facebook post. Let me back up.

He demoted him, but he ordered me to demote him. So I had to call him and tell him, "Hey, look, you're demoted because you liked a Facebook post."

Q. Was that formal discipline?

A. He was on probation.

Q. So he was already on disciplinarian probation?

A. No, he was on new-hire -- promotional probation.

Q. I see. So he could be demoted back to his prior rank without any discipline occurring?

A. Correct.

Q. And does that cause him to lose pay?

A. It does cause him to lose pay.

Q. How much, roughly?

A. I'd have to go back and look at the scales. I mean, you can make a request for the pay changes in HTE. A minimum of five percent; but Yakubsin was not that tenured of a sergeant, so potentially ten percent more. I don't know the exact numbers on Yakubsin.

Q. And you know the basis for that demotion was liking a Facebook post because you were instructed to tell him why he was being demoted by the sheriff?

A. I was instructed by the sheriff to demote him back to sergeant; and the sheriff had told me that, "He liked that Facebook post, and I'm going to demote him."

Now, keep in mind everybody else that also liked that Facebook post -- it surrounded a lieutenant Facebook post from the jail that was subsequently terminated. Howard, I believe, is his name, received corrective counseling for that, but Yakubsin was demoted.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Did that go through an OPS review?

A. Oh, no.

Q. So there's no documentation on any of it?

A. No.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. Did Yakubsin get corrective counseling?

A. I believe he may have, but he was hit with a demotion and the corrective counseling where everybody else was just hit with the corrective counseling. In other words, I felt as if the demotion was excessive in comparison to what had been handed out to everybody else. That's kind of where I was going with that.

We discussed the negligent promotions last time.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. While we're on that topic --

A. Which topic?

Q. Negligent promotion. You mentioned Cleveland Cox. Talk about your knowledge about what happened when he tried out for the SWAT team?

A. He tried out for the SWAT team. He wasn't recommended, and then he was appointed by recommendation of the undersheriff.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Also, what the consequence was to the person who did not want him appointed to the SWAT team.

A. Oh, he adamantly opposed it. He was -- I can't remember if it was Josh Crews or Rich Howell at the time.

Q. Josh Crews.

A. Josh Crews absolutely did not want him to the point he wanted to go meet with the undersheriff, and I think he did meet with undersheriff about it; but the decision was made that he did not get his number one and number two picks, and he got Cleveland Cox. And Cleveland Cox was almost promoted at the recommendation of the sheriff.

Q. What happened with Josh Crews with his relationship with the SWAT team after he didn't want Cleveland Cox on there?

A. I'd have to go back and scroll and think about the timeline, but I can tell you, if you're referring to his removal from the SWAT team, his removal from the SWAT team, I do not believe, was tied to that incident.

We had a SWAT call-out in Monteoca, and the sheriff and undersheriff were there. And Josh Crews was insubordinate to me; and the sheriff found out about it, and the sheriff removed him from the SWAT team based on that incident.

Q. Were those two things occurring closely in time, the Cleveland Cox incident and Monteoca incident?

A. I believe the Cleveland Cox thing was a couple months afterwards. It could have been pretty close. It could have been pretty close.

Q. I don't know the answer, but my understanding is that the delivery of the information that Cleveland Cox would be assigned to the SWAT team and the removal of then lieutenant -- captain, sergeant, I'm not sure --

A. Lieutenant Josh Crews.

Q. -- Lieutenant Crews were delivered at the same time.

A. It may have been. It could have been in close proximity, and I can see how maybe he could correlate that if it was in close proximity, but my knowledge of the incident, it was really based on Lieutenant Crews' insubordination. Because I was ordered by the sheriff to conduct -- to basically put gas on the house with the hopes that the guy would come out, and Josh Crews came over to me and said, "I hope it's not a tactic," and he was rather nasty about it.

I'm not on the SWAT team. I've never been on the SWAT team, and I don't pretend to be on the SWAT team. So when it comes to SWAT-related matters, I would defer to Josh. Josh has got the knowledge. He's been on there a long time, along with his brother. His brother is no longer with us. He's retired. But I had a direct order from the sheriff that this is the way we're going to proceed, and Josh didn't agree with it.

Q. Let me make sure I understand the sheriff is directing a tactic to remove an individual from a home that a SWAT team is doing?

A. To put gas in there, yes.

Q. But is the sheriff qualified to make a decision about a tactic to remove a barricaded subject?

A. In my opinion, no, and that just falls on the back of what I just said. I'm a major. And even when I was a captain over those units, if I called you as my SWAT commander, and you said, "This is what we need to do," I'm going to defer to you. As long as we're not violating policy, we're not violating the law, and we're not creating some additional liability for the sheriff, I'm going to defer to you because that's your area of expertise.

Q. But doesn't it create liability if the sheriff, who is not qualified, is directing a tactic to be used in an extremely dangerous situation?

A. Oh, absolutely. The direction should not have come from the sheriff. The sheriff should have let Josh Crews run the incident, is what it comes down to.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. What was the barricaded subject?

A. There was another individual in the house. I think it was domestic.

Q. So the bad guy wasn't the only one in the house?

A. Correct.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. I guess you're probably the wrong person to ask, but do we put gas in the house when there's more than one person in the house?

A. Generally, no, but I would defer to Josh Crews and let him discuss that incident in greater detail.

Q. And the insubordination that Josh demonstrated during that incident, was he ever a subject of formal discipline? Or was it just we're going to discipline him by removing him from the SWAT team?

A. He got a corrective counseling from me for his insubordination, but then the sheriff removed him as the SWAT team commander.

Q. Did they put gas in the house?

A. I don't remember. That was very early on in the tenure of the administration.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Did the sheriff give a reason why he wanted the gas? Did he have some place to go?

A. Uh-uh. It was clear he was trying to direct the incident where he didn't have the experience to direct the incident.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:
Q. Was the sheriff at the scene?
A. He was, and the undersheriff. They both showed up. And, you know, to be fair, normally the sheriff and the undersheriff, the major does not show up to SWAT teams. You know, normally we're behind the phone somewhere, and we're letting those people run those operations; but that's not the way the sheriff wanted it run.
The captain was there. I was there. Captain Bella Blizzard was there. I was there. Decoursey was there. The sheriff was there. And I think probably Josh felt like he wasn't being allowed to operate under the parameters that he normally operates because his decision-making was being impeded by us.
BY MR. KRAMER:
Q. And that's what lead to his insubordination.
A. Correct.
Q. That's also consistent with what you've previously testified to, that all the decisions are being made by the sheriff to operational and tactical decisions.
A. That is correct.
BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. Were you familiar or did we talk about it last time, about the Cleveland Cox investigation that went through the office of professional standards?

A. I was aware.

Q. Do you know what happened with that eventually, or why it was terminated?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Is there some connection or familial connection between the undersheriff and Cleveland Cox?

A. We speculated that there was, but we -- I don't know of one, but it seemed to be really out of character that he was placed on the SWAT team and he was promoted against the objections of essentially everyone.

Q. Was he also assigned to CID?

A. He was.

Q. Against the objections?

A. He was. It was a pattern existing with Cleveland Cox, but I don't know what the connection is.

MR. KRAMER: I want to talk about time.

We can go off the record.

(An off-the-record discussion was had.)

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. All we were discussing is how much time we have remaining before our other witnesses to need to appear.

A. Eric Hutchison was promoted to the rank of acting lieutenant when he wasn't on the eligibility list. I would suggest you pull the employee profile and the eligibility list. When that was called to the sheriff's attention, that he wasn't eligible for promotion, the sheriff did act and rescinded that; but then here recently Scott Bonafide has been promoted to an active lieutenant, and he's been moved to civil.

As you're aware, civil is a completely different animal than any other part of the sheriff's office. You deal with evicting people and serving papers that can and cannot be served at certain times of day. To my knowledge, Scott has no knowledge of the civil process.

I did mention Rashawn Flanders. I do not have that paperwork that I thought I had.

The last one is Pat Ford Thomas. Michelle Clement was the division manager, and she was removed for seemingly no reason and moved over to the contract monitor at the jail, which she's got zero experience at. She was removed from her role as a division manager, and she was replaced with Pat Ford Thomas.

Pat Ford Thomas is the wife of Dave Thomas,

who, interestingly enough, was one of the very core group of people in Watson's campaign.

Q. We're going to speak with Michelle Clement. We just haven't gotten her scheduled yet.

A. Okay. I have for you a copy of one of the personnel orders that went out, and as you can see, the quantity of moves that were made at one time are significant; and that's not one of them, but the reason why that's significant is because I have this to go along with it, which is completely out of character, which has everybody's picture and where they're going, where you can definitely see folks --

MR. KRAMER: All right. We'll make this an exhibit to your statement.

That's all I have. I'm sure if something else comes up, I may think of something or whatever.

(Exhibit 1 was marked for identification.)

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. One last question I've got. When transfers and things were made, were the positions that they went to, were they resumed made for? Or were persons just told, you're going here, and you're going here?

A. Under the Darnell administration, generally, what would happen would be, an open position announcement would come out: Any interested deputy sheriff that wishes to apply to be a detective, please submit your name to ISIS, which is our internal system. Interviews are conducted, and then somebody would be selected from the list.

Under the Watson administration, that pretty much went out the window. He just made moves willie-nillie as he felt necessary with no rhyme or reason is really the short answer.

MR. KRAMER: Thank you. We may be talking to you further.

K

KEEP (5:12)(5:16)(27:1)(33:2)(42:8)

people to teach the recruits.

Q. Well, maybe I'm being too obtuse. If employees are being mistreated and treated very differently than they have been by prior administrations without any explanation, does that create an environment where employees are likely to remain?

A. Absolutely not. What happens is too often -- I'm sure you guys are aware that law enforcement salaries are not that high, and almost everybody has got some sort of secondary employment whether it be at the academy or whether they have a business. Like we have several folks that have lawn maintain businesses, you know, and they thrive on those businesses, especially during the summer months when grass cutting is frequent. And when those forms aren't being approved, then you get into a situation where am I allowed to continue my business that I invested all this capital in, or what do I need to do? Do I need to quit and just move on?

And I'm sure if you pull the vacancy rate, the FT vacancies on January 5th of 2021, you pull the FT vacancy rate as of today, you'll see that they're vastly different.

Q. Just so I understand, do those supplemental employment forms have to be yearly?

A. They do.

Q. So even if you've had the same position for years and years, it has to be approved every year?

A. Every calendar year.

Q. Is it October 1? January 1?

A. January 1, if my memory recalls. I think it's January 1.

Q. Would your understanding be, there would be individuals who would resubmit after January 1 and would not get an answer for five, six, seven months?

A. Lengthy amounts of times or outright denials with no excuse, or no response, really. And, you know, the academy relies on those folks to teach recruits.

Q. Right.

A. I do believe we discussed that it could be found in one of the audio recordings that the undersheriff said that nothing is final until it's in green ink.

Q. Correct.

A. So that just kind of plays into that.

Q. And, also, I want to follow up on that issue. I want to make sure I understand what you're telling me, which is that -- and I'll use my organization as an example. We have -- I delegate control out to supervisors because I am physically incapable of making timely decisions in 20,000 cases of prosecution per year, and that is necessary for the proper functioning of the agency.

A. That is correct. I felt as if I had less decision-making authority as a major than I did as a lieutenant under the Darnell administration, which chokes the entire operation.

Q. So the same is true at the sheriff's office, and probably on a much larger scale than my organization. I have 135 employees, and the sheriff's office has how many employees?

A. About 960.

Q. Nine hundred sixty employees, and then essentially day-to-day decision making is being made by the sheriff?

A. Essentially.

Q. And that has prevented the sheriff's office's proper functioning because decision-making is delayed, and this -- what you've been talking about, this example of additional employment, is just maybe one example of delay.

A. It is one example, yes.

Q. And there are many others?

A. Right.

Q. And I don't know if you can speak to this, but is one of those examples, would it be assisting other agencies?

A. Yes.

Q. And are you aware during the time you were at the sheriff's office of a change in the decision-making process by which the sheriff's office decided whether or not to assist other agencies?

A. Absolutely.

Q. And if you could clarify. Does the sheriff's office have obligations, contractual and grant-oriented obligations, to provide assistance to regional agencies with equipment and expertise that those agencies would not have?

A. Absolutely.

Q. And could you explain what happened while you were there? What was the change from the prior administration? How did that affect things?

A. So operationally when I was the patrol support lieutenant, which was over all the special teams, Bradford County would call and say, "Hey, we've got an incident up here. We need the SWAT team."

So we're part of a region. The SWAT team is a regional team. There's funding that comes out of --

I can't remember the abbreviation, but it is -- there's funding that comes out. They fund some equipment, and that is really meant so that when Bradford County calls, or Union County folks that don't have a SWAT team, we go up there and we handle it.

And usually the protocol was, they would call. The captain would say, "Hey, Union County has a SWAT call-out." I would notify the SWAT guys, and then they would go.

The captain would then turn around and notify the chain upwards, "Hey, this is what's happened. I'm just kind of letting you know that Bradford County has called, or Union County has called, and they need the SWAT team."

That's been the practice for years. I mean, time was of the essence when you're talking about calling out a SWAT team. If we're not calling them for some preplanned event three days from now, then we don't have time to sit around and talk and have approval. It's go.

That completely changed under the Watson administration. He simply demanded that, in order for any asset to leave this county, that that sheriff that was requesting or that chief that was requesting the equipment called him first, which severely choked the response time.

So it was a complete spin. It was something we weren't used to, but he wanted the sheriff of Bradford County, Union County to call him and ask for the equipment before we were authorized.

Q. And what if he wasn't available?

A. (Shrugs shoulders.)

Q. You're holding up your hands and saying there's no answer for that?

A. There's no answer for that because we weren't authorized to proceed.

Q. So, for instance, just an instance that I was personally involved in was, there was an officer-involved shooting in Levy County, and they only have maybe four deputies on the road at any one time. I don't know if you're aware of this incident.

A. Correct.

Q. And when three of the officers were involved in a shooting, then they had no -- essentially, one deputy remaining on the road. They requested assistance from the Alachua County Sheriff's Office. Would that assistance request have to go through the sheriff himself?

A. It would.

Q. Would you agree that under those circumstances where a county was essentially now --

A. Vacant.

Q. -- had no law enforcement available, that time is of the essence?

A. Yeah, it is essential. And I'll follow up with another example.

The two deputies that were shot in Gilchrist County under the Darnell administration. As soon as that happened, everybody started rolling. We rolled the command -- I mean, we had the mobile command bus. We had schedules done to start covering the county, and then we just started notifying the sheriff, "Hey, this is what we're doing. This is how we're taking care of them." It was almost the information was flowing upward rather than flowing downward.

And under the Watson administration it's completely immerse. It's not allowed to happen in that manner. And the folks who may call 911 in Gilchrist County, now that there's no deputies available, they rely on our assistance. And we have the resources to provide to Gilchrist County or to Union County that Union County or Gilchrist County doesn't otherwise have.

MR. KRAMER: All right. Let's go back to things that you may -- unless you wanted to follow up. I'm sorry.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Has he ever denied one of those requests that you know of?

A. Yes.

Q. Which one?

A. There was an incident where University of Florida had called and requested the use of the jail vans. There was something going on at the Reitz Union. I think Darren Baxley had called and requested the jail vans. Don't quote me. I think it was Darren Baxley, deputy chief. Sheriff Watson refused to let them utilize the jail vans.

All that is, is a transport function. It's not like we were sending personnel. You know, we send in a couple of people to operate the vans, but we weren't sending crowd management. We weren't getting involved with their business on campus. They were just simply asking for assistance because, again, the university, you know, they've only got 80 FTEs, you know, somewhere in there. They don't have the capacity to deal with 15 or 20 arrestees at the same time. It would impact them severely to have to deal with that, and we had the resources. I didn't understand what the purpose of withholding a jail van was.

Q. When you say impact severely, would that mean creating an unsafe environment for the remainder of the students and faculty on campus?

A. Potentially. I mean, it depends on how the incident goes. If you got all your guys on the incident tied up with 10-15, or arrestees, if you will, and then they need to focus their attention somewhere else, next thing you know, you divert your attention to the people that need to go. Now you have an unsafe number of officers with the arrestees; or do the officers stay with the arrestees, and now you've neglected this? You have to make a decision.

You've only got so many personnel. The jail van would have been very quick, easy. You bring the jail vans over, put them in the jail vans, pat them down, get them in there, at least hold them there for a few minutes or get them out of there, whatever they decided to do. It was a relatively simple request.

There was some issues surrounding the drug task force, which I'm sure you're aware of, and the sheriff not wanting anyone to operate in the county.

Q. Were you an employee of the sheriff's office at the time that the sheriff directed the removal of all the equipment from the drug task force?

A. No, but my understanding is it was done in the middle of the night under some covert operation, was the rumor.

Q. Correct. I just didn't know if you were personally involved.

A. I was not.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Were you there when Nassau County requested assistance on an officer-involved shooting, and it was denied?

A. Actually, yes. I believe I was.

Q. Do we know why?

A. I don't know why.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. But that denial would have come from the sheriff?

A. It come from the sheriff. No cop, working cop, like even coming up through the ranks, when they had something like that, would deny that type of assistance. Those are the things -- when things were choked, it chokes to the point where it doesn't -- it doesn't run efficiently.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. And for the record, let me correct that. It may have been an officer-involved shooting, but actually the deputy had been shot; and they had a subject cornered, and they were asking for assistance from SWAT teams.

A. Correct. Correct.

MR. KRAMER: Anything further on what he's said so far?

THE WITNESS: One of the things that -- you know, you talk about assets. The SWAT team is one of them, but more frequently the helicopter is something that -- you know, we have an aviation unit. And folks in Putnam County and Columbia County, you know, they rely on that air support. You know, one helicopter there, arguably, is equivalent of 15 or 20 units on the ground.

Those requests were frequently -- we ran into problems where there would be a pursuit at, say, 2:00 in the morning, and they're calling and asking for our assistance. And then you have to make the decision, do I say, okay, go ahead and go, and then get chewed out the next day because they didn't -- because that sheriff didn't call our sheriff at 2:00 in the morning?

I mean, that's the type of slow-down we're talking about, to the point where you might as well not even send them at that point. It's almost rendering it useless.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. And it's 2:00 in the morning. Is Sheriff Watson available to answer another sheriff's call?

A. I don't know. I never called him at 2:00 in the morning.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. You mentioned earlier about the funding. If I recall from my days with RDS --

A. RDSTF, yeah, that's it.

Q. Regional Domestic Security Task Force. That's where a lot of Alachua's money came from. Or I say a lot. That's basically --

A. A significant amount of money.

Q. They were given a lot of money to create those regional units in case of -- for the region.

A. Right.

Q. And that was the understanding, that the money is given to you, but you need to be available if the region needs you.

A. The BearCat. I believe the BearCat was portioned with RDSTF money; or a portion of it was purchased with it, and you know how expensive those are.

The bomb team is another RDSTF, you know.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Let me ask you this. Are these requests reduced in any way to writing, or would there be any evidence of the request existing at all?

A. Usually -- from my recollection, usually when something breaks off, it's a phone call saying, "We need SWAT."

Q. Let me ask you this --

A. There could be a Teletype follow-up, though. I don't know.

Q. Would there be text messaging? Like, for instance, might you send a text message to the sheriff "We've received request from Scott for SWAT in Union County"?

A. Oh, I'm sure, but I never really directly contacted the sheriff. That was the undersheriff. I would call him, the undersheriff. I mean, he would answer his phone.

Q. But if -- you would agree those communications would be records at the agency?

A. There should be records at the agency.

Q. But if those records were not being -- they may not be preserved.

A. They should be preserved. Because there was a point in time when we all got iPhones -- you get into the debate of the iPhone or the Android, right? The iPhone is a blue, which is MMS; and then you have the Android, which is an SMS message. From my understanding, the SMS messages are recorded through your carrier, but the MMS are not because they're run on data and not run on cellular.

Q. But if the sheriff didn't allow the recording devices on his phone, there would be no record of those requests being made to the sheriff, correct?

A. I know that the phone that I had had recording because that was all enabled by Scott Shelpman, if my memory serves me correctly.

Q. Understood. Let's move on to the next item that you were concerned that we had missed due to our time constraints.

A. We discussed briefly Michelle Shirfield last time. She had posted some items on Facebook that could be seen by some folks as slanted to one racial side, if you will. That was brought to Watson's attention, and our understanding is that she was given a corrective counseling for that. Nobody ever saw the corrective counseling.

And then the order was basically given, you know, for Facebook or for violations of social media, that was -- that was the -- what should be done, give them a corrective counseling and go through progressive discipline.

And I think there's a couple open cases right now -- or I don't know if they're open or closed.

So Frank Williams and Kevin Davis are under investigation, or open at the moment, for things that I think were far less controversial, and they were placed on admin suspension and been sitting at the house for months.

Q. And let me ask you because I don't know the answer to this. This individual -- and you said her name was Michelle?

A. Shirfield.

Q. Shirfield? Is she African American?

A. She is.

Q. And the posts that you're referencing, they were -- I don't know the posts. Were they racially inappropriate?

A. It was more of a supporting a racial position, and I believe Kevin Davis could speak more on that.

Q. Is it your understanding that a formal complaint was made either to her supervisor or to the office of professional standards so that discipline should have been initiated?

A. I told the sheriff directly about the violation, and Bobby Stafford told the sheriff directly about the violation.

Q. But as far as I understand -- and my understanding of discipline is developing -- is that the way the discipline would be initiated, it would be either through the office of professional standards or through her supervisor.

A. Correct.

Q. So you gave that information to the sheriff?

A. Correct.

Q. And your understanding is that no discipline was initiated; or if there was any discipline, it was informal in the form of a corrective counseling?

A. It was informal in the form of a corrective counseling, but nobody seen that. I'm sure if you pull her file you would either see a corrective counseling or not see a corrective counseling, but she reported directly to the sheriff.

Q. When someone receives corrective counseling, is it discipline?

A. It's considered informal discipline.

Q. But it should remain in the employee file for one year?

A. That's correct. Oftentimes it's not removed. You have to go back in there and say, hey, that needs to come out.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. Do you know if Kevin Davis made a complaint about that to OPS or through the sheriff suite?

A. I don't think so because he had already known that it was brought to the attention of the sheriff and Bobby Stafford.

Q. Do you know about any complaint that Kevin Davis took to OPS?

A. I know he made a complaint. I don't remember what it surrounded; but I do remember him taking a complaint, and it was basically like disregarded.

Q. If somebody takes a complaint to OPS, should a case number be drawn?

A. Oh, absolutely, or they say this is really not -- there's a list of standards that OPS will investigate these certain things or as directed by the sheriff.

So they'll look at it, and they'll say we'll take and we're going to pull a case number, or they'll say we're going to defer it back to the division commander and let the employee supervisor handle it.

MR. KRAMER: Any other questions on that particular issue?

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Thank you for the clarification. Was there anything else?

A. Did we discuss the bargaining process with the re-openers and the unfair labor practice?

Q. You did. You informed us that one of the reasons why you left the sheriff's office was that you advised them, essentially, that what they were doing was in violation of the National Labor Standards Act.

A. Oh, that's right. I gave you the form. Okay.

So I gave the set of text messages last time between the undersheriff and I.

Q. Yes.

A. The sergeants and lieutenants ratified their contract. The deputies did not ratify their contract. And there was an extended period of time; I don't recall the exact settlement dates, maybe July, August the following year. So we're talking about ten, eleven months later that ultimately we were going to go to a hearing at the sheriff's office.

And right before that began and the sheriff was coming to sit down and testify, if my memory serves me correctly, he wanted to have a discussion. And then that was ultimately settled, and a substantial check was written for attorney's fees. You may want to pull a copy of that.

Q. Who was the attorney that would have received the fees?

A. It would be the PBA.

Q. Would it be the PBA itself, or would it be paid directly to a particular attorney?

MS. WEBSTER: Do you want me to answer?

MR. KRAMER: No, you can tell him.

THE WITNESS: The check was written to the PBA.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. For the attorney's fees?

A. For the attorney's fees.

Q. Incurred because of the actions that you've already described in your previous testimony where the sheriff was essentially acting in violation of the National Labor Standards Act of essentially just refusing to negotiate in good faith.

A. That is correct. And that surrounded the take-home cars, which I believe we talked about last time.

Q. Correct.

A. All those things wrapped up.

Q. He withdrew all the articles. That's the phraseology you used.

A. Everything was TA'd. We were getting ready to go to a vote on Thursday and Friday. On Monday, October 18th, I got a call that he withdrew all the articles.

I said, "Wait a minute. We know this vote is coming. We can't do this."

I brought it to his attention, and the sheriff made the unilateral decision to pull that. I said, "You can't do that. You're going to refuse to sign a contract after it's already been agreed upon."

And in his text messages, which I presented to you last time, I was told that my interpretation was not consistent with the decision of the sheriff.

MR. KRAMER: Anything else?

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Next.

A. We talked about the SWAT rifles.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Where are those rifles now, Major?

A. So those rifles were not given to the employee personally. They were issued to the employee that won them with the understanding that when they retire they will be able to keep them. That was the decision that was made, if my memory serves me correctly; but that's probably not in writing anywhere, I promise you that, because nothing hardly ever gets reduced to writing.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Well, they wouldn't have gone to the inventory? Doesn't every officer have an inventory?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. And if they're not on the inventory, and they're in the officer's possession --

A. No, they're issued to the officer. They're going to be on the inventory.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. They were taken into the sheriff's office inventory and then issued to the officer that won it.

A. That's correct.

Did I touch on the fact that Watson will make a decision regardless whether it's against policy or procedure?

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. I think in general that was clear, but are there specific instances that you can reference that you didn't reference last time?

A. No. I just want to make sure I hit that --

Q. You did.

A. It's so frequent, though, that --

Q. What is the effect on the agency when the sheriff doesn't follow the agency's own policy?

A. Well, what it does is, it sets the tone of the only consistency is inconsistency, right? And when the sheriff isn't following his own policies and procedures, what message is that sending down to the troops?

It sends a horrible message down saying I don't have to follow policy and procedure, but I'm going to hold you to it; and when you aren't held to it, when you violate that, I'm going to write you up.

Q. Would it also lead people to the conclusion that -- wouldn't it also lead to the natural conclusion that if you follow a policy, that the sheriff might still discipline you or you might meet criticism or demotion or job problems because you followed policy that the sheriff no longer wants to have be the policy?

A. It's almost as if you're expected to think like him. And if it is any perceived disrespect or embarrassment, you're going to be talked to about it, if not hit with some sort of discipline.

We just had a recent case, the Glen Stanley

internal investigation, which is closed -- which I suggest you pull a copy of that -- where the sheriff goes outside the disciplinary matrix.

We have a matrix that says this is Level Two, Level Three, Level Four or Five, and this is -- you know, you got a Level Two, you get this many points. This many points is from A to B, and he'll just add C in there.

Q. And in this particular investigation was it to the officer's detriment?

A. Yes.

Q. Is this recourse for the officer under those circumstances? Can the officer appeal that decision? Do they have -- do they enforce the matrix as it exists, or are they simply subject to the sheriff's rulings?

A. Only if they meet the standards set forth in the sheriff's board, which is greater than a two-day suspension. In this case it was one-day suspension, but they put the guy on 12 months of disciplinary probation. And I believe, if you go back and you look at what a Level Three violation is, 12 months of disciplinary probation is not allowed.

And then what you do when you put somebody on disciplinary probation is, the next time they wear the wrong color socks or doing something that's in violation, then they're not eligible for a career service board.

It's almost like you're setting up them for the next violation, to render them ineffective in a career service board.

Q. And because it's a one-day suspension, it's not appealable?

A. Correct.

We touched on changing past practice without really any discussion with anyone.

Q. Correct. Yes.

A. We touched on Watson and Decoursey routinely holding paperwork and not signing it, essentially neglecting the duties of moving the institution along.

And we -- I know we discussed not reducing things to writing, and we discussed the staffing shortages. So I think that kind of cleans up what I can remember from the last one.

Q. Was there anything additional in response to the question, are you aware of anything immoral, unethical, or illegal, that occurred in the sheriff's office while you were there --

A. Well --

Q. -- that we didn't cover last time?

A. I think that's where we're going to move in to the next section.

Q. Okay.

A. So the sheriff is a steward of the taxpayer's money. Would you agree with that?

Q. Agreed.

A. When he came into office, there were two vehicles that were provided that were left by Darnell and Huckstep. They were not happy with those vehicles even though they were functioning vehicles, and they immediately purchased two black Tahoes; and they were high-end Tahoes to the tune of in the mid 70s. And then, of course, all the equipment and everything had to go in on top of that, so you're talking probably upwards of 90-plus thousand dollars just because they wanted new vehicles. That was kind of like the first thing. Everybody kind of questioned that.

And then he had the badges removed from them that say like "High Country" to make it look like it wasn't, you know, an expensive vehicle as it was, but everybody knew what time of day it was. They saw the badges on there. Everybody knew what was going on. You could see it.

So that was kind of, in my opinion, something that the fleet department should have set back and assessed and advised the sheriff, "Hey, if we want new vehicles, this is where our budget is. This is how much money we have left. If we make this purchase, then we can't purchase these four cars instead of these two Tahoes."

That didn't happen. He immediately ordered the vehicle. I don't think they came off state contract. I think they got one at the local Chevrolet dealership. Or I don't know where they got them form; you'd have to pull that. One was 74. The other one was 77 or somewhere in there. They were both in the mid 70s. So that was one thing that kind of came up.

So there were some Nissans that were purchased, and I believe they were for the drug task force or somebody, I think, after I had left. And there was an allegation they were purchased from Gainesville Nissan, and his son is one of the sales managers at Gainesville Nissan.

Q. Those type of contract purchases would be normally not done through Gainesville Nissan? They'd be done through state contract?

A. Generally, yes, unless there is a specific reason. Like, I know Darnell, when we purchased Harleys, the state contract price was, say -- I'm just throwing a number out there -- 17,000, but Gainesville

Harley said, hey, we'll sell them to you for 15.5. The sheriff felt we should keep our money local, and she was actually saving money and was being a good steward of the taxpayers' money and purchased the Harleys there.

But as far as going outside of that, the only thing I know of going outside was that some vehicles were purchased from Southeast Car Agency, especially when it came to things like the trucks for the aviation unit, where we could get something that was used; we didn't buy them new. They weren't new vehicles. They were used vehicles.

But there was some allegations that the Nissans came purchased from his son; and I don't have any evidence to substantiate that, but you could certainly run that down.

One of the tasks that I was given fairly early on was -- the office of professional standards was housed within the main sheriff's office at 2621 Southeast Hawthorne Road. And the office of professional standards has a door that goes right into the sheriff's suite, and that was so that the captain of OPS could go in and confer with the sheriff because the captain was direct report to the sheriff. It had been set like that since I've been there. That was always OPS. Some years prior to that, it was at the jail.

He had me -- he directed me to have OPS relocated back to the office -- the department of the jail, and he then commanded those offices for himself and had them remodeled where he made a rather large office for himself and spent a significant amount of money remodeling that office and then purchased some furniture to fill that office.

Q. Was the furniture purchased off of state contract?

A. I was told it was purchased offline. He went online and bought it because he got a better deal. To what that was, what that P.O. looked like, I have no idea.

Q. Would that be unusual?

A. That would be unusual.

Q. Outside the standard procedures of the sheriff's office to purchase furniture?

A. Correct, because every time we've purchased furniture -- like we purchased tables like these, chairs like these that sit in the squad room that I'm sure you've been to. All those were purchased through a vendor that we've got. And every time we've had to purchase something, A and B has to come to us with a book like this and said, here's what's available. This is what we can purchase. So to purchase furniture outside that realm, to my knowledge, had never been done.

Q. Okay.

A. There was a lot of controversy surrounding expenditures plastering his name on the building.

Q. Where are those?

A. On one occasion it didn't look right, and he bought it again.

Okay. You're aware of it. We'll move on.

On the back of everybody's vest said "sheriff" just like the cars say "sheriff" on it. It doesn't mean that you are the sheriff. It just indicates like police, sheriff. All those were ordered to be removed and replaced with deputies.

Q. Was it on the cars as well as the uniforms?

A. It was not on the cars. It was just on the uniforms.

Q. Did anybody -- with regard to this, did anybody confer or look at the Florida Statutes to ensure that the officers would be properly marked for the purposes of fleeing or attempting to elude or resisting arrest with or without violence, to ensure that the standards that are set forth in the statutes would be met?

A. I brought that specific statute that you're referring to to the attention of the undersheriff and said, "There's really no reason for this. It doesn't designate them as the sheriff, but, you know, it's for the purposes of authority."

And the response was, "There's only one sheriff, and that's the guy that signs in green ink. Everybody else is a deputy," and that was the reason for the switch.

But again, you have whatever those patches were, ten, eight, twelve dollars times how many, 300 patches. Again, it's just another tick of expenditures that didn't need to happen.

Q. Understood.

A. The sheriff and the undersheriff has continued to disregard Florida Statute 112 on numerous occasions, which obviously stemmed from the lawsuits that are out there pending.

Q. Do you have any information to indicate whether their disregard of 112 procedures and rights that are contained in Florida Statute 112 are based upon ignorance, that they don't understand them? Or is it based on an intentional act that they don't care to provide those rights and meet their responsibilities?

A. Personally, I believe they don't care.

Q. So at the time these violations have occurred, are the rights of the officers and responsibilities of the agency being brought to the attention of the individuals who are doing this and being told we don't care?

A. My understanding was 112 violation was raised; and then when the interview was stopped, that individual was charged with insubordination. And 112 clearly says that that can't happen.

Q. Which officer was charged with insubordination because they refused to be interviewed?

A. I believe it was Frank Williams, but I would have to go back and look. I'd have to do some additional research on that.

Q. I may need you to follow up on that if you can identify any particular officer who was -- I'm saying charged, but that's probably not the right word -- was given -- an OPS investigation was instituted for insubordination or insubordination was added to the current charged violations?

A. I believe if you pull the Glen Stanley case, and you pull a recording of the Loudermill that went along with the Glen Stanley case, the general counsel -- essentially, the argument was being made that truthfulness did not occur, that the officer actually -- it was alleged that the officer did not -- and I don't have first-hand knowledge of it, but from my understanding, is that the officer didn't do something and, in the actual packet, said that they had done it, they had sent an email.

The undersheriff indicated on his recommendation that it was truthfulness, that it didn't occur; and when the disciplinary rep went to make the argument that it was not truthfulness, the general counsel said, "Well, what charge do you think was appropriate?"

So I would encourage you to go back and listen to that audio recording of that Loudermill. In other words, you're going to get charged with something, and we're going to find something to fit.

Q. Okay. Understood.

A. I would encourage you to probably pull his calendar, Watson's calendar, and his gas receipts. On the very early part of his tenure he was there a lot. I know he was there a lot because I was there a lot, and I saw him a lot from very early in the morning, 5:00, 6:00 -- I think we discussed that last time -- until 8:00, 9:00 at night.

It got to the point where we needed the sheriff to approve something or do something, again, because we couldn't approve anything, the sheriff is not here. The sheriff is not here. The sheriff is not here. Where is he? Is he working? Is he not working? It seemed like he was never around.

So I would encourage you to probably pull his calendar for --

Q. What month and years?

A. I would say July '21 and after.

Q. Is there some incident you can point to where his attendance to the office stopped? Was it sudden, or was it gradual?

A. It was gradual. It seemed like he gradually was not there more and more, and he was unavailable, which then just stalemated --

Q. Right, because everything has to go through him.

A. Everything has to go through him, and then everything just slows to a crawl, at best a crawl.

The sheriff's son, Clovis Watson, IV, was the subject of numerous traffic stops and some criminal acts with GPD. This information was forwarded to the sheriff, but he never seemed to rectify it with his son. It continued to happen.

He was stopped a couple of times by our deputies for traffic violations. We did a DUI checkpoint down on South 13th Street where his son was completely irate and completely out of line just coming to pick somebody up that we had dealt with. I called the sheriff and he said, okay, and that was the end of it.

It was like his son could just do whatever he wanted to because his dad was the sheriff. There was no -- it was a very poor reflection on the sheriff, very poor reflection on the sheriff.

We talked about fails to process paperwork.

I think Ed Bennett -- you might want to talk to Ed Bennett about the disapproval of secondary employment at the academy.

Q. With regard to that, are you aware that the academy became short of staff because of the sheriff disapproving secondary employment?

A. I can't swear to that.

Q. We'd have to check with the academy?

A. You'd have to check with the academy. I would imagine it severely impacted it; but to what extent, I can't speculate.

Q. Understood.

A. The sheriff seems to make decisions based on emotion quite a bit rather than, you know, actual facts. The sheriff demoted Mat Yakubsin from lieutenant back to sergeant for essentially liking a Facebook post. Let me back up.

He demoted him, but he ordered me to demote him. So I had to call him and tell him, "Hey, look, you're demoted because you liked a Facebook post."

Q. Was that formal discipline?

A. He was on probation.

Q. So he was already on disciplinarian probation?

A. No, he was on new-hire -- promotional probation.

Q. I see. So he could be demoted back to his prior rank without any discipline occurring?

A. Correct.

Q. And does that cause him to lose pay?

A. It does cause him to lose pay.

Q. How much, roughly?

A. I'd have to go back and look at the scales. I mean, you can make a request for the pay changes in HTE. A minimum of five percent; but Yakubsin was not that tenured of a sergeant, so potentially ten percent more. I don't know the exact numbers on Yakubsin.

Q. And you know the basis for that demotion was liking a Facebook post because you were instructed to tell him why he was being demoted by the sheriff?

A. I was instructed by the sheriff to demote him back to sergeant; and the sheriff had told me that, "He liked that Facebook post, and I'm going to demote him."

Now, keep in mind everybody else that also liked that Facebook post -- it surrounded a lieutenant Facebook post from the jail that was subsequently terminated. Howard, I believe, is his name, received corrective counseling for that, but Yakubsin was demoted.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Did that go through an OPS review?

A. Oh, no.

Q. So there's no documentation on any of it?

A. No.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. Did Yakubsin get corrective counseling?

A. I believe he may have, but he was hit with a demotion and the corrective counseling where everybody else was just hit with the corrective counseling. In other words, I felt as if the demotion was excessive in comparison to what had been handed out to everybody else. That's kind of where I was going with that.

We discussed the negligent promotions last time.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. While we're on that topic --

A. Which topic?

Q. Negligent promotion. You mentioned Cleveland Cox. Talk about your knowledge about what happened when he tried out for the SWAT team?

A. He tried out for the SWAT team. He wasn't recommended, and then he was appointed by recommendation of the undersheriff.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Also, what the consequence was to the person who did not want him appointed to the SWAT team.

A. Oh, he adamantly opposed it. He was -- I can't remember if it was Josh Crews or Rich Howell at the time.

Q. Josh Crews.

A. Josh Crews absolutely did not want him to the point he wanted to go meet with the undersheriff, and I think he did meet with undersheriff about it; but the decision was made that he did not get his number one and number two picks, and he got Cleveland Cox. And Cleveland Cox was almost promoted at the recommendation of the sheriff.

Q. What happened with Josh Crews with his relationship with the SWAT team after he didn't want Cleveland Cox on there?

A. I'd have to go back and scroll and think about the timeline, but I can tell you, if you're referring to his removal from the SWAT team, his removal from the SWAT team, I do not believe, was tied to that incident.

We had a SWAT call-out in Monteoca, and the sheriff and undersheriff were there. And Josh Crews was insubordinate to me; and the sheriff found out about it, and the sheriff removed him from the SWAT team based on that incident.

Q. Were those two things occurring closely in time, the Cleveland Cox incident and Monteoca incident?

A. I believe the Cleveland Cox thing was a couple months afterwards. It could have been pretty close. It could have been pretty close.

Q. I don't know the answer, but my understanding is that the delivery of the information that Cleveland Cox would be assigned to the SWAT team and the removal of then lieutenant -- captain, sergeant, I'm not sure --

A. Lieutenant Josh Crews.

Q. -- Lieutenant Crews were delivered at the same time.

A. It may have been. It could have been in close proximity, and I can see how maybe he could correlate that if it was in close proximity, but my knowledge of the incident, it was really based on Lieutenant Crews' insubordination. Because I was ordered by the sheriff to conduct -- to basically put gas on the house with the hopes that the guy would come out, and Josh Crews came over to me and said, "I hope it's not a tactic," and he was rather nasty about it.

I'm not on the SWAT team. I've never been on the SWAT team, and I don't pretend to be on the SWAT team. So when it comes to SWAT-related matters, I would defer to Josh. Josh has got the knowledge. He's been on there a long time, along with his brother. His brother is no longer with us. He's retired. But I had a direct order from the sheriff that this is the way we're going to proceed, and Josh didn't agree with it.

Q. Let me make sure I understand the sheriff is directing a tactic to remove an individual from a home that a SWAT team is doing?

A. To put gas in there, yes.

Q. But is the sheriff qualified to make a decision about a tactic to remove a barricaded subject?

A. In my opinion, no, and that just falls on the back of what I just said. I'm a major. And even when I was a captain over those units, if I called you as my SWAT commander, and you said, "This is what we need to do," I'm going to defer to you. As long as we're not violating policy, we're not violating the law, and we're not creating some additional liability for the sheriff, I'm going to defer to you because that's your area of expertise.

Q. But doesn't it create liability if the sheriff, who is not qualified, is directing a tactic to be used in an extremely dangerous situation?

A. Oh, absolutely. The direction should not have come from the sheriff. The sheriff should have let Josh Crews run the incident, is what it comes down to.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. What was the barricaded subject?

A. There was another individual in the house. I think it was domestic.

Q. So the bad guy wasn't the only one in the house?

A. Correct.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. I guess you're probably the wrong person to ask, but do we put gas in the house when there's more than one person in the house?

A. Generally, no, but I would defer to Josh Crews and let him discuss that incident in greater detail.

Q. And the insubordination that Josh demonstrated during that incident, was he ever a subject of formal discipline? Or was it just we're going to discipline him by removing him from the SWAT team?

A. He got a corrective counseling from me for his insubordination, but then the sheriff removed him as the SWAT team commander.

Q. Did they put gas in the house?

A. I don't remember. That was very early on in the tenure of the administration.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Did the sheriff give a reason why he wanted the gas? Did he have some place to go?

A. Uh-uh. It was clear he was trying to direct the incident where he didn't have the experience to direct the incident.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:
Q. Was the sheriff at the scene?
A. He was, and the undersheriff. They both showed up. And, you know, to be fair, normally the sheriff and the undersheriff, the major does not show up to SWAT teams. You know, normally we're behind the phone somewhere, and we're letting those people run those operations; but that's not the way the sheriff wanted it run.
The captain was there. I was there. Captain Bella Blizzard was there. I was there. Decoursey was there. The sheriff was there. And I think probably Josh felt like he wasn't being allowed to operate under the parameters that he normally operates because his decision-making was being impeded by us.
BY MR. KRAMER:
Q. And that's what lead to his insubordination.
A. Correct.
Q. That's also consistent with what you've previously testified to, that all the decisions are being made by the sheriff to operational and tactical decisions.
A. That is correct.
BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. Were you familiar or did we talk about it last time, about the Cleveland Cox investigation that went through the office of professional standards?

A. I was aware.

Q. Do you know what happened with that eventually, or why it was terminated?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Is there some connection or familial connection between the undersheriff and Cleveland Cox?

A. We speculated that there was, but we -- I don't know of one, but it seemed to be really out of character that he was placed on the SWAT team and he was promoted against the objections of essentially everyone.

Q. Was he also assigned to CID?

A. He was.

Q. Against the objections?

A. He was. It was a pattern existing with Cleveland Cox, but I don't know what the connection is.

MR. KRAMER: I want to talk about time.

We can go off the record.

(An off-the-record discussion was had.)

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. All we were discussing is how much time we have remaining before our other witnesses to need to appear.

A. Eric Hutchison was promoted to the rank of acting lieutenant when he wasn't on the eligibility list. I would suggest you pull the employee profile and the eligibility list. When that was called to the sheriff's attention, that he wasn't eligible for promotion, the sheriff did act and rescinded that; but then here recently Scott Bonafide has been promoted to an active lieutenant, and he's been moved to civil.

As you're aware, civil is a completely different animal than any other part of the sheriff's office. You deal with evicting people and serving papers that can and cannot be served at certain times of day. To my knowledge, Scott has no knowledge of the civil process.

I did mention Rashawn Flanders. I do not have that paperwork that I thought I had.

The last one is Pat Ford Thomas. Michelle Clement was the division manager, and she was removed for seemingly no reason and moved over to the contract monitor at the jail, which she's got zero experience at. She was removed from her role as a division manager, and she was replaced with Pat Ford Thomas.

Pat Ford Thomas is the wife of Dave Thomas,

who, interestingly enough, was one of the very core group of people in Watson's campaign.

Q. We're going to speak with Michelle Clement. We just haven't gotten her scheduled yet.

A. Okay. I have for you a copy of one of the personnel orders that went out, and as you can see, the quantity of moves that were made at one time are significant; and that's not one of them, but the reason why that's significant is because I have this to go along with it, which is completely out of character, which has everybody's picture and where they're going, where you can definitely see folks --

MR. KRAMER: All right. We'll make this an exhibit to your statement.

That's all I have. I'm sure if something else comes up, I may think of something or whatever.

(Exhibit 1 was marked for identification.)

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. One last question I've got. When transfers and things were made, were the positions that they went to, were they resumed made for? Or were persons just told, you're going here, and you're going here?

A. Under the Darnell administration, generally, what would happen would be, an open position announcement would come out: Any interested deputy sheriff that wishes to apply to be a detective, please submit your name to ISIS, which is our internal system. Interviews are conducted, and then somebody would be selected from the list.

Under the Watson administration, that pretty much went out the window. He just made moves willie-nillie as he felt necessary with no rhyme or reason is really the short answer.

MR. KRAMER: Thank you. We may be talking to you further.

employment forms have to be yearly?

A. They do.

Q. So even if you've had the same position for years and years, it has to be approved every year?

A. Every calendar year.

Q. Is it October 1? January 1?

A. January 1, if my memory recalls. I think it's January 1.

Q. Would your understanding be, there would be individuals who would resubmit after January 1 and would not get an answer for five, six, seven months?

A. Lengthy amounts of times or outright denials with no excuse, or no response, really. And, you know, the academy relies on those folks to teach recruits.

Q. Right.

A. I do believe we discussed that it could be found in one of the audio recordings that the undersheriff said that nothing is final until it's in green ink.

Q. Correct.

A. So that just kind of plays into that.

Q. And, also, I want to follow up on that issue. I want to make sure I understand what you're telling me, which is that -- and I'll use my organization as an example. We have -- I delegate control out to supervisors because I am physically incapable of making timely decisions in 20,000 cases of prosecution per year, and that is necessary for the proper functioning of the agency.

A. That is correct. I felt as if I had less decision-making authority as a major than I did as a lieutenant under the Darnell administration, which chokes the entire operation.

Q. So the same is true at the sheriff's office, and probably on a much larger scale than my organization. I have 135 employees, and the sheriff's office has how many employees?

A. About 960.

Q. Nine hundred sixty employees, and then essentially day-to-day decision making is being made by the sheriff?

A. Essentially.

Q. And that has prevented the sheriff's office's proper functioning because decision-making is delayed, and this -- what you've been talking about, this example of additional employment, is just maybe one example of delay.

A. It is one example, yes.

Q. And there are many others?

A. Right.

Q. And I don't know if you can speak to this, but is one of those examples, would it be assisting other agencies?

A. Yes.

Q. And are you aware during the time you were at the sheriff's office of a change in the decision-making process by which the sheriff's office decided whether or not to assist other agencies?

A. Absolutely.

Q. And if you could clarify. Does the sheriff's office have obligations, contractual and grant-oriented obligations, to provide assistance to regional agencies with equipment and expertise that those agencies would not have?

A. Absolutely.

Q. And could you explain what happened while you were there? What was the change from the prior administration? How did that affect things?

A. So operationally when I was the patrol support lieutenant, which was over all the special teams, Bradford County would call and say, "Hey, we've got an incident up here. We need the SWAT team."

So we're part of a region. The SWAT team is a regional team. There's funding that comes out of --

I can't remember the abbreviation, but it is -- there's funding that comes out. They fund some equipment, and that is really meant so that when Bradford County calls, or Union County folks that don't have a SWAT team, we go up there and we handle it.

And usually the protocol was, they would call. The captain would say, "Hey, Union County has a SWAT call-out." I would notify the SWAT guys, and then they would go.

The captain would then turn around and notify the chain upwards, "Hey, this is what's happened. I'm just kind of letting you know that Bradford County has called, or Union County has called, and they need the SWAT team."

That's been the practice for years. I mean, time was of the essence when you're talking about calling out a SWAT team. If we're not calling them for some preplanned event three days from now, then we don't have time to sit around and talk and have approval. It's go.

That completely changed under the Watson administration. He simply demanded that, in order for any asset to leave this county, that that sheriff that was requesting or that chief that was requesting the equipment called him first, which severely choked the response time.

So it was a complete spin. It was something we weren't used to, but he wanted the sheriff of Bradford County, Union County to call him and ask for the equipment before we were authorized.

Q. And what if he wasn't available?

A. (Shrugs shoulders.)

Q. You're holding up your hands and saying there's no answer for that?

A. There's no answer for that because we weren't authorized to proceed.

Q. So, for instance, just an instance that I was personally involved in was, there was an officer-involved shooting in Levy County, and they only have maybe four deputies on the road at any one time. I don't know if you're aware of this incident.

A. Correct.

Q. And when three of the officers were involved in a shooting, then they had no -- essentially, one deputy remaining on the road. They requested assistance from the Alachua County Sheriff's Office. Would that assistance request have to go through the sheriff himself?

A. It would.

Q. Would you agree that under those circumstances where a county was essentially now --

A. Vacant.

Q. -- had no law enforcement available, that time is of the essence?

A. Yeah, it is essential. And I'll follow up with another example.

The two deputies that were shot in Gilchrist County under the Darnell administration. As soon as that happened, everybody started rolling. We rolled the command -- I mean, we had the mobile command bus. We had schedules done to start covering the county, and then we just started notifying the sheriff, "Hey, this is what we're doing. This is how we're taking care of them." It was almost the information was flowing upward rather than flowing downward.

And under the Watson administration it's completely immerse. It's not allowed to happen in that manner. And the folks who may call 911 in Gilchrist County, now that there's no deputies available, they rely on our assistance. And we have the resources to provide to Gilchrist County or to Union County that Union County or Gilchrist County doesn't otherwise have.

MR. KRAMER: All right. Let's go back to things that you may -- unless you wanted to follow up. I'm sorry.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Has he ever denied one of those requests that you know of?

A. Yes.

Q. Which one?

A. There was an incident where University of Florida had called and requested the use of the jail vans. There was something going on at the Reitz Union. I think Darren Baxley had called and requested the jail vans. Don't quote me. I think it was Darren Baxley, deputy chief. Sheriff Watson refused to let them utilize the jail vans.

All that is, is a transport function. It's not like we were sending personnel. You know, we send in a couple of people to operate the vans, but we weren't sending crowd management. We weren't getting involved with their business on campus. They were just simply asking for assistance because, again, the university, you know, they've only got 80 FTEs, you know, somewhere in there. They don't have the capacity to deal with 15 or 20 arrestees at the same time. It would impact them severely to have to deal with that, and we had the resources. I didn't understand what the purpose of withholding a jail van was.

Q. When you say impact severely, would that mean creating an unsafe environment for the remainder of the students and faculty on campus?

A. Potentially. I mean, it depends on how the incident goes. If you got all your guys on the incident tied up with 10-15, or arrestees, if you will, and then they need to focus their attention somewhere else, next thing you know, you divert your attention to the people that need to go. Now you have an unsafe number of officers with the arrestees; or do the officers stay with the arrestees, and now you've neglected this? You have to make a decision.

You've only got so many personnel. The jail van would have been very quick, easy. You bring the jail vans over, put them in the jail vans, pat them down, get them in there, at least hold them there for a few minutes or get them out of there, whatever they decided to do. It was a relatively simple request.

There was some issues surrounding the drug task force, which I'm sure you're aware of, and the sheriff not wanting anyone to operate in the county.

Q. Were you an employee of the sheriff's office at the time that the sheriff directed the removal of all the equipment from the drug task force?

A. No, but my understanding is it was done in the middle of the night under some covert operation, was the rumor.

Q. Correct. I just didn't know if you were personally involved.

A. I was not.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Were you there when Nassau County requested assistance on an officer-involved shooting, and it was denied?

A. Actually, yes. I believe I was.

Q. Do we know why?

A. I don't know why.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. But that denial would have come from the sheriff?

A. It come from the sheriff. No cop, working cop, like even coming up through the ranks, when they had something like that, would deny that type of assistance. Those are the things -- when things were choked, it chokes to the point where it doesn't -- it doesn't run efficiently.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. And for the record, let me correct that. It may have been an officer-involved shooting, but actually the deputy had been shot; and they had a subject cornered, and they were asking for assistance from SWAT teams.

A. Correct. Correct.

MR. KRAMER: Anything further on what he's said so far?

THE WITNESS: One of the things that -- you know, you talk about assets. The SWAT team is one of them, but more frequently the helicopter is something that -- you know, we have an aviation unit. And folks in Putnam County and Columbia County, you know, they rely on that air support. You know, one helicopter there, arguably, is equivalent of 15 or 20 units on the ground.

Those requests were frequently -- we ran into problems where there would be a pursuit at, say, 2:00 in the morning, and they're calling and asking for our assistance. And then you have to make the decision, do I say, okay, go ahead and go, and then get chewed out the next day because they didn't -- because that sheriff didn't call our sheriff at 2:00 in the morning?

I mean, that's the type of slow-down we're talking about, to the point where you might as well not even send them at that point. It's almost rendering it useless.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. And it's 2:00 in the morning. Is Sheriff Watson available to answer another sheriff's call?

A. I don't know. I never called him at 2:00 in the morning.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. You mentioned earlier about the funding. If I recall from my days with RDS --

A. RDSTF, yeah, that's it.

Q. Regional Domestic Security Task Force. That's where a lot of Alachua's money came from. Or I say a lot. That's basically --

A. A significant amount of money.

Q. They were given a lot of money to create those regional units in case of -- for the region.

A. Right.

Q. And that was the understanding, that the money is given to you, but you need to be available if the region needs you.

A. The BearCat. I believe the BearCat was portioned with RDSTF money; or a portion of it was purchased with it, and you know how expensive those are.

The bomb team is another RDSTF, you know.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Let me ask you this. Are these requests reduced in any way to writing, or would there be any evidence of the request existing at all?

A. Usually -- from my recollection, usually when something breaks off, it's a phone call saying, "We need SWAT."

Q. Let me ask you this --

A. There could be a Teletype follow-up, though. I don't know.

Q. Would there be text messaging? Like, for instance, might you send a text message to the sheriff "We've received request from Scott for SWAT in Union County"?

A. Oh, I'm sure, but I never really directly contacted the sheriff. That was the undersheriff. I would call him, the undersheriff. I mean, he would answer his phone.

Q. But if -- you would agree those communications would be records at the agency?

A. There should be records at the agency.

Q. But if those records were not being -- they may not be preserved.

A. They should be preserved. Because there was a point in time when we all got iPhones -- you get into the debate of the iPhone or the Android, right? The iPhone is a blue, which is MMS; and then you have the Android, which is an SMS message. From my understanding, the SMS messages are recorded through your carrier, but the MMS are not because they're run on data and not run on cellular.

Q. But if the sheriff didn't allow the recording devices on his phone, there would be no record of those requests being made to the sheriff, correct?

A. I know that the phone that I had had recording because that was all enabled by Scott Shelpman, if my memory serves me correctly.

Q. Understood. Let's move on to the next item that you were concerned that we had missed due to our time constraints.

A. We discussed briefly Michelle Shirfield last time. She had posted some items on Facebook that could be seen by some folks as slanted to one racial side, if you will. That was brought to Watson's attention, and our understanding is that she was given a corrective counseling for that. Nobody ever saw the corrective counseling.

And then the order was basically given, you know, for Facebook or for violations of social media, that was -- that was the -- what should be done, give them a corrective counseling and go through progressive discipline.

And I think there's a couple open cases right now -- or I don't know if they're open or closed.

So Frank Williams and Kevin Davis are under investigation, or open at the moment, for things that I think were far less controversial, and they were placed on admin suspension and been sitting at the house for months.

Q. And let me ask you because I don't know the answer to this. This individual -- and you said her name was Michelle?

A. Shirfield.

Q. Shirfield? Is she African American?

A. She is.

Q. And the posts that you're referencing, they were -- I don't know the posts. Were they racially inappropriate?

A. It was more of a supporting a racial position, and I believe Kevin Davis could speak more on that.

Q. Is it your understanding that a formal complaint was made either to her supervisor or to the office of professional standards so that discipline should have been initiated?

A. I told the sheriff directly about the violation, and Bobby Stafford told the sheriff directly about the violation.

Q. But as far as I understand -- and my understanding of discipline is developing -- is that the way the discipline would be initiated, it would be either through the office of professional standards or through her supervisor.

A. Correct.

Q. So you gave that information to the sheriff?

A. Correct.

Q. And your understanding is that no discipline was initiated; or if there was any discipline, it was informal in the form of a corrective counseling?

A. It was informal in the form of a corrective counseling, but nobody seen that. I'm sure if you pull her file you would either see a corrective counseling or not see a corrective counseling, but she reported directly to the sheriff.

Q. When someone receives corrective counseling, is it discipline?

A. It's considered informal discipline.

Q. But it should remain in the employee file for one year?

A. That's correct. Oftentimes it's not removed. You have to go back in there and say, hey, that needs to come out.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. Do you know if Kevin Davis made a complaint about that to OPS or through the sheriff suite?

A. I don't think so because he had already known that it was brought to the attention of the sheriff and Bobby Stafford.

Q. Do you know about any complaint that Kevin Davis took to OPS?

A. I know he made a complaint. I don't remember what it surrounded; but I do remember him taking a complaint, and it was basically like disregarded.

Q. If somebody takes a complaint to OPS, should a case number be drawn?

A. Oh, absolutely, or they say this is really not -- there's a list of standards that OPS will investigate these certain things or as directed by the sheriff.

So they'll look at it, and they'll say we'll take and we're going to pull a case number, or they'll say we're going to defer it back to the division commander and let the employee supervisor handle it.

MR. KRAMER: Any other questions on that particular issue?

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Thank you for the clarification. Was there anything else?

A. Did we discuss the bargaining process with the re-openers and the unfair labor practice?

Q. You did. You informed us that one of the reasons why you left the sheriff's office was that you advised them, essentially, that what they were doing was in violation of the National Labor Standards Act.

A. Oh, that's right. I gave you the form. Okay.

So I gave the set of text messages last time between the undersheriff and I.

Q. Yes.

A. The sergeants and lieutenants ratified their contract. The deputies did not ratify their contract. And there was an extended period of time; I don't recall the exact settlement dates, maybe July, August the following year. So we're talking about ten, eleven months later that ultimately we were going to go to a hearing at the sheriff's office.

And right before that began and the sheriff was coming to sit down and testify, if my memory serves me correctly, he wanted to have a discussion. And then that was ultimately settled, and a substantial check was written for attorney's fees. You may want to pull a copy of that.

Q. Who was the attorney that would have received the fees?

A. It would be the PBA.

Q. Would it be the PBA itself, or would it be paid directly to a particular attorney?

MS. WEBSTER: Do you want me to answer?

MR. KRAMER: No, you can tell him.

THE WITNESS: The check was written to the PBA.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. For the attorney's fees?

A. For the attorney's fees.

Q. Incurred because of the actions that you've already described in your previous testimony where the sheriff was essentially acting in violation of the National Labor Standards Act of essentially just refusing to negotiate in good faith.

A. That is correct. And that surrounded the take-home cars, which I believe we talked about last time.

Q. Correct.

A. All those things wrapped up.

Q. He withdrew all the articles. That's the phraseology you used.

A. Everything was TA'd. We were getting ready to go to a vote on Thursday and Friday. On Monday, October 18th, I got a call that he withdrew all the articles.

I said, "Wait a minute. We know this vote is coming. We can't do this."

I brought it to his attention, and the sheriff made the unilateral decision to pull that. I said, "You can't do that. You're going to refuse to sign a contract after it's already been agreed upon."

And in his text messages, which I presented to you last time, I was told that my interpretation was not consistent with the decision of the sheriff.

MR. KRAMER: Anything else?

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Next.

A. We talked about the SWAT rifles.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Where are those rifles now, Major?

A. So those rifles were not given to the employee personally. They were issued to the employee that won them with the understanding that when they retire they will be able to keep them. That was the decision that was made, if my memory serves me correctly; but that's probably not in writing anywhere, I promise you that, because nothing hardly ever gets reduced to writing.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Well, they wouldn't have gone to the inventory? Doesn't every officer have an inventory?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. And if they're not on the inventory, and they're in the officer's possession --

A. No, they're issued to the officer. They're going to be on the inventory.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. They were taken into the sheriff's office inventory and then issued to the officer that won it.

A. That's correct.

Did I touch on the fact that Watson will make a decision regardless whether it's against policy or procedure?

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. I think in general that was clear, but are there specific instances that you can reference that you didn't reference last time?

A. No. I just want to make sure I hit that --

Q. You did.

A. It's so frequent, though, that --

Q. What is the effect on the agency when the sheriff doesn't follow the agency's own policy?

A. Well, what it does is, it sets the tone of the only consistency is inconsistency, right? And when the sheriff isn't following his own policies and procedures, what message is that sending down to the troops?

It sends a horrible message down saying I don't have to follow policy and procedure, but I'm going to hold you to it; and when you aren't held to it, when you violate that, I'm going to write you up.

Q. Would it also lead people to the conclusion that -- wouldn't it also lead to the natural conclusion that if you follow a policy, that the sheriff might still discipline you or you might meet criticism or demotion or job problems because you followed policy that the sheriff no longer wants to have be the policy?

A. It's almost as if you're expected to think like him. And if it is any perceived disrespect or embarrassment, you're going to be talked to about it, if not hit with some sort of discipline.

We just had a recent case, the Glen Stanley

internal investigation, which is closed -- which I suggest you pull a copy of that -- where the sheriff goes outside the disciplinary matrix.

We have a matrix that says this is Level Two, Level Three, Level Four or Five, and this is -- you know, you got a Level Two, you get this many points. This many points is from A to B, and he'll just add C in there.

Q. And in this particular investigation was it to the officer's detriment?

A. Yes.

Q. Is this recourse for the officer under those circumstances? Can the officer appeal that decision? Do they have -- do they enforce the matrix as it exists, or are they simply subject to the sheriff's rulings?

A. Only if they meet the standards set forth in the sheriff's board, which is greater than a two-day suspension. In this case it was one-day suspension, but they put the guy on 12 months of disciplinary probation. And I believe, if you go back and you look at what a Level Three violation is, 12 months of disciplinary probation is not allowed.

And then what you do when you put somebody on disciplinary probation is, the next time they wear the wrong color socks or doing something that's in violation, then they're not eligible for a career service board.

It's almost like you're setting up them for the next violation, to render them ineffective in a career service board.

Q. And because it's a one-day suspension, it's not appealable?

A. Correct.

We touched on changing past practice without really any discussion with anyone.

Q. Correct. Yes.

A. We touched on Watson and Decoursey routinely holding paperwork and not signing it, essentially neglecting the duties of moving the institution along.

And we -- I know we discussed not reducing things to writing, and we discussed the staffing shortages. So I think that kind of cleans up what I can remember from the last one.

Q. Was there anything additional in response to the question, are you aware of anything immoral, unethical, or illegal, that occurred in the sheriff's office while you were there --

A. Well --

Q. -- that we didn't cover last time?

A. I think that's where we're going to move in to the next section.

Q. Okay.

A. So the sheriff is a steward of the taxpayer's money. Would you agree with that?

Q. Agreed.

A. When he came into office, there were two vehicles that were provided that were left by Darnell and Huckstep. They were not happy with those vehicles even though they were functioning vehicles, and they immediately purchased two black Tahoes; and they were high-end Tahoes to the tune of in the mid 70s. And then, of course, all the equipment and everything had to go in on top of that, so you're talking probably upwards of 90-plus thousand dollars just because they wanted new vehicles. That was kind of like the first thing. Everybody kind of questioned that.

And then he had the badges removed from them that say like "High Country" to make it look like it wasn't, you know, an expensive vehicle as it was, but everybody knew what time of day it was. They saw the badges on there. Everybody knew what was going on. You could see it.

So that was kind of, in my opinion, something that the fleet department should have set back and assessed and advised the sheriff, "Hey, if we want new vehicles, this is where our budget is. This is how much money we have left. If we make this purchase, then we can't purchase these four cars instead of these two Tahoes."

That didn't happen. He immediately ordered the vehicle. I don't think they came off state contract. I think they got one at the local Chevrolet dealership. Or I don't know where they got them form; you'd have to pull that. One was 74. The other one was 77 or somewhere in there. They were both in the mid 70s. So that was one thing that kind of came up.

So there were some Nissans that were purchased, and I believe they were for the drug task force or somebody, I think, after I had left. And there was an allegation they were purchased from Gainesville Nissan, and his son is one of the sales managers at Gainesville Nissan.

Q. Those type of contract purchases would be normally not done through Gainesville Nissan? They'd be done through state contract?

A. Generally, yes, unless there is a specific reason. Like, I know Darnell, when we purchased Harleys, the state contract price was, say -- I'm just throwing a number out there -- 17,000, but Gainesville

Harley said, hey, we'll sell them to you for 15.5. The sheriff felt we should keep our money local, and she was actually saving money and was being a good steward of the taxpayers' money and purchased the Harleys there.

But as far as going outside of that, the only thing I know of going outside was that some vehicles were purchased from Southeast Car Agency, especially when it came to things like the trucks for the aviation unit, where we could get something that was used; we didn't buy them new. They weren't new vehicles. They were used vehicles.

But there was some allegations that the Nissans came purchased from his son; and I don't have any evidence to substantiate that, but you could certainly run that down.

One of the tasks that I was given fairly early on was -- the office of professional standards was housed within the main sheriff's office at 2621 Southeast Hawthorne Road. And the office of professional standards has a door that goes right into the sheriff's suite, and that was so that the captain of OPS could go in and confer with the sheriff because the captain was direct report to the sheriff. It had been set like that since I've been there. That was always OPS. Some years prior to that, it was at the jail.

He had me -- he directed me to have OPS relocated back to the office -- the department of the jail, and he then commanded those offices for himself and had them remodeled where he made a rather large office for himself and spent a significant amount of money remodeling that office and then purchased some furniture to fill that office.

Q. Was the furniture purchased off of state contract?

A. I was told it was purchased offline. He went online and bought it because he got a better deal. To what that was, what that P.O. looked like, I have no idea.

Q. Would that be unusual?

A. That would be unusual.

Q. Outside the standard procedures of the sheriff's office to purchase furniture?

A. Correct, because every time we've purchased furniture -- like we purchased tables like these, chairs like these that sit in the squad room that I'm sure you've been to. All those were purchased through a vendor that we've got. And every time we've had to purchase something, A and B has to come to us with a book like this and said, here's what's available. This is what we can purchase. So to purchase furniture outside that realm, to my knowledge, had never been done.

Q. Okay.

A. There was a lot of controversy surrounding expenditures plastering his name on the building.

Q. Where are those?

A. On one occasion it didn't look right, and he bought it again.

Okay. You're aware of it. We'll move on.

On the back of everybody's vest said "sheriff" just like the cars say "sheriff" on it. It doesn't mean that you are the sheriff. It just indicates like police, sheriff. All those were ordered to be removed and replaced with deputies.

Q. Was it on the cars as well as the uniforms?

A. It was not on the cars. It was just on the uniforms.

Q. Did anybody -- with regard to this, did anybody confer or look at the Florida Statutes to ensure that the officers would be properly marked for the purposes of fleeing or attempting to elude or resisting arrest with or without violence, to ensure that the standards that are set forth in the statutes would be met?

A. I brought that specific statute that you're referring to to the attention of the undersheriff and said, "There's really no reason for this. It doesn't designate them as the sheriff, but, you know, it's for the purposes of authority."

And the response was, "There's only one sheriff, and that's the guy that signs in green ink. Everybody else is a deputy," and that was the reason for the switch.

But again, you have whatever those patches were, ten, eight, twelve dollars times how many, 300 patches. Again, it's just another tick of expenditures that didn't need to happen.

Q. Understood.

A. The sheriff and the undersheriff has continued to disregard Florida Statute 112 on numerous occasions, which obviously stemmed from the lawsuits that are out there pending.

Q. Do you have any information to indicate whether their disregard of 112 procedures and rights that are contained in Florida Statute 112 are based upon ignorance, that they don't understand them? Or is it based on an intentional act that they don't care to provide those rights and meet their responsibilities?

A. Personally, I believe they don't care.

Q. So at the time these violations have occurred, are the rights of the officers and responsibilities of the agency being brought to the attention of the individuals who are doing this and being told we don't care?

A. My understanding was 112 violation was raised; and then when the interview was stopped, that individual was charged with insubordination. And 112 clearly says that that can't happen.

Q. Which officer was charged with insubordination because they refused to be interviewed?

A. I believe it was Frank Williams, but I would have to go back and look. I'd have to do some additional research on that.

Q. I may need you to follow up on that if you can identify any particular officer who was -- I'm saying charged, but that's probably not the right word -- was given -- an OPS investigation was instituted for insubordination or insubordination was added to the current charged violations?

A. I believe if you pull the Glen Stanley case, and you pull a recording of the Loudermill that went along with the Glen Stanley case, the general counsel -- essentially, the argument was being made that truthfulness did not occur, that the officer actually -- it was alleged that the officer did not -- and I don't have first-hand knowledge of it, but from my understanding, is that the officer didn't do something and, in the actual packet, said that they had done it, they had sent an email.

The undersheriff indicated on his recommendation that it was truthfulness, that it didn't occur; and when the disciplinary rep went to make the argument that it was not truthfulness, the general counsel said, "Well, what charge do you think was appropriate?"

So I would encourage you to go back and listen to that audio recording of that Loudermill. In other words, you're going to get charged with something, and we're going to find something to fit.

Q. Okay. Understood.

A. I would encourage you to probably pull his calendar, Watson's calendar, and his gas receipts. On the very early part of his tenure he was there a lot. I know he was there a lot because I was there a lot, and I saw him a lot from very early in the morning, 5:00, 6:00 -- I think we discussed that last time -- until 8:00, 9:00 at night.

It got to the point where we needed the sheriff to approve something or do something, again, because we couldn't approve anything, the sheriff is not here. The sheriff is not here. The sheriff is not here. Where is he? Is he working? Is he not working? It seemed like he was never around.

So I would encourage you to probably pull his calendar for --

Q. What month and years?

A. I would say July '21 and after.

Q. Is there some incident you can point to where his attendance to the office stopped? Was it sudden, or was it gradual?

A. It was gradual. It seemed like he gradually was not there more and more, and he was unavailable, which then just stalemated --

Q. Right, because everything has to go through him.

A. Everything has to go through him, and then everything just slows to a crawl, at best a crawl.

The sheriff's son, Clovis Watson, IV, was the subject of numerous traffic stops and some criminal acts with GPD. This information was forwarded to the sheriff, but he never seemed to rectify it with his son. It continued to happen.

He was stopped a couple of times by our deputies for traffic violations. We did a DUI checkpoint down on South 13th Street where his son was completely irate and completely out of line just coming to pick somebody up that we had dealt with. I called the sheriff and he said, okay, and that was the end of it.

It was like his son could just do whatever he wanted to because his dad was the sheriff. There was no -- it was a very poor reflection on the sheriff, very poor reflection on the sheriff.

We talked about fails to process paperwork.

I think Ed Bennett -- you might want to talk to Ed Bennett about the disapproval of secondary employment at the academy.

Q. With regard to that, are you aware that the academy became short of staff because of the sheriff disapproving secondary employment?

A. I can't swear to that.

Q. We'd have to check with the academy?

A. You'd have to check with the academy. I would imagine it severely impacted it; but to what extent, I can't speculate.

Q. Understood.

A. The sheriff seems to make decisions based on emotion quite a bit rather than, you know, actual facts. The sheriff demoted Mat Yakubsin from lieutenant back to sergeant for essentially liking a Facebook post. Let me back up.

He demoted him, but he ordered me to demote him. So I had to call him and tell him, "Hey, look, you're demoted because you liked a Facebook post."

Q. Was that formal discipline?

A. He was on probation.

Q. So he was already on disciplinarian probation?

A. No, he was on new-hire -- promotional probation.

Q. I see. So he could be demoted back to his prior rank without any discipline occurring?

A. Correct.

Q. And does that cause him to lose pay?

A. It does cause him to lose pay.

Q. How much, roughly?

A. I'd have to go back and look at the scales. I mean, you can make a request for the pay changes in HTE. A minimum of five percent; but Yakubsin was not that tenured of a sergeant, so potentially ten percent more. I don't know the exact numbers on Yakubsin.

Q. And you know the basis for that demotion was liking a Facebook post because you were instructed to tell him why he was being demoted by the sheriff?

A. I was instructed by the sheriff to demote him back to sergeant; and the sheriff had told me that, "He liked that Facebook post, and I'm going to demote him."

Now, keep in mind everybody else that also liked that Facebook post -- it surrounded a lieutenant Facebook post from the jail that was subsequently terminated. Howard, I believe, is his name, received corrective counseling for that, but Yakubsin was demoted.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Did that go through an OPS review?

A. Oh, no.

Q. So there's no documentation on any of it?

A. No.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. Did Yakubsin get corrective counseling?

A. I believe he may have, but he was hit with a demotion and the corrective counseling where everybody else was just hit with the corrective counseling. In other words, I felt as if the demotion was excessive in comparison to what had been handed out to everybody else. That's kind of where I was going with that.

We discussed the negligent promotions last time.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. While we're on that topic --

A. Which topic?

Q. Negligent promotion. You mentioned Cleveland Cox. Talk about your knowledge about what happened when he tried out for the SWAT team?

A. He tried out for the SWAT team. He wasn't recommended, and then he was appointed by recommendation of the undersheriff.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Also, what the consequence was to the person who did not want him appointed to the SWAT team.

A. Oh, he adamantly opposed it. He was -- I can't remember if it was Josh Crews or Rich Howell at the time.

Q. Josh Crews.

A. Josh Crews absolutely did not want him to the point he wanted to go meet with the undersheriff, and I think he did meet with undersheriff about it; but the decision was made that he did not get his number one and number two picks, and he got Cleveland Cox. And Cleveland Cox was almost promoted at the recommendation of the sheriff.

Q. What happened with Josh Crews with his relationship with the SWAT team after he didn't want Cleveland Cox on there?

A. I'd have to go back and scroll and think about the timeline, but I can tell you, if you're referring to his removal from the SWAT team, his removal from the SWAT team, I do not believe, was tied to that incident.

We had a SWAT call-out in Monteoca, and the sheriff and undersheriff were there. And Josh Crews was insubordinate to me; and the sheriff found out about it, and the sheriff removed him from the SWAT team based on that incident.

Q. Were those two things occurring closely in time, the Cleveland Cox incident and Monteoca incident?

A. I believe the Cleveland Cox thing was a couple months afterwards. It could have been pretty close. It could have been pretty close.

Q. I don't know the answer, but my understanding is that the delivery of the information that Cleveland Cox would be assigned to the SWAT team and the removal of then lieutenant -- captain, sergeant, I'm not sure --

A. Lieutenant Josh Crews.

Q. -- Lieutenant Crews were delivered at the same time.

A. It may have been. It could have been in close proximity, and I can see how maybe he could correlate that if it was in close proximity, but my knowledge of the incident, it was really based on Lieutenant Crews' insubordination. Because I was ordered by the sheriff to conduct -- to basically put gas on the house with the hopes that the guy would come out, and Josh Crews came over to me and said, "I hope it's not a tactic," and he was rather nasty about it.

I'm not on the SWAT team. I've never been on the SWAT team, and I don't pretend to be on the SWAT team. So when it comes to SWAT-related matters, I would defer to Josh. Josh has got the knowledge. He's been on there a long time, along with his brother. His brother is no longer with us. He's retired. But I had a direct order from the sheriff that this is the way we're going to proceed, and Josh didn't agree with it.

Q. Let me make sure I understand the sheriff is directing a tactic to remove an individual from a home that a SWAT team is doing?

A. To put gas in there, yes.

Q. But is the sheriff qualified to make a decision about a tactic to remove a barricaded subject?

A. In my opinion, no, and that just falls on the back of what I just said. I'm a major. And even when I was a captain over those units, if I called you as my SWAT commander, and you said, "This is what we need to do," I'm going to defer to you. As long as we're not violating policy, we're not violating the law, and we're not creating some additional liability for the sheriff, I'm going to defer to you because that's your area of expertise.

Q. But doesn't it create liability if the sheriff, who is not qualified, is directing a tactic to be used in an extremely dangerous situation?

A. Oh, absolutely. The direction should not have come from the sheriff. The sheriff should have let Josh Crews run the incident, is what it comes down to.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. What was the barricaded subject?

A. There was another individual in the house. I think it was domestic.

Q. So the bad guy wasn't the only one in the house?

A. Correct.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. I guess you're probably the wrong person to ask, but do we put gas in the house when there's more than one person in the house?

A. Generally, no, but I would defer to Josh Crews and let him discuss that incident in greater detail.

Q. And the insubordination that Josh demonstrated during that incident, was he ever a subject of formal discipline? Or was it just we're going to discipline him by removing him from the SWAT team?

A. He got a corrective counseling from me for his insubordination, but then the sheriff removed him as the SWAT team commander.

Q. Did they put gas in the house?

A. I don't remember. That was very early on in the tenure of the administration.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Did the sheriff give a reason why he wanted the gas? Did he have some place to go?

A. Uh-uh. It was clear he was trying to direct the incident where he didn't have the experience to direct the incident.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:
Q. Was the sheriff at the scene?
A. He was, and the undersheriff. They both showed up. And, you know, to be fair, normally the sheriff and the undersheriff, the major does not show up to SWAT teams. You know, normally we're behind the phone somewhere, and we're letting those people run those operations; but that's not the way the sheriff wanted it run.
The captain was there. I was there. Captain Bella Blizzard was there. I was there. Decoursey was there. The sheriff was there. And I think probably Josh felt like he wasn't being allowed to operate under the parameters that he normally operates because his decision-making was being impeded by us.
BY MR. KRAMER:
Q. And that's what lead to his insubordination.
A. Correct.
Q. That's also consistent with what you've previously testified to, that all the decisions are being made by the sheriff to operational and tactical decisions.
A. That is correct.
BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. Were you familiar or did we talk about it last time, about the Cleveland Cox investigation that went through the office of professional standards?

A. I was aware.

Q. Do you know what happened with that eventually, or why it was terminated?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Is there some connection or familial connection between the undersheriff and Cleveland Cox?

A. We speculated that there was, but we -- I don't know of one, but it seemed to be really out of character that he was placed on the SWAT team and he was promoted against the objections of essentially everyone.

Q. Was he also assigned to CID?

A. He was.

Q. Against the objections?

A. He was. It was a pattern existing with Cleveland Cox, but I don't know what the connection is.

MR. KRAMER: I want to talk about time.

We can go off the record.

(An off-the-record discussion was had.)

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. All we were discussing is how much time we have remaining before our other witnesses to need to appear.

A. Eric Hutchison was promoted to the rank of acting lieutenant when he wasn't on the eligibility list. I would suggest you pull the employee profile and the eligibility list. When that was called to the sheriff's attention, that he wasn't eligible for promotion, the sheriff did act and rescinded that; but then here recently Scott Bonafide has been promoted to an active lieutenant, and he's been moved to civil.

As you're aware, civil is a completely different animal than any other part of the sheriff's office. You deal with evicting people and serving papers that can and cannot be served at certain times of day. To my knowledge, Scott has no knowledge of the civil process.

I did mention Rashawn Flanders. I do not have that paperwork that I thought I had.

The last one is Pat Ford Thomas. Michelle Clement was the division manager, and she was removed for seemingly no reason and moved over to the contract monitor at the jail, which she's got zero experience at. She was removed from her role as a division manager, and she was replaced with Pat Ford Thomas.

Pat Ford Thomas is the wife of Dave Thomas,

who, interestingly enough, was one of the very core group of people in Watson's campaign.

Q. We're going to speak with Michelle Clement. We just haven't gotten her scheduled yet.

A. Okay. I have for you a copy of one of the personnel orders that went out, and as you can see, the quantity of moves that were made at one time are significant; and that's not one of them, but the reason why that's significant is because I have this to go along with it, which is completely out of character, which has everybody's picture and where they're going, where you can definitely see folks --

MR. KRAMER: All right. We'll make this an exhibit to your statement.

That's all I have. I'm sure if something else comes up, I may think of something or whatever.

(Exhibit 1 was marked for identification.)

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. One last question I've got. When transfers and things were made, were the positions that they went to, were they resumed made for? Or were persons just told, you're going here, and you're going here?

A. Under the Darnell administration, generally, what would happen would be, an open position announcement would come out: Any interested deputy sheriff that wishes to apply to be a detective, please submit your name to ISIS, which is our internal system. Interviews are conducted, and then somebody would be selected from the list.

Under the Watson administration, that pretty much went out the window. He just made moves willie-nillie as he felt necessary with no rhyme or reason is really the short answer.

MR. KRAMER: Thank you. We may be talking to you further.

an example. We have -- I delegate control out to supervisors because I am physically incapable of making timely decisions in 20,000 cases of prosecution per year, and that is necessary for the proper functioning of the agency.

A. That is correct. I felt as if I had less decision-making authority as a major than I did as a lieutenant under the Darnell administration, which chokes the entire operation.

Q. So the same is true at the sheriff's office, and probably on a much larger scale than my organization. I have 135 employees, and the sheriff's office has how many employees?

A. About 960.

Q. Nine hundred sixty employees, and then essentially day-to-day decision making is being made by the sheriff?

A. Essentially.

Q. And that has prevented the sheriff's office's proper functioning because decision-making is delayed, and this -- what you've been talking about, this example of additional employment, is just maybe one example of delay.

A. It is one example, yes.

Q. And there are many others?

A. Right.

Q. And I don't know if you can speak to this, but is one of those examples, would it be assisting other agencies?

A. Yes.

Q. And are you aware during the time you were at the sheriff's office of a change in the decision-making process by which the sheriff's office decided whether or not to assist other agencies?

A. Absolutely.

Q. And if you could clarify. Does the sheriff's office have obligations, contractual and grant-oriented obligations, to provide assistance to regional agencies with equipment and expertise that those agencies would not have?

A. Absolutely.

Q. And could you explain what happened while you were there? What was the change from the prior administration? How did that affect things?

A. So operationally when I was the patrol support lieutenant, which was over all the special teams, Bradford County would call and say, "Hey, we've got an incident up here. We need the SWAT team."

So we're part of a region. The SWAT team is a regional team. There's funding that comes out of --

I can't remember the abbreviation, but it is -- there's funding that comes out. They fund some equipment, and that is really meant so that when Bradford County calls, or Union County folks that don't have a SWAT team, we go up there and we handle it.

And usually the protocol was, they would call. The captain would say, "Hey, Union County has a SWAT call-out." I would notify the SWAT guys, and then they would go.

The captain would then turn around and notify the chain upwards, "Hey, this is what's happened. I'm just kind of letting you know that Bradford County has called, or Union County has called, and they need the SWAT team."

That's been the practice for years. I mean, time was of the essence when you're talking about calling out a SWAT team. If we're not calling them for some preplanned event three days from now, then we don't have time to sit around and talk and have approval. It's go.

That completely changed under the Watson administration. He simply demanded that, in order for any asset to leave this county, that that sheriff that was requesting or that chief that was requesting the equipment called him first, which severely choked the response time.

So it was a complete spin. It was something we weren't used to, but he wanted the sheriff of Bradford County, Union County to call him and ask for the equipment before we were authorized.

Q. And what if he wasn't available?

A. (Shrugs shoulders.)

Q. You're holding up your hands and saying there's no answer for that?

A. There's no answer for that because we weren't authorized to proceed.

Q. So, for instance, just an instance that I was personally involved in was, there was an officer-involved shooting in Levy County, and they only have maybe four deputies on the road at any one time. I don't know if you're aware of this incident.

A. Correct.

Q. And when three of the officers were involved in a shooting, then they had no -- essentially, one deputy remaining on the road. They requested assistance from the Alachua County Sheriff's Office. Would that assistance request have to go through the sheriff himself?

A. It would.

Q. Would you agree that under those circumstances where a county was essentially now --

A. Vacant.

Q. -- had no law enforcement available, that time is of the essence?

A. Yeah, it is essential. And I'll follow up with another example.

The two deputies that were shot in Gilchrist County under the Darnell administration. As soon as that happened, everybody started rolling. We rolled the command -- I mean, we had the mobile command bus. We had schedules done to start covering the county, and then we just started notifying the sheriff, "Hey, this is what we're doing. This is how we're taking care of them." It was almost the information was flowing upward rather than flowing downward.

And under the Watson administration it's completely immerse. It's not allowed to happen in that manner. And the folks who may call 911 in Gilchrist County, now that there's no deputies available, they rely on our assistance. And we have the resources to provide to Gilchrist County or to Union County that Union County or Gilchrist County doesn't otherwise have.

MR. KRAMER: All right. Let's go back to things that you may -- unless you wanted to follow up. I'm sorry.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Has he ever denied one of those requests that you know of?

A. Yes.

Q. Which one?

A. There was an incident where University of Florida had called and requested the use of the jail vans. There was something going on at the Reitz Union. I think Darren Baxley had called and requested the jail vans. Don't quote me. I think it was Darren Baxley, deputy chief. Sheriff Watson refused to let them utilize the jail vans.

All that is, is a transport function. It's not like we were sending personnel. You know, we send in a couple of people to operate the vans, but we weren't sending crowd management. We weren't getting involved with their business on campus. They were just simply asking for assistance because, again, the university, you know, they've only got 80 FTEs, you know, somewhere in there. They don't have the capacity to deal with 15 or 20 arrestees at the same time. It would impact them severely to have to deal with that, and we had the resources. I didn't understand what the purpose of withholding a jail van was.

Q. When you say impact severely, would that mean creating an unsafe environment for the remainder of the students and faculty on campus?

A. Potentially. I mean, it depends on how the incident goes. If you got all your guys on the incident tied up with 10-15, or arrestees, if you will, and then they need to focus their attention somewhere else, next thing you know, you divert your attention to the people that need to go. Now you have an unsafe number of officers with the arrestees; or do the officers stay with the arrestees, and now you've neglected this? You have to make a decision.

You've only got so many personnel. The jail van would have been very quick, easy. You bring the jail vans over, put them in the jail vans, pat them down, get them in there, at least hold them there for a few minutes or get them out of there, whatever they decided to do. It was a relatively simple request.

There was some issues surrounding the drug task force, which I'm sure you're aware of, and the sheriff not wanting anyone to operate in the county.

Q. Were you an employee of the sheriff's office at the time that the sheriff directed the removal of all the equipment from the drug task force?

A. No, but my understanding is it was done in the middle of the night under some covert operation, was the rumor.

Q. Correct. I just didn't know if you were personally involved.

A. I was not.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Were you there when Nassau County requested assistance on an officer-involved shooting, and it was denied?

A. Actually, yes. I believe I was.

Q. Do we know why?

A. I don't know why.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. But that denial would have come from the sheriff?

A. It come from the sheriff. No cop, working cop, like even coming up through the ranks, when they had something like that, would deny that type of assistance. Those are the things -- when things were choked, it chokes to the point where it doesn't -- it doesn't run efficiently.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. And for the record, let me correct that. It may have been an officer-involved shooting, but actually the deputy had been shot; and they had a subject cornered, and they were asking for assistance from SWAT teams.

A. Correct. Correct.

MR. KRAMER: Anything further on what he's said so far?

THE WITNESS: One of the things that -- you know, you talk about assets. The SWAT team is one of them, but more frequently the helicopter is something that -- you know, we have an aviation unit. And folks in Putnam County and Columbia County, you know, they rely on that air support. You know, one helicopter there, arguably, is equivalent of 15 or 20 units on the ground.

Those requests were frequently -- we ran into problems where there would be a pursuit at, say, 2:00 in the morning, and they're calling and asking for our assistance. And then you have to make the decision, do I say, okay, go ahead and go, and then get chewed out the next day because they didn't -- because that sheriff didn't call our sheriff at 2:00 in the morning?

I mean, that's the type of slow-down we're talking about, to the point where you might as well not even send them at that point. It's almost rendering it useless.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. And it's 2:00 in the morning. Is Sheriff Watson available to answer another sheriff's call?

A. I don't know. I never called him at 2:00 in the morning.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. You mentioned earlier about the funding. If I recall from my days with RDS --

A. RDSTF, yeah, that's it.

Q. Regional Domestic Security Task Force. That's where a lot of Alachua's money came from. Or I say a lot. That's basically --

A. A significant amount of money.

Q. They were given a lot of money to create those regional units in case of -- for the region.

A. Right.

Q. And that was the understanding, that the money is given to you, but you need to be available if the region needs you.

A. The BearCat. I believe the BearCat was portioned with RDSTF money; or a portion of it was purchased with it, and you know how expensive those are.

The bomb team is another RDSTF, you know.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Let me ask you this. Are these requests reduced in any way to writing, or would there be any evidence of the request existing at all?

A. Usually -- from my recollection, usually when something breaks off, it's a phone call saying, "We need SWAT."

Q. Let me ask you this --

A. There could be a Teletype follow-up, though. I don't know.

Q. Would there be text messaging? Like, for instance, might you send a text message to the sheriff "We've received request from Scott for SWAT in Union County"?

A. Oh, I'm sure, but I never really directly contacted the sheriff. That was the undersheriff. I would call him, the undersheriff. I mean, he would answer his phone.

Q. But if -- you would agree those communications would be records at the agency?

A. There should be records at the agency.

Q. But if those records were not being -- they may not be preserved.

A. They should be preserved. Because there was a point in time when we all got iPhones -- you get into the debate of the iPhone or the Android, right? The iPhone is a blue, which is MMS; and then you have the Android, which is an SMS message. From my understanding, the SMS messages are recorded through your carrier, but the MMS are not because they're run on data and not run on cellular.

Q. But if the sheriff didn't allow the recording devices on his phone, there would be no record of those requests being made to the sheriff, correct?

A. I know that the phone that I had had recording because that was all enabled by Scott Shelpman, if my memory serves me correctly.

Q. Understood. Let's move on to the next item that you were concerned that we had missed due to our time constraints.

A. We discussed briefly Michelle Shirfield last time. She had posted some items on Facebook that could be seen by some folks as slanted to one racial side, if you will. That was brought to Watson's attention, and our understanding is that she was given a corrective counseling for that. Nobody ever saw the corrective counseling.

And then the order was basically given, you know, for Facebook or for violations of social media, that was -- that was the -- what should be done, give them a corrective counseling and go through progressive discipline.

And I think there's a couple open cases right now -- or I don't know if they're open or closed.

So Frank Williams and Kevin Davis are under investigation, or open at the moment, for things that I think were far less controversial, and they were placed on admin suspension and been sitting at the house for months.

Q. And let me ask you because I don't know the answer to this. This individual -- and you said her name was Michelle?

A. Shirfield.

Q. Shirfield? Is she African American?

A. She is.

Q. And the posts that you're referencing, they were -- I don't know the posts. Were they racially inappropriate?

A. It was more of a supporting a racial position, and I believe Kevin Davis could speak more on that.

Q. Is it your understanding that a formal complaint was made either to her supervisor or to the office of professional standards so that discipline should have been initiated?

A. I told the sheriff directly about the violation, and Bobby Stafford told the sheriff directly about the violation.

Q. But as far as I understand -- and my understanding of discipline is developing -- is that the way the discipline would be initiated, it would be either through the office of professional standards or through her supervisor.

A. Correct.

Q. So you gave that information to the sheriff?

A. Correct.

Q. And your understanding is that no discipline was initiated; or if there was any discipline, it was informal in the form of a corrective counseling?

A. It was informal in the form of a corrective counseling, but nobody seen that. I'm sure if you pull her file you would either see a corrective counseling or not see a corrective counseling, but she reported directly to the sheriff.

Q. When someone receives corrective counseling, is it discipline?

A. It's considered informal discipline.

Q. But it should remain in the employee file for one year?

A. That's correct. Oftentimes it's not removed. You have to go back in there and say, hey, that needs to come out.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. Do you know if Kevin Davis made a complaint about that to OPS or through the sheriff suite?

A. I don't think so because he had already known that it was brought to the attention of the sheriff and Bobby Stafford.

Q. Do you know about any complaint that Kevin Davis took to OPS?

A. I know he made a complaint. I don't remember what it surrounded; but I do remember him taking a complaint, and it was basically like disregarded.

Q. If somebody takes a complaint to OPS, should a case number be drawn?

A. Oh, absolutely, or they say this is really not -- there's a list of standards that OPS will investigate these certain things or as directed by the sheriff.

So they'll look at it, and they'll say we'll take and we're going to pull a case number, or they'll say we're going to defer it back to the division commander and let the employee supervisor handle it.

MR. KRAMER: Any other questions on that particular issue?

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Thank you for the clarification. Was there anything else?

A. Did we discuss the bargaining process with the re-openers and the unfair labor practice?

Q. You did. You informed us that one of the reasons why you left the sheriff's office was that you advised them, essentially, that what they were doing was in violation of the National Labor Standards Act.

A. Oh, that's right. I gave you the form. Okay.

So I gave the set of text messages last time between the undersheriff and I.

Q. Yes.

A. The sergeants and lieutenants ratified their contract. The deputies did not ratify their contract. And there was an extended period of time; I don't recall the exact settlement dates, maybe July, August the following year. So we're talking about ten, eleven months later that ultimately we were going to go to a hearing at the sheriff's office.

And right before that began and the sheriff was coming to sit down and testify, if my memory serves me correctly, he wanted to have a discussion. And then that was ultimately settled, and a substantial check was written for attorney's fees. You may want to pull a copy of that.

Q. Who was the attorney that would have received the fees?

A. It would be the PBA.

Q. Would it be the PBA itself, or would it be paid directly to a particular attorney?

MS. WEBSTER: Do you want me to answer?

MR. KRAMER: No, you can tell him.

THE WITNESS: The check was written to the PBA.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. For the attorney's fees?

A. For the attorney's fees.

Q. Incurred because of the actions that you've already described in your previous testimony where the sheriff was essentially acting in violation of the National Labor Standards Act of essentially just refusing to negotiate in good faith.

A. That is correct. And that surrounded the take-home cars, which I believe we talked about last time.

Q. Correct.

A. All those things wrapped up.

Q. He withdrew all the articles. That's the phraseology you used.

A. Everything was TA'd. We were getting ready to go to a vote on Thursday and Friday. On Monday, October 18th, I got a call that he withdrew all the articles.

I said, "Wait a minute. We know this vote is coming. We can't do this."

I brought it to his attention, and the sheriff made the unilateral decision to pull that. I said, "You can't do that. You're going to refuse to sign a contract after it's already been agreed upon."

And in his text messages, which I presented to you last time, I was told that my interpretation was not consistent with the decision of the sheriff.

MR. KRAMER: Anything else?

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Next.

A. We talked about the SWAT rifles.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Where are those rifles now, Major?

A. So those rifles were not given to the employee personally. They were issued to the employee that won them with the understanding that when they retire they will be able to keep them. That was the decision that was made, if my memory serves me correctly; but that's probably not in writing anywhere, I promise you that, because nothing hardly ever gets reduced to writing.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Well, they wouldn't have gone to the inventory? Doesn't every officer have an inventory?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. And if they're not on the inventory, and they're in the officer's possession --

A. No, they're issued to the officer. They're going to be on the inventory.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. They were taken into the sheriff's office inventory and then issued to the officer that won it.

A. That's correct.

Did I touch on the fact that Watson will make a decision regardless whether it's against policy or procedure?

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. I think in general that was clear, but are there specific instances that you can reference that you didn't reference last time?

A. No. I just want to make sure I hit that --

Q. You did.

A. It's so frequent, though, that --

Q. What is the effect on the agency when the sheriff doesn't follow the agency's own policy?

A. Well, what it does is, it sets the tone of the only consistency is inconsistency, right? And when the sheriff isn't following his own policies and procedures, what message is that sending down to the troops?

It sends a horrible message down saying I don't have to follow policy and procedure, but I'm going to hold you to it; and when you aren't held to it, when you violate that, I'm going to write you up.

Q. Would it also lead people to the conclusion that -- wouldn't it also lead to the natural conclusion that if you follow a policy, that the sheriff might still discipline you or you might meet criticism or demotion or job problems because you followed policy that the sheriff no longer wants to have be the policy?

A. It's almost as if you're expected to think like him. And if it is any perceived disrespect or embarrassment, you're going to be talked to about it, if not hit with some sort of discipline.

We just had a recent case, the Glen Stanley

internal investigation, which is closed -- which I suggest you pull a copy of that -- where the sheriff goes outside the disciplinary matrix.

We have a matrix that says this is Level Two, Level Three, Level Four or Five, and this is -- you know, you got a Level Two, you get this many points. This many points is from A to B, and he'll just add C in there.

Q. And in this particular investigation was it to the officer's detriment?

A. Yes.

Q. Is this recourse for the officer under those circumstances? Can the officer appeal that decision? Do they have -- do they enforce the matrix as it exists, or are they simply subject to the sheriff's rulings?

A. Only if they meet the standards set forth in the sheriff's board, which is greater than a two-day suspension. In this case it was one-day suspension, but they put the guy on 12 months of disciplinary probation. And I believe, if you go back and you look at what a Level Three violation is, 12 months of disciplinary probation is not allowed.

And then what you do when you put somebody on disciplinary probation is, the next time they wear the wrong color socks or doing something that's in violation, then they're not eligible for a career service board.

It's almost like you're setting up them for the next violation, to render them ineffective in a career service board.

Q. And because it's a one-day suspension, it's not appealable?

A. Correct.

We touched on changing past practice without really any discussion with anyone.

Q. Correct. Yes.

A. We touched on Watson and Decoursey routinely holding paperwork and not signing it, essentially neglecting the duties of moving the institution along.

And we -- I know we discussed not reducing things to writing, and we discussed the staffing shortages. So I think that kind of cleans up what I can remember from the last one.

Q. Was there anything additional in response to the question, are you aware of anything immoral, unethical, or illegal, that occurred in the sheriff's office while you were there --

A. Well --

Q. -- that we didn't cover last time?

A. I think that's where we're going to move in to the next section.

Q. Okay.

A. So the sheriff is a steward of the taxpayer's money. Would you agree with that?

Q. Agreed.

A. When he came into office, there were two vehicles that were provided that were left by Darnell and Huckstep. They were not happy with those vehicles even though they were functioning vehicles, and they immediately purchased two black Tahoes; and they were high-end Tahoes to the tune of in the mid 70s. And then, of course, all the equipment and everything had to go in on top of that, so you're talking probably upwards of 90-plus thousand dollars just because they wanted new vehicles. That was kind of like the first thing. Everybody kind of questioned that.

And then he had the badges removed from them that say like "High Country" to make it look like it wasn't, you know, an expensive vehicle as it was, but everybody knew what time of day it was. They saw the badges on there. Everybody knew what was going on. You could see it.

So that was kind of, in my opinion, something that the fleet department should have set back and assessed and advised the sheriff, "Hey, if we want new vehicles, this is where our budget is. This is how much money we have left. If we make this purchase, then we can't purchase these four cars instead of these two Tahoes."

That didn't happen. He immediately ordered the vehicle. I don't think they came off state contract. I think they got one at the local Chevrolet dealership. Or I don't know where they got them form; you'd have to pull that. One was 74. The other one was 77 or somewhere in there. They were both in the mid 70s. So that was one thing that kind of came up.

So there were some Nissans that were purchased, and I believe they were for the drug task force or somebody, I think, after I had left. And there was an allegation they were purchased from Gainesville Nissan, and his son is one of the sales managers at Gainesville Nissan.

Q. Those type of contract purchases would be normally not done through Gainesville Nissan? They'd be done through state contract?

A. Generally, yes, unless there is a specific reason. Like, I know Darnell, when we purchased Harleys, the state contract price was, say -- I'm just throwing a number out there -- 17,000, but Gainesville

Harley said, hey, we'll sell them to you for 15.5. The sheriff felt we should keep our money local, and she was actually saving money and was being a good steward of the taxpayers' money and purchased the Harleys there.

But as far as going outside of that, the only thing I know of going outside was that some vehicles were purchased from Southeast Car Agency, especially when it came to things like the trucks for the aviation unit, where we could get something that was used; we didn't buy them new. They weren't new vehicles. They were used vehicles.

But there was some allegations that the Nissans came purchased from his son; and I don't have any evidence to substantiate that, but you could certainly run that down.

One of the tasks that I was given fairly early on was -- the office of professional standards was housed within the main sheriff's office at 2621 Southeast Hawthorne Road. And the office of professional standards has a door that goes right into the sheriff's suite, and that was so that the captain of OPS could go in and confer with the sheriff because the captain was direct report to the sheriff. It had been set like that since I've been there. That was always OPS. Some years prior to that, it was at the jail.

He had me -- he directed me to have OPS relocated back to the office -- the department of the jail, and he then commanded those offices for himself and had them remodeled where he made a rather large office for himself and spent a significant amount of money remodeling that office and then purchased some furniture to fill that office.

Q. Was the furniture purchased off of state contract?

A. I was told it was purchased offline. He went online and bought it because he got a better deal. To what that was, what that P.O. looked like, I have no idea.

Q. Would that be unusual?

A. That would be unusual.

Q. Outside the standard procedures of the sheriff's office to purchase furniture?

A. Correct, because every time we've purchased furniture -- like we purchased tables like these, chairs like these that sit in the squad room that I'm sure you've been to. All those were purchased through a vendor that we've got. And every time we've had to purchase something, A and B has to come to us with a book like this and said, here's what's available. This is what we can purchase. So to purchase furniture outside that realm, to my knowledge, had never been done.

Q. Okay.

A. There was a lot of controversy surrounding expenditures plastering his name on the building.

Q. Where are those?

A. On one occasion it didn't look right, and he bought it again.

Okay. You're aware of it. We'll move on.

On the back of everybody's vest said "sheriff" just like the cars say "sheriff" on it. It doesn't mean that you are the sheriff. It just indicates like police, sheriff. All those were ordered to be removed and replaced with deputies.

Q. Was it on the cars as well as the uniforms?

A. It was not on the cars. It was just on the uniforms.

Q. Did anybody -- with regard to this, did anybody confer or look at the Florida Statutes to ensure that the officers would be properly marked for the purposes of fleeing or attempting to elude or resisting arrest with or without violence, to ensure that the standards that are set forth in the statutes would be met?

A. I brought that specific statute that you're referring to to the attention of the undersheriff and said, "There's really no reason for this. It doesn't designate them as the sheriff, but, you know, it's for the purposes of authority."

And the response was, "There's only one sheriff, and that's the guy that signs in green ink. Everybody else is a deputy," and that was the reason for the switch.

But again, you have whatever those patches were, ten, eight, twelve dollars times how many, 300 patches. Again, it's just another tick of expenditures that didn't need to happen.

Q. Understood.

A. The sheriff and the undersheriff has continued to disregard Florida Statute 112 on numerous occasions, which obviously stemmed from the lawsuits that are out there pending.

Q. Do you have any information to indicate whether their disregard of 112 procedures and rights that are contained in Florida Statute 112 are based upon ignorance, that they don't understand them? Or is it based on an intentional act that they don't care to provide those rights and meet their responsibilities?

A. Personally, I believe they don't care.

Q. So at the time these violations have occurred, are the rights of the officers and responsibilities of the agency being brought to the attention of the individuals who are doing this and being told we don't care?

A. My understanding was 112 violation was raised; and then when the interview was stopped, that individual was charged with insubordination. And 112 clearly says that that can't happen.

Q. Which officer was charged with insubordination because they refused to be interviewed?

A. I believe it was Frank Williams, but I would have to go back and look. I'd have to do some additional research on that.

Q. I may need you to follow up on that if you can identify any particular officer who was -- I'm saying charged, but that's probably not the right word -- was given -- an OPS investigation was instituted for insubordination or insubordination was added to the current charged violations?

A. I believe if you pull the Glen Stanley case, and you pull a recording of the Loudermill that went along with the Glen Stanley case, the general counsel -- essentially, the argument was being made that truthfulness did not occur, that the officer actually -- it was alleged that the officer did not -- and I don't have first-hand knowledge of it, but from my understanding, is that the officer didn't do something and, in the actual packet, said that they had done it, they had sent an email.

The undersheriff indicated on his recommendation that it was truthfulness, that it didn't occur; and when the disciplinary rep went to make the argument that it was not truthfulness, the general counsel said, "Well, what charge do you think was appropriate?"

So I would encourage you to go back and listen to that audio recording of that Loudermill. In other words, you're going to get charged with something, and we're going to find something to fit.

Q. Okay. Understood.

A. I would encourage you to probably pull his calendar, Watson's calendar, and his gas receipts. On the very early part of his tenure he was there a lot. I know he was there a lot because I was there a lot, and I saw him a lot from very early in the morning, 5:00, 6:00 -- I think we discussed that last time -- until 8:00, 9:00 at night.

It got to the point where we needed the sheriff to approve something or do something, again, because we couldn't approve anything, the sheriff is not here. The sheriff is not here. The sheriff is not here. Where is he? Is he working? Is he not working? It seemed like he was never around.

So I would encourage you to probably pull his calendar for --

Q. What month and years?

A. I would say July '21 and after.

Q. Is there some incident you can point to where his attendance to the office stopped? Was it sudden, or was it gradual?

A. It was gradual. It seemed like he gradually was not there more and more, and he was unavailable, which then just stalemated --

Q. Right, because everything has to go through him.

A. Everything has to go through him, and then everything just slows to a crawl, at best a crawl.

The sheriff's son, Clovis Watson, IV, was the subject of numerous traffic stops and some criminal acts with GPD. This information was forwarded to the sheriff, but he never seemed to rectify it with his son. It continued to happen.

He was stopped a couple of times by our deputies for traffic violations. We did a DUI checkpoint down on South 13th Street where his son was completely irate and completely out of line just coming to pick somebody up that we had dealt with. I called the sheriff and he said, okay, and that was the end of it.

It was like his son could just do whatever he wanted to because his dad was the sheriff. There was no -- it was a very poor reflection on the sheriff, very poor reflection on the sheriff.

We talked about fails to process paperwork.

I think Ed Bennett -- you might want to talk to Ed Bennett about the disapproval of secondary employment at the academy.

Q. With regard to that, are you aware that the academy became short of staff because of the sheriff disapproving secondary employment?

A. I can't swear to that.

Q. We'd have to check with the academy?

A. You'd have to check with the academy. I would imagine it severely impacted it; but to what extent, I can't speculate.

Q. Understood.

A. The sheriff seems to make decisions based on emotion quite a bit rather than, you know, actual facts. The sheriff demoted Mat Yakubsin from lieutenant back to sergeant for essentially liking a Facebook post. Let me back up.

He demoted him, but he ordered me to demote him. So I had to call him and tell him, "Hey, look, you're demoted because you liked a Facebook post."

Q. Was that formal discipline?

A. He was on probation.

Q. So he was already on disciplinarian probation?

A. No, he was on new-hire -- promotional probation.

Q. I see. So he could be demoted back to his prior rank without any discipline occurring?

A. Correct.

Q. And does that cause him to lose pay?

A. It does cause him to lose pay.

Q. How much, roughly?

A. I'd have to go back and look at the scales. I mean, you can make a request for the pay changes in HTE. A minimum of five percent; but Yakubsin was not that tenured of a sergeant, so potentially ten percent more. I don't know the exact numbers on Yakubsin.

Q. And you know the basis for that demotion was liking a Facebook post because you were instructed to tell him why he was being demoted by the sheriff?

A. I was instructed by the sheriff to demote him back to sergeant; and the sheriff had told me that, "He liked that Facebook post, and I'm going to demote him."

Now, keep in mind everybody else that also liked that Facebook post -- it surrounded a lieutenant Facebook post from the jail that was subsequently terminated. Howard, I believe, is his name, received corrective counseling for that, but Yakubsin was demoted.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Did that go through an OPS review?

A. Oh, no.

Q. So there's no documentation on any of it?

A. No.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. Did Yakubsin get corrective counseling?

A. I believe he may have, but he was hit with a demotion and the corrective counseling where everybody else was just hit with the corrective counseling. In other words, I felt as if the demotion was excessive in comparison to what had been handed out to everybody else. That's kind of where I was going with that.

We discussed the negligent promotions last time.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. While we're on that topic --

A. Which topic?

Q. Negligent promotion. You mentioned Cleveland Cox. Talk about your knowledge about what happened when he tried out for the SWAT team?

A. He tried out for the SWAT team. He wasn't recommended, and then he was appointed by recommendation of the undersheriff.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Also, what the consequence was to the person who did not want him appointed to the SWAT team.

A. Oh, he adamantly opposed it. He was -- I can't remember if it was Josh Crews or Rich Howell at the time.

Q. Josh Crews.

A. Josh Crews absolutely did not want him to the point he wanted to go meet with the undersheriff, and I think he did meet with undersheriff about it; but the decision was made that he did not get his number one and number two picks, and he got Cleveland Cox. And Cleveland Cox was almost promoted at the recommendation of the sheriff.

Q. What happened with Josh Crews with his relationship with the SWAT team after he didn't want Cleveland Cox on there?

A. I'd have to go back and scroll and think about the timeline, but I can tell you, if you're referring to his removal from the SWAT team, his removal from the SWAT team, I do not believe, was tied to that incident.

We had a SWAT call-out in Monteoca, and the sheriff and undersheriff were there. And Josh Crews was insubordinate to me; and the sheriff found out about it, and the sheriff removed him from the SWAT team based on that incident.

Q. Were those two things occurring closely in time, the Cleveland Cox incident and Monteoca incident?

A. I believe the Cleveland Cox thing was a couple months afterwards. It could have been pretty close. It could have been pretty close.

Q. I don't know the answer, but my understanding is that the delivery of the information that Cleveland Cox would be assigned to the SWAT team and the removal of then lieutenant -- captain, sergeant, I'm not sure --

A. Lieutenant Josh Crews.

Q. -- Lieutenant Crews were delivered at the same time.

A. It may have been. It could have been in close proximity, and I can see how maybe he could correlate that if it was in close proximity, but my knowledge of the incident, it was really based on Lieutenant Crews' insubordination. Because I was ordered by the sheriff to conduct -- to basically put gas on the house with the hopes that the guy would come out, and Josh Crews came over to me and said, "I hope it's not a tactic," and he was rather nasty about it.

I'm not on the SWAT team. I've never been on the SWAT team, and I don't pretend to be on the SWAT team. So when it comes to SWAT-related matters, I would defer to Josh. Josh has got the knowledge. He's been on there a long time, along with his brother. His brother is no longer with us. He's retired. But I had a direct order from the sheriff that this is the way we're going to proceed, and Josh didn't agree with it.

Q. Let me make sure I understand the sheriff is directing a tactic to remove an individual from a home that a SWAT team is doing?

A. To put gas in there, yes.

Q. But is the sheriff qualified to make a decision about a tactic to remove a barricaded subject?

A. In my opinion, no, and that just falls on the back of what I just said. I'm a major. And even when I was a captain over those units, if I called you as my SWAT commander, and you said, "This is what we need to do," I'm going to defer to you. As long as we're not violating policy, we're not violating the law, and we're not creating some additional liability for the sheriff, I'm going to defer to you because that's your area of expertise.

Q. But doesn't it create liability if the sheriff, who is not qualified, is directing a tactic to be used in an extremely dangerous situation?

A. Oh, absolutely. The direction should not have come from the sheriff. The sheriff should have let Josh Crews run the incident, is what it comes down to.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. What was the barricaded subject?

A. There was another individual in the house. I think it was domestic.

Q. So the bad guy wasn't the only one in the house?

A. Correct.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. I guess you're probably the wrong person to ask, but do we put gas in the house when there's more than one person in the house?

A. Generally, no, but I would defer to Josh Crews and let him discuss that incident in greater detail.

Q. And the insubordination that Josh demonstrated during that incident, was he ever a subject of formal discipline? Or was it just we're going to discipline him by removing him from the SWAT team?

A. He got a corrective counseling from me for his insubordination, but then the sheriff removed him as the SWAT team commander.

Q. Did they put gas in the house?

A. I don't remember. That was very early on in the tenure of the administration.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Did the sheriff give a reason why he wanted the gas? Did he have some place to go?

A. Uh-uh. It was clear he was trying to direct the incident where he didn't have the experience to direct the incident.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:
Q. Was the sheriff at the scene?
A. He was, and the undersheriff. They both showed up. And, you know, to be fair, normally the sheriff and the undersheriff, the major does not show up to SWAT teams. You know, normally we're behind the phone somewhere, and we're letting those people run those operations; but that's not the way the sheriff wanted it run.
The captain was there. I was there. Captain Bella Blizzard was there. I was there. Decoursey was there. The sheriff was there. And I think probably Josh felt like he wasn't being allowed to operate under the parameters that he normally operates because his decision-making was being impeded by us.
BY MR. KRAMER:
Q. And that's what lead to his insubordination.
A. Correct.
Q. That's also consistent with what you've previously testified to, that all the decisions are being made by the sheriff to operational and tactical decisions.
A. That is correct.
BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. Were you familiar or did we talk about it last time, about the Cleveland Cox investigation that went through the office of professional standards?

A. I was aware.

Q. Do you know what happened with that eventually, or why it was terminated?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Is there some connection or familial connection between the undersheriff and Cleveland Cox?

A. We speculated that there was, but we -- I don't know of one, but it seemed to be really out of character that he was placed on the SWAT team and he was promoted against the objections of essentially everyone.

Q. Was he also assigned to CID?

A. He was.

Q. Against the objections?

A. He was. It was a pattern existing with Cleveland Cox, but I don't know what the connection is.

MR. KRAMER: I want to talk about time.

We can go off the record.

(An off-the-record discussion was had.)

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. All we were discussing is how much time we have remaining before our other witnesses to need to appear.

A. Eric Hutchison was promoted to the rank of acting lieutenant when he wasn't on the eligibility list. I would suggest you pull the employee profile and the eligibility list. When that was called to the sheriff's attention, that he wasn't eligible for promotion, the sheriff did act and rescinded that; but then here recently Scott Bonafide has been promoted to an active lieutenant, and he's been moved to civil.

As you're aware, civil is a completely different animal than any other part of the sheriff's office. You deal with evicting people and serving papers that can and cannot be served at certain times of day. To my knowledge, Scott has no knowledge of the civil process.

I did mention Rashawn Flanders. I do not have that paperwork that I thought I had.

The last one is Pat Ford Thomas. Michelle Clement was the division manager, and she was removed for seemingly no reason and moved over to the contract monitor at the jail, which she's got zero experience at. She was removed from her role as a division manager, and she was replaced with Pat Ford Thomas.

Pat Ford Thomas is the wife of Dave Thomas,

who, interestingly enough, was one of the very core group of people in Watson's campaign.

Q. We're going to speak with Michelle Clement. We just haven't gotten her scheduled yet.

A. Okay. I have for you a copy of one of the personnel orders that went out, and as you can see, the quantity of moves that were made at one time are significant; and that's not one of them, but the reason why that's significant is because I have this to go along with it, which is completely out of character, which has everybody's picture and where they're going, where you can definitely see folks --

MR. KRAMER: All right. We'll make this an exhibit to your statement.

That's all I have. I'm sure if something else comes up, I may think of something or whatever.

(Exhibit 1 was marked for identification.)

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. One last question I've got. When transfers and things were made, were the positions that they went to, were they resumed made for? Or were persons just told, you're going here, and you're going here?

A. Under the Darnell administration, generally, what would happen would be, an open position announcement would come out: Any interested deputy sheriff that wishes to apply to be a detective, please submit your name to ISIS, which is our internal system. Interviews are conducted, and then somebody would be selected from the list.

Under the Watson administration, that pretty much went out the window. He just made moves willie-nillie as he felt necessary with no rhyme or reason is really the short answer.

MR. KRAMER: Thank you. We may be talking to you further.

A. Right.

Q. And I don't know if you can speak to this, but is one of those examples, would it be assisting other agencies?

A. Yes.

Q. And are you aware during the time you were at the sheriff's office of a change in the decision-making process by which the sheriff's office decided whether or not to assist other agencies?

A. Absolutely.

Q. And if you could clarify. Does the sheriff's office have obligations, contractual and grant-oriented obligations, to provide assistance to regional agencies with equipment and expertise that those agencies would not have?

A. Absolutely.

Q. And could you explain what happened while you were there? What was the change from the prior administration? How did that affect things?

A. So operationally when I was the patrol support lieutenant, which was over all the special teams, Bradford County would call and say, "Hey, we've got an incident up here. We need the SWAT team."

So we're part of a region. The SWAT team is a regional team. There's funding that comes out of --

I can't remember the abbreviation, but it is -- there's funding that comes out. They fund some equipment, and that is really meant so that when Bradford County calls, or Union County folks that don't have a SWAT team, we go up there and we handle it.

And usually the protocol was, they would call. The captain would say, "Hey, Union County has a SWAT call-out." I would notify the SWAT guys, and then they would go.

The captain would then turn around and notify the chain upwards, "Hey, this is what's happened. I'm just kind of letting you know that Bradford County has called, or Union County has called, and they need the SWAT team."

That's been the practice for years. I mean, time was of the essence when you're talking about calling out a SWAT team. If we're not calling them for some preplanned event three days from now, then we don't have time to sit around and talk and have approval. It's go.

That completely changed under the Watson administration. He simply demanded that, in order for any asset to leave this county, that that sheriff that was requesting or that chief that was requesting the equipment called him first, which severely choked the response time.

So it was a complete spin. It was something we weren't used to, but he wanted the sheriff of Bradford County, Union County to call him and ask for the equipment before we were authorized.

Q. And what if he wasn't available?

A. (Shrugs shoulders.)

Q. You're holding up your hands and saying there's no answer for that?

A. There's no answer for that because we weren't authorized to proceed.

Q. So, for instance, just an instance that I was personally involved in was, there was an officer-involved shooting in Levy County, and they only have maybe four deputies on the road at any one time. I don't know if you're aware of this incident.

A. Correct.

Q. And when three of the officers were involved in a shooting, then they had no -- essentially, one deputy remaining on the road. They requested assistance from the Alachua County Sheriff's Office. Would that assistance request have to go through the sheriff himself?

A. It would.

Q. Would you agree that under those circumstances where a county was essentially now --

A. Vacant.

Q. -- had no law enforcement available, that time is of the essence?

A. Yeah, it is essential. And I'll follow up with another example.

The two deputies that were shot in Gilchrist County under the Darnell administration. As soon as that happened, everybody started rolling. We rolled the command -- I mean, we had the mobile command bus. We had schedules done to start covering the county, and then we just started notifying the sheriff, "Hey, this is what we're doing. This is how we're taking care of them." It was almost the information was flowing upward rather than flowing downward.

And under the Watson administration it's completely immerse. It's not allowed to happen in that manner. And the folks who may call 911 in Gilchrist County, now that there's no deputies available, they rely on our assistance. And we have the resources to provide to Gilchrist County or to Union County that Union County or Gilchrist County doesn't otherwise have.

MR. KRAMER: All right. Let's go back to things that you may -- unless you wanted to follow up. I'm sorry.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Has he ever denied one of those requests that you know of?

A. Yes.

Q. Which one?

A. There was an incident where University of Florida had called and requested the use of the jail vans. There was something going on at the Reitz Union. I think Darren Baxley had called and requested the jail vans. Don't quote me. I think it was Darren Baxley, deputy chief. Sheriff Watson refused to let them utilize the jail vans.

All that is, is a transport function. It's not like we were sending personnel. You know, we send in a couple of people to operate the vans, but we weren't sending crowd management. We weren't getting involved with their business on campus. They were just simply asking for assistance because, again, the university, you know, they've only got 80 FTEs, you know, somewhere in there. They don't have the capacity to deal with 15 or 20 arrestees at the same time. It would impact them severely to have to deal with that, and we had the resources. I didn't understand what the purpose of withholding a jail van was.

Q. When you say impact severely, would that mean creating an unsafe environment for the remainder of the students and faculty on campus?

A. Potentially. I mean, it depends on how the incident goes. If you got all your guys on the incident tied up with 10-15, or arrestees, if you will, and then they need to focus their attention somewhere else, next thing you know, you divert your attention to the people that need to go. Now you have an unsafe number of officers with the arrestees; or do the officers stay with the arrestees, and now you've neglected this? You have to make a decision.

You've only got so many personnel. The jail van would have been very quick, easy. You bring the jail vans over, put them in the jail vans, pat them down, get them in there, at least hold them there for a few minutes or get them out of there, whatever they decided to do. It was a relatively simple request.

There was some issues surrounding the drug task force, which I'm sure you're aware of, and the sheriff not wanting anyone to operate in the county.

Q. Were you an employee of the sheriff's office at the time that the sheriff directed the removal of all the equipment from the drug task force?

A. No, but my understanding is it was done in the middle of the night under some covert operation, was the rumor.

Q. Correct. I just didn't know if you were personally involved.

A. I was not.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Were you there when Nassau County requested assistance on an officer-involved shooting, and it was denied?

A. Actually, yes. I believe I was.

Q. Do we know why?

A. I don't know why.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. But that denial would have come from the sheriff?

A. It come from the sheriff. No cop, working cop, like even coming up through the ranks, when they had something like that, would deny that type of assistance. Those are the things -- when things were choked, it chokes to the point where it doesn't -- it doesn't run efficiently.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. And for the record, let me correct that. It may have been an officer-involved shooting, but actually the deputy had been shot; and they had a subject cornered, and they were asking for assistance from SWAT teams.

A. Correct. Correct.

MR. KRAMER: Anything further on what he's said so far?

THE WITNESS: One of the things that -- you know, you talk about assets. The SWAT team is one of them, but more frequently the helicopter is something that -- you know, we have an aviation unit. And folks in Putnam County and Columbia County, you know, they rely on that air support. You know, one helicopter there, arguably, is equivalent of 15 or 20 units on the ground.

Those requests were frequently -- we ran into problems where there would be a pursuit at, say, 2:00 in the morning, and they're calling and asking for our assistance. And then you have to make the decision, do I say, okay, go ahead and go, and then get chewed out the next day because they didn't -- because that sheriff didn't call our sheriff at 2:00 in the morning?

I mean, that's the type of slow-down we're talking about, to the point where you might as well not even send them at that point. It's almost rendering it useless.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. And it's 2:00 in the morning. Is Sheriff Watson available to answer another sheriff's call?

A. I don't know. I never called him at 2:00 in the morning.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. You mentioned earlier about the funding. If I recall from my days with RDS --

A. RDSTF, yeah, that's it.

Q. Regional Domestic Security Task Force. That's where a lot of Alachua's money came from. Or I say a lot. That's basically --

A. A significant amount of money.

Q. They were given a lot of money to create those regional units in case of -- for the region.

A. Right.

Q. And that was the understanding, that the money is given to you, but you need to be available if the region needs you.

A. The BearCat. I believe the BearCat was portioned with RDSTF money; or a portion of it was purchased with it, and you know how expensive those are.

The bomb team is another RDSTF, you know.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Let me ask you this. Are these requests reduced in any way to writing, or would there be any evidence of the request existing at all?

A. Usually -- from my recollection, usually when something breaks off, it's a phone call saying, "We need SWAT."

Q. Let me ask you this --

A. There could be a Teletype follow-up, though. I don't know.

Q. Would there be text messaging? Like, for instance, might you send a text message to the sheriff "We've received request from Scott for SWAT in Union County"?

A. Oh, I'm sure, but I never really directly contacted the sheriff. That was the undersheriff. I would call him, the undersheriff. I mean, he would answer his phone.

Q. But if -- you would agree those communications would be records at the agency?

A. There should be records at the agency.

Q. But if those records were not being -- they may not be preserved.

A. They should be preserved. Because there was a point in time when we all got iPhones -- you get into the debate of the iPhone or the Android, right? The iPhone is a blue, which is MMS; and then you have the Android, which is an SMS message. From my understanding, the SMS messages are recorded through your carrier, but the MMS are not because they're run on data and not run on cellular.

Q. But if the sheriff didn't allow the recording devices on his phone, there would be no record of those requests being made to the sheriff, correct?

A. I know that the phone that I had had recording because that was all enabled by Scott Shelpman, if my memory serves me correctly.

Q. Understood. Let's move on to the next item that you were concerned that we had missed due to our time constraints.

A. We discussed briefly Michelle Shirfield last time. She had posted some items on Facebook that could be seen by some folks as slanted to one racial side, if you will. That was brought to Watson's attention, and our understanding is that she was given a corrective counseling for that. Nobody ever saw the corrective counseling.

And then the order was basically given, you know, for Facebook or for violations of social media, that was -- that was the -- what should be done, give them a corrective counseling and go through progressive discipline.

And I think there's a couple open cases right now -- or I don't know if they're open or closed.

So Frank Williams and Kevin Davis are under investigation, or open at the moment, for things that I think were far less controversial, and they were placed on admin suspension and been sitting at the house for months.

Q. And let me ask you because I don't know the answer to this. This individual -- and you said her name was Michelle?

A. Shirfield.

Q. Shirfield? Is she African American?

A. She is.

Q. And the posts that you're referencing, they were -- I don't know the posts. Were they racially inappropriate?

A. It was more of a supporting a racial position, and I believe Kevin Davis could speak more on that.

Q. Is it your understanding that a formal complaint was made either to her supervisor or to the office of professional standards so that discipline should have been initiated?

A. I told the sheriff directly about the violation, and Bobby Stafford told the sheriff directly about the violation.

Q. But as far as I understand -- and my understanding of discipline is developing -- is that the way the discipline would be initiated, it would be either through the office of professional standards or through her supervisor.

A. Correct.

Q. So you gave that information to the sheriff?

A. Correct.

Q. And your understanding is that no discipline was initiated; or if there was any discipline, it was informal in the form of a corrective counseling?

A. It was informal in the form of a corrective counseling, but nobody seen that. I'm sure if you pull her file you would either see a corrective counseling or not see a corrective counseling, but she reported directly to the sheriff.

Q. When someone receives corrective counseling, is it discipline?

A. It's considered informal discipline.

Q. But it should remain in the employee file for one year?

A. That's correct. Oftentimes it's not removed. You have to go back in there and say, hey, that needs to come out.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. Do you know if Kevin Davis made a complaint about that to OPS or through the sheriff suite?

A. I don't think so because he had already known that it was brought to the attention of the sheriff and Bobby Stafford.

Q. Do you know about any complaint that Kevin Davis took to OPS?

A. I know he made a complaint. I don't remember what it surrounded; but I do remember him taking a complaint, and it was basically like disregarded.

Q. If somebody takes a complaint to OPS, should a case number be drawn?

A. Oh, absolutely, or they say this is really not -- there's a list of standards that OPS will investigate these certain things or as directed by the sheriff.

So they'll look at it, and they'll say we'll take and we're going to pull a case number, or they'll say we're going to defer it back to the division commander and let the employee supervisor handle it.

MR. KRAMER: Any other questions on that particular issue?

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Thank you for the clarification. Was there anything else?

A. Did we discuss the bargaining process with the re-openers and the unfair labor practice?

Q. You did. You informed us that one of the reasons why you left the sheriff's office was that you advised them, essentially, that what they were doing was in violation of the National Labor Standards Act.

A. Oh, that's right. I gave you the form. Okay.

So I gave the set of text messages last time between the undersheriff and I.

Q. Yes.

A. The sergeants and lieutenants ratified their contract. The deputies did not ratify their contract. And there was an extended period of time; I don't recall the exact settlement dates, maybe July, August the following year. So we're talking about ten, eleven months later that ultimately we were going to go to a hearing at the sheriff's office.

And right before that began and the sheriff was coming to sit down and testify, if my memory serves me correctly, he wanted to have a discussion. And then that was ultimately settled, and a substantial check was written for attorney's fees. You may want to pull a copy of that.

Q. Who was the attorney that would have received the fees?

A. It would be the PBA.

Q. Would it be the PBA itself, or would it be paid directly to a particular attorney?

MS. WEBSTER: Do you want me to answer?

MR. KRAMER: No, you can tell him.

THE WITNESS: The check was written to the PBA.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. For the attorney's fees?

A. For the attorney's fees.

Q. Incurred because of the actions that you've already described in your previous testimony where the sheriff was essentially acting in violation of the National Labor Standards Act of essentially just refusing to negotiate in good faith.

A. That is correct. And that surrounded the take-home cars, which I believe we talked about last time.

Q. Correct.

A. All those things wrapped up.

Q. He withdrew all the articles. That's the phraseology you used.

A. Everything was TA'd. We were getting ready to go to a vote on Thursday and Friday. On Monday, October 18th, I got a call that he withdrew all the articles.

I said, "Wait a minute. We know this vote is coming. We can't do this."

I brought it to his attention, and the sheriff made the unilateral decision to pull that. I said, "You can't do that. You're going to refuse to sign a contract after it's already been agreed upon."

And in his text messages, which I presented to you last time, I was told that my interpretation was not consistent with the decision of the sheriff.

MR. KRAMER: Anything else?

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Next.

A. We talked about the SWAT rifles.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Where are those rifles now, Major?

A. So those rifles were not given to the employee personally. They were issued to the employee that won them with the understanding that when they retire they will be able to keep them. That was the decision that was made, if my memory serves me correctly; but that's probably not in writing anywhere, I promise you that, because nothing hardly ever gets reduced to writing.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Well, they wouldn't have gone to the inventory? Doesn't every officer have an inventory?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. And if they're not on the inventory, and they're in the officer's possession --

A. No, they're issued to the officer. They're going to be on the inventory.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. They were taken into the sheriff's office inventory and then issued to the officer that won it.

A. That's correct.

Did I touch on the fact that Watson will make a decision regardless whether it's against policy or procedure?

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. I think in general that was clear, but are there specific instances that you can reference that you didn't reference last time?

A. No. I just want to make sure I hit that --

Q. You did.

A. It's so frequent, though, that --

Q. What is the effect on the agency when the sheriff doesn't follow the agency's own policy?

A. Well, what it does is, it sets the tone of the only consistency is inconsistency, right? And when the sheriff isn't following his own policies and procedures, what message is that sending down to the troops?

It sends a horrible message down saying I don't have to follow policy and procedure, but I'm going to hold you to it; and when you aren't held to it, when you violate that, I'm going to write you up.

Q. Would it also lead people to the conclusion that -- wouldn't it also lead to the natural conclusion that if you follow a policy, that the sheriff might still discipline you or you might meet criticism or demotion or job problems because you followed policy that the sheriff no longer wants to have be the policy?

A. It's almost as if you're expected to think like him. And if it is any perceived disrespect or embarrassment, you're going to be talked to about it, if not hit with some sort of discipline.

We just had a recent case, the Glen Stanley

internal investigation, which is closed -- which I suggest you pull a copy of that -- where the sheriff goes outside the disciplinary matrix.

We have a matrix that says this is Level Two, Level Three, Level Four or Five, and this is -- you know, you got a Level Two, you get this many points. This many points is from A to B, and he'll just add C in there.

Q. And in this particular investigation was it to the officer's detriment?

A. Yes.

Q. Is this recourse for the officer under those circumstances? Can the officer appeal that decision? Do they have -- do they enforce the matrix as it exists, or are they simply subject to the sheriff's rulings?

A. Only if they meet the standards set forth in the sheriff's board, which is greater than a two-day suspension. In this case it was one-day suspension, but they put the guy on 12 months of disciplinary probation. And I believe, if you go back and you look at what a Level Three violation is, 12 months of disciplinary probation is not allowed.

And then what you do when you put somebody on disciplinary probation is, the next time they wear the wrong color socks or doing something that's in violation, then they're not eligible for a career service board.

It's almost like you're setting up them for the next violation, to render them ineffective in a career service board.

Q. And because it's a one-day suspension, it's not appealable?

A. Correct.

We touched on changing past practice without really any discussion with anyone.

Q. Correct. Yes.

A. We touched on Watson and Decoursey routinely holding paperwork and not signing it, essentially neglecting the duties of moving the institution along.

And we -- I know we discussed not reducing things to writing, and we discussed the staffing shortages. So I think that kind of cleans up what I can remember from the last one.

Q. Was there anything additional in response to the question, are you aware of anything immoral, unethical, or illegal, that occurred in the sheriff's office while you were there --

A. Well --

Q. -- that we didn't cover last time?

A. I think that's where we're going to move in to the next section.

Q. Okay.

A. So the sheriff is a steward of the taxpayer's money. Would you agree with that?

Q. Agreed.

A. When he came into office, there were two vehicles that were provided that were left by Darnell and Huckstep. They were not happy with those vehicles even though they were functioning vehicles, and they immediately purchased two black Tahoes; and they were high-end Tahoes to the tune of in the mid 70s. And then, of course, all the equipment and everything had to go in on top of that, so you're talking probably upwards of 90-plus thousand dollars just because they wanted new vehicles. That was kind of like the first thing. Everybody kind of questioned that.

And then he had the badges removed from them that say like "High Country" to make it look like it wasn't, you know, an expensive vehicle as it was, but everybody knew what time of day it was. They saw the badges on there. Everybody knew what was going on. You could see it.

So that was kind of, in my opinion, something that the fleet department should have set back and assessed and advised the sheriff, "Hey, if we want new vehicles, this is where our budget is. This is how much money we have left. If we make this purchase, then we can't purchase these four cars instead of these two Tahoes."

That didn't happen. He immediately ordered the vehicle. I don't think they came off state contract. I think they got one at the local Chevrolet dealership. Or I don't know where they got them form; you'd have to pull that. One was 74. The other one was 77 or somewhere in there. They were both in the mid 70s. So that was one thing that kind of came up.

So there were some Nissans that were purchased, and I believe they were for the drug task force or somebody, I think, after I had left. And there was an allegation they were purchased from Gainesville Nissan, and his son is one of the sales managers at Gainesville Nissan.

Q. Those type of contract purchases would be normally not done through Gainesville Nissan? They'd be done through state contract?

A. Generally, yes, unless there is a specific reason. Like, I know Darnell, when we purchased Harleys, the state contract price was, say -- I'm just throwing a number out there -- 17,000, but Gainesville

Harley said, hey, we'll sell them to you for 15.5. The sheriff felt we should keep our money local, and she was actually saving money and was being a good steward of the taxpayers' money and purchased the Harleys there.

But as far as going outside of that, the only thing I know of going outside was that some vehicles were purchased from Southeast Car Agency, especially when it came to things like the trucks for the aviation unit, where we could get something that was used; we didn't buy them new. They weren't new vehicles. They were used vehicles.

But there was some allegations that the Nissans came purchased from his son; and I don't have any evidence to substantiate that, but you could certainly run that down.

One of the tasks that I was given fairly early on was -- the office of professional standards was housed within the main sheriff's office at 2621 Southeast Hawthorne Road. And the office of professional standards has a door that goes right into the sheriff's suite, and that was so that the captain of OPS could go in and confer with the sheriff because the captain was direct report to the sheriff. It had been set like that since I've been there. That was always OPS. Some years prior to that, it was at the jail.

He had me -- he directed me to have OPS relocated back to the office -- the department of the jail, and he then commanded those offices for himself and had them remodeled where he made a rather large office for himself and spent a significant amount of money remodeling that office and then purchased some furniture to fill that office.

Q. Was the furniture purchased off of state contract?

A. I was told it was purchased offline. He went online and bought it because he got a better deal. To what that was, what that P.O. looked like, I have no idea.

Q. Would that be unusual?

A. That would be unusual.

Q. Outside the standard procedures of the sheriff's office to purchase furniture?

A. Correct, because every time we've purchased furniture -- like we purchased tables like these, chairs like these that sit in the squad room that I'm sure you've been to. All those were purchased through a vendor that we've got. And every time we've had to purchase something, A and B has to come to us with a book like this and said, here's what's available. This is what we can purchase. So to purchase furniture outside that realm, to my knowledge, had never been done.

Q. Okay.

A. There was a lot of controversy surrounding expenditures plastering his name on the building.

Q. Where are those?

A. On one occasion it didn't look right, and he bought it again.

Okay. You're aware of it. We'll move on.

On the back of everybody's vest said "sheriff" just like the cars say "sheriff" on it. It doesn't mean that you are the sheriff. It just indicates like police, sheriff. All those were ordered to be removed and replaced with deputies.

Q. Was it on the cars as well as the uniforms?

A. It was not on the cars. It was just on the uniforms.

Q. Did anybody -- with regard to this, did anybody confer or look at the Florida Statutes to ensure that the officers would be properly marked for the purposes of fleeing or attempting to elude or resisting arrest with or without violence, to ensure that the standards that are set forth in the statutes would be met?

A. I brought that specific statute that you're referring to to the attention of the undersheriff and said, "There's really no reason for this. It doesn't designate them as the sheriff, but, you know, it's for the purposes of authority."

And the response was, "There's only one sheriff, and that's the guy that signs in green ink. Everybody else is a deputy," and that was the reason for the switch.

But again, you have whatever those patches were, ten, eight, twelve dollars times how many, 300 patches. Again, it's just another tick of expenditures that didn't need to happen.

Q. Understood.

A. The sheriff and the undersheriff has continued to disregard Florida Statute 112 on numerous occasions, which obviously stemmed from the lawsuits that are out there pending.

Q. Do you have any information to indicate whether their disregard of 112 procedures and rights that are contained in Florida Statute 112 are based upon ignorance, that they don't understand them? Or is it based on an intentional act that they don't care to provide those rights and meet their responsibilities?

A. Personally, I believe they don't care.

Q. So at the time these violations have occurred, are the rights of the officers and responsibilities of the agency being brought to the attention of the individuals who are doing this and being told we don't care?

A. My understanding was 112 violation was raised; and then when the interview was stopped, that individual was charged with insubordination. And 112 clearly says that that can't happen.

Q. Which officer was charged with insubordination because they refused to be interviewed?

A. I believe it was Frank Williams, but I would have to go back and look. I'd have to do some additional research on that.

Q. I may need you to follow up on that if you can identify any particular officer who was -- I'm saying charged, but that's probably not the right word -- was given -- an OPS investigation was instituted for insubordination or insubordination was added to the current charged violations?

A. I believe if you pull the Glen Stanley case, and you pull a recording of the Loudermill that went along with the Glen Stanley case, the general counsel -- essentially, the argument was being made that truthfulness did not occur, that the officer actually -- it was alleged that the officer did not -- and I don't have first-hand knowledge of it, but from my understanding, is that the officer didn't do something and, in the actual packet, said that they had done it, they had sent an email.

The undersheriff indicated on his recommendation that it was truthfulness, that it didn't occur; and when the disciplinary rep went to make the argument that it was not truthfulness, the general counsel said, "Well, what charge do you think was appropriate?"

So I would encourage you to go back and listen to that audio recording of that Loudermill. In other words, you're going to get charged with something, and we're going to find something to fit.

Q. Okay. Understood.

A. I would encourage you to probably pull his calendar, Watson's calendar, and his gas receipts. On the very early part of his tenure he was there a lot. I know he was there a lot because I was there a lot, and I saw him a lot from very early in the morning, 5:00, 6:00 -- I think we discussed that last time -- until 8:00, 9:00 at night.

It got to the point where we needed the sheriff to approve something or do something, again, because we couldn't approve anything, the sheriff is not here. The sheriff is not here. The sheriff is not here. Where is he? Is he working? Is he not working? It seemed like he was never around.

So I would encourage you to probably pull his calendar for --

Q. What month and years?

A. I would say July '21 and after.

Q. Is there some incident you can point to where his attendance to the office stopped? Was it sudden, or was it gradual?

A. It was gradual. It seemed like he gradually was not there more and more, and he was unavailable, which then just stalemated --

Q. Right, because everything has to go through him.

A. Everything has to go through him, and then everything just slows to a crawl, at best a crawl.

The sheriff's son, Clovis Watson, IV, was the subject of numerous traffic stops and some criminal acts with GPD. This information was forwarded to the sheriff, but he never seemed to rectify it with his son. It continued to happen.

He was stopped a couple of times by our deputies for traffic violations. We did a DUI checkpoint down on South 13th Street where his son was completely irate and completely out of line just coming to pick somebody up that we had dealt with. I called the sheriff and he said, okay, and that was the end of it.

It was like his son could just do whatever he wanted to because his dad was the sheriff. There was no -- it was a very poor reflection on the sheriff, very poor reflection on the sheriff.

We talked about fails to process paperwork.

I think Ed Bennett -- you might want to talk to Ed Bennett about the disapproval of secondary employment at the academy.

Q. With regard to that, are you aware that the academy became short of staff because of the sheriff disapproving secondary employment?

A. I can't swear to that.

Q. We'd have to check with the academy?

A. You'd have to check with the academy. I would imagine it severely impacted it; but to what extent, I can't speculate.

Q. Understood.

A. The sheriff seems to make decisions based on emotion quite a bit rather than, you know, actual facts. The sheriff demoted Mat Yakubsin from lieutenant back to sergeant for essentially liking a Facebook post. Let me back up.

He demoted him, but he ordered me to demote him. So I had to call him and tell him, "Hey, look, you're demoted because you liked a Facebook post."

Q. Was that formal discipline?

A. He was on probation.

Q. So he was already on disciplinarian probation?

A. No, he was on new-hire -- promotional probation.

Q. I see. So he could be demoted back to his prior rank without any discipline occurring?

A. Correct.

Q. And does that cause him to lose pay?

A. It does cause him to lose pay.

Q. How much, roughly?

A. I'd have to go back and look at the scales. I mean, you can make a request for the pay changes in HTE. A minimum of five percent; but Yakubsin was not that tenured of a sergeant, so potentially ten percent more. I don't know the exact numbers on Yakubsin.

Q. And you know the basis for that demotion was liking a Facebook post because you were instructed to tell him why he was being demoted by the sheriff?

A. I was instructed by the sheriff to demote him back to sergeant; and the sheriff had told me that, "He liked that Facebook post, and I'm going to demote him."

Now, keep in mind everybody else that also liked that Facebook post -- it surrounded a lieutenant Facebook post from the jail that was subsequently terminated. Howard, I believe, is his name, received corrective counseling for that, but Yakubsin was demoted.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Did that go through an OPS review?

A. Oh, no.

Q. So there's no documentation on any of it?

A. No.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. Did Yakubsin get corrective counseling?

A. I believe he may have, but he was hit with a demotion and the corrective counseling where everybody else was just hit with the corrective counseling. In other words, I felt as if the demotion was excessive in comparison to what had been handed out to everybody else. That's kind of where I was going with that.

We discussed the negligent promotions last time.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. While we're on that topic --

A. Which topic?

Q. Negligent promotion. You mentioned Cleveland Cox. Talk about your knowledge about what happened when he tried out for the SWAT team?

A. He tried out for the SWAT team. He wasn't recommended, and then he was appointed by recommendation of the undersheriff.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Also, what the consequence was to the person who did not want him appointed to the SWAT team.

A. Oh, he adamantly opposed it. He was -- I can't remember if it was Josh Crews or Rich Howell at the time.

Q. Josh Crews.

A. Josh Crews absolutely did not want him to the point he wanted to go meet with the undersheriff, and I think he did meet with undersheriff about it; but the decision was made that he did not get his number one and number two picks, and he got Cleveland Cox. And Cleveland Cox was almost promoted at the recommendation of the sheriff.

Q. What happened with Josh Crews with his relationship with the SWAT team after he didn't want Cleveland Cox on there?

A. I'd have to go back and scroll and think about the timeline, but I can tell you, if you're referring to his removal from the SWAT team, his removal from the SWAT team, I do not believe, was tied to that incident.

We had a SWAT call-out in Monteoca, and the sheriff and undersheriff were there. And Josh Crews was insubordinate to me; and the sheriff found out about it, and the sheriff removed him from the SWAT team based on that incident.

Q. Were those two things occurring closely in time, the Cleveland Cox incident and Monteoca incident?

A. I believe the Cleveland Cox thing was a couple months afterwards. It could have been pretty close. It could have been pretty close.

Q. I don't know the answer, but my understanding is that the delivery of the information that Cleveland Cox would be assigned to the SWAT team and the removal of then lieutenant -- captain, sergeant, I'm not sure --

A. Lieutenant Josh Crews.

Q. -- Lieutenant Crews were delivered at the same time.

A. It may have been. It could have been in close proximity, and I can see how maybe he could correlate that if it was in close proximity, but my knowledge of the incident, it was really based on Lieutenant Crews' insubordination. Because I was ordered by the sheriff to conduct -- to basically put gas on the house with the hopes that the guy would come out, and Josh Crews came over to me and said, "I hope it's not a tactic," and he was rather nasty about it.

I'm not on the SWAT team. I've never been on the SWAT team, and I don't pretend to be on the SWAT team. So when it comes to SWAT-related matters, I would defer to Josh. Josh has got the knowledge. He's been on there a long time, along with his brother. His brother is no longer with us. He's retired. But I had a direct order from the sheriff that this is the way we're going to proceed, and Josh didn't agree with it.

Q. Let me make sure I understand the sheriff is directing a tactic to remove an individual from a home that a SWAT team is doing?

A. To put gas in there, yes.

Q. But is the sheriff qualified to make a decision about a tactic to remove a barricaded subject?

A. In my opinion, no, and that just falls on the back of what I just said. I'm a major. And even when I was a captain over those units, if I called you as my SWAT commander, and you said, "This is what we need to do," I'm going to defer to you. As long as we're not violating policy, we're not violating the law, and we're not creating some additional liability for the sheriff, I'm going to defer to you because that's your area of expertise.

Q. But doesn't it create liability if the sheriff, who is not qualified, is directing a tactic to be used in an extremely dangerous situation?

A. Oh, absolutely. The direction should not have come from the sheriff. The sheriff should have let Josh Crews run the incident, is what it comes down to.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. What was the barricaded subject?

A. There was another individual in the house. I think it was domestic.

Q. So the bad guy wasn't the only one in the house?

A. Correct.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. I guess you're probably the wrong person to ask, but do we put gas in the house when there's more than one person in the house?

A. Generally, no, but I would defer to Josh Crews and let him discuss that incident in greater detail.

Q. And the insubordination that Josh demonstrated during that incident, was he ever a subject of formal discipline? Or was it just we're going to discipline him by removing him from the SWAT team?

A. He got a corrective counseling from me for his insubordination, but then the sheriff removed him as the SWAT team commander.

Q. Did they put gas in the house?

A. I don't remember. That was very early on in the tenure of the administration.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Did the sheriff give a reason why he wanted the gas? Did he have some place to go?

A. Uh-uh. It was clear he was trying to direct the incident where he didn't have the experience to direct the incident.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:
Q. Was the sheriff at the scene?
A. He was, and the undersheriff. They both showed up. And, you know, to be fair, normally the sheriff and the undersheriff, the major does not show up to SWAT teams. You know, normally we're behind the phone somewhere, and we're letting those people run those operations; but that's not the way the sheriff wanted it run.
The captain was there. I was there. Captain Bella Blizzard was there. I was there. Decoursey was there. The sheriff was there. And I think probably Josh felt like he wasn't being allowed to operate under the parameters that he normally operates because his decision-making was being impeded by us.
BY MR. KRAMER:
Q. And that's what lead to his insubordination.
A. Correct.
Q. That's also consistent with what you've previously testified to, that all the decisions are being made by the sheriff to operational and tactical decisions.
A. That is correct.
BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. Were you familiar or did we talk about it last time, about the Cleveland Cox investigation that went through the office of professional standards?

A. I was aware.

Q. Do you know what happened with that eventually, or why it was terminated?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Is there some connection or familial connection between the undersheriff and Cleveland Cox?

A. We speculated that there was, but we -- I don't know of one, but it seemed to be really out of character that he was placed on the SWAT team and he was promoted against the objections of essentially everyone.

Q. Was he also assigned to CID?

A. He was.

Q. Against the objections?

A. He was. It was a pattern existing with Cleveland Cox, but I don't know what the connection is.

MR. KRAMER: I want to talk about time.

We can go off the record.

(An off-the-record discussion was had.)

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. All we were discussing is how much time we have remaining before our other witnesses to need to appear.

A. Eric Hutchison was promoted to the rank of acting lieutenant when he wasn't on the eligibility list. I would suggest you pull the employee profile and the eligibility list. When that was called to the sheriff's attention, that he wasn't eligible for promotion, the sheriff did act and rescinded that; but then here recently Scott Bonafide has been promoted to an active lieutenant, and he's been moved to civil.

As you're aware, civil is a completely different animal than any other part of the sheriff's office. You deal with evicting people and serving papers that can and cannot be served at certain times of day. To my knowledge, Scott has no knowledge of the civil process.

I did mention Rashawn Flanders. I do not have that paperwork that I thought I had.

The last one is Pat Ford Thomas. Michelle Clement was the division manager, and she was removed for seemingly no reason and moved over to the contract monitor at the jail, which she's got zero experience at. She was removed from her role as a division manager, and she was replaced with Pat Ford Thomas.

Pat Ford Thomas is the wife of Dave Thomas,

who, interestingly enough, was one of the very core group of people in Watson's campaign.

Q. We're going to speak with Michelle Clement. We just haven't gotten her scheduled yet.

A. Okay. I have for you a copy of one of the personnel orders that went out, and as you can see, the quantity of moves that were made at one time are significant; and that's not one of them, but the reason why that's significant is because I have this to go along with it, which is completely out of character, which has everybody's picture and where they're going, where you can definitely see folks --

MR. KRAMER: All right. We'll make this an exhibit to your statement.

That's all I have. I'm sure if something else comes up, I may think of something or whatever.

(Exhibit 1 was marked for identification.)

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. One last question I've got. When transfers and things were made, were the positions that they went to, were they resumed made for? Or were persons just told, you're going here, and you're going here?

A. Under the Darnell administration, generally, what would happen would be, an open position announcement would come out: Any interested deputy sheriff that wishes to apply to be a detective, please submit your name to ISIS, which is our internal system. Interviews are conducted, and then somebody would be selected from the list.

Under the Watson administration, that pretty much went out the window. He just made moves willie-nillie as he felt necessary with no rhyme or reason is really the short answer.

MR. KRAMER: Thank you. We may be talking to you further.

(The witness concluded at 11:20 a.m.)

I can't remember the abbreviation, but it is -- there's funding that comes out. They fund some equipment, and that is really meant so that when Bradford County calls, or Union County folks that don't have a SWAT team, we go up there and we handle it.

And usually the protocol was, they would call. The captain would say, "Hey, Union County has a SWAT call-out." I would notify the SWAT guys, and then they would go.

The captain would then turn around and notify the chain upwards, "Hey, this is what's happened. I'm just kind of letting you know that Bradford County has called, or Union County has called, and they need the SWAT team."

That's been the practice for years. I mean, time was of the essence when you're talking about calling out a SWAT team. If we're not calling them for some preplanned event three days from now, then we don't have time to sit around and talk and have approval. It's go.

That completely changed under the Watson administration. He simply demanded that, in order for any asset to leave this county, that that sheriff that was requesting or that chief that was requesting the equipment called him first, which severely choked the response time.

So it was a complete spin. It was something we weren't used to, but he wanted the sheriff of Bradford County, Union County to call him and ask for the equipment before we were authorized.

Q. And what if he wasn't available?

A. (Shrugs shoulders.)

Q. You're holding up your hands and saying there's no answer for that?

A. There's no answer for that because we weren't authorized to proceed.

Q. So, for instance, just an instance that I was personally involved in was, there was an officer-involved shooting in Levy County, and they only have maybe four deputies on the road at any one time. I don't know if you're aware of this incident.

A. Correct.

Q. And when three of the officers were involved in a shooting, then they had no -- essentially, one deputy remaining on the road. They requested assistance from the Alachua County Sheriff's Office. Would that assistance request have to go through the sheriff himself?

A. It would.

Q. Would you agree that under those circumstances where a county was essentially now --

A. Vacant.

Q. -- had no law enforcement available, that time is of the essence?

A. Yeah, it is essential. And I'll follow up with another example.

The two deputies that were shot in Gilchrist County under the Darnell administration. As soon as that happened, everybody started rolling. We rolled the command -- I mean, we had the mobile command bus. We had schedules done to start covering the county, and then we just started notifying the sheriff, "Hey, this is what we're doing. This is how we're taking care of them." It was almost the information was flowing upward rather than flowing downward.

And under the Watson administration it's completely immerse. It's not allowed to happen in that manner. And the folks who may call 911 in Gilchrist County, now that there's no deputies available, they rely on our assistance. And we have the resources to provide to Gilchrist County or to Union County that Union County or Gilchrist County doesn't otherwise have.

MR. KRAMER: All right. Let's go back to things that you may -- unless you wanted to follow up. I'm sorry.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Has he ever denied one of those requests that you know of?

A. Yes.

Q. Which one?

A. There was an incident where University of Florida had called and requested the use of the jail vans. There was something going on at the Reitz Union. I think Darren Baxley had called and requested the jail vans. Don't quote me. I think it was Darren Baxley, deputy chief. Sheriff Watson refused to let them utilize the jail vans.

All that is, is a transport function. It's not like we were sending personnel. You know, we send in a couple of people to operate the vans, but we weren't sending crowd management. We weren't getting involved with their business on campus. They were just simply asking for assistance because, again, the university, you know, they've only got 80 FTEs, you know, somewhere in there. They don't have the capacity to deal with 15 or 20 arrestees at the same time. It would impact them severely to have to deal with that, and we had the resources. I didn't understand what the purpose of withholding a jail van was.

Q. When you say impact severely, would that mean creating an unsafe environment for the remainder of the students and faculty on campus?

A. Potentially. I mean, it depends on how the incident goes. If you got all your guys on the incident tied up with 10-15, or arrestees, if you will, and then they need to focus their attention somewhere else, next thing you know, you divert your attention to the people that need to go. Now you have an unsafe number of officers with the arrestees; or do the officers stay with the arrestees, and now you've neglected this? You have to make a decision.

You've only got so many personnel. The jail van would have been very quick, easy. You bring the jail vans over, put them in the jail vans, pat them down, get them in there, at least hold them there for a few minutes or get them out of there, whatever they decided to do. It was a relatively simple request.

There was some issues surrounding the drug task force, which I'm sure you're aware of, and the sheriff not wanting anyone to operate in the county.

Q. Were you an employee of the sheriff's office at the time that the sheriff directed the removal of all the equipment from the drug task force?

A. No, but my understanding is it was done in the middle of the night under some covert operation, was the rumor.

Q. Correct. I just didn't know if you were personally involved.

A. I was not.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Were you there when Nassau County requested assistance on an officer-involved shooting, and it was denied?

A. Actually, yes. I believe I was.

Q. Do we know why?

A. I don't know why.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. But that denial would have come from the sheriff?

A. It come from the sheriff. No cop, working cop, like even coming up through the ranks, when they had something like that, would deny that type of assistance. Those are the things -- when things were choked, it chokes to the point where it doesn't -- it doesn't run efficiently.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. And for the record, let me correct that. It may have been an officer-involved shooting, but actually the deputy had been shot; and they had a subject cornered, and they were asking for assistance from SWAT teams.

A. Correct. Correct.

MR. KRAMER: Anything further on what he's said so far?

THE WITNESS: One of the things that -- you know, you talk about assets. The SWAT team is one of them, but more frequently the helicopter is something that -- you know, we have an aviation unit. And folks in Putnam County and Columbia County, you know, they rely on that air support. You know, one helicopter there, arguably, is equivalent of 15 or 20 units on the ground.

Those requests were frequently -- we ran into problems where there would be a pursuit at, say, 2:00 in the morning, and they're calling and asking for our assistance. And then you have to make the decision, do I say, okay, go ahead and go, and then get chewed out the next day because they didn't -- because that sheriff didn't call our sheriff at 2:00 in the morning?

I mean, that's the type of slow-down we're talking about, to the point where you might as well not even send them at that point. It's almost rendering it useless.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. And it's 2:00 in the morning. Is Sheriff Watson available to answer another sheriff's call?

A. I don't know. I never called him at 2:00 in the morning.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. You mentioned earlier about the funding. If I recall from my days with RDS --

A. RDSTF, yeah, that's it.

Q. Regional Domestic Security Task Force. That's where a lot of Alachua's money came from. Or I say a lot. That's basically --

A. A significant amount of money.

Q. They were given a lot of money to create those regional units in case of -- for the region.

A. Right.

Q. And that was the understanding, that the money is given to you, but you need to be available if the region needs you.

A. The BearCat. I believe the BearCat was portioned with RDSTF money; or a portion of it was purchased with it, and you know how expensive those are.

The bomb team is another RDSTF, you know.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Let me ask you this. Are these requests reduced in any way to writing, or would there be any evidence of the request existing at all?

A. Usually -- from my recollection, usually when something breaks off, it's a phone call saying, "We need SWAT."

Q. Let me ask you this --

A. There could be a Teletype follow-up, though. I don't know.

Q. Would there be text messaging? Like, for instance, might you send a text message to the sheriff "We've received request from Scott for SWAT in Union County"?

A. Oh, I'm sure, but I never really directly contacted the sheriff. That was the undersheriff. I would call him, the undersheriff. I mean, he would answer his phone.

Q. But if -- you would agree those communications would be records at the agency?

A. There should be records at the agency.

Q. But if those records were not being -- they may not be preserved.

A. They should be preserved. Because there was a point in time when we all got iPhones -- you get into the debate of the iPhone or the Android, right? The iPhone is a blue, which is MMS; and then you have the Android, which is an SMS message. From my understanding, the SMS messages are recorded through your carrier, but the MMS are not because they're run on data and not run on cellular.

Q. But if the sheriff didn't allow the recording devices on his phone, there would be no record of those requests being made to the sheriff, correct?

A. I know that the phone that I had had recording because that was all enabled by Scott Shelpman, if my memory serves me correctly.

Q. Understood. Let's move on to the next item that you were concerned that we had missed due to our time constraints.

A. We discussed briefly Michelle Shirfield last time. She had posted some items on Facebook that could be seen by some folks as slanted to one racial side, if you will. That was brought to Watson's attention, and our understanding is that she was given a corrective counseling for that. Nobody ever saw the corrective counseling.

And then the order was basically given, you know, for Facebook or for violations of social media, that was -- that was the -- what should be done, give them a corrective counseling and go through progressive discipline.

And I think there's a couple open cases right now -- or I don't know if they're open or closed.

So Frank Williams and Kevin Davis are under investigation, or open at the moment, for things that I think were far less controversial, and they were placed on admin suspension and been sitting at the house for months.

Q. And let me ask you because I don't know the answer to this. This individual -- and you said her name was Michelle?

A. Shirfield.

Q. Shirfield? Is she African American?

A. She is.

Q. And the posts that you're referencing, they were -- I don't know the posts. Were they racially inappropriate?

A. It was more of a supporting a racial position, and I believe Kevin Davis could speak more on that.

Q. Is it your understanding that a formal complaint was made either to her supervisor or to the office of professional standards so that discipline should have been initiated?

A. I told the sheriff directly about the violation, and Bobby Stafford told the sheriff directly about the violation.

Q. But as far as I understand -- and my understanding of discipline is developing -- is that the way the discipline would be initiated, it would be either through the office of professional standards or through her supervisor.

A. Correct.

Q. So you gave that information to the sheriff?

A. Correct.

Q. And your understanding is that no discipline was initiated; or if there was any discipline, it was informal in the form of a corrective counseling?

A. It was informal in the form of a corrective counseling, but nobody seen that. I'm sure if you pull her file you would either see a corrective counseling or not see a corrective counseling, but she reported directly to the sheriff.

Q. When someone receives corrective counseling, is it discipline?

A. It's considered informal discipline.

Q. But it should remain in the employee file for one year?

A. That's correct. Oftentimes it's not removed. You have to go back in there and say, hey, that needs to come out.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. Do you know if Kevin Davis made a complaint about that to OPS or through the sheriff suite?

A. I don't think so because he had already known that it was brought to the attention of the sheriff and Bobby Stafford.

Q. Do you know about any complaint that Kevin Davis took to OPS?

A. I know he made a complaint. I don't remember what it surrounded; but I do remember him taking a complaint, and it was basically like disregarded.

Q. If somebody takes a complaint to OPS, should a case number be drawn?

A. Oh, absolutely, or they say this is really not -- there's a list of standards that OPS will investigate these certain things or as directed by the sheriff.

So they'll look at it, and they'll say we'll take and we're going to pull a case number, or they'll say we're going to defer it back to the division commander and let the employee supervisor handle it.

MR. KRAMER: Any other questions on that particular issue?

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Thank you for the clarification. Was there anything else?

A. Did we discuss the bargaining process with the re-openers and the unfair labor practice?

Q. You did. You informed us that one of the reasons why you left the sheriff's office was that you advised them, essentially, that what they were doing was in violation of the National Labor Standards Act.

A. Oh, that's right. I gave you the form. Okay.

So I gave the set of text messages last time between the undersheriff and I.

Q. Yes.

A. The sergeants and lieutenants ratified their contract. The deputies did not ratify their contract. And there was an extended period of time; I don't recall the exact settlement dates, maybe July, August the following year. So we're talking about ten, eleven months later that ultimately we were going to go to a hearing at the sheriff's office.

And right before that began and the sheriff was coming to sit down and testify, if my memory serves me correctly, he wanted to have a discussion. And then that was ultimately settled, and a substantial check was written for attorney's fees. You may want to pull a copy of that.

Q. Who was the attorney that would have received the fees?

A. It would be the PBA.

Q. Would it be the PBA itself, or would it be paid directly to a particular attorney?

MS. WEBSTER: Do you want me to answer?

MR. KRAMER: No, you can tell him.

THE WITNESS: The check was written to the PBA.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. For the attorney's fees?

A. For the attorney's fees.

Q. Incurred because of the actions that you've already described in your previous testimony where the sheriff was essentially acting in violation of the National Labor Standards Act of essentially just refusing to negotiate in good faith.

A. That is correct. And that surrounded the take-home cars, which I believe we talked about last time.

Q. Correct.

A. All those things wrapped up.

Q. He withdrew all the articles. That's the phraseology you used.

A. Everything was TA'd. We were getting ready to go to a vote on Thursday and Friday. On Monday, October 18th, I got a call that he withdrew all the articles.

I said, "Wait a minute. We know this vote is coming. We can't do this."

I brought it to his attention, and the sheriff made the unilateral decision to pull that. I said, "You can't do that. You're going to refuse to sign a contract after it's already been agreed upon."

And in his text messages, which I presented to you last time, I was told that my interpretation was not consistent with the decision of the sheriff.

MR. KRAMER: Anything else?

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Next.

A. We talked about the SWAT rifles.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Where are those rifles now, Major?

A. So those rifles were not given to the employee personally. They were issued to the employee that won them with the understanding that when they retire they will be able to keep them. That was the decision that was made, if my memory serves me correctly; but that's probably not in writing anywhere, I promise you that, because nothing hardly ever gets reduced to writing.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Well, they wouldn't have gone to the inventory? Doesn't every officer have an inventory?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. And if they're not on the inventory, and they're in the officer's possession --

A. No, they're issued to the officer. They're going to be on the inventory.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. They were taken into the sheriff's office inventory and then issued to the officer that won it.

A. That's correct.

Did I touch on the fact that Watson will make a decision regardless whether it's against policy or procedure?

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. I think in general that was clear, but are there specific instances that you can reference that you didn't reference last time?

A. No. I just want to make sure I hit that --

Q. You did.

A. It's so frequent, though, that --

Q. What is the effect on the agency when the sheriff doesn't follow the agency's own policy?

A. Well, what it does is, it sets the tone of the only consistency is inconsistency, right? And when the sheriff isn't following his own policies and procedures, what message is that sending down to the troops?

It sends a horrible message down saying I don't have to follow policy and procedure, but I'm going to hold you to it; and when you aren't held to it, when you violate that, I'm going to write you up.

Q. Would it also lead people to the conclusion that -- wouldn't it also lead to the natural conclusion that if you follow a policy, that the sheriff might still discipline you or you might meet criticism or demotion or job problems because you followed policy that the sheriff no longer wants to have be the policy?

A. It's almost as if you're expected to think like him. And if it is any perceived disrespect or embarrassment, you're going to be talked to about it, if not hit with some sort of discipline.

We just had a recent case, the Glen Stanley

internal investigation, which is closed -- which I suggest you pull a copy of that -- where the sheriff goes outside the disciplinary matrix.

We have a matrix that says this is Level Two, Level Three, Level Four or Five, and this is -- you know, you got a Level Two, you get this many points. This many points is from A to B, and he'll just add C in there.

Q. And in this particular investigation was it to the officer's detriment?

A. Yes.

Q. Is this recourse for the officer under those circumstances? Can the officer appeal that decision? Do they have -- do they enforce the matrix as it exists, or are they simply subject to the sheriff's rulings?

A. Only if they meet the standards set forth in the sheriff's board, which is greater than a two-day suspension. In this case it was one-day suspension, but they put the guy on 12 months of disciplinary probation. And I believe, if you go back and you look at what a Level Three violation is, 12 months of disciplinary probation is not allowed.

And then what you do when you put somebody on disciplinary probation is, the next time they wear the wrong color socks or doing something that's in violation, then they're not eligible for a career service board.

It's almost like you're setting up them for the next violation, to render them ineffective in a career service board.

Q. And because it's a one-day suspension, it's not appealable?

A. Correct.

We touched on changing past practice without really any discussion with anyone.

Q. Correct. Yes.

A. We touched on Watson and Decoursey routinely holding paperwork and not signing it, essentially neglecting the duties of moving the institution along.

And we -- I know we discussed not reducing things to writing, and we discussed the staffing shortages. So I think that kind of cleans up what I can remember from the last one.

Q. Was there anything additional in response to the question, are you aware of anything immoral, unethical, or illegal, that occurred in the sheriff's office while you were there --

A. Well --

Q. -- that we didn't cover last time?

A. I think that's where we're going to move in to the next section.

Q. Okay.

A. So the sheriff is a steward of the taxpayer's money. Would you agree with that?

Q. Agreed.

A. When he came into office, there were two vehicles that were provided that were left by Darnell and Huckstep. They were not happy with those vehicles even though they were functioning vehicles, and they immediately purchased two black Tahoes; and they were high-end Tahoes to the tune of in the mid 70s. And then, of course, all the equipment and everything had to go in on top of that, so you're talking probably upwards of 90-plus thousand dollars just because they wanted new vehicles. That was kind of like the first thing. Everybody kind of questioned that.

And then he had the badges removed from them that say like "High Country" to make it look like it wasn't, you know, an expensive vehicle as it was, but everybody knew what time of day it was. They saw the badges on there. Everybody knew what was going on. You could see it.

So that was kind of, in my opinion, something that the fleet department should have set back and assessed and advised the sheriff, "Hey, if we want new vehicles, this is where our budget is. This is how much money we have left. If we make this purchase, then we can't purchase these four cars instead of these two Tahoes."

That didn't happen. He immediately ordered the vehicle. I don't think they came off state contract. I think they got one at the local Chevrolet dealership. Or I don't know where they got them form; you'd have to pull that. One was 74. The other one was 77 or somewhere in there. They were both in the mid 70s. So that was one thing that kind of came up.

So there were some Nissans that were purchased, and I believe they were for the drug task force or somebody, I think, after I had left. And there was an allegation they were purchased from Gainesville Nissan, and his son is one of the sales managers at Gainesville Nissan.

Q. Those type of contract purchases would be normally not done through Gainesville Nissan? They'd be done through state contract?

A. Generally, yes, unless there is a specific reason. Like, I know Darnell, when we purchased Harleys, the state contract price was, say -- I'm just throwing a number out there -- 17,000, but Gainesville

Harley said, hey, we'll sell them to you for 15.5. The sheriff felt we should keep our money local, and she was actually saving money and was being a good steward of the taxpayers' money and purchased the Harleys there.

But as far as going outside of that, the only thing I know of going outside was that some vehicles were purchased from Southeast Car Agency, especially when it came to things like the trucks for the aviation unit, where we could get something that was used; we didn't buy them new. They weren't new vehicles. They were used vehicles.

But there was some allegations that the Nissans came purchased from his son; and I don't have any evidence to substantiate that, but you could certainly run that down.

One of the tasks that I was given fairly early on was -- the office of professional standards was housed within the main sheriff's office at 2621 Southeast Hawthorne Road. And the office of professional standards has a door that goes right into the sheriff's suite, and that was so that the captain of OPS could go in and confer with the sheriff because the captain was direct report to the sheriff. It had been set like that since I've been there. That was always OPS. Some years prior to that, it was at the jail.

He had me -- he directed me to have OPS relocated back to the office -- the department of the jail, and he then commanded those offices for himself and had them remodeled where he made a rather large office for himself and spent a significant amount of money remodeling that office and then purchased some furniture to fill that office.

Q. Was the furniture purchased off of state contract?

A. I was told it was purchased offline. He went online and bought it because he got a better deal. To what that was, what that P.O. looked like, I have no idea.

Q. Would that be unusual?

A. That would be unusual.

Q. Outside the standard procedures of the sheriff's office to purchase furniture?

A. Correct, because every time we've purchased furniture -- like we purchased tables like these, chairs like these that sit in the squad room that I'm sure you've been to. All those were purchased through a vendor that we've got. And every time we've had to purchase something, A and B has to come to us with a book like this and said, here's what's available. This is what we can purchase. So to purchase furniture outside that realm, to my knowledge, had never been done.

Q. Okay.

A. There was a lot of controversy surrounding expenditures plastering his name on the building.

Q. Where are those?

A. On one occasion it didn't look right, and he bought it again.

Okay. You're aware of it. We'll move on.

On the back of everybody's vest said "sheriff" just like the cars say "sheriff" on it. It doesn't mean that you are the sheriff. It just indicates like police, sheriff. All those were ordered to be removed and replaced with deputies.

Q. Was it on the cars as well as the uniforms?

A. It was not on the cars. It was just on the uniforms.

Q. Did anybody -- with regard to this, did anybody confer or look at the Florida Statutes to ensure that the officers would be properly marked for the purposes of fleeing or attempting to elude or resisting arrest with or without violence, to ensure that the standards that are set forth in the statutes would be met?

A. I brought that specific statute that you're referring to to the attention of the undersheriff and said, "There's really no reason for this. It doesn't designate them as the sheriff, but, you know, it's for the purposes of authority."

And the response was, "There's only one sheriff, and that's the guy that signs in green ink. Everybody else is a deputy," and that was the reason for the switch.

But again, you have whatever those patches were, ten, eight, twelve dollars times how many, 300 patches. Again, it's just another tick of expenditures that didn't need to happen.

Q. Understood.

A. The sheriff and the undersheriff has continued to disregard Florida Statute 112 on numerous occasions, which obviously stemmed from the lawsuits that are out there pending.

Q. Do you have any information to indicate whether their disregard of 112 procedures and rights that are contained in Florida Statute 112 are based upon ignorance, that they don't understand them? Or is it based on an intentional act that they don't care to provide those rights and meet their responsibilities?

A. Personally, I believe they don't care.

Q. So at the time these violations have occurred, are the rights of the officers and responsibilities of the agency being brought to the attention of the individuals who are doing this and being told we don't care?

A. My understanding was 112 violation was raised; and then when the interview was stopped, that individual was charged with insubordination. And 112 clearly says that that can't happen.

Q. Which officer was charged with insubordination because they refused to be interviewed?

A. I believe it was Frank Williams, but I would have to go back and look. I'd have to do some additional research on that.

Q. I may need you to follow up on that if you can identify any particular officer who was -- I'm saying charged, but that's probably not the right word -- was given -- an OPS investigation was instituted for insubordination or insubordination was added to the current charged violations?

A. I believe if you pull the Glen Stanley case, and you pull a recording of the Loudermill that went along with the Glen Stanley case, the general counsel -- essentially, the argument was being made that truthfulness did not occur, that the officer actually -- it was alleged that the officer did not -- and I don't have first-hand knowledge of it, but from my understanding, is that the officer didn't do something and, in the actual packet, said that they had done it, they had sent an email.

The undersheriff indicated on his recommendation that it was truthfulness, that it didn't occur; and when the disciplinary rep went to make the argument that it was not truthfulness, the general counsel said, "Well, what charge do you think was appropriate?"

So I would encourage you to go back and listen to that audio recording of that Loudermill. In other words, you're going to get charged with something, and we're going to find something to fit.

Q. Okay. Understood.

A. I would encourage you to probably pull his calendar, Watson's calendar, and his gas receipts. On the very early part of his tenure he was there a lot. I know he was there a lot because I was there a lot, and I saw him a lot from very early in the morning, 5:00, 6:00 -- I think we discussed that last time -- until 8:00, 9:00 at night.

It got to the point where we needed the sheriff to approve something or do something, again, because we couldn't approve anything, the sheriff is not here. The sheriff is not here. The sheriff is not here. Where is he? Is he working? Is he not working? It seemed like he was never around.

So I would encourage you to probably pull his calendar for --

Q. What month and years?

A. I would say July '21 and after.

Q. Is there some incident you can point to where his attendance to the office stopped? Was it sudden, or was it gradual?

A. It was gradual. It seemed like he gradually was not there more and more, and he was unavailable, which then just stalemated --

Q. Right, because everything has to go through him.

A. Everything has to go through him, and then everything just slows to a crawl, at best a crawl.

The sheriff's son, Clovis Watson, IV, was the subject of numerous traffic stops and some criminal acts with GPD. This information was forwarded to the sheriff, but he never seemed to rectify it with his son. It continued to happen.

He was stopped a couple of times by our deputies for traffic violations. We did a DUI checkpoint down on South 13th Street where his son was completely irate and completely out of line just coming to pick somebody up that we had dealt with. I called the sheriff and he said, okay, and that was the end of it.

It was like his son could just do whatever he wanted to because his dad was the sheriff. There was no -- it was a very poor reflection on the sheriff, very poor reflection on the sheriff.

We talked about fails to process paperwork.

I think Ed Bennett -- you might want to talk to Ed Bennett about the disapproval of secondary employment at the academy.

Q. With regard to that, are you aware that the academy became short of staff because of the sheriff disapproving secondary employment?

A. I can't swear to that.

Q. We'd have to check with the academy?

A. You'd have to check with the academy. I would imagine it severely impacted it; but to what extent, I can't speculate.

Q. Understood.

A. The sheriff seems to make decisions based on emotion quite a bit rather than, you know, actual facts. The sheriff demoted Mat Yakubsin from lieutenant back to sergeant for essentially liking a Facebook post. Let me back up.

He demoted him, but he ordered me to demote him. So I had to call him and tell him, "Hey, look, you're demoted because you liked a Facebook post."

Q. Was that formal discipline?

A. He was on probation.

Q. So he was already on disciplinarian probation?

A. No, he was on new-hire -- promotional probation.

Q. I see. So he could be demoted back to his prior rank without any discipline occurring?

A. Correct.

Q. And does that cause him to lose pay?

A. It does cause him to lose pay.

Q. How much, roughly?

A. I'd have to go back and look at the scales. I mean, you can make a request for the pay changes in HTE. A minimum of five percent; but Yakubsin was not that tenured of a sergeant, so potentially ten percent more. I don't know the exact numbers on Yakubsin.

Q. And you know the basis for that demotion was liking a Facebook post because you were instructed to tell him why he was being demoted by the sheriff?

A. I was instructed by the sheriff to demote him back to sergeant; and the sheriff had told me that, "He liked that Facebook post, and I'm going to demote him."

Now, keep in mind everybody else that also liked that Facebook post -- it surrounded a lieutenant Facebook post from the jail that was subsequently terminated. Howard, I believe, is his name, received corrective counseling for that, but Yakubsin was demoted.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Did that go through an OPS review?

A. Oh, no.

Q. So there's no documentation on any of it?

A. No.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. Did Yakubsin get corrective counseling?

A. I believe he may have, but he was hit with a demotion and the corrective counseling where everybody else was just hit with the corrective counseling. In other words, I felt as if the demotion was excessive in comparison to what had been handed out to everybody else. That's kind of where I was going with that.

We discussed the negligent promotions last time.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. While we're on that topic --

A. Which topic?

Q. Negligent promotion. You mentioned Cleveland Cox. Talk about your knowledge about what happened when he tried out for the SWAT team?

A. He tried out for the SWAT team. He wasn't recommended, and then he was appointed by recommendation of the undersheriff.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Also, what the consequence was to the person who did not want him appointed to the SWAT team.

A. Oh, he adamantly opposed it. He was -- I can't remember if it was Josh Crews or Rich Howell at the time.

Q. Josh Crews.

A. Josh Crews absolutely did not want him to the point he wanted to go meet with the undersheriff, and I think he did meet with undersheriff about it; but the decision was made that he did not get his number one and number two picks, and he got Cleveland Cox. And Cleveland Cox was almost promoted at the recommendation of the sheriff.

Q. What happened with Josh Crews with his relationship with the SWAT team after he didn't want Cleveland Cox on there?

A. I'd have to go back and scroll and think about the timeline, but I can tell you, if you're referring to his removal from the SWAT team, his removal from the SWAT team, I do not believe, was tied to that incident.

We had a SWAT call-out in Monteoca, and the sheriff and undersheriff were there. And Josh Crews was insubordinate to me; and the sheriff found out about it, and the sheriff removed him from the SWAT team based on that incident.

Q. Were those two things occurring closely in time, the Cleveland Cox incident and Monteoca incident?

A. I believe the Cleveland Cox thing was a couple months afterwards. It could have been pretty close. It could have been pretty close.

Q. I don't know the answer, but my understanding is that the delivery of the information that Cleveland Cox would be assigned to the SWAT team and the removal of then lieutenant -- captain, sergeant, I'm not sure --

A. Lieutenant Josh Crews.

Q. -- Lieutenant Crews were delivered at the same time.

A. It may have been. It could have been in close proximity, and I can see how maybe he could correlate that if it was in close proximity, but my knowledge of the incident, it was really based on Lieutenant Crews' insubordination. Because I was ordered by the sheriff to conduct -- to basically put gas on the house with the hopes that the guy would come out, and Josh Crews came over to me and said, "I hope it's not a tactic," and he was rather nasty about it.

I'm not on the SWAT team. I've never been on the SWAT team, and I don't pretend to be on the SWAT team. So when it comes to SWAT-related matters, I would defer to Josh. Josh has got the knowledge. He's been on there a long time, along with his brother. His brother is no longer with us. He's retired. But I had a direct order from the sheriff that this is the way we're going to proceed, and Josh didn't agree with it.

Q. Let me make sure I understand the sheriff is directing a tactic to remove an individual from a home that a SWAT team is doing?

A. To put gas in there, yes.

Q. But is the sheriff qualified to make a decision about a tactic to remove a barricaded subject?

A. In my opinion, no, and that just falls on the back of what I just said. I'm a major. And even when I was a captain over those units, if I called you as my SWAT commander, and you said, "This is what we need to do," I'm going to defer to you. As long as we're not violating policy, we're not violating the law, and we're not creating some additional liability for the sheriff, I'm going to defer to you because that's your area of expertise.

Q. But doesn't it create liability if the sheriff, who is not qualified, is directing a tactic to be used in an extremely dangerous situation?

A. Oh, absolutely. The direction should not have come from the sheriff. The sheriff should have let Josh Crews run the incident, is what it comes down to.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. What was the barricaded subject?

A. There was another individual in the house. I think it was domestic.

Q. So the bad guy wasn't the only one in the house?

A. Correct.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. I guess you're probably the wrong person to ask, but do we put gas in the house when there's more than one person in the house?

A. Generally, no, but I would defer to Josh Crews and let him discuss that incident in greater detail.

Q. And the insubordination that Josh demonstrated during that incident, was he ever a subject of formal discipline? Or was it just we're going to discipline him by removing him from the SWAT team?

A. He got a corrective counseling from me for his insubordination, but then the sheriff removed him as the SWAT team commander.

Q. Did they put gas in the house?

A. I don't remember. That was very early on in the tenure of the administration.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Did the sheriff give a reason why he wanted the gas? Did he have some place to go?

A. Uh-uh. It was clear he was trying to direct the incident where he didn't have the experience to direct the incident.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:
Q. Was the sheriff at the scene?
A. He was, and the undersheriff. They both showed up. And, you know, to be fair, normally the sheriff and the undersheriff, the major does not show up to SWAT teams. You know, normally we're behind the phone somewhere, and we're letting those people run those operations; but that's not the way the sheriff wanted it run.
The captain was there. I was there. Captain Bella Blizzard was there. I was there. Decoursey was there. The sheriff was there. And I think probably Josh felt like he wasn't being allowed to operate under the parameters that he normally operates because his decision-making was being impeded by us.
BY MR. KRAMER:
Q. And that's what lead to his insubordination.
A. Correct.
Q. That's also consistent with what you've previously testified to, that all the decisions are being made by the sheriff to operational and tactical decisions.
A. That is correct.
BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. Were you familiar or did we talk about it last time, about the Cleveland Cox investigation that went through the office of professional standards?

A. I was aware.

Q. Do you know what happened with that eventually, or why it was terminated?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Is there some connection or familial connection between the undersheriff and Cleveland Cox?

A. We speculated that there was, but we -- I don't know of one, but it seemed to be really out of character that he was placed on the SWAT team and he was promoted against the objections of essentially everyone.

Q. Was he also assigned to CID?

A. He was.

Q. Against the objections?

A. He was. It was a pattern existing with Cleveland Cox, but I don't know what the connection is.

MR. KRAMER: I want to talk about time.

We can go off the record.

(An off-the-record discussion was had.)

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. All we were discussing is how much time we have remaining before our other witnesses to need to appear.

A. Eric Hutchison was promoted to the rank of acting lieutenant when he wasn't on the eligibility list. I would suggest you pull the employee profile and the eligibility list. When that was called to the sheriff's attention, that he wasn't eligible for promotion, the sheriff did act and rescinded that; but then here recently Scott Bonafide has been promoted to an active lieutenant, and he's been moved to civil.

As you're aware, civil is a completely different animal than any other part of the sheriff's office. You deal with evicting people and serving papers that can and cannot be served at certain times of day. To my knowledge, Scott has no knowledge of the civil process.

I did mention Rashawn Flanders. I do not have that paperwork that I thought I had.

The last one is Pat Ford Thomas. Michelle Clement was the division manager, and she was removed for seemingly no reason and moved over to the contract monitor at the jail, which she's got zero experience at. She was removed from her role as a division manager, and she was replaced with Pat Ford Thomas.

Pat Ford Thomas is the wife of Dave Thomas,

who, interestingly enough, was one of the very core group of people in Watson's campaign.

Q. We're going to speak with Michelle Clement. We just haven't gotten her scheduled yet.

A. Okay. I have for you a copy of one of the personnel orders that went out, and as you can see, the quantity of moves that were made at one time are significant; and that's not one of them, but the reason why that's significant is because I have this to go along with it, which is completely out of character, which has everybody's picture and where they're going, where you can definitely see folks --

MR. KRAMER: All right. We'll make this an exhibit to your statement.

That's all I have. I'm sure if something else comes up, I may think of something or whatever.

(Exhibit 1 was marked for identification.)

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. One last question I've got. When transfers and things were made, were the positions that they went to, were they resumed made for? Or were persons just told, you're going here, and you're going here?

A. Under the Darnell administration, generally, what would happen would be, an open position announcement would come out: Any interested deputy sheriff that wishes to apply to be a detective, please submit your name to ISIS, which is our internal system. Interviews are conducted, and then somebody would be selected from the list.

Under the Watson administration, that pretty much went out the window. He just made moves willie-nillie as he felt necessary with no rhyme or reason is really the short answer.

MR. KRAMER: Thank you. We may be talking to you further.

equipment called him first, which severely choked the response time.

So it was a complete spin. It was something we weren't used to, but he wanted the sheriff of Bradford County, Union County to call him and ask for the equipment before we were authorized.

Q. And what if he wasn't available?

A. (Shrugs shoulders.)

Q. You're holding up your hands and saying there's no answer for that?

A. There's no answer for that because we weren't authorized to proceed.

Q. So, for instance, just an instance that I was personally involved in was, there was an officer-involved shooting in Levy County, and they only have maybe four deputies on the road at any one time. I don't know if you're aware of this incident.

A. Correct.

Q. And when three of the officers were involved in a shooting, then they had no -- essentially, one deputy remaining on the road. They requested assistance from the Alachua County Sheriff's Office. Would that assistance request have to go through the sheriff himself?

A. It would.

Q. Would you agree that under those circumstances where a county was essentially now --

A. Vacant.

Q. -- had no law enforcement available, that time is of the essence?

A. Yeah, it is essential. And I'll follow up with another example.

The two deputies that were shot in Gilchrist County under the Darnell administration. As soon as that happened, everybody started rolling. We rolled the command -- I mean, we had the mobile command bus. We had schedules done to start covering the county, and then we just started notifying the sheriff, "Hey, this is what we're doing. This is how we're taking care of them." It was almost the information was flowing upward rather than flowing downward.

And under the Watson administration it's completely immerse. It's not allowed to happen in that manner. And the folks who may call 911 in Gilchrist County, now that there's no deputies available, they rely on our assistance. And we have the resources to provide to Gilchrist County or to Union County that Union County or Gilchrist County doesn't otherwise have.

MR. KRAMER: All right. Let's go back to things that you may -- unless you wanted to follow up. I'm sorry.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Has he ever denied one of those requests that you know of?

A. Yes.

Q. Which one?

A. There was an incident where University of Florida had called and requested the use of the jail vans. There was something going on at the Reitz Union. I think Darren Baxley had called and requested the jail vans. Don't quote me. I think it was Darren Baxley, deputy chief. Sheriff Watson refused to let them utilize the jail vans.

All that is, is a transport function. It's not like we were sending personnel. You know, we send in a couple of people to operate the vans, but we weren't sending crowd management. We weren't getting involved with their business on campus. They were just simply asking for assistance because, again, the university, you know, they've only got 80 FTEs, you know, somewhere in there. They don't have the capacity to deal with 15 or 20 arrestees at the same time. It would impact them severely to have to deal with that, and we had the resources. I didn't understand what the purpose of withholding a jail van was.

Q. When you say impact severely, would that mean creating an unsafe environment for the remainder of the students and faculty on campus?

A. Potentially. I mean, it depends on how the incident goes. If you got all your guys on the incident tied up with 10-15, or arrestees, if you will, and then they need to focus their attention somewhere else, next thing you know, you divert your attention to the people that need to go. Now you have an unsafe number of officers with the arrestees; or do the officers stay with the arrestees, and now you've neglected this? You have to make a decision.

You've only got so many personnel. The jail van would have been very quick, easy. You bring the jail vans over, put them in the jail vans, pat them down, get them in there, at least hold them there for a few minutes or get them out of there, whatever they decided to do. It was a relatively simple request.

There was some issues surrounding the drug task force, which I'm sure you're aware of, and the sheriff not wanting anyone to operate in the county.

Q. Were you an employee of the sheriff's office at the time that the sheriff directed the removal of all the equipment from the drug task force?

A. No, but my understanding is it was done in the middle of the night under some covert operation, was the rumor.

Q. Correct. I just didn't know if you were personally involved.

A. I was not.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Were you there when Nassau County requested assistance on an officer-involved shooting, and it was denied?

A. Actually, yes. I believe I was.

Q. Do we know why?

A. I don't know why.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. But that denial would have come from the sheriff?

A. It come from the sheriff. No cop, working cop, like even coming up through the ranks, when they had something like that, would deny that type of assistance. Those are the things -- when things were choked, it chokes to the point where it doesn't -- it doesn't run efficiently.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. And for the record, let me correct that. It may have been an officer-involved shooting, but actually the deputy had been shot; and they had a subject cornered, and they were asking for assistance from SWAT teams.

A. Correct. Correct.

MR. KRAMER: Anything further on what he's said so far?

THE WITNESS: One of the things that -- you know, you talk about assets. The SWAT team is one of them, but more frequently the helicopter is something that -- you know, we have an aviation unit. And folks in Putnam County and Columbia County, you know, they rely on that air support. You know, one helicopter there, arguably, is equivalent of 15 or 20 units on the ground.

Those requests were frequently -- we ran into problems where there would be a pursuit at, say, 2:00 in the morning, and they're calling and asking for our assistance. And then you have to make the decision, do I say, okay, go ahead and go, and then get chewed out the next day because they didn't -- because that sheriff didn't call our sheriff at 2:00 in the morning?

I mean, that's the type of slow-down we're talking about, to the point where you might as well not even send them at that point. It's almost rendering it useless.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. And it's 2:00 in the morning. Is Sheriff Watson available to answer another sheriff's call?

A. I don't know. I never called him at 2:00 in the morning.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. You mentioned earlier about the funding. If I recall from my days with RDS --

A. RDSTF, yeah, that's it.

Q. Regional Domestic Security Task Force. That's where a lot of Alachua's money came from. Or I say a lot. That's basically --

A. A significant amount of money.

Q. They were given a lot of money to create those regional units in case of -- for the region.

A. Right.

Q. And that was the understanding, that the money is given to you, but you need to be available if the region needs you.

A. The BearCat. I believe the BearCat was portioned with RDSTF money; or a portion of it was purchased with it, and you know how expensive those are.

The bomb team is another RDSTF, you know.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Let me ask you this. Are these requests reduced in any way to writing, or would there be any evidence of the request existing at all?

A. Usually -- from my recollection, usually when something breaks off, it's a phone call saying, "We need SWAT."

Q. Let me ask you this --

A. There could be a Teletype follow-up, though. I don't know.

Q. Would there be text messaging? Like, for instance, might you send a text message to the sheriff "We've received request from Scott for SWAT in Union County"?

A. Oh, I'm sure, but I never really directly contacted the sheriff. That was the undersheriff. I would call him, the undersheriff. I mean, he would answer his phone.

Q. But if -- you would agree those communications would be records at the agency?

A. There should be records at the agency.

Q. But if those records were not being -- they may not be preserved.

A. They should be preserved. Because there was a point in time when we all got iPhones -- you get into the debate of the iPhone or the Android, right? The iPhone is a blue, which is MMS; and then you have the Android, which is an SMS message. From my understanding, the SMS messages are recorded through your carrier, but the MMS are not because they're run on data and not run on cellular.

Q. But if the sheriff didn't allow the recording devices on his phone, there would be no record of those requests being made to the sheriff, correct?

A. I know that the phone that I had had recording because that was all enabled by Scott Shelpman, if my memory serves me correctly.

Q. Understood. Let's move on to the next item that you were concerned that we had missed due to our time constraints.

A. We discussed briefly Michelle Shirfield last time. She had posted some items on Facebook that could be seen by some folks as slanted to one racial side, if you will. That was brought to Watson's attention, and our understanding is that she was given a corrective counseling for that. Nobody ever saw the corrective counseling.

And then the order was basically given, you know, for Facebook or for violations of social media, that was -- that was the -- what should be done, give them a corrective counseling and go through progressive discipline.

And I think there's a couple open cases right now -- or I don't know if they're open or closed.

So Frank Williams and Kevin Davis are under investigation, or open at the moment, for things that I think were far less controversial, and they were placed on admin suspension and been sitting at the house for months.

Q. And let me ask you because I don't know the answer to this. This individual -- and you said her name was Michelle?

A. Shirfield.

Q. Shirfield? Is she African American?

A. She is.

Q. And the posts that you're referencing, they were -- I don't know the posts. Were they racially inappropriate?

A. It was more of a supporting a racial position, and I believe Kevin Davis could speak more on that.

Q. Is it your understanding that a formal complaint was made either to her supervisor or to the office of professional standards so that discipline should have been initiated?

A. I told the sheriff directly about the violation, and Bobby Stafford told the sheriff directly about the violation.

Q. But as far as I understand -- and my understanding of discipline is developing -- is that the way the discipline would be initiated, it would be either through the office of professional standards or through her supervisor.

A. Correct.

Q. So you gave that information to the sheriff?

A. Correct.

Q. And your understanding is that no discipline was initiated; or if there was any discipline, it was informal in the form of a corrective counseling?

A. It was informal in the form of a corrective counseling, but nobody seen that. I'm sure if you pull her file you would either see a corrective counseling or not see a corrective counseling, but she reported directly to the sheriff.

Q. When someone receives corrective counseling, is it discipline?

A. It's considered informal discipline.

Q. But it should remain in the employee file for one year?

A. That's correct. Oftentimes it's not removed. You have to go back in there and say, hey, that needs to come out.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. Do you know if Kevin Davis made a complaint about that to OPS or through the sheriff suite?

A. I don't think so because he had already known that it was brought to the attention of the sheriff and Bobby Stafford.

Q. Do you know about any complaint that Kevin Davis took to OPS?

A. I know he made a complaint. I don't remember what it surrounded; but I do remember him taking a complaint, and it was basically like disregarded.

Q. If somebody takes a complaint to OPS, should a case number be drawn?

A. Oh, absolutely, or they say this is really not -- there's a list of standards that OPS will investigate these certain things or as directed by the sheriff.

So they'll look at it, and they'll say we'll take and we're going to pull a case number, or they'll say we're going to defer it back to the division commander and let the employee supervisor handle it.

MR. KRAMER: Any other questions on that particular issue?

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Thank you for the clarification. Was there anything else?

A. Did we discuss the bargaining process with the re-openers and the unfair labor practice?

Q. You did. You informed us that one of the reasons why you left the sheriff's office was that you advised them, essentially, that what they were doing was in violation of the National Labor Standards Act.

A. Oh, that's right. I gave you the form. Okay.

So I gave the set of text messages last time between the undersheriff and I.

Q. Yes.

A. The sergeants and lieutenants ratified their contract. The deputies did not ratify their contract. And there was an extended period of time; I don't recall the exact settlement dates, maybe July, August the following year. So we're talking about ten, eleven months later that ultimately we were going to go to a hearing at the sheriff's office.

And right before that began and the sheriff was coming to sit down and testify, if my memory serves me correctly, he wanted to have a discussion. And then that was ultimately settled, and a substantial check was written for attorney's fees. You may want to pull a copy of that.

Q. Who was the attorney that would have received the fees?

A. It would be the PBA.

Q. Would it be the PBA itself, or would it be paid directly to a particular attorney?

MS. WEBSTER: Do you want me to answer?

MR. KRAMER: No, you can tell him.

THE WITNESS: The check was written to the PBA.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. For the attorney's fees?

A. For the attorney's fees.

Q. Incurred because of the actions that you've already described in your previous testimony where the sheriff was essentially acting in violation of the National Labor Standards Act of essentially just refusing to negotiate in good faith.

A. That is correct. And that surrounded the take-home cars, which I believe we talked about last time.

Q. Correct.

A. All those things wrapped up.

Q. He withdrew all the articles. That's the phraseology you used.

A. Everything was TA'd. We were getting ready to go to a vote on Thursday and Friday. On Monday, October 18th, I got a call that he withdrew all the articles.

I said, "Wait a minute. We know this vote is coming. We can't do this."

I brought it to his attention, and the sheriff made the unilateral decision to pull that. I said, "You can't do that. You're going to refuse to sign a contract after it's already been agreed upon."

And in his text messages, which I presented to you last time, I was told that my interpretation was not consistent with the decision of the sheriff.

MR. KRAMER: Anything else?

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Next.

A. We talked about the SWAT rifles.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Where are those rifles now, Major?

A. So those rifles were not given to the employee personally. They were issued to the employee that won them with the understanding that when they retire they will be able to keep them. That was the decision that was made, if my memory serves me correctly; but that's probably not in writing anywhere, I promise you that, because nothing hardly ever gets reduced to writing.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Well, they wouldn't have gone to the inventory? Doesn't every officer have an inventory?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. And if they're not on the inventory, and they're in the officer's possession --

A. No, they're issued to the officer. They're going to be on the inventory.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. They were taken into the sheriff's office inventory and then issued to the officer that won it.

A. That's correct.

Did I touch on the fact that Watson will make a decision regardless whether it's against policy or procedure?

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. I think in general that was clear, but are there specific instances that you can reference that you didn't reference last time?

A. No. I just want to make sure I hit that --

Q. You did.

A. It's so frequent, though, that --

Q. What is the effect on the agency when the sheriff doesn't follow the agency's own policy?

A. Well, what it does is, it sets the tone of the only consistency is inconsistency, right? And when the sheriff isn't following his own policies and procedures, what message is that sending down to the troops?

It sends a horrible message down saying I don't have to follow policy and procedure, but I'm going to hold you to it; and when you aren't held to it, when you violate that, I'm going to write you up.

Q. Would it also lead people to the conclusion that -- wouldn't it also lead to the natural conclusion that if you follow a policy, that the sheriff might still discipline you or you might meet criticism or demotion or job problems because you followed policy that the sheriff no longer wants to have be the policy?

A. It's almost as if you're expected to think like him. And if it is any perceived disrespect or embarrassment, you're going to be talked to about it, if not hit with some sort of discipline.

We just had a recent case, the Glen Stanley

internal investigation, which is closed -- which I suggest you pull a copy of that -- where the sheriff goes outside the disciplinary matrix.

We have a matrix that says this is Level Two, Level Three, Level Four or Five, and this is -- you know, you got a Level Two, you get this many points. This many points is from A to B, and he'll just add C in there.

Q. And in this particular investigation was it to the officer's detriment?

A. Yes.

Q. Is this recourse for the officer under those circumstances? Can the officer appeal that decision? Do they have -- do they enforce the matrix as it exists, or are they simply subject to the sheriff's rulings?

A. Only if they meet the standards set forth in the sheriff's board, which is greater than a two-day suspension. In this case it was one-day suspension, but they put the guy on 12 months of disciplinary probation. And I believe, if you go back and you look at what a Level Three violation is, 12 months of disciplinary probation is not allowed.

And then what you do when you put somebody on disciplinary probation is, the next time they wear the wrong color socks or doing something that's in violation, then they're not eligible for a career service board.

It's almost like you're setting up them for the next violation, to render them ineffective in a career service board.

Q. And because it's a one-day suspension, it's not appealable?

A. Correct.

We touched on changing past practice without really any discussion with anyone.

Q. Correct. Yes.

A. We touched on Watson and Decoursey routinely holding paperwork and not signing it, essentially neglecting the duties of moving the institution along.

And we -- I know we discussed not reducing things to writing, and we discussed the staffing shortages. So I think that kind of cleans up what I can remember from the last one.

Q. Was there anything additional in response to the question, are you aware of anything immoral, unethical, or illegal, that occurred in the sheriff's office while you were there --

A. Well --

Q. -- that we didn't cover last time?

A. I think that's where we're going to move in to the next section.

Q. Okay.

A. So the sheriff is a steward of the taxpayer's money. Would you agree with that?

Q. Agreed.

A. When he came into office, there were two vehicles that were provided that were left by Darnell and Huckstep. They were not happy with those vehicles even though they were functioning vehicles, and they immediately purchased two black Tahoes; and they were high-end Tahoes to the tune of in the mid 70s. And then, of course, all the equipment and everything had to go in on top of that, so you're talking probably upwards of 90-plus thousand dollars just because they wanted new vehicles. That was kind of like the first thing. Everybody kind of questioned that.

And then he had the badges removed from them that say like "High Country" to make it look like it wasn't, you know, an expensive vehicle as it was, but everybody knew what time of day it was. They saw the badges on there. Everybody knew what was going on. You could see it.

So that was kind of, in my opinion, something that the fleet department should have set back and assessed and advised the sheriff, "Hey, if we want new vehicles, this is where our budget is. This is how much money we have left. If we make this purchase, then we can't purchase these four cars instead of these two Tahoes."

That didn't happen. He immediately ordered the vehicle. I don't think they came off state contract. I think they got one at the local Chevrolet dealership. Or I don't know where they got them form; you'd have to pull that. One was 74. The other one was 77 or somewhere in there. They were both in the mid 70s. So that was one thing that kind of came up.

So there were some Nissans that were purchased, and I believe they were for the drug task force or somebody, I think, after I had left. And there was an allegation they were purchased from Gainesville Nissan, and his son is one of the sales managers at Gainesville Nissan.

Q. Those type of contract purchases would be normally not done through Gainesville Nissan? They'd be done through state contract?

A. Generally, yes, unless there is a specific reason. Like, I know Darnell, when we purchased Harleys, the state contract price was, say -- I'm just throwing a number out there -- 17,000, but Gainesville

Harley said, hey, we'll sell them to you for 15.5. The sheriff felt we should keep our money local, and she was actually saving money and was being a good steward of the taxpayers' money and purchased the Harleys there.

But as far as going outside of that, the only thing I know of going outside was that some vehicles were purchased from Southeast Car Agency, especially when it came to things like the trucks for the aviation unit, where we could get something that was used; we didn't buy them new. They weren't new vehicles. They were used vehicles.

But there was some allegations that the Nissans came purchased from his son; and I don't have any evidence to substantiate that, but you could certainly run that down.

One of the tasks that I was given fairly early on was -- the office of professional standards was housed within the main sheriff's office at 2621 Southeast Hawthorne Road. And the office of professional standards has a door that goes right into the sheriff's suite, and that was so that the captain of OPS could go in and confer with the sheriff because the captain was direct report to the sheriff. It had been set like that since I've been there. That was always OPS. Some years prior to that, it was at the jail.

He had me -- he directed me to have OPS relocated back to the office -- the department of the jail, and he then commanded those offices for himself and had them remodeled where he made a rather large office for himself and spent a significant amount of money remodeling that office and then purchased some furniture to fill that office.

Q. Was the furniture purchased off of state contract?

A. I was told it was purchased offline. He went online and bought it because he got a better deal. To what that was, what that P.O. looked like, I have no idea.

Q. Would that be unusual?

A. That would be unusual.

Q. Outside the standard procedures of the sheriff's office to purchase furniture?

A. Correct, because every time we've purchased furniture -- like we purchased tables like these, chairs like these that sit in the squad room that I'm sure you've been to. All those were purchased through a vendor that we've got. And every time we've had to purchase something, A and B has to come to us with a book like this and said, here's what's available. This is what we can purchase. So to purchase furniture outside that realm, to my knowledge, had never been done.

Q. Okay.

A. There was a lot of controversy surrounding expenditures plastering his name on the building.

Q. Where are those?

A. On one occasion it didn't look right, and he bought it again.

Okay. You're aware of it. We'll move on.

On the back of everybody's vest said "sheriff" just like the cars say "sheriff" on it. It doesn't mean that you are the sheriff. It just indicates like police, sheriff. All those were ordered to be removed and replaced with deputies.

Q. Was it on the cars as well as the uniforms?

A. It was not on the cars. It was just on the uniforms.

Q. Did anybody -- with regard to this, did anybody confer or look at the Florida Statutes to ensure that the officers would be properly marked for the purposes of fleeing or attempting to elude or resisting arrest with or without violence, to ensure that the standards that are set forth in the statutes would be met?

A. I brought that specific statute that you're referring to to the attention of the undersheriff and said, "There's really no reason for this. It doesn't designate them as the sheriff, but, you know, it's for the purposes of authority."

And the response was, "There's only one sheriff, and that's the guy that signs in green ink. Everybody else is a deputy," and that was the reason for the switch.

But again, you have whatever those patches were, ten, eight, twelve dollars times how many, 300 patches. Again, it's just another tick of expenditures that didn't need to happen.

Q. Understood.

A. The sheriff and the undersheriff has continued to disregard Florida Statute 112 on numerous occasions, which obviously stemmed from the lawsuits that are out there pending.

Q. Do you have any information to indicate whether their disregard of 112 procedures and rights that are contained in Florida Statute 112 are based upon ignorance, that they don't understand them? Or is it based on an intentional act that they don't care to provide those rights and meet their responsibilities?

A. Personally, I believe they don't care.

Q. So at the time these violations have occurred, are the rights of the officers and responsibilities of the agency being brought to the attention of the individuals who are doing this and being told we don't care?

A. My understanding was 112 violation was raised; and then when the interview was stopped, that individual was charged with insubordination. And 112 clearly says that that can't happen.

Q. Which officer was charged with insubordination because they refused to be interviewed?

A. I believe it was Frank Williams, but I would have to go back and look. I'd have to do some additional research on that.

Q. I may need you to follow up on that if you can identify any particular officer who was -- I'm saying charged, but that's probably not the right word -- was given -- an OPS investigation was instituted for insubordination or insubordination was added to the current charged violations?

A. I believe if you pull the Glen Stanley case, and you pull a recording of the Loudermill that went along with the Glen Stanley case, the general counsel -- essentially, the argument was being made that truthfulness did not occur, that the officer actually -- it was alleged that the officer did not -- and I don't have first-hand knowledge of it, but from my understanding, is that the officer didn't do something and, in the actual packet, said that they had done it, they had sent an email.

The undersheriff indicated on his recommendation that it was truthfulness, that it didn't occur; and when the disciplinary rep went to make the argument that it was not truthfulness, the general counsel said, "Well, what charge do you think was appropriate?"

So I would encourage you to go back and listen to that audio recording of that Loudermill. In other words, you're going to get charged with something, and we're going to find something to fit.

Q. Okay. Understood.

A. I would encourage you to probably pull his calendar, Watson's calendar, and his gas receipts. On the very early part of his tenure he was there a lot. I know he was there a lot because I was there a lot, and I saw him a lot from very early in the morning, 5:00, 6:00 -- I think we discussed that last time -- until 8:00, 9:00 at night.

It got to the point where we needed the sheriff to approve something or do something, again, because we couldn't approve anything, the sheriff is not here. The sheriff is not here. The sheriff is not here. Where is he? Is he working? Is he not working? It seemed like he was never around.

So I would encourage you to probably pull his calendar for --

Q. What month and years?

A. I would say July '21 and after.

Q. Is there some incident you can point to where his attendance to the office stopped? Was it sudden, or was it gradual?

A. It was gradual. It seemed like he gradually was not there more and more, and he was unavailable, which then just stalemated --

Q. Right, because everything has to go through him.

A. Everything has to go through him, and then everything just slows to a crawl, at best a crawl.

The sheriff's son, Clovis Watson, IV, was the subject of numerous traffic stops and some criminal acts with GPD. This information was forwarded to the sheriff, but he never seemed to rectify it with his son. It continued to happen.

He was stopped a couple of times by our deputies for traffic violations. We did a DUI checkpoint down on South 13th Street where his son was completely irate and completely out of line just coming to pick somebody up that we had dealt with. I called the sheriff and he said, okay, and that was the end of it.

It was like his son could just do whatever he wanted to because his dad was the sheriff. There was no -- it was a very poor reflection on the sheriff, very poor reflection on the sheriff.

We talked about fails to process paperwork.

I think Ed Bennett -- you might want to talk to Ed Bennett about the disapproval of secondary employment at the academy.

Q. With regard to that, are you aware that the academy became short of staff because of the sheriff disapproving secondary employment?

A. I can't swear to that.

Q. We'd have to check with the academy?

A. You'd have to check with the academy. I would imagine it severely impacted it; but to what extent, I can't speculate.

Q. Understood.

A. The sheriff seems to make decisions based on emotion quite a bit rather than, you know, actual facts. The sheriff demoted Mat Yakubsin from lieutenant back to sergeant for essentially liking a Facebook post. Let me back up.

He demoted him, but he ordered me to demote him. So I had to call him and tell him, "Hey, look, you're demoted because you liked a Facebook post."

Q. Was that formal discipline?

A. He was on probation.

Q. So he was already on disciplinarian probation?

A. No, he was on new-hire -- promotional probation.

Q. I see. So he could be demoted back to his prior rank without any discipline occurring?

A. Correct.

Q. And does that cause him to lose pay?

A. It does cause him to lose pay.

Q. How much, roughly?

A. I'd have to go back and look at the scales. I mean, you can make a request for the pay changes in HTE. A minimum of five percent; but Yakubsin was not that tenured of a sergeant, so potentially ten percent more. I don't know the exact numbers on Yakubsin.

Q. And you know the basis for that demotion was liking a Facebook post because you were instructed to tell him why he was being demoted by the sheriff?

A. I was instructed by the sheriff to demote him back to sergeant; and the sheriff had told me that, "He liked that Facebook post, and I'm going to demote him."

Now, keep in mind everybody else that also liked that Facebook post -- it surrounded a lieutenant Facebook post from the jail that was subsequently terminated. Howard, I believe, is his name, received corrective counseling for that, but Yakubsin was demoted.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Did that go through an OPS review?

A. Oh, no.

Q. So there's no documentation on any of it?

A. No.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. Did Yakubsin get corrective counseling?

A. I believe he may have, but he was hit with a demotion and the corrective counseling where everybody else was just hit with the corrective counseling. In other words, I felt as if the demotion was excessive in comparison to what had been handed out to everybody else. That's kind of where I was going with that.

We discussed the negligent promotions last time.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. While we're on that topic --

A. Which topic?

Q. Negligent promotion. You mentioned Cleveland Cox. Talk about your knowledge about what happened when he tried out for the SWAT team?

A. He tried out for the SWAT team. He wasn't recommended, and then he was appointed by recommendation of the undersheriff.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Also, what the consequence was to the person who did not want him appointed to the SWAT team.

A. Oh, he adamantly opposed it. He was -- I can't remember if it was Josh Crews or Rich Howell at the time.

Q. Josh Crews.

A. Josh Crews absolutely did not want him to the point he wanted to go meet with the undersheriff, and I think he did meet with undersheriff about it; but the decision was made that he did not get his number one and number two picks, and he got Cleveland Cox. And Cleveland Cox was almost promoted at the recommendation of the sheriff.

Q. What happened with Josh Crews with his relationship with the SWAT team after he didn't want Cleveland Cox on there?

A. I'd have to go back and scroll and think about the timeline, but I can tell you, if you're referring to his removal from the SWAT team, his removal from the SWAT team, I do not believe, was tied to that incident.

We had a SWAT call-out in Monteoca, and the sheriff and undersheriff were there. And Josh Crews was insubordinate to me; and the sheriff found out about it, and the sheriff removed him from the SWAT team based on that incident.

Q. Were those two things occurring closely in time, the Cleveland Cox incident and Monteoca incident?

A. I believe the Cleveland Cox thing was a couple months afterwards. It could have been pretty close. It could have been pretty close.

Q. I don't know the answer, but my understanding is that the delivery of the information that Cleveland Cox would be assigned to the SWAT team and the removal of then lieutenant -- captain, sergeant, I'm not sure --

A. Lieutenant Josh Crews.

Q. -- Lieutenant Crews were delivered at the same time.

A. It may have been. It could have been in close proximity, and I can see how maybe he could correlate that if it was in close proximity, but my knowledge of the incident, it was really based on Lieutenant Crews' insubordination. Because I was ordered by the sheriff to conduct -- to basically put gas on the house with the hopes that the guy would come out, and Josh Crews came over to me and said, "I hope it's not a tactic," and he was rather nasty about it.

I'm not on the SWAT team. I've never been on the SWAT team, and I don't pretend to be on the SWAT team. So when it comes to SWAT-related matters, I would defer to Josh. Josh has got the knowledge. He's been on there a long time, along with his brother. His brother is no longer with us. He's retired. But I had a direct order from the sheriff that this is the way we're going to proceed, and Josh didn't agree with it.

Q. Let me make sure I understand the sheriff is directing a tactic to remove an individual from a home that a SWAT team is doing?

A. To put gas in there, yes.

Q. But is the sheriff qualified to make a decision about a tactic to remove a barricaded subject?

A. In my opinion, no, and that just falls on the back of what I just said. I'm a major. And even when I was a captain over those units, if I called you as my SWAT commander, and you said, "This is what we need to do," I'm going to defer to you. As long as we're not violating policy, we're not violating the law, and we're not creating some additional liability for the sheriff, I'm going to defer to you because that's your area of expertise.

Q. But doesn't it create liability if the sheriff, who is not qualified, is directing a tactic to be used in an extremely dangerous situation?

A. Oh, absolutely. The direction should not have come from the sheriff. The sheriff should have let Josh Crews run the incident, is what it comes down to.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. What was the barricaded subject?

A. There was another individual in the house. I think it was domestic.

Q. So the bad guy wasn't the only one in the house?

A. Correct.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. I guess you're probably the wrong person to ask, but do we put gas in the house when there's more than one person in the house?

A. Generally, no, but I would defer to Josh Crews and let him discuss that incident in greater detail.

Q. And the insubordination that Josh demonstrated during that incident, was he ever a subject of formal discipline? Or was it just we're going to discipline him by removing him from the SWAT team?

A. He got a corrective counseling from me for his insubordination, but then the sheriff removed him as the SWAT team commander.

Q. Did they put gas in the house?

A. I don't remember. That was very early on in the tenure of the administration.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Did the sheriff give a reason why he wanted the gas? Did he have some place to go?

A. Uh-uh. It was clear he was trying to direct the incident where he didn't have the experience to direct the incident.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:
Q. Was the sheriff at the scene?
A. He was, and the undersheriff. They both showed up. And, you know, to be fair, normally the sheriff and the undersheriff, the major does not show up to SWAT teams. You know, normally we're behind the phone somewhere, and we're letting those people run those operations; but that's not the way the sheriff wanted it run.
The captain was there. I was there. Captain Bella Blizzard was there. I was there. Decoursey was there. The sheriff was there. And I think probably Josh felt like he wasn't being allowed to operate under the parameters that he normally operates because his decision-making was being impeded by us.
BY MR. KRAMER:
Q. And that's what lead to his insubordination.
A. Correct.
Q. That's also consistent with what you've previously testified to, that all the decisions are being made by the sheriff to operational and tactical decisions.
A. That is correct.
BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. Were you familiar or did we talk about it last time, about the Cleveland Cox investigation that went through the office of professional standards?

A. I was aware.

Q. Do you know what happened with that eventually, or why it was terminated?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Is there some connection or familial connection between the undersheriff and Cleveland Cox?

A. We speculated that there was, but we -- I don't know of one, but it seemed to be really out of character that he was placed on the SWAT team and he was promoted against the objections of essentially everyone.

Q. Was he also assigned to CID?

A. He was.

Q. Against the objections?

A. He was. It was a pattern existing with Cleveland Cox, but I don't know what the connection is.

MR. KRAMER: I want to talk about time.

We can go off the record.

(An off-the-record discussion was had.)

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. All we were discussing is how much time we have remaining before our other witnesses to need to appear.

A. Eric Hutchison was promoted to the rank of acting lieutenant when he wasn't on the eligibility list. I would suggest you pull the employee profile and the eligibility list. When that was called to the sheriff's attention, that he wasn't eligible for promotion, the sheriff did act and rescinded that; but then here recently Scott Bonafide has been promoted to an active lieutenant, and he's been moved to civil.

As you're aware, civil is a completely different animal than any other part of the sheriff's office. You deal with evicting people and serving papers that can and cannot be served at certain times of day. To my knowledge, Scott has no knowledge of the civil process.

I did mention Rashawn Flanders. I do not have that paperwork that I thought I had.

The last one is Pat Ford Thomas. Michelle Clement was the division manager, and she was removed for seemingly no reason and moved over to the contract monitor at the jail, which she's got zero experience at. She was removed from her role as a division manager, and she was replaced with Pat Ford Thomas.

Pat Ford Thomas is the wife of Dave Thomas,

who, interestingly enough, was one of the very core group of people in Watson's campaign.

Q. We're going to speak with Michelle Clement. We just haven't gotten her scheduled yet.

A. Okay. I have for you a copy of one of the personnel orders that went out, and as you can see, the quantity of moves that were made at one time are significant; and that's not one of them, but the reason why that's significant is because I have this to go along with it, which is completely out of character, which has everybody's picture and where they're going, where you can definitely see folks --

MR. KRAMER: All right. We'll make this an exhibit to your statement.

That's all I have. I'm sure if something else comes up, I may think of something or whatever.

(Exhibit 1 was marked for identification.)

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. One last question I've got. When transfers and things were made, were the positions that they went to, were they resumed made for? Or were persons just told, you're going here, and you're going here?

A. Under the Darnell administration, generally, what would happen would be, an open position announcement would come out: Any interested deputy sheriff that wishes to apply to be a detective, please submit your name to ISIS, which is our internal system. Interviews are conducted, and then somebody would be selected from the list.

Under the Watson administration, that pretty much went out the window. He just made moves willie-nillie as he felt necessary with no rhyme or reason is really the short answer.

MR. KRAMER: Thank you. We may be talking to you further.

Q. Would you agree that under those circumstances where a county was essentially now --

A. Vacant.

Q. -- had no law enforcement available, that time is of the essence?

A. Yeah, it is essential. And I'll follow up with another example.

The two deputies that were shot in Gilchrist County under the Darnell administration. As soon as that happened, everybody started rolling. We rolled the command -- I mean, we had the mobile command bus. We had schedules done to start covering the county, and then we just started notifying the sheriff, "Hey, this is what we're doing. This is how we're taking care of them." It was almost the information was flowing upward rather than flowing downward.

And under the Watson administration it's completely immerse. It's not allowed to happen in that manner. And the folks who may call 911 in Gilchrist County, now that there's no deputies available, they rely on our assistance. And we have the resources to provide to Gilchrist County or to Union County that Union County or Gilchrist County doesn't otherwise have.

MR. KRAMER: All right. Let's go back to things that you may -- unless you wanted to follow up. I'm sorry.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Has he ever denied one of those requests that you know of?

A. Yes.

Q. Which one?

A. There was an incident where University of Florida had called and requested the use of the jail vans. There was something going on at the Reitz Union. I think Darren Baxley had called and requested the jail vans. Don't quote me. I think it was Darren Baxley, deputy chief. Sheriff Watson refused to let them utilize the jail vans.

All that is, is a transport function. It's not like we were sending personnel. You know, we send in a couple of people to operate the vans, but we weren't sending crowd management. We weren't getting involved with their business on campus. They were just simply asking for assistance because, again, the university, you know, they've only got 80 FTEs, you know, somewhere in there. They don't have the capacity to deal with 15 or 20 arrestees at the same time. It would impact them severely to have to deal with that, and we had the resources. I didn't understand what the purpose of withholding a jail van was.

Q. When you say impact severely, would that mean creating an unsafe environment for the remainder of the students and faculty on campus?

A. Potentially. I mean, it depends on how the incident goes. If you got all your guys on the incident tied up with 10-15, or arrestees, if you will, and then they need to focus their attention somewhere else, next thing you know, you divert your attention to the people that need to go. Now you have an unsafe number of officers with the arrestees; or do the officers stay with the arrestees, and now you've neglected this? You have to make a decision.

You've only got so many personnel. The jail van would have been very quick, easy. You bring the jail vans over, put them in the jail vans, pat them down, get them in there, at least hold them there for a few minutes or get them out of there, whatever they decided to do. It was a relatively simple request.

There was some issues surrounding the drug task force, which I'm sure you're aware of, and the sheriff not wanting anyone to operate in the county.

Q. Were you an employee of the sheriff's office at the time that the sheriff directed the removal of all the equipment from the drug task force?

A. No, but my understanding is it was done in the middle of the night under some covert operation, was the rumor.

Q. Correct. I just didn't know if you were personally involved.

A. I was not.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Were you there when Nassau County requested assistance on an officer-involved shooting, and it was denied?

A. Actually, yes. I believe I was.

Q. Do we know why?

A. I don't know why.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. But that denial would have come from the sheriff?

A. It come from the sheriff. No cop, working cop, like even coming up through the ranks, when they had something like that, would deny that type of assistance. Those are the things -- when things were choked, it chokes to the point where it doesn't -- it doesn't run efficiently.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. And for the record, let me correct that. It may have been an officer-involved shooting, but actually the deputy had been shot; and they had a subject cornered, and they were asking for assistance from SWAT teams.

A. Correct. Correct.

MR. KRAMER: Anything further on what he's said so far?

THE WITNESS: One of the things that -- you know, you talk about assets. The SWAT team is one of them, but more frequently the helicopter is something that -- you know, we have an aviation unit. And folks in Putnam County and Columbia County, you know, they rely on that air support. You know, one helicopter there, arguably, is equivalent of 15 or 20 units on the ground.

Those requests were frequently -- we ran into problems where there would be a pursuit at, say, 2:00 in the morning, and they're calling and asking for our assistance. And then you have to make the decision, do I say, okay, go ahead and go, and then get chewed out the next day because they didn't -- because that sheriff didn't call our sheriff at 2:00 in the morning?

I mean, that's the type of slow-down we're talking about, to the point where you might as well not even send them at that point. It's almost rendering it useless.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. And it's 2:00 in the morning. Is Sheriff Watson available to answer another sheriff's call?

A. I don't know. I never called him at 2:00 in the morning.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. You mentioned earlier about the funding. If I recall from my days with RDS --

A. RDSTF, yeah, that's it.

Q. Regional Domestic Security Task Force. That's where a lot of Alachua's money came from. Or I say a lot. That's basically --

A. A significant amount of money.

Q. They were given a lot of money to create those regional units in case of -- for the region.

A. Right.

Q. And that was the understanding, that the money is given to you, but you need to be available if the region needs you.

A. The BearCat. I believe the BearCat was portioned with RDSTF money; or a portion of it was purchased with it, and you know how expensive those are.

The bomb team is another RDSTF, you know.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Let me ask you this. Are these requests reduced in any way to writing, or would there be any evidence of the request existing at all?

A. Usually -- from my recollection, usually when something breaks off, it's a phone call saying, "We need SWAT."

Q. Let me ask you this --

A. There could be a Teletype follow-up, though. I don't know.

Q. Would there be text messaging? Like, for instance, might you send a text message to the sheriff "We've received request from Scott for SWAT in Union County"?

A. Oh, I'm sure, but I never really directly contacted the sheriff. That was the undersheriff. I would call him, the undersheriff. I mean, he would answer his phone.

Q. But if -- you would agree those communications would be records at the agency?

A. There should be records at the agency.

Q. But if those records were not being -- they may not be preserved.

A. They should be preserved. Because there was a point in time when we all got iPhones -- you get into the debate of the iPhone or the Android, right? The iPhone is a blue, which is MMS; and then you have the Android, which is an SMS message. From my understanding, the SMS messages are recorded through your carrier, but the MMS are not because they're run on data and not run on cellular.

Q. But if the sheriff didn't allow the recording devices on his phone, there would be no record of those requests being made to the sheriff, correct?

A. I know that the phone that I had had recording because that was all enabled by Scott Shelpman, if my memory serves me correctly.

Q. Understood. Let's move on to the next item that you were concerned that we had missed due to our time constraints.

A. We discussed briefly Michelle Shirfield last time. She had posted some items on Facebook that could be seen by some folks as slanted to one racial side, if you will. That was brought to Watson's attention, and our understanding is that she was given a corrective counseling for that. Nobody ever saw the corrective counseling.

And then the order was basically given, you know, for Facebook or for violations of social media, that was -- that was the -- what should be done, give them a corrective counseling and go through progressive discipline.

And I think there's a couple open cases right now -- or I don't know if they're open or closed.

So Frank Williams and Kevin Davis are under investigation, or open at the moment, for things that I think were far less controversial, and they were placed on admin suspension and been sitting at the house for months.

Q. And let me ask you because I don't know the answer to this. This individual -- and you said her name was Michelle?

A. Shirfield.

Q. Shirfield? Is she African American?

A. She is.

Q. And the posts that you're referencing, they were -- I don't know the posts. Were they racially inappropriate?

A. It was more of a supporting a racial position, and I believe Kevin Davis could speak more on that.

Q. Is it your understanding that a formal complaint was made either to her supervisor or to the office of professional standards so that discipline should have been initiated?

A. I told the sheriff directly about the violation, and Bobby Stafford told the sheriff directly about the violation.

Q. But as far as I understand -- and my understanding of discipline is developing -- is that the way the discipline would be initiated, it would be either through the office of professional standards or through her supervisor.

A. Correct.

Q. So you gave that information to the sheriff?

A. Correct.

Q. And your understanding is that no discipline was initiated; or if there was any discipline, it was informal in the form of a corrective counseling?

A. It was informal in the form of a corrective counseling, but nobody seen that. I'm sure if you pull her file you would either see a corrective counseling or not see a corrective counseling, but she reported directly to the sheriff.

Q. When someone receives corrective counseling, is it discipline?

A. It's considered informal discipline.

Q. But it should remain in the employee file for one year?

A. That's correct. Oftentimes it's not removed. You have to go back in there and say, hey, that needs to come out.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. Do you know if Kevin Davis made a complaint about that to OPS or through the sheriff suite?

A. I don't think so because he had already known that it was brought to the attention of the sheriff and Bobby Stafford.

Q. Do you know about any complaint that Kevin Davis took to OPS?

A. I know he made a complaint. I don't remember what it surrounded; but I do remember him taking a complaint, and it was basically like disregarded.

Q. If somebody takes a complaint to OPS, should a case number be drawn?

A. Oh, absolutely, or they say this is really not -- there's a list of standards that OPS will investigate these certain things or as directed by the sheriff.

So they'll look at it, and they'll say we'll take and we're going to pull a case number, or they'll say we're going to defer it back to the division commander and let the employee supervisor handle it.

MR. KRAMER: Any other questions on that particular issue?

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Thank you for the clarification. Was there anything else?

A. Did we discuss the bargaining process with the re-openers and the unfair labor practice?

Q. You did. You informed us that one of the reasons why you left the sheriff's office was that you advised them, essentially, that what they were doing was in violation of the National Labor Standards Act.

A. Oh, that's right. I gave you the form. Okay.

So I gave the set of text messages last time between the undersheriff and I.

Q. Yes.

A. The sergeants and lieutenants ratified their contract. The deputies did not ratify their contract. And there was an extended period of time; I don't recall the exact settlement dates, maybe July, August the following year. So we're talking about ten, eleven months later that ultimately we were going to go to a hearing at the sheriff's office.

And right before that began and the sheriff was coming to sit down and testify, if my memory serves me correctly, he wanted to have a discussion. And then that was ultimately settled, and a substantial check was written for attorney's fees. You may want to pull a copy of that.

Q. Who was the attorney that would have received the fees?

A. It would be the PBA.

Q. Would it be the PBA itself, or would it be paid directly to a particular attorney?

MS. WEBSTER: Do you want me to answer?

MR. KRAMER: No, you can tell him.

THE WITNESS: The check was written to the PBA.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. For the attorney's fees?

A. For the attorney's fees.

Q. Incurred because of the actions that you've already described in your previous testimony where the sheriff was essentially acting in violation of the National Labor Standards Act of essentially just refusing to negotiate in good faith.

A. That is correct. And that surrounded the take-home cars, which I believe we talked about last time.

Q. Correct.

A. All those things wrapped up.

Q. He withdrew all the articles. That's the phraseology you used.

A. Everything was TA'd. We were getting ready to go to a vote on Thursday and Friday. On Monday, October 18th, I got a call that he withdrew all the articles.

I said, "Wait a minute. We know this vote is coming. We can't do this."

I brought it to his attention, and the sheriff made the unilateral decision to pull that. I said, "You can't do that. You're going to refuse to sign a contract after it's already been agreed upon."

And in his text messages, which I presented to you last time, I was told that my interpretation was not consistent with the decision of the sheriff.

MR. KRAMER: Anything else?

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Next.

A. We talked about the SWAT rifles.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Where are those rifles now, Major?

A. So those rifles were not given to the employee personally. They were issued to the employee that won them with the understanding that when they retire they will be able to keep them. That was the decision that was made, if my memory serves me correctly; but that's probably not in writing anywhere, I promise you that, because nothing hardly ever gets reduced to writing.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Well, they wouldn't have gone to the inventory? Doesn't every officer have an inventory?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. And if they're not on the inventory, and they're in the officer's possession --

A. No, they're issued to the officer. They're going to be on the inventory.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. They were taken into the sheriff's office inventory and then issued to the officer that won it.

A. That's correct.

Did I touch on the fact that Watson will make a decision regardless whether it's against policy or procedure?

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. I think in general that was clear, but are there specific instances that you can reference that you didn't reference last time?

A. No. I just want to make sure I hit that --

Q. You did.

A. It's so frequent, though, that --

Q. What is the effect on the agency when the sheriff doesn't follow the agency's own policy?

A. Well, what it does is, it sets the tone of the only consistency is inconsistency, right? And when the sheriff isn't following his own policies and procedures, what message is that sending down to the troops?

It sends a horrible message down saying I don't have to follow policy and procedure, but I'm going to hold you to it; and when you aren't held to it, when you violate that, I'm going to write you up.

Q. Would it also lead people to the conclusion that -- wouldn't it also lead to the natural conclusion that if you follow a policy, that the sheriff might still discipline you or you might meet criticism or demotion or job problems because you followed policy that the sheriff no longer wants to have be the policy?

A. It's almost as if you're expected to think like him. And if it is any perceived disrespect or embarrassment, you're going to be talked to about it, if not hit with some sort of discipline.

We just had a recent case, the Glen Stanley

internal investigation, which is closed -- which I suggest you pull a copy of that -- where the sheriff goes outside the disciplinary matrix.

We have a matrix that says this is Level Two, Level Three, Level Four or Five, and this is -- you know, you got a Level Two, you get this many points. This many points is from A to B, and he'll just add C in there.

Q. And in this particular investigation was it to the officer's detriment?

A. Yes.

Q. Is this recourse for the officer under those circumstances? Can the officer appeal that decision? Do they have -- do they enforce the matrix as it exists, or are they simply subject to the sheriff's rulings?

A. Only if they meet the standards set forth in the sheriff's board, which is greater than a two-day suspension. In this case it was one-day suspension, but they put the guy on 12 months of disciplinary probation. And I believe, if you go back and you look at what a Level Three violation is, 12 months of disciplinary probation is not allowed.

And then what you do when you put somebody on disciplinary probation is, the next time they wear the wrong color socks or doing something that's in violation, then they're not eligible for a career service board.

It's almost like you're setting up them for the next violation, to render them ineffective in a career service board.

Q. And because it's a one-day suspension, it's not appealable?

A. Correct.

We touched on changing past practice without really any discussion with anyone.

Q. Correct. Yes.

A. We touched on Watson and Decoursey routinely holding paperwork and not signing it, essentially neglecting the duties of moving the institution along.

And we -- I know we discussed not reducing things to writing, and we discussed the staffing shortages. So I think that kind of cleans up what I can remember from the last one.

Q. Was there anything additional in response to the question, are you aware of anything immoral, unethical, or illegal, that occurred in the sheriff's office while you were there --

A. Well --

Q. -- that we didn't cover last time?

A. I think that's where we're going to move in to the next section.

Q. Okay.

A. So the sheriff is a steward of the taxpayer's money. Would you agree with that?

Q. Agreed.

A. When he came into office, there were two vehicles that were provided that were left by Darnell and Huckstep. They were not happy with those vehicles even though they were functioning vehicles, and they immediately purchased two black Tahoes; and they were high-end Tahoes to the tune of in the mid 70s. And then, of course, all the equipment and everything had to go in on top of that, so you're talking probably upwards of 90-plus thousand dollars just because they wanted new vehicles. That was kind of like the first thing. Everybody kind of questioned that.

And then he had the badges removed from them that say like "High Country" to make it look like it wasn't, you know, an expensive vehicle as it was, but everybody knew what time of day it was. They saw the badges on there. Everybody knew what was going on. You could see it.

So that was kind of, in my opinion, something that the fleet department should have set back and assessed and advised the sheriff, "Hey, if we want new vehicles, this is where our budget is. This is how much money we have left. If we make this purchase, then we can't purchase these four cars instead of these two Tahoes."

That didn't happen. He immediately ordered the vehicle. I don't think they came off state contract. I think they got one at the local Chevrolet dealership. Or I don't know where they got them form; you'd have to pull that. One was 74. The other one was 77 or somewhere in there. They were both in the mid 70s. So that was one thing that kind of came up.

So there were some Nissans that were purchased, and I believe they were for the drug task force or somebody, I think, after I had left. And there was an allegation they were purchased from Gainesville Nissan, and his son is one of the sales managers at Gainesville Nissan.

Q. Those type of contract purchases would be normally not done through Gainesville Nissan? They'd be done through state contract?

A. Generally, yes, unless there is a specific reason. Like, I know Darnell, when we purchased Harleys, the state contract price was, say -- I'm just throwing a number out there -- 17,000, but Gainesville

Harley said, hey, we'll sell them to you for 15.5. The sheriff felt we should keep our money local, and she was actually saving money and was being a good steward of the taxpayers' money and purchased the Harleys there.

But as far as going outside of that, the only thing I know of going outside was that some vehicles were purchased from Southeast Car Agency, especially when it came to things like the trucks for the aviation unit, where we could get something that was used; we didn't buy them new. They weren't new vehicles. They were used vehicles.

But there was some allegations that the Nissans came purchased from his son; and I don't have any evidence to substantiate that, but you could certainly run that down.

One of the tasks that I was given fairly early on was -- the office of professional standards was housed within the main sheriff's office at 2621 Southeast Hawthorne Road. And the office of professional standards has a door that goes right into the sheriff's suite, and that was so that the captain of OPS could go in and confer with the sheriff because the captain was direct report to the sheriff. It had been set like that since I've been there. That was always OPS. Some years prior to that, it was at the jail.

He had me -- he directed me to have OPS relocated back to the office -- the department of the jail, and he then commanded those offices for himself and had them remodeled where he made a rather large office for himself and spent a significant amount of money remodeling that office and then purchased some furniture to fill that office.

Q. Was the furniture purchased off of state contract?

A. I was told it was purchased offline. He went online and bought it because he got a better deal. To what that was, what that P.O. looked like, I have no idea.

Q. Would that be unusual?

A. That would be unusual.

Q. Outside the standard procedures of the sheriff's office to purchase furniture?

A. Correct, because every time we've purchased furniture -- like we purchased tables like these, chairs like these that sit in the squad room that I'm sure you've been to. All those were purchased through a vendor that we've got. And every time we've had to purchase something, A and B has to come to us with a book like this and said, here's what's available. This is what we can purchase. So to purchase furniture outside that realm, to my knowledge, had never been done.

Q. Okay.

A. There was a lot of controversy surrounding expenditures plastering his name on the building.

Q. Where are those?

A. On one occasion it didn't look right, and he bought it again.

Okay. You're aware of it. We'll move on.

On the back of everybody's vest said "sheriff" just like the cars say "sheriff" on it. It doesn't mean that you are the sheriff. It just indicates like police, sheriff. All those were ordered to be removed and replaced with deputies.

Q. Was it on the cars as well as the uniforms?

A. It was not on the cars. It was just on the uniforms.

Q. Did anybody -- with regard to this, did anybody confer or look at the Florida Statutes to ensure that the officers would be properly marked for the purposes of fleeing or attempting to elude or resisting arrest with or without violence, to ensure that the standards that are set forth in the statutes would be met?

A. I brought that specific statute that you're referring to to the attention of the undersheriff and said, "There's really no reason for this. It doesn't designate them as the sheriff, but, you know, it's for the purposes of authority."

And the response was, "There's only one sheriff, and that's the guy that signs in green ink. Everybody else is a deputy," and that was the reason for the switch.

But again, you have whatever those patches were, ten, eight, twelve dollars times how many, 300 patches. Again, it's just another tick of expenditures that didn't need to happen.

Q. Understood.

A. The sheriff and the undersheriff has continued to disregard Florida Statute 112 on numerous occasions, which obviously stemmed from the lawsuits that are out there pending.

Q. Do you have any information to indicate whether their disregard of 112 procedures and rights that are contained in Florida Statute 112 are based upon ignorance, that they don't understand them? Or is it based on an intentional act that they don't care to provide those rights and meet their responsibilities?

A. Personally, I believe they don't care.

Q. So at the time these violations have occurred, are the rights of the officers and responsibilities of the agency being brought to the attention of the individuals who are doing this and being told we don't care?

A. My understanding was 112 violation was raised; and then when the interview was stopped, that individual was charged with insubordination. And 112 clearly says that that can't happen.

Q. Which officer was charged with insubordination because they refused to be interviewed?

A. I believe it was Frank Williams, but I would have to go back and look. I'd have to do some additional research on that.

Q. I may need you to follow up on that if you can identify any particular officer who was -- I'm saying charged, but that's probably not the right word -- was given -- an OPS investigation was instituted for insubordination or insubordination was added to the current charged violations?

A. I believe if you pull the Glen Stanley case, and you pull a recording of the Loudermill that went along with the Glen Stanley case, the general counsel -- essentially, the argument was being made that truthfulness did not occur, that the officer actually -- it was alleged that the officer did not -- and I don't have first-hand knowledge of it, but from my understanding, is that the officer didn't do something and, in the actual packet, said that they had done it, they had sent an email.

The undersheriff indicated on his recommendation that it was truthfulness, that it didn't occur; and when the disciplinary rep went to make the argument that it was not truthfulness, the general counsel said, "Well, what charge do you think was appropriate?"

So I would encourage you to go back and listen to that audio recording of that Loudermill. In other words, you're going to get charged with something, and we're going to find something to fit.

Q. Okay. Understood.

A. I would encourage you to probably pull his calendar, Watson's calendar, and his gas receipts. On the very early part of his tenure he was there a lot. I know he was there a lot because I was there a lot, and I saw him a lot from very early in the morning, 5:00, 6:00 -- I think we discussed that last time -- until 8:00, 9:00 at night.

It got to the point where we needed the sheriff to approve something or do something, again, because we couldn't approve anything, the sheriff is not here. The sheriff is not here. The sheriff is not here. Where is he? Is he working? Is he not working? It seemed like he was never around.

So I would encourage you to probably pull his calendar for --

Q. What month and years?

A. I would say July '21 and after.

Q. Is there some incident you can point to where his attendance to the office stopped? Was it sudden, or was it gradual?

A. It was gradual. It seemed like he gradually was not there more and more, and he was unavailable, which then just stalemated --

Q. Right, because everything has to go through him.

A. Everything has to go through him, and then everything just slows to a crawl, at best a crawl.

The sheriff's son, Clovis Watson, IV, was the subject of numerous traffic stops and some criminal acts with GPD. This information was forwarded to the sheriff, but he never seemed to rectify it with his son. It continued to happen.

He was stopped a couple of times by our deputies for traffic violations. We did a DUI checkpoint down on South 13th Street where his son was completely irate and completely out of line just coming to pick somebody up that we had dealt with. I called the sheriff and he said, okay, and that was the end of it.

It was like his son could just do whatever he wanted to because his dad was the sheriff. There was no -- it was a very poor reflection on the sheriff, very poor reflection on the sheriff.

We talked about fails to process paperwork.

I think Ed Bennett -- you might want to talk to Ed Bennett about the disapproval of secondary employment at the academy.

Q. With regard to that, are you aware that the academy became short of staff because of the sheriff disapproving secondary employment?

A. I can't swear to that.

Q. We'd have to check with the academy?

A. You'd have to check with the academy. I would imagine it severely impacted it; but to what extent, I can't speculate.

Q. Understood.

A. The sheriff seems to make decisions based on emotion quite a bit rather than, you know, actual facts. The sheriff demoted Mat Yakubsin from lieutenant back to sergeant for essentially liking a Facebook post. Let me back up.

He demoted him, but he ordered me to demote him. So I had to call him and tell him, "Hey, look, you're demoted because you liked a Facebook post."

Q. Was that formal discipline?

A. He was on probation.

Q. So he was already on disciplinarian probation?

A. No, he was on new-hire -- promotional probation.

Q. I see. So he could be demoted back to his prior rank without any discipline occurring?

A. Correct.

Q. And does that cause him to lose pay?

A. It does cause him to lose pay.

Q. How much, roughly?

A. I'd have to go back and look at the scales. I mean, you can make a request for the pay changes in HTE. A minimum of five percent; but Yakubsin was not that tenured of a sergeant, so potentially ten percent more. I don't know the exact numbers on Yakubsin.

Q. And you know the basis for that demotion was liking a Facebook post because you were instructed to tell him why he was being demoted by the sheriff?

A. I was instructed by the sheriff to demote him back to sergeant; and the sheriff had told me that, "He liked that Facebook post, and I'm going to demote him."

Now, keep in mind everybody else that also liked that Facebook post -- it surrounded a lieutenant Facebook post from the jail that was subsequently terminated. Howard, I believe, is his name, received corrective counseling for that, but Yakubsin was demoted.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Did that go through an OPS review?

A. Oh, no.

Q. So there's no documentation on any of it?

A. No.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. Did Yakubsin get corrective counseling?

A. I believe he may have, but he was hit with a demotion and the corrective counseling where everybody else was just hit with the corrective counseling. In other words, I felt as if the demotion was excessive in comparison to what had been handed out to everybody else. That's kind of where I was going with that.

We discussed the negligent promotions last time.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. While we're on that topic --

A. Which topic?

Q. Negligent promotion. You mentioned Cleveland Cox. Talk about your knowledge about what happened when he tried out for the SWAT team?

A. He tried out for the SWAT team. He wasn't recommended, and then he was appointed by recommendation of the undersheriff.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Also, what the consequence was to the person who did not want him appointed to the SWAT team.

A. Oh, he adamantly opposed it. He was -- I can't remember if it was Josh Crews or Rich Howell at the time.

Q. Josh Crews.

A. Josh Crews absolutely did not want him to the point he wanted to go meet with the undersheriff, and I think he did meet with undersheriff about it; but the decision was made that he did not get his number one and number two picks, and he got Cleveland Cox. And Cleveland Cox was almost promoted at the recommendation of the sheriff.

Q. What happened with Josh Crews with his relationship with the SWAT team after he didn't want Cleveland Cox on there?

A. I'd have to go back and scroll and think about the timeline, but I can tell you, if you're referring to his removal from the SWAT team, his removal from the SWAT team, I do not believe, was tied to that incident.

We had a SWAT call-out in Monteoca, and the sheriff and undersheriff were there. And Josh Crews was insubordinate to me; and the sheriff found out about it, and the sheriff removed him from the SWAT team based on that incident.

Q. Were those two things occurring closely in time, the Cleveland Cox incident and Monteoca incident?

A. I believe the Cleveland Cox thing was a couple months afterwards. It could have been pretty close. It could have been pretty close.

Q. I don't know the answer, but my understanding is that the delivery of the information that Cleveland Cox would be assigned to the SWAT team and the removal of then lieutenant -- captain, sergeant, I'm not sure --

A. Lieutenant Josh Crews.

Q. -- Lieutenant Crews were delivered at the same time.

A. It may have been. It could have been in close proximity, and I can see how maybe he could correlate that if it was in close proximity, but my knowledge of the incident, it was really based on Lieutenant Crews' insubordination. Because I was ordered by the sheriff to conduct -- to basically put gas on the house with the hopes that the guy would come out, and Josh Crews came over to me and said, "I hope it's not a tactic," and he was rather nasty about it.

I'm not on the SWAT team. I've never been on the SWAT team, and I don't pretend to be on the SWAT team. So when it comes to SWAT-related matters, I would defer to Josh. Josh has got the knowledge. He's been on there a long time, along with his brother. His brother is no longer with us. He's retired. But I had a direct order from the sheriff that this is the way we're going to proceed, and Josh didn't agree with it.

Q. Let me make sure I understand the sheriff is directing a tactic to remove an individual from a home that a SWAT team is doing?

A. To put gas in there, yes.

Q. But is the sheriff qualified to make a decision about a tactic to remove a barricaded subject?

A. In my opinion, no, and that just falls on the back of what I just said. I'm a major. And even when I was a captain over those units, if I called you as my SWAT commander, and you said, "This is what we need to do," I'm going to defer to you. As long as we're not violating policy, we're not violating the law, and we're not creating some additional liability for the sheriff, I'm going to defer to you because that's your area of expertise.

Q. But doesn't it create liability if the sheriff, who is not qualified, is directing a tactic to be used in an extremely dangerous situation?

A. Oh, absolutely. The direction should not have come from the sheriff. The sheriff should have let Josh Crews run the incident, is what it comes down to.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. What was the barricaded subject?

A. There was another individual in the house. I think it was domestic.

Q. So the bad guy wasn't the only one in the house?

A. Correct.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. I guess you're probably the wrong person to ask, but do we put gas in the house when there's more than one person in the house?

A. Generally, no, but I would defer to Josh Crews and let him discuss that incident in greater detail.

Q. And the insubordination that Josh demonstrated during that incident, was he ever a subject of formal discipline? Or was it just we're going to discipline him by removing him from the SWAT team?

A. He got a corrective counseling from me for his insubordination, but then the sheriff removed him as the SWAT team commander.

Q. Did they put gas in the house?

A. I don't remember. That was very early on in the tenure of the administration.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Did the sheriff give a reason why he wanted the gas? Did he have some place to go?

A. Uh-uh. It was clear he was trying to direct the incident where he didn't have the experience to direct the incident.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:
Q. Was the sheriff at the scene?
A. He was, and the undersheriff. They both showed up. And, you know, to be fair, normally the sheriff and the undersheriff, the major does not show up to SWAT teams. You know, normally we're behind the phone somewhere, and we're letting those people run those operations; but that's not the way the sheriff wanted it run.
The captain was there. I was there. Captain Bella Blizzard was there. I was there. Decoursey was there. The sheriff was there. And I think probably Josh felt like he wasn't being allowed to operate under the parameters that he normally operates because his decision-making was being impeded by us.
BY MR. KRAMER:
Q. And that's what lead to his insubordination.
A. Correct.
Q. That's also consistent with what you've previously testified to, that all the decisions are being made by the sheriff to operational and tactical decisions.
A. That is correct.
BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. Were you familiar or did we talk about it last time, about the Cleveland Cox investigation that went through the office of professional standards?

A. I was aware.

Q. Do you know what happened with that eventually, or why it was terminated?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Is there some connection or familial connection between the undersheriff and Cleveland Cox?

A. We speculated that there was, but we -- I don't know of one, but it seemed to be really out of character that he was placed on the SWAT team and he was promoted against the objections of essentially everyone.

Q. Was he also assigned to CID?

A. He was.

Q. Against the objections?

A. He was. It was a pattern existing with Cleveland Cox, but I don't know what the connection is.

MR. KRAMER: I want to talk about time.

We can go off the record.

(An off-the-record discussion was had.)

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. All we were discussing is how much time we have remaining before our other witnesses to need to appear.

A. Eric Hutchison was promoted to the rank of acting lieutenant when he wasn't on the eligibility list. I would suggest you pull the employee profile and the eligibility list. When that was called to the sheriff's attention, that he wasn't eligible for promotion, the sheriff did act and rescinded that; but then here recently Scott Bonafide has been promoted to an active lieutenant, and he's been moved to civil.

As you're aware, civil is a completely different animal than any other part of the sheriff's office. You deal with evicting people and serving papers that can and cannot be served at certain times of day. To my knowledge, Scott has no knowledge of the civil process.

I did mention Rashawn Flanders. I do not have that paperwork that I thought I had.

The last one is Pat Ford Thomas. Michelle Clement was the division manager, and she was removed for seemingly no reason and moved over to the contract monitor at the jail, which she's got zero experience at. She was removed from her role as a division manager, and she was replaced with Pat Ford Thomas.

Pat Ford Thomas is the wife of Dave Thomas,

who, interestingly enough, was one of the very core group of people in Watson's campaign.

Q. We're going to speak with Michelle Clement. We just haven't gotten her scheduled yet.

A. Okay. I have for you a copy of one of the personnel orders that went out, and as you can see, the quantity of moves that were made at one time are significant; and that's not one of them, but the reason why that's significant is because I have this to go along with it, which is completely out of character, which has everybody's picture and where they're going, where you can definitely see folks --

MR. KRAMER: All right. We'll make this an exhibit to your statement.

That's all I have. I'm sure if something else comes up, I may think of something or whatever.

(Exhibit 1 was marked for identification.)

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. One last question I've got. When transfers and things were made, were the positions that they went to, were they resumed made for? Or were persons just told, you're going here, and you're going here?

A. Under the Darnell administration, generally, what would happen would be, an open position announcement would come out: Any interested deputy sheriff that wishes to apply to be a detective, please submit your name to ISIS, which is our internal system. Interviews are conducted, and then somebody would be selected from the list.

Under the Watson administration, that pretty much went out the window. He just made moves willie-nillie as he felt necessary with no rhyme or reason is really the short answer.

MR. KRAMER: Thank you. We may be talking to you further.

(The witness concluded at 11:20 a.m.)

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Has he ever denied one of those requests that you know of?

A. Yes.

Q. Which one?

A. There was an incident where University of Florida had called and requested the use of the jail vans. There was something going on at the Reitz Union. I think Darren Baxley had called and requested the jail vans. Don't quote me. I think it was Darren Baxley, deputy chief. Sheriff Watson refused to let them utilize the jail vans.

All that is, is a transport function. It's not like we were sending personnel. You know, we send in a couple of people to operate the vans, but we weren't sending crowd management. We weren't getting involved with their business on campus. They were just simply asking for assistance because, again, the university, you know, they've only got 80 FTEs, you know, somewhere in there. They don't have the capacity to deal with 15 or 20 arrestees at the same time. It would impact them severely to have to deal with that, and we had the resources. I didn't understand what the purpose of withholding a jail van was.

Q. When you say impact severely, would that mean creating an unsafe environment for the remainder of the students and faculty on campus?

A. Potentially. I mean, it depends on how the incident goes. If you got all your guys on the incident tied up with 10-15, or arrestees, if you will, and then they need to focus their attention somewhere else, next thing you know, you divert your attention to the people that need to go. Now you have an unsafe number of officers with the arrestees; or do the officers stay with the arrestees, and now you've neglected this? You have to make a decision.

You've only got so many personnel. The jail van would have been very quick, easy. You bring the jail vans over, put them in the jail vans, pat them down, get them in there, at least hold them there for a few minutes or get them out of there, whatever they decided to do. It was a relatively simple request.

There was some issues surrounding the drug task force, which I'm sure you're aware of, and the sheriff not wanting anyone to operate in the county.

Q. Were you an employee of the sheriff's office at the time that the sheriff directed the removal of all the equipment from the drug task force?

A. No, but my understanding is it was done in the middle of the night under some covert operation, was the rumor.

Q. Correct. I just didn't know if you were personally involved.

A. I was not.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Were you there when Nassau County requested assistance on an officer-involved shooting, and it was denied?

A. Actually, yes. I believe I was.

Q. Do we know why?

A. I don't know why.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. But that denial would have come from the sheriff?

A. It come from the sheriff. No cop, working cop, like even coming up through the ranks, when they had something like that, would deny that type of assistance. Those are the things -- when things were choked, it chokes to the point where it doesn't -- it doesn't run efficiently.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. And for the record, let me correct that. It may have been an officer-involved shooting, but actually the deputy had been shot; and they had a subject cornered, and they were asking for assistance from SWAT teams.

A. Correct. Correct.

MR. KRAMER: Anything further on what he's said so far?

THE WITNESS: One of the things that -- you know, you talk about assets. The SWAT team is one of them, but more frequently the helicopter is something that -- you know, we have an aviation unit. And folks in Putnam County and Columbia County, you know, they rely on that air support. You know, one helicopter there, arguably, is equivalent of 15 or 20 units on the ground.

Those requests were frequently -- we ran into problems where there would be a pursuit at, say, 2:00 in the morning, and they're calling and asking for our assistance. And then you have to make the decision, do I say, okay, go ahead and go, and then get chewed out the next day because they didn't -- because that sheriff didn't call our sheriff at 2:00 in the morning?

I mean, that's the type of slow-down we're talking about, to the point where you might as well not even send them at that point. It's almost rendering it useless.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. And it's 2:00 in the morning. Is Sheriff Watson available to answer another sheriff's call?

A. I don't know. I never called him at 2:00 in the morning.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. You mentioned earlier about the funding. If I recall from my days with RDS --

A. RDSTF, yeah, that's it.

Q. Regional Domestic Security Task Force. That's where a lot of Alachua's money came from. Or I say a lot. That's basically --

A. A significant amount of money.

Q. They were given a lot of money to create those regional units in case of -- for the region.

A. Right.

Q. And that was the understanding, that the money is given to you, but you need to be available if the region needs you.

A. The BearCat. I believe the BearCat was portioned with RDSTF money; or a portion of it was purchased with it, and you know how expensive those are.

The bomb team is another RDSTF, you know.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Let me ask you this. Are these requests reduced in any way to writing, or would there be any evidence of the request existing at all?

A. Usually -- from my recollection, usually when something breaks off, it's a phone call saying, "We need SWAT."

Q. Let me ask you this --

A. There could be a Teletype follow-up, though. I don't know.

Q. Would there be text messaging? Like, for instance, might you send a text message to the sheriff "We've received request from Scott for SWAT in Union County"?

A. Oh, I'm sure, but I never really directly contacted the sheriff. That was the undersheriff. I would call him, the undersheriff. I mean, he would answer his phone.

Q. But if -- you would agree those communications would be records at the agency?

A. There should be records at the agency.

Q. But if those records were not being -- they may not be preserved.

A. They should be preserved. Because there was a point in time when we all got iPhones -- you get into the debate of the iPhone or the Android, right? The iPhone is a blue, which is MMS; and then you have the Android, which is an SMS message. From my understanding, the SMS messages are recorded through your carrier, but the MMS are not because they're run on data and not run on cellular.

Q. But if the sheriff didn't allow the recording devices on his phone, there would be no record of those requests being made to the sheriff, correct?

A. I know that the phone that I had had recording because that was all enabled by Scott Shelpman, if my memory serves me correctly.

Q. Understood. Let's move on to the next item that you were concerned that we had missed due to our time constraints.

A. We discussed briefly Michelle Shirfield last time. She had posted some items on Facebook that could be seen by some folks as slanted to one racial side, if you will. That was brought to Watson's attention, and our understanding is that she was given a corrective counseling for that. Nobody ever saw the corrective counseling.

And then the order was basically given, you know, for Facebook or for violations of social media, that was -- that was the -- what should be done, give them a corrective counseling and go through progressive discipline.

And I think there's a couple open cases right now -- or I don't know if they're open or closed.

So Frank Williams and Kevin Davis are under investigation, or open at the moment, for things that I think were far less controversial, and they were placed on admin suspension and been sitting at the house for months.

Q. And let me ask you because I don't know the answer to this. This individual -- and you said her name was Michelle?

A. Shirfield.

Q. Shirfield? Is she African American?

A. She is.

Q. And the posts that you're referencing, they were -- I don't know the posts. Were they racially inappropriate?

A. It was more of a supporting a racial position, and I believe Kevin Davis could speak more on that.

Q. Is it your understanding that a formal complaint was made either to her supervisor or to the office of professional standards so that discipline should have been initiated?

A. I told the sheriff directly about the violation, and Bobby Stafford told the sheriff directly about the violation.

Q. But as far as I understand -- and my understanding of discipline is developing -- is that the way the discipline would be initiated, it would be either through the office of professional standards or through her supervisor.

A. Correct.

Q. So you gave that information to the sheriff?

A. Correct.

Q. And your understanding is that no discipline was initiated; or if there was any discipline, it was informal in the form of a corrective counseling?

A. It was informal in the form of a corrective counseling, but nobody seen that. I'm sure if you pull her file you would either see a corrective counseling or not see a corrective counseling, but she reported directly to the sheriff.

Q. When someone receives corrective counseling, is it discipline?

A. It's considered informal discipline.

Q. But it should remain in the employee file for one year?

A. That's correct. Oftentimes it's not removed. You have to go back in there and say, hey, that needs to come out.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. Do you know if Kevin Davis made a complaint about that to OPS or through the sheriff suite?

A. I don't think so because he had already known that it was brought to the attention of the sheriff and Bobby Stafford.

Q. Do you know about any complaint that Kevin Davis took to OPS?

A. I know he made a complaint. I don't remember what it surrounded; but I do remember him taking a complaint, and it was basically like disregarded.

Q. If somebody takes a complaint to OPS, should a case number be drawn?

A. Oh, absolutely, or they say this is really not -- there's a list of standards that OPS will investigate these certain things or as directed by the sheriff.

So they'll look at it, and they'll say we'll take and we're going to pull a case number, or they'll say we're going to defer it back to the division commander and let the employee supervisor handle it.

MR. KRAMER: Any other questions on that particular issue?

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Thank you for the clarification. Was there anything else?

A. Did we discuss the bargaining process with the re-openers and the unfair labor practice?

Q. You did. You informed us that one of the reasons why you left the sheriff's office was that you advised them, essentially, that what they were doing was in violation of the National Labor Standards Act.

A. Oh, that's right. I gave you the form. Okay.

So I gave the set of text messages last time between the undersheriff and I.

Q. Yes.

A. The sergeants and lieutenants ratified their contract. The deputies did not ratify their contract. And there was an extended period of time; I don't recall the exact settlement dates, maybe July, August the following year. So we're talking about ten, eleven months later that ultimately we were going to go to a hearing at the sheriff's office.

And right before that began and the sheriff was coming to sit down and testify, if my memory serves me correctly, he wanted to have a discussion. And then that was ultimately settled, and a substantial check was written for attorney's fees. You may want to pull a copy of that.

Q. Who was the attorney that would have received the fees?

A. It would be the PBA.

Q. Would it be the PBA itself, or would it be paid directly to a particular attorney?

MS. WEBSTER: Do you want me to answer?

MR. KRAMER: No, you can tell him.

THE WITNESS: The check was written to the PBA.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. For the attorney's fees?

A. For the attorney's fees.

Q. Incurred because of the actions that you've already described in your previous testimony where the sheriff was essentially acting in violation of the National Labor Standards Act of essentially just refusing to negotiate in good faith.

A. That is correct. And that surrounded the take-home cars, which I believe we talked about last time.

Q. Correct.

A. All those things wrapped up.

Q. He withdrew all the articles. That's the phraseology you used.

A. Everything was TA'd. We were getting ready to go to a vote on Thursday and Friday. On Monday, October 18th, I got a call that he withdrew all the articles.

I said, "Wait a minute. We know this vote is coming. We can't do this."

I brought it to his attention, and the sheriff made the unilateral decision to pull that. I said, "You can't do that. You're going to refuse to sign a contract after it's already been agreed upon."

And in his text messages, which I presented to you last time, I was told that my interpretation was not consistent with the decision of the sheriff.

MR. KRAMER: Anything else?

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Next.

A. We talked about the SWAT rifles.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Where are those rifles now, Major?

A. So those rifles were not given to the employee personally. They were issued to the employee that won them with the understanding that when they retire they will be able to keep them. That was the decision that was made, if my memory serves me correctly; but that's probably not in writing anywhere, I promise you that, because nothing hardly ever gets reduced to writing.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Well, they wouldn't have gone to the inventory? Doesn't every officer have an inventory?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. And if they're not on the inventory, and they're in the officer's possession --

A. No, they're issued to the officer. They're going to be on the inventory.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. They were taken into the sheriff's office inventory and then issued to the officer that won it.

A. That's correct.

Did I touch on the fact that Watson will make a decision regardless whether it's against policy or procedure?

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. I think in general that was clear, but are there specific instances that you can reference that you didn't reference last time?

A. No. I just want to make sure I hit that --

Q. You did.

A. It's so frequent, though, that --

Q. What is the effect on the agency when the sheriff doesn't follow the agency's own policy?

A. Well, what it does is, it sets the tone of the only consistency is inconsistency, right? And when the sheriff isn't following his own policies and procedures, what message is that sending down to the troops?

It sends a horrible message down saying I don't have to follow policy and procedure, but I'm going to hold you to it; and when you aren't held to it, when you violate that, I'm going to write you up.

Q. Would it also lead people to the conclusion that -- wouldn't it also lead to the natural conclusion that if you follow a policy, that the sheriff might still discipline you or you might meet criticism or demotion or job problems because you followed policy that the sheriff no longer wants to have be the policy?

A. It's almost as if you're expected to think like him. And if it is any perceived disrespect or embarrassment, you're going to be talked to about it, if not hit with some sort of discipline.

We just had a recent case, the Glen Stanley

internal investigation, which is closed -- which I suggest you pull a copy of that -- where the sheriff goes outside the disciplinary matrix.

We have a matrix that says this is Level Two, Level Three, Level Four or Five, and this is -- you know, you got a Level Two, you get this many points. This many points is from A to B, and he'll just add C in there.

Q. And in this particular investigation was it to the officer's detriment?

A. Yes.

Q. Is this recourse for the officer under those circumstances? Can the officer appeal that decision? Do they have -- do they enforce the matrix as it exists, or are they simply subject to the sheriff's rulings?

A. Only if they meet the standards set forth in the sheriff's board, which is greater than a two-day suspension. In this case it was one-day suspension, but they put the guy on 12 months of disciplinary probation. And I believe, if you go back and you look at what a Level Three violation is, 12 months of disciplinary probation is not allowed.

And then what you do when you put somebody on disciplinary probation is, the next time they wear the wrong color socks or doing something that's in violation, then they're not eligible for a career service board.

It's almost like you're setting up them for the next violation, to render them ineffective in a career service board.

Q. And because it's a one-day suspension, it's not appealable?

A. Correct.

We touched on changing past practice without really any discussion with anyone.

Q. Correct. Yes.

A. We touched on Watson and Decoursey routinely holding paperwork and not signing it, essentially neglecting the duties of moving the institution along.

And we -- I know we discussed not reducing things to writing, and we discussed the staffing shortages. So I think that kind of cleans up what I can remember from the last one.

Q. Was there anything additional in response to the question, are you aware of anything immoral, unethical, or illegal, that occurred in the sheriff's office while you were there --

A. Well --

Q. -- that we didn't cover last time?

A. I think that's where we're going to move in to the next section.

Q. Okay.

A. So the sheriff is a steward of the taxpayer's money. Would you agree with that?

Q. Agreed.

A. When he came into office, there were two vehicles that were provided that were left by Darnell and Huckstep. They were not happy with those vehicles even though they were functioning vehicles, and they immediately purchased two black Tahoes; and they were high-end Tahoes to the tune of in the mid 70s. And then, of course, all the equipment and everything had to go in on top of that, so you're talking probably upwards of 90-plus thousand dollars just because they wanted new vehicles. That was kind of like the first thing. Everybody kind of questioned that.

And then he had the badges removed from them that say like "High Country" to make it look like it wasn't, you know, an expensive vehicle as it was, but everybody knew what time of day it was. They saw the badges on there. Everybody knew what was going on. You could see it.

So that was kind of, in my opinion, something that the fleet department should have set back and assessed and advised the sheriff, "Hey, if we want new vehicles, this is where our budget is. This is how much money we have left. If we make this purchase, then we can't purchase these four cars instead of these two Tahoes."

That didn't happen. He immediately ordered the vehicle. I don't think they came off state contract. I think they got one at the local Chevrolet dealership. Or I don't know where they got them form; you'd have to pull that. One was 74. The other one was 77 or somewhere in there. They were both in the mid 70s. So that was one thing that kind of came up.

So there were some Nissans that were purchased, and I believe they were for the drug task force or somebody, I think, after I had left. And there was an allegation they were purchased from Gainesville Nissan, and his son is one of the sales managers at Gainesville Nissan.

Q. Those type of contract purchases would be normally not done through Gainesville Nissan? They'd be done through state contract?

A. Generally, yes, unless there is a specific reason. Like, I know Darnell, when we purchased Harleys, the state contract price was, say -- I'm just throwing a number out there -- 17,000, but Gainesville

Harley said, hey, we'll sell them to you for 15.5. The sheriff felt we should keep our money local, and she was actually saving money and was being a good steward of the taxpayers' money and purchased the Harleys there.

But as far as going outside of that, the only thing I know of going outside was that some vehicles were purchased from Southeast Car Agency, especially when it came to things like the trucks for the aviation unit, where we could get something that was used; we didn't buy them new. They weren't new vehicles. They were used vehicles.

But there was some allegations that the Nissans came purchased from his son; and I don't have any evidence to substantiate that, but you could certainly run that down.

One of the tasks that I was given fairly early on was -- the office of professional standards was housed within the main sheriff's office at 2621 Southeast Hawthorne Road. And the office of professional standards has a door that goes right into the sheriff's suite, and that was so that the captain of OPS could go in and confer with the sheriff because the captain was direct report to the sheriff. It had been set like that since I've been there. That was always OPS. Some years prior to that, it was at the jail.

He had me -- he directed me to have OPS relocated back to the office -- the department of the jail, and he then commanded those offices for himself and had them remodeled where he made a rather large office for himself and spent a significant amount of money remodeling that office and then purchased some furniture to fill that office.

Q. Was the furniture purchased off of state contract?

A. I was told it was purchased offline. He went online and bought it because he got a better deal. To what that was, what that P.O. looked like, I have no idea.

Q. Would that be unusual?

A. That would be unusual.

Q. Outside the standard procedures of the sheriff's office to purchase furniture?

A. Correct, because every time we've purchased furniture -- like we purchased tables like these, chairs like these that sit in the squad room that I'm sure you've been to. All those were purchased through a vendor that we've got. And every time we've had to purchase something, A and B has to come to us with a book like this and said, here's what's available. This is what we can purchase. So to purchase furniture outside that realm, to my knowledge, had never been done.

Q. Okay.

A. There was a lot of controversy surrounding expenditures plastering his name on the building.

Q. Where are those?

A. On one occasion it didn't look right, and he bought it again.

Okay. You're aware of it. We'll move on.

On the back of everybody's vest said "sheriff" just like the cars say "sheriff" on it. It doesn't mean that you are the sheriff. It just indicates like police, sheriff. All those were ordered to be removed and replaced with deputies.

Q. Was it on the cars as well as the uniforms?

A. It was not on the cars. It was just on the uniforms.

Q. Did anybody -- with regard to this, did anybody confer or look at the Florida Statutes to ensure that the officers would be properly marked for the purposes of fleeing or attempting to elude or resisting arrest with or without violence, to ensure that the standards that are set forth in the statutes would be met?

A. I brought that specific statute that you're referring to to the attention of the undersheriff and said, "There's really no reason for this. It doesn't designate them as the sheriff, but, you know, it's for the purposes of authority."

And the response was, "There's only one sheriff, and that's the guy that signs in green ink. Everybody else is a deputy," and that was the reason for the switch.

But again, you have whatever those patches were, ten, eight, twelve dollars times how many, 300 patches. Again, it's just another tick of expenditures that didn't need to happen.

Q. Understood.

A. The sheriff and the undersheriff has continued to disregard Florida Statute 112 on numerous occasions, which obviously stemmed from the lawsuits that are out there pending.

Q. Do you have any information to indicate whether their disregard of 112 procedures and rights that are contained in Florida Statute 112 are based upon ignorance, that they don't understand them? Or is it based on an intentional act that they don't care to provide those rights and meet their responsibilities?

A. Personally, I believe they don't care.

Q. So at the time these violations have occurred, are the rights of the officers and responsibilities of the agency being brought to the attention of the individuals who are doing this and being told we don't care?

A. My understanding was 112 violation was raised; and then when the interview was stopped, that individual was charged with insubordination. And 112 clearly says that that can't happen.

Q. Which officer was charged with insubordination because they refused to be interviewed?

A. I believe it was Frank Williams, but I would have to go back and look. I'd have to do some additional research on that.

Q. I may need you to follow up on that if you can identify any particular officer who was -- I'm saying charged, but that's probably not the right word -- was given -- an OPS investigation was instituted for insubordination or insubordination was added to the current charged violations?

A. I believe if you pull the Glen Stanley case, and you pull a recording of the Loudermill that went along with the Glen Stanley case, the general counsel -- essentially, the argument was being made that truthfulness did not occur, that the officer actually -- it was alleged that the officer did not -- and I don't have first-hand knowledge of it, but from my understanding, is that the officer didn't do something and, in the actual packet, said that they had done it, they had sent an email.

The undersheriff indicated on his recommendation that it was truthfulness, that it didn't occur; and when the disciplinary rep went to make the argument that it was not truthfulness, the general counsel said, "Well, what charge do you think was appropriate?"

So I would encourage you to go back and listen to that audio recording of that Loudermill. In other words, you're going to get charged with something, and we're going to find something to fit.

Q. Okay. Understood.

A. I would encourage you to probably pull his calendar, Watson's calendar, and his gas receipts. On the very early part of his tenure he was there a lot. I know he was there a lot because I was there a lot, and I saw him a lot from very early in the morning, 5:00, 6:00 -- I think we discussed that last time -- until 8:00, 9:00 at night.

It got to the point where we needed the sheriff to approve something or do something, again, because we couldn't approve anything, the sheriff is not here. The sheriff is not here. The sheriff is not here. Where is he? Is he working? Is he not working? It seemed like he was never around.

So I would encourage you to probably pull his calendar for --

Q. What month and years?

A. I would say July '21 and after.

Q. Is there some incident you can point to where his attendance to the office stopped? Was it sudden, or was it gradual?

A. It was gradual. It seemed like he gradually was not there more and more, and he was unavailable, which then just stalemated --

Q. Right, because everything has to go through him.

A. Everything has to go through him, and then everything just slows to a crawl, at best a crawl.

The sheriff's son, Clovis Watson, IV, was the subject of numerous traffic stops and some criminal acts with GPD. This information was forwarded to the sheriff, but he never seemed to rectify it with his son. It continued to happen.

He was stopped a couple of times by our deputies for traffic violations. We did a DUI checkpoint down on South 13th Street where his son was completely irate and completely out of line just coming to pick somebody up that we had dealt with. I called the sheriff and he said, okay, and that was the end of it.

It was like his son could just do whatever he wanted to because his dad was the sheriff. There was no -- it was a very poor reflection on the sheriff, very poor reflection on the sheriff.

We talked about fails to process paperwork.

I think Ed Bennett -- you might want to talk to Ed Bennett about the disapproval of secondary employment at the academy.

Q. With regard to that, are you aware that the academy became short of staff because of the sheriff disapproving secondary employment?

A. I can't swear to that.

Q. We'd have to check with the academy?

A. You'd have to check with the academy. I would imagine it severely impacted it; but to what extent, I can't speculate.

Q. Understood.

A. The sheriff seems to make decisions based on emotion quite a bit rather than, you know, actual facts. The sheriff demoted Mat Yakubsin from lieutenant back to sergeant for essentially liking a Facebook post. Let me back up.

He demoted him, but he ordered me to demote him. So I had to call him and tell him, "Hey, look, you're demoted because you liked a Facebook post."

Q. Was that formal discipline?

A. He was on probation.

Q. So he was already on disciplinarian probation?

A. No, he was on new-hire -- promotional probation.

Q. I see. So he could be demoted back to his prior rank without any discipline occurring?

A. Correct.

Q. And does that cause him to lose pay?

A. It does cause him to lose pay.

Q. How much, roughly?

A. I'd have to go back and look at the scales. I mean, you can make a request for the pay changes in HTE. A minimum of five percent; but Yakubsin was not that tenured of a sergeant, so potentially ten percent more. I don't know the exact numbers on Yakubsin.

Q. And you know the basis for that demotion was liking a Facebook post because you were instructed to tell him why he was being demoted by the sheriff?

A. I was instructed by the sheriff to demote him back to sergeant; and the sheriff had told me that, "He liked that Facebook post, and I'm going to demote him."

Now, keep in mind everybody else that also liked that Facebook post -- it surrounded a lieutenant Facebook post from the jail that was subsequently terminated. Howard, I believe, is his name, received corrective counseling for that, but Yakubsin was demoted.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Did that go through an OPS review?

A. Oh, no.

Q. So there's no documentation on any of it?

A. No.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. Did Yakubsin get corrective counseling?

A. I believe he may have, but he was hit with a demotion and the corrective counseling where everybody else was just hit with the corrective counseling. In other words, I felt as if the demotion was excessive in comparison to what had been handed out to everybody else. That's kind of where I was going with that.

We discussed the negligent promotions last time.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. While we're on that topic --

A. Which topic?

Q. Negligent promotion. You mentioned Cleveland Cox. Talk about your knowledge about what happened when he tried out for the SWAT team?

A. He tried out for the SWAT team. He wasn't recommended, and then he was appointed by recommendation of the undersheriff.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Also, what the consequence was to the person who did not want him appointed to the SWAT team.

A. Oh, he adamantly opposed it. He was -- I can't remember if it was Josh Crews or Rich Howell at the time.

Q. Josh Crews.

A. Josh Crews absolutely did not want him to the point he wanted to go meet with the undersheriff, and I think he did meet with undersheriff about it; but the decision was made that he did not get his number one and number two picks, and he got Cleveland Cox. And Cleveland Cox was almost promoted at the recommendation of the sheriff.

Q. What happened with Josh Crews with his relationship with the SWAT team after he didn't want Cleveland Cox on there?

A. I'd have to go back and scroll and think about the timeline, but I can tell you, if you're referring to his removal from the SWAT team, his removal from the SWAT team, I do not believe, was tied to that incident.

We had a SWAT call-out in Monteoca, and the sheriff and undersheriff were there. And Josh Crews was insubordinate to me; and the sheriff found out about it, and the sheriff removed him from the SWAT team based on that incident.

Q. Were those two things occurring closely in time, the Cleveland Cox incident and Monteoca incident?

A. I believe the Cleveland Cox thing was a couple months afterwards. It could have been pretty close. It could have been pretty close.

Q. I don't know the answer, but my understanding is that the delivery of the information that Cleveland Cox would be assigned to the SWAT team and the removal of then lieutenant -- captain, sergeant, I'm not sure --

A. Lieutenant Josh Crews.

Q. -- Lieutenant Crews were delivered at the same time.

A. It may have been. It could have been in close proximity, and I can see how maybe he could correlate that if it was in close proximity, but my knowledge of the incident, it was really based on Lieutenant Crews' insubordination. Because I was ordered by the sheriff to conduct -- to basically put gas on the house with the hopes that the guy would come out, and Josh Crews came over to me and said, "I hope it's not a tactic," and he was rather nasty about it.

I'm not on the SWAT team. I've never been on the SWAT team, and I don't pretend to be on the SWAT team. So when it comes to SWAT-related matters, I would defer to Josh. Josh has got the knowledge. He's been on there a long time, along with his brother. His brother is no longer with us. He's retired. But I had a direct order from the sheriff that this is the way we're going to proceed, and Josh didn't agree with it.

Q. Let me make sure I understand the sheriff is directing a tactic to remove an individual from a home that a SWAT team is doing?

A. To put gas in there, yes.

Q. But is the sheriff qualified to make a decision about a tactic to remove a barricaded subject?

A. In my opinion, no, and that just falls on the back of what I just said. I'm a major. And even when I was a captain over those units, if I called you as my SWAT commander, and you said, "This is what we need to do," I'm going to defer to you. As long as we're not violating policy, we're not violating the law, and we're not creating some additional liability for the sheriff, I'm going to defer to you because that's your area of expertise.

Q. But doesn't it create liability if the sheriff, who is not qualified, is directing a tactic to be used in an extremely dangerous situation?

A. Oh, absolutely. The direction should not have come from the sheriff. The sheriff should have let Josh Crews run the incident, is what it comes down to.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. What was the barricaded subject?

A. There was another individual in the house. I think it was domestic.

Q. So the bad guy wasn't the only one in the house?

A. Correct.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. I guess you're probably the wrong person to ask, but do we put gas in the house when there's more than one person in the house?

A. Generally, no, but I would defer to Josh Crews and let him discuss that incident in greater detail.

Q. And the insubordination that Josh demonstrated during that incident, was he ever a subject of formal discipline? Or was it just we're going to discipline him by removing him from the SWAT team?

A. He got a corrective counseling from me for his insubordination, but then the sheriff removed him as the SWAT team commander.

Q. Did they put gas in the house?

A. I don't remember. That was very early on in the tenure of the administration.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Did the sheriff give a reason why he wanted the gas? Did he have some place to go?

A. Uh-uh. It was clear he was trying to direct the incident where he didn't have the experience to direct the incident.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:
Q. Was the sheriff at the scene?
A. He was, and the undersheriff. They both showed up. And, you know, to be fair, normally the sheriff and the undersheriff, the major does not show up to SWAT teams. You know, normally we're behind the phone somewhere, and we're letting those people run those operations; but that's not the way the sheriff wanted it run.
The captain was there. I was there. Captain Bella Blizzard was there. I was there. Decoursey was there. The sheriff was there. And I think probably Josh felt like he wasn't being allowed to operate under the parameters that he normally operates because his decision-making was being impeded by us.
BY MR. KRAMER:
Q. And that's what lead to his insubordination.
A. Correct.
Q. That's also consistent with what you've previously testified to, that all the decisions are being made by the sheriff to operational and tactical decisions.
A. That is correct.
BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. Were you familiar or did we talk about it last time, about the Cleveland Cox investigation that went through the office of professional standards?

A. I was aware.

Q. Do you know what happened with that eventually, or why it was terminated?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Is there some connection or familial connection between the undersheriff and Cleveland Cox?

A. We speculated that there was, but we -- I don't know of one, but it seemed to be really out of character that he was placed on the SWAT team and he was promoted against the objections of essentially everyone.

Q. Was he also assigned to CID?

A. He was.

Q. Against the objections?

A. He was. It was a pattern existing with Cleveland Cox, but I don't know what the connection is.

MR. KRAMER: I want to talk about time.

We can go off the record.

(An off-the-record discussion was had.)

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. All we were discussing is how much time we have remaining before our other witnesses to need to appear.

A. Eric Hutchison was promoted to the rank of acting lieutenant when he wasn't on the eligibility list. I would suggest you pull the employee profile and the eligibility list. When that was called to the sheriff's attention, that he wasn't eligible for promotion, the sheriff did act and rescinded that; but then here recently Scott Bonafide has been promoted to an active lieutenant, and he's been moved to civil.

As you're aware, civil is a completely different animal than any other part of the sheriff's office. You deal with evicting people and serving papers that can and cannot be served at certain times of day. To my knowledge, Scott has no knowledge of the civil process.

I did mention Rashawn Flanders. I do not have that paperwork that I thought I had.

The last one is Pat Ford Thomas. Michelle Clement was the division manager, and she was removed for seemingly no reason and moved over to the contract monitor at the jail, which she's got zero experience at. She was removed from her role as a division manager, and she was replaced with Pat Ford Thomas.

Pat Ford Thomas is the wife of Dave Thomas,

who, interestingly enough, was one of the very core group of people in Watson's campaign.

Q. We're going to speak with Michelle Clement. We just haven't gotten her scheduled yet.

A. Okay. I have for you a copy of one of the personnel orders that went out, and as you can see, the quantity of moves that were made at one time are significant; and that's not one of them, but the reason why that's significant is because I have this to go along with it, which is completely out of character, which has everybody's picture and where they're going, where you can definitely see folks --

MR. KRAMER: All right. We'll make this an exhibit to your statement.

That's all I have. I'm sure if something else comes up, I may think of something or whatever.

(Exhibit 1 was marked for identification.)

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. One last question I've got. When transfers and things were made, were the positions that they went to, were they resumed made for? Or were persons just told, you're going here, and you're going here?

A. Under the Darnell administration, generally, what would happen would be, an open position announcement would come out: Any interested deputy sheriff that wishes to apply to be a detective, please submit your name to ISIS, which is our internal system. Interviews are conducted, and then somebody would be selected from the list.

Under the Watson administration, that pretty much went out the window. He just made moves willie-nillie as he felt necessary with no rhyme or reason is really the short answer.

MR. KRAMER: Thank you. We may be talking to you further.

WHEREUPON,

LINDA BROWN

acknowledged having been duly sworn to tell the truth, and testified upon his or her oath as follows:

THE WITNESS: Yes.

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Could you state your name, please?

A. Linda Ann Brown.

Q. Ms. Brown, are you now or have you ever been a law enforcement officer in the State of Florida?

A. No.

Q. Have you been a civilian employee of the Alachua County Sheriff's Office?

A. Yes.

Q. And are you currently now a civilian employee of the Alachua County Sheriff's Office?

A. No. I retired.

Q. When did you retire?

A. March 31st, 2023.

Q. And for how many years did you work for the sheriff's office?

A. Thirty-five.

Q. And I would imagine over that time, in 35 years, you worked in more than one capacity.

A. Yes.

Q. You don't have to tell me chronologically, but could you tell me the capacities you served ending with wherever you were serving the last time you left the office?

A. Sure. I began in -- well, we were called Clerk Typist Fours at the time as an administrative assistant in the criminal investigation division. I did that for five years. Then I was promoted to the truly administrative assistant for the majors under Steve Oelrich's time in office, and that was for nine years. And then I was promoted to the records bureau chief, and that was my final assignment for 20 years.

Q. Can you give us sort of a thumbnail sketch of your duties and responsibilities as the records bureau chief?

A. Yes. I oversaw, depending on the era, 20 to 30 employees with several supervisors reporting directly to me, a mail courier. We handled all the public record requests, or the majority of the public record requests, that came into the agency.

We were pretty much the -- I was the actual gatekeeper. Our staff took care of the requests for reports, and then the larger, either attorneys or media, broader-type requests, I would handle, distribute, collect and distribute or respond to accordingly.

We also have something called the FCIC, NCIC, which is your wanted people, your warrants information, all of that goes into those systems. Those transactions were all worked through that bureau, to include the audits that evaluate that service.

Then we also, for the majority of our time, or my time in the records bureau, we took care of the uniform crime reporting statistics and managed to -- we submitted those to FDLE, and we basically oversaw the entire process for that.

We've had different public records. For a time we did the in-car video services. And then all of the reporting transactions, I guess, is the best way to put that, the attachments -- so deputies will submit their reports through the digital system mostly, and then there are paper attachments. All of those come into the records bureau and are digitized into the system, as well as those reports that were needed to go to the state attorney's office, the records bureau personnel took care of those.

We also take care of the off-site management of records and the destruction process for those records as well. That's the broad overview.

Q. I do want to ask one specific question along those lines. It is my understanding that the sheriff's office maintains a system through their cell phones where the text messaging of the cell phones is recorded for preservation. Was that part of the record-keeping function?

A. No.

Q. So if someone had made a public records request to the agency and said, I want the text messages of a particular individual, what would you -- I'm assuming you were the public records custodian. How would you have handled that situation?

A. Yes, I would take that request and forward it to our information technology bureau personnel and ask them to provide me with an estimate to produce.

At which point, once I had the estimate, I would respond to the requester and say, "This is the estimate to produce them, to gather them, produce them. And once that payment is received, if you wish to proceed, a review of those text messages will be conducted to ensure that all public record exemptions are applied appropriately. We will provide you an estimate based on the quantity for the time to do that."

Q. During the time that Sheriff Watson was there with you, did you receive any requests that you remember for his text messages?

A. Nothing is coming to mind at the moment.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. PRR requests, are they -- is that request kept as part of a public record?

A. So, yes. So public record requests come into the agencies in a number of formats. So the emails are definitely saved. The paper copies, I had three years prior for anything that came in. I'm pretty sure we did not get any handwritten letters requesting text messages.

I'm trying to think about topics and text messages, and that's why I say the topics that I recall from -- related to anything with Sheriff Watson, I just don't remember there being -- oh, yes, there was. Yes, there was. What was it?

There were -- I think it was the PBA that asked for text messages for -- and it was a bunch -- it was the commanders. It was between Joel Decoursey, Sheriff Watson. Lance Yaeger was in that mix. There was -- George Corine was in the mix, and there might have been another one or two people. And what resulted from that were very bland messages: Call me about a subject. I need to talk with you. Are you available?

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Let me ask you this question. When that request came in, how were the sheriff's text messages obtained?

A. Through information technology, through the electronic system.

Q. So other than that instance, was there ever a time that you would have been given text messages from anyone that came from the sheriff's telephone saying these are public records that need to be recorded to the system in some way, shape, or form other than that incident which you've already described? I know that's a weird question, and I'll follow up with the why of it.

A. I'm not sure I'm understanding the question, so tell me that again, please.

Q. Let me give you a little bit further background. Our understanding is that the sheriff's office employs a system on the phones themselves that document the text messages to a server that IT can then go to that server, obtain the text messages, give them to you as part of the public records function of the office.

A. Sounds right.
Q. Are you with me so far?
A. Yes.
Q. It's our understanding the sheriff, his telephone has never been connected to that system. Okay?
A. Okay.
Q. So my question to you is, if the sheriff had anything on his phone that's a public record, how is it being preserved by the sheriff's office?
A. It is my understanding that it's not, because I remember -- and I'd have to produce -- I'd have to say produce the responses to be certain, but I seem to remember that I was told at the time the sheriff had not connected his phone or done the proper steps on his phone to be able to document -- was it the text messages, or was it more of the geocoding of his location? I'd have to see the -- I'd have to find the emails to do it.
Q. Understood. But my question is, since you're the public records custodian, or you have been for the administration until you left recently, was there any instance you're aware of where the sheriff had made any other effort to preserve public records that were created by text messaging referencing cases under investigation which would be a public record?

A. Sheriff Watson never worked with me directly or indirectly to preserve any kind of text messages on his phone that I can recall, and I'm pretty sure there's nothing like that.

Q. And when you did have the one public records request for Sheriff Watson's phone that involved his phone you've referenced, you did end up providing public records from Sheriff Watson's phone to the requester?

A. That's what I'm trying to remember. I can tell you I remember messages from Joel Decoursey and Chad Scott and George Corine and all of them saying "I need to talk with you. Give me a call," but I'm trying to think if I remember seeing anything from Sheriff Watson going back to them.

Q. We can easily determine that because the public record response remains a public record at the sheriff's office.

A. Yes.

Q. And the requester was the PBA?

A. I'm pretty certain it was the PBA, and I can even tell you where it was saved in my K Drive, our shared -- we would have a drive that was specific to us and all of our emails and folders, and I maintained all of that. And I wasn't able to have a copy to leave the agency, but it was in my K Drive under the PBA.

I might actually have that record because at the time we were saving -- I would save things -- any public record response, I would save it in a temp file to be able to duplicate it; and I have all those on a thumb drive from when I left the agency.

Q. Is that the thumb drive?

A. Yes, sir. Now, I haven't looked at it. I don't know that it -- I can't -- I mean, you'd have to test it to see; but it was cleared by our agency IT people before I used it to download the K Drive. So it was to be able to reference anything that I might need to, to help the agency after I left. So I think it should be on there if I saved it to that K Drive, or to that temp file.

Q. We'll address that in just a little bit.

You mentioned that there was an incident recently that you were concerned about that may have been either malfeasance, misfeasance, or unlawful by the sheriff. Can you tell me what that was?

A. It was more of a managerial decision. So after my retirement -- prior to my retirement, Courtney Bereka (phonetic) had been selected to replace me. And effective January 2nd, she was supposed to begin working with me to learn my job and to help with a smooth transition.

So we did not get much time together to work, but there would be instances where something would -- I would take care of a task or a transaction that I thought would be rare and she should have a copy of it, or I would go into her office as the administrative assistant to Sheriff Watson, or executive assistant, excuse me, and share with her. And over that three-month period right before I resigned, she apparently -- and this part is hearsay, but she apparently made the decision that she preferred to remain as the executive assistant rather than transfer to the records bureau chief, and I was not made aware of that until after I left.

So a week after -- I'm not even sure how long. A few days after I retired from the agency, it was announced that somebody else would be taking my position; and that person has always worked in the corrections environment and, I don't believe, has any records bureau experience or law enforcement experience, just from a corrections perspective. He was a supervisor reporting to the bureau chief in booking support.

So he was selected to come over, basically, two weeks after I left. The administrative assistant, Marie Davis, had worked with me for over a decade and is probably the most informed about what I do as my assistant working with me, etc., doing the various tasks. She was also transferred at the same day that the new bureau chief would report. She was transferred out of the bureau and over to the department of the jail to report to the major.

My point of all that is that there are three supervisors reporting to the bureau chief each with only one year's experience or less. Then you take the administrative assistant, and you relocate her to another job that is pretty high requirement -- task requirement as the administrative assistant to the major of the jail. And then you bring in a corrections person with very little, if no, law enforcement experience, and that entire bureau, how do you think that's going to work out? Not well.

No experience, doesn't -- had no common time with the previous bureau chief. I don't know how that bureau is supposed to succeed with those circumstances. I would call that a misfeasance, I think, is how your term is. I would call that a terrible management decision, to have the success of the bureau and -- with all of that bureau works with, how -- why would you do that?

Q. Understood. Were there other changes that occurred after Sheriff Watson took office that were unusual in how the procedures of the office would work or how your --

A. Procedures for the records bureau to work, or the agency?

Q. Well, the agency, the records bureau. I'm not -- I don't want to limit your response.

A. The records bureau under my management continued to do what it has always done, and we -- due to the staff shortages, it was much more stressful and much more difficult, but the bureau did keep its head above water, so to speak, and managed to get the majority of things done and still done well and accurately, completely. A lot of overtime was used to do so.

They are 50 percent down and have been for over a year. There has been efforts to continue hiring through the normal procedures. And at one point I was able to convince them to fast-track people because the alternative solution for the lack of employees was to bring in temp force personnel through Spherion. Those people would be interviewed by the records bureau staff and determined appropriate or not, and then they would go through a fingerprint-based background check, and they would go through a drug screen, and that was it. And then they'd be brought into the agency, given access to all of the software systems and the critical information that we maintain through the records bureau. Versus an employee, when they go through the application process and the hiring process and the background process, they go through both of those two things as well as a psych eval and a physical agility -- or a physical, I'm sorry, just a physical, and then the background check where the background investigators of the agency would check their references and their employment history and determine that they are a good candidate for the agency.

So if we're doing so little for a temp force employee that we're giving the same access to as a regular full-time employee, why wouldn't we fast-track the incoming applicants that truly want a career with the Alachua County Sheriff's Office? Let's fast-track them, get in the door while you're doing the background process that you're not doing for the Spherion employee. Let me go ahead and start training them. If you find something that says they're not going to be a long-term or great employee, and we're not going to hire them, then so be it; but that doesn't happen all that often based on the interviewing process.

So for a short stretch we were able to bring in four employees as -- on that fast-track program, but then after that the sheriff decided that we are not going to fast-track employees. So as such, the hiring process takes anywhere from minimal six weeks -- which I haven't seen anybody come in in a six-week period in forever -- to eight to twelve weeks because it takes a good eight weeks for the full background process to be completed. And then you have to do a file review that goes through the command staff and includes the sheriff, which typically there's a delay in getting a signature from the sheriff. And then, from there, if the applicant is still employed somewhere else, there's a two-week notice that they're giving their former employer. So many times the applicants that we interview that we really wanted would find work elsewhere before we ever got the background process done.

So that is the reason we have a 50 percent deficit in employees in the records bureau, and that's a big part of the agency, especially with civilian personnel. That happens badly, badly with A and B for the payroll specialist and the accounts payable specialist. And that's all I can think of off the top of my head.

But that -- once again, the decisions that are being made are to the detriment of the agency and, obviously, the community.

Q. Is there any other instances that you're aware of where things have markedly changed because the administration changed?

A. So I was told by our -- that the salary personnel no longer have to enter time sheets. That was done almost immediately once Sheriff Watson took office.

Additionally, the sheriff made an order that he no longer would complete -- the sheriff, not he because he wasn't there previously, but that he would not be completing travel and training forms.

Q. For himself or for anyone?

A. For himself. For himself. He would not be completing travel and training forms. And we've done that for Sheriff Oelrich and Sheriff Darnell throughout history.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Was the agency still paying for training and travel, though?

A. Oh, yes.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. So how does that work?

A. He has an agency credit card, as many of the bureaus do. So when he would go on travel and training or, you know, to gas up his car, he's got an agency credit card. And so he would just charge things off to the credit card, and there's no documentation.

So he goes to the Florida Sheriff's Association Conference, wherever it is. He obviously stays in a hotel. He drives the gas to get there. So he just -- instead of completing a travel and training form that documents that's where he is and what he's done for the last three days of the conference, that he left at such-and-such and came back, which is why his per diem is what it is, that form isn't -- the sheriff doesn't have to complete that form anymore; all others do.

Q. So does he still collect a per diem?

A. As far as I know.

Q. How is the amount of the per diem determined if there's no documentation?

A. I don't know. The accounting budget and personnel would have to provide that to you.

Q. Are those forms kept by records or kept by Alachua County?

A. Accounting and budget. No, by ASO; but accounting and budget, not by records. If somebody had sent a public record request, they would have sent it to records, and I would have forwarded it to our accounting and budget personnel to provide them.

Q. So this is untrue for an undersheriff. He would provide a --

A. That is my understanding. He still provides travel and training forms if he goes someplace on behalf of agency, but the sheriff does not.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Do you know what bank the credit card is drawn on?

A. No we just changed banks, and I don't remember. I didn't note it.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Are the credit cards issued through the county?

A. No, they're issued through our accounting and budget personnel. All of our finance is through the Alachua County Sheriff's Office, A and B. The county only distributes 1/12th of the budget to us monthly, and then it's up to us to distribute that into the various accounts and manage all of our accounting, purchasing, credit cards, everything that we do, payroll, all of that.

Q. Who audits records?

A. The only audits records has is by the Florida Department of Law Enforcement in terms of our FCIC, NCIC transactions and the -- we participate. We're not the direct contact.

So FDLE conducts two different audits related to the agency, and that is one for FCIC NCIC entries and operations, and then the other is for our security awareness performance.

Q. Do you know who audits sheriff's office finance, the accounting and budget process for the sheriff's office?

A. It's an accounting firm, local, and I don't know the name of them. I could get it for you easily, though.

Q. Is it through the sheriff's office that the auditing is done, or is it the county? Like, who orders the audit?

A. It's an independent audit that is done every three years annually, and it just happens, from my understanding. There's no special order for a new audit. It's a routine thing.

Q. When is the last time that happened? Do you know?

A. It's annual. Last year.

Q. Oh, it's annual. I thought you said it's every three years.

A. No. The FDLE audit of FCIC is every three years.

Q. But then accounting and budget?

A. Accounting and budget's annual audit is by a local, if I recall.

Q. It's annual?

A. Yeah.

Q. Okay. Anything else that you have notated that is unusual or meets the criteria that I've described to you that we've haven't talked about?

A. So at some point -- I don't know if you guys have the circumstance to know what I'm talking about.

So many years ago we were -- we, the Alachua County Sheriff's Office, was audited by the IRS. And during that audit, it was determined that, for those individuals that we assigned a vehicle to that were command staff, they had to pay taxes on that as a benefit. We were not doing that taxing correctly. So the outcome of that was, we learned that we had to tax by the highest or most expensive method possible as a benefit to our employees.

When Sheriff Watson came in, that policy was not appreciated, and as such, Jacob Rush was apparently assigned to look into the matter. He referenced Leon County Sheriff's Office, who taxes at a different rate per their policy. As such, Sheriff Watson implemented or changed that taxing procedure to the way Leon County does it. That is against what the IRS audit required at the time. So accounting and budget personnel would have more information on that.

Q. You seem to have provided some additional documentation. What was that in reference to?

A. Well, all it is, there's two reports here. One is a termination report, and the other is the new hire; and it simply reflects all of the people that have left the agency since January 5th of 2021 when Sheriff Watson took office. And what it reflects is -- and I made an adjustment because the guardian participants at the schools is included in these lists, and they are not paid employees of this agency. They had to be for documentation of the training bureau and that sort of thing, but -- so anyway, since that time we have lost 323 employees, many of whom simply left the agency.

You'll note that the reason code is retired, voluntarily terminated, that sort of thing, deceased, but the retirees, many of those people -- I'm not sure "many" is fair, but some of those retirees left because they -- because of the treatment of the agency. So sadly, that's the case.

So 323 employees have left the agency, and since that same time period we've only hired 131. So basically for every three people that have left the agency we have only been able to replace them with one.

Q. What's the net number of positions down?

A. 323 minus 131.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. Is that 192?

A. That sounds right.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. So essentially involuntarily staff reduction by 190-plus FTEs?

A. And the total FTEs is 867.75. And so if you look at the withdrawal percentage, it's 37 percent over two years. If you look at the net, it's still a 20-something percent. It might be just 20 percent.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. Where did you fall into that retirement

category? Were you planning on leaving on 3/31/23?

A. I made my full retirement, but the last two years have been extremely torturous.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Does that list have the date?

A. Yes, has the date of hire, has the date of designation.

Q. Does that include sworn?

A. Yes, it includes everybody.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Does it include the jail?

A. Yes. The challenge is that it is by fund number, so it's a little tricky in terms of figuring who are jail personnel. Some of the funds are truly labeled properly. Some of them are a little more challenging.

Q. But the information is there if you can dissect it.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Anything else?

A. Back to -- well, I won't label it. I will say yes.

What I've observed and take issue with, I guess, is that we have promoted people -- Sheriff Watson has promoted people from deputy and maybe sergeant to positions of major over a very short period of time. And nothing against those individuals.

I didn't know Robert Stafford as the person that went from sergeant to major at the department of the jail. I know Lance Yaeger somewhat as a deputy. At the time I first met him he was a detective, and now he's major and possibly chief of staff; that remains remain to be seen if he stays.

But the point of those things is that Sheriff Watson came in and trusted just about no one in the agency. He demoted the two majors, which is his right, but then he took captains and moved them around from position to position to position. He's constantly moving people around, lieutenants and sergeants. And what that has done to this agency is that you have a lot of people in positions with little to no experience that did not work their way up, so those promotions, those individuals never worked as sergeants, lieutenants, captains. They have none of that management experience in a civilian agency. Yes, Lance Yaeger has military experience, but it's different.

As such, they're coming through the ranks -- they're not coming through the ranks. They're just getting into these management positions, and Sheriff Watson trusts no one except these people that he's brought in around him. As such, the agency is no longer a team effort. Ideas are not being shared.

It's not a healthy organization anymore, and it is not the premier agency it was over two years ago, unfortunately, and it's very sad to see.

Q. Understood.

A. I would think Laura Knudson, Lori Stophel should be in your group, potentially, as people that have endured his wrath and had to leave earlier than wanting.

So Laura was a bureau chief, and do you want her story from my perspective?

Q. No, we're running out of time. I apologize. We need to move on, and we will reach out to them.

A. The accounting and budget, the wasteful spending, the changes between administrators. And I don't even know what I meant by that note, so never mind about that. Those are, I think --

MR. KRAMER: Let's talk about that drive, gentlemen, what is your -- what is it you'd like to do with that?

(An off-the-record discussion was had.)

WHEREUPON,

LINDA BROWN

acknowledged having been duly sworn to tell the truth, and testified upon his or her oath as follows:

THE WITNESS: Yes.

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Could you state your name, please?

A. Linda Ann Brown.

Q. Ms. Brown, are you now or have you ever been a law enforcement officer in the State of Florida?

A. No.

Q. Have you been a civilian employee of the Alachua County Sheriff's Office?

A. Yes.

Q. And are you currently now a civilian employee of the Alachua County Sheriff's Office?

A. No. I retired.

Q. When did you retire?

A. March 31st, 2023.

Q. And for how many years did you work for the sheriff's office?

A. Thirty-five.

Q. And I would imagine over that time, in 35 years, you worked in more than one capacity.

A. Yes.

Q. You don't have to tell me chronologically, but could you tell me the capacities you served ending with wherever you were serving the last time you left the office?

A. Sure. I began in -- well, we were called Clerk Typist Fours at the time as an administrative assistant in the criminal investigation division. I did that for five years. Then I was promoted to the truly administrative assistant for the majors under Steve Oelrich's time in office, and that was for nine years. And then I was promoted to the records bureau chief, and that was my final assignment for 20 years.

Q. Can you give us sort of a thumbnail sketch of your duties and responsibilities as the records bureau chief?

A. Yes. I oversaw, depending on the era, 20 to 30 employees with several supervisors reporting directly to me, a mail courier. We handled all the public record requests, or the majority of the public record requests, that came into the agency.

We were pretty much the -- I was the actual gatekeeper. Our staff took care of the requests for reports, and then the larger, either attorneys or media, broader-type requests, I would handle, distribute, collect and distribute or respond to accordingly.

We also have something called the FCIC, NCIC, which is your wanted people, your warrants information, all of that goes into those systems. Those transactions were all worked through that bureau, to include the audits that evaluate that service.

Then we also, for the majority of our time, or my time in the records bureau, we took care of the uniform crime reporting statistics and managed to -- we submitted those to FDLE, and we basically oversaw the entire process for that.

We've had different public records. For a time we did the in-car video services. And then all of the reporting transactions, I guess, is the best way to put that, the attachments -- so deputies will submit their reports through the digital system mostly, and then there are paper attachments. All of those come into the records bureau and are digitized into the system, as well as those reports that were needed to go to the state attorney's office, the records bureau personnel took care of those.

We also take care of the off-site management of records and the destruction process for those records as well. That's the broad overview.

Q. I do want to ask one specific question along those lines. It is my understanding that the sheriff's office maintains a system through their cell phones where the text messaging of the cell phones is recorded for preservation. Was that part of the record-keeping function?

A. No.

Q. So if someone had made a public records request to the agency and said, I want the text messages of a particular individual, what would you -- I'm assuming you were the public records custodian. How would you have handled that situation?

A. Yes, I would take that request and forward it to our information technology bureau personnel and ask them to provide me with an estimate to produce.

At which point, once I had the estimate, I would respond to the requester and say, "This is the estimate to produce them, to gather them, produce them. And once that payment is received, if you wish to proceed, a review of those text messages will be conducted to ensure that all public record exemptions are applied appropriately. We will provide you an estimate based on the quantity for the time to do that."

Q. During the time that Sheriff Watson was there with you, did you receive any requests that you remember for his text messages?

A. Nothing is coming to mind at the moment.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. PRR requests, are they -- is that request kept as part of a public record?

A. So, yes. So public record requests come into the agencies in a number of formats. So the emails are definitely saved. The paper copies, I had three years prior for anything that came in. I'm pretty sure we did not get any handwritten letters requesting text messages.

I'm trying to think about topics and text messages, and that's why I say the topics that I recall from -- related to anything with Sheriff Watson, I just don't remember there being -- oh, yes, there was. Yes, there was. What was it?

There were -- I think it was the PBA that asked for text messages for -- and it was a bunch -- it was the commanders. It was between Joel Decoursey, Sheriff Watson. Lance Yaeger was in that mix. There was -- George Corine was in the mix, and there might have been another one or two people. And what resulted from that were very bland messages: Call me about a subject. I need to talk with you. Are you available?

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Let me ask you this question. When that request came in, how were the sheriff's text messages obtained?

A. Through information technology, through the electronic system.

Q. So other than that instance, was there ever a time that you would have been given text messages from anyone that came from the sheriff's telephone saying these are public records that need to be recorded to the system in some way, shape, or form other than that incident which you've already described? I know that's a weird question, and I'll follow up with the why of it.

A. I'm not sure I'm understanding the question, so tell me that again, please.

Q. Let me give you a little bit further background. Our understanding is that the sheriff's office employs a system on the phones themselves that document the text messages to a server that IT can then go to that server, obtain the text messages, give them to you as part of the public records function of the office.

A. Sounds right.
Q. Are you with me so far?
A. Yes.
Q. It's our understanding the sheriff, his telephone has never been connected to that system. Okay?
A. Okay.
Q. So my question to you is, if the sheriff had anything on his phone that's a public record, how is it being preserved by the sheriff's office?
A. It is my understanding that it's not, because I remember -- and I'd have to produce -- I'd have to say produce the responses to be certain, but I seem to remember that I was told at the time the sheriff had not connected his phone or done the proper steps on his phone to be able to document -- was it the text messages, or was it more of the geocoding of his location? I'd have to see the -- I'd have to find the emails to do it.
Q. Understood. But my question is, since you're the public records custodian, or you have been for the administration until you left recently, was there any instance you're aware of where the sheriff had made any other effort to preserve public records that were created by text messaging referencing cases under investigation which would be a public record?

A. Sheriff Watson never worked with me directly or indirectly to preserve any kind of text messages on his phone that I can recall, and I'm pretty sure there's nothing like that.

Q. And when you did have the one public records request for Sheriff Watson's phone that involved his phone you've referenced, you did end up providing public records from Sheriff Watson's phone to the requester?

A. That's what I'm trying to remember. I can tell you I remember messages from Joel Decoursey and Chad Scott and George Corine and all of them saying "I need to talk with you. Give me a call," but I'm trying to think if I remember seeing anything from Sheriff Watson going back to them.

Q. We can easily determine that because the public record response remains a public record at the sheriff's office.

A. Yes.

Q. And the requester was the PBA?

A. I'm pretty certain it was the PBA, and I can even tell you where it was saved in my K Drive, our shared -- we would have a drive that was specific to us and all of our emails and folders, and I maintained

all of that. And I wasn't able to have a copy to leave the agency, but it was in my K Drive under the PBA.

I might actually have that record because at the time we were saving -- I would save things -- any public record response, I would save it in a temp file to be able to duplicate it; and I have all those on a thumb drive from when I left the agency.

Q. Is that the thumb drive?

A. Yes, sir. Now, I haven't looked at it. I don't know that it -- I can't -- I mean, you'd have to test it to see; but it was cleared by our agency IT people before I used it to download the K Drive. So it was to be able to reference anything that I might need to, to help the agency after I left. So I think it should be on there if I saved it to that K Drive, or to that temp file.

Q. We'll address that in just a little bit.

You mentioned that there was an incident recently that you were concerned about that may have been either malfeasance, misfeasance, or unlawful by the sheriff. Can you tell me what that was?

A. It was more of a managerial decision. So after my retirement -- prior to my retirement, Courtney Bereka (phonetic) had been selected to replace me. And effective January 2nd, she was supposed to begin working with me to learn my job and to help with a smooth transition.

So we did not get much time together to work, but there would be instances where something would -- I would take care of a task or a transaction that I thought would be rare and she should have a copy of it, or I would go into her office as the administrative assistant to Sheriff Watson, or executive assistant, excuse me, and share with her. And over that three-month period right before I resigned, she apparently -- and this part is hearsay, but she apparently made the decision that she preferred to remain as the executive assistant rather than transfer to the records bureau chief, and I was not made aware of that until after I left.

So a week after -- I'm not even sure how long. A few days after I retired from the agency, it was announced that somebody else would be taking my position; and that person has always worked in the corrections environment and, I don't believe, has any records bureau experience or law enforcement experience, just from a corrections perspective. He was a supervisor reporting to the bureau chief in booking support.

So he was selected to come over, basically, two weeks after I left. The administrative assistant, Marie Davis, had worked with me for over a decade and is probably the most informed about what I do as my assistant working with me, etc., doing the various tasks. She was also transferred at the same day that the new bureau chief would report. She was transferred out of the bureau and over to the department of the jail to report to the major.

My point of all that is that there are three supervisors reporting to the bureau chief each with only one year's experience or less. Then you take the administrative assistant, and you relocate her to another job that is pretty high requirement -- task requirement as the administrative assistant to the major of the jail. And then you bring in a corrections person with very little, if no, law enforcement experience, and that entire bureau, how do you think that's going to work out? Not well.

No experience, doesn't -- had no common time with the previous bureau chief. I don't know how that bureau is supposed to succeed with those circumstances. I would call that a misfeasance, I think, is how your term is. I would call that a terrible management decision, to have the success of the bureau and -- with all of that bureau works with, how -- why would you do that?

Q. Understood. Were there other changes that occurred after Sheriff Watson took office that were unusual in how the procedures of the office would work or how your --

A. Procedures for the records bureau to work, or the agency?

Q. Well, the agency, the records bureau. I'm not -- I don't want to limit your response.

A. The records bureau under my management continued to do what it has always done, and we -- due to the staff shortages, it was much more stressful and much more difficult, but the bureau did keep its head above water, so to speak, and managed to get the majority of things done and still done well and accurately, completely. A lot of overtime was used to do so.

They are 50 percent down and have been for over a year. There has been efforts to continue hiring through the normal procedures. And at one point I was able to convince them to fast-track people because the alternative solution for the lack of employees was to bring in temp force personnel through Spherion. Those people would be interviewed by the records bureau staff and determined appropriate or not, and then they would go through a fingerprint-based background check, and they would go through a drug screen, and that was it. And then they'd be brought into the agency, given access to all of the software systems and the critical information that we maintain through the records bureau. Versus an employee, when they go through the application process and the hiring process and the background process, they go through both of those two things as well as a psych eval and a physical agility -- or a physical, I'm sorry, just a physical, and then the background check where the background investigators of the agency would check their references and their employment history and determine that they are a good candidate for the agency.

So if we're doing so little for a temp force employee that we're giving the same access to as a regular full-time employee, why wouldn't we fast-track the incoming applicants that truly want a career with the Alachua County Sheriff's Office? Let's fast-track them, get in the door while you're doing the background process that you're not doing for the Spherion employee. Let me go ahead and start training them. If you find something that says they're not going to be a long-term or great employee, and we're not going to hire them, then so be it; but that doesn't happen all that often based on the interviewing process.

So for a short stretch we were able to bring in four employees as -- on that fast-track program, but then after that the sheriff decided that we are not going to fast-track employees. So as such, the hiring process takes anywhere from minimal six weeks -- which I haven't seen anybody come in in a six-week period in forever -- to eight to twelve weeks because it takes a good eight weeks for the full background process to be completed. And then you have to do a file review that goes through the command staff and includes the sheriff, which typically there's a delay in getting a signature from the sheriff. And then, from there, if the applicant is still employed somewhere else, there's a two-week notice that they're giving their former employer. So many times the applicants that we interview that we really wanted would find work elsewhere before we ever got the background process done.

So that is the reason we have a 50 percent deficit in employees in the records bureau, and that's a big part of the agency, especially with civilian personnel. That happens badly, badly with A and B for the payroll specialist and the accounts payable specialist. And that's all I can think of off the top of my head.

But that -- once again, the decisions that are being made are to the detriment of the agency and, obviously, the community.

Q. Is there any other instances that you're aware of where things have markedly changed because the administration changed?

A. So I was told by our -- that the salary personnel no longer have to enter time sheets. That was done almost immediately once Sheriff Watson took office.

Additionally, the sheriff made an order that he no longer would complete -- the sheriff, not he because he wasn't there previously, but that he would not be completing travel and training forms.

Q. For himself or for anyone?

A. For himself. For himself. He would not be completing travel and training forms. And we've done that for Sheriff Oelrich and Sheriff Darnell throughout history.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Was the agency still paying for training and

travel, though?

A. Oh, yes.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. So how does that work?

A. He has an agency credit card, as many of the bureaus do. So when he would go on travel and training or, you know, to gas up his car, he's got an agency credit card. And so he would just charge things off to the credit card, and there's no documentation.

So he goes to the Florida Sheriff's Association Conference, wherever it is. He obviously stays in a hotel. He drives the gas to get there. So he just -- instead of completing a travel and training form that documents that's where he is and what he's done for the last three days of the conference, that he left at such-and-such and came back, which is why his per diem is what it is, that form isn't -- the sheriff doesn't have to complete that form anymore; all others do.

Q. So does he still collect a per diem?

A. As far as I know.

Q. How is the amount of the per diem determined if there's no documentation?

A. I don't know. The accounting budget and personnel would have to provide that to you.

Q. Are those forms kept by records or kept by Alachua County?

A. Accounting and budget. No, by ASO; but accounting and budget, not by records. If somebody had sent a public record request, they would have sent it to records, and I would have forwarded it to our accounting and budget personnel to provide them.

Q. So this is untrue for an undersheriff. He would provide a --

A. That is my understanding. He still provides travel and training forms if he goes someplace on behalf of agency, but the sheriff does not.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Do you know what bank the credit card is drawn on?

A. No we just changed banks, and I don't remember. I didn't note it.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Are the credit cards issued through the county?

A. No, they're issued through our accounting and budget personnel. All of our finance is through the Alachua County Sheriff's Office, A and B. The county only distributes 1/12th of the budget to us monthly, and then it's up to us to distribute that into the various accounts and manage all of our accounting, purchasing, credit cards, everything that we do, payroll, all of that.

Q. Who audits records?

A. The only audits records has is by the Florida Department of Law Enforcement in terms of our FCIC, NCIC transactions and the -- we participate. We're not the direct contact.

So FDLE conducts two different audits related to the agency, and that is one for FCIC NCIC entries and operations, and then the other is for our security awareness performance.

Q. Do you know who audits sheriff's office finance, the accounting and budget process for the sheriff's office?

A. It's an accounting firm, local, and I don't know the name of them. I could get it for you easily, though.

Q. Is it through the sheriff's office that the auditing is done, or is it the county? Like, who orders the audit?

A. It's an independent audit that is done every three years annually, and it just happens, from my understanding. There's no special order for a new audit. It's a routine thing.

Q. When is the last time that happened? Do you know?

A. It's annual. Last year.

Q. Oh, it's annual. I thought you said it's every three years.

A. No. The FDLE audit of FCIC is every three years.

Q. But then accounting and budget?

A. Accounting and budget's annual audit is by a local, if I recall.

Q. It's annual?

A. Yeah.

Q. Okay. Anything else that you have notated that is unusual or meets the criteria that I've described to you that we've haven't talked about?

A. So at some point -- I don't know if you guys have the circumstance to know what I'm talking about.

So many years ago we were -- we, the Alachua County Sheriff's Office, was audited by the IRS. And during that audit, it was determined that, for those individuals that we assigned a vehicle to that were command staff, they had to pay taxes on that as a benefit. We were not doing that taxing correctly. So the outcome of that was, we learned that we had to tax by the highest or most expensive method possible as a benefit to our employees.

When Sheriff Watson came in, that policy was not appreciated, and as such, Jacob Rush was apparently assigned to look into the matter. He referenced Leon County Sheriff's Office, who taxes at a different rate per their policy. As such, Sheriff Watson implemented or changed that taxing procedure to the way Leon County does it. That is against what the IRS audit required at the time. So accounting and budget personnel would have more information on that.

Q. You seem to have provided some additional documentation. What was that in reference to?

A. Well, all it is, there's two reports here. One is a termination report, and the other is the new hire; and it simply reflects all of the people that have left the agency since January 5th of 2021 when Sheriff Watson took office. And what it reflects is -- and I made an adjustment because the guardian participants at the schools is included in these lists, and they are not paid employees of this agency. They had to be for documentation of the training bureau and that sort of thing, but -- so anyway, since that time we have lost 323 employees, many of whom simply left the agency.

You'll note that the reason code is retired, voluntarily terminated, that sort of thing, deceased, but the retirees, many of those people -- I'm not sure "many" is fair, but some of those retirees left because they -- because of the treatment of the agency. So sadly, that's the case.

So 323 employees have left the agency, and since that same time period we've only hired 131. So basically for every three people that have left the agency we have only been able to replace them with one.

Q. What's the net number of positions down?

A. 323 minus 131.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. Is that 192?

A. That sounds right.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. So essentially involuntarily staff reduction by 190-plus FTEs?

A. And the total FTEs is 867.75. And so if you look at the withdrawal percentage, it's 37 percent over two years. If you look at the net, it's still a 20-something percent. It might be just 20 percent.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. Where did you fall into that retirement

category? Were you planning on leaving on 3/31/23?

A. I made my full retirement, but the last two years have been extremely torturous.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Does that list have the date?

A. Yes, has the date of hire, has the date of designation.

Q. Does that include sworn?

A. Yes, it includes everybody.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Does it include the jail?

A. Yes. The challenge is that it is by fund number, so it's a little tricky in terms of figuring who are jail personnel. Some of the funds are truly labeled properly. Some of them are a little more challenging.

Q. But the information is there if you can dissect it.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Anything else?

A. Back to -- well, I won't label it. I will say yes.

What I've observed and take issue with, I guess, is that we have promoted people -- Sheriff Watson has promoted people from deputy and maybe sergeant to positions of major over a very short period of time. And nothing against those individuals.

I didn't know Robert Stafford as the person that went from sergeant to major at the department of the jail. I know Lance Yaeger somewhat as a deputy. At the time I first met him he was a detective, and now he's major and possibly chief of staff; that remains remain to be seen if he stays.

But the point of those things is that Sheriff Watson came in and trusted just about no one in the agency. He demoted the two majors, which is his right, but then he took captains and moved them around from position to position to position. He's constantly moving people around, lieutenants and sergeants. And what that has done to this agency is that you have a lot of people in positions with little to no experience that did not work their way up, so those promotions, those individuals never worked as sergeants, lieutenants, captains. They have none of that management experience in a civilian agency. Yes, Lance Yaeger has military experience, but it's different.

As such, they're coming through the ranks -- they're not coming through the ranks. They're just getting into these management positions, and Sheriff Watson trusts no one except these people that he's brought in around him. As such, the agency is no longer a team effort. Ideas are not being shared.

It's not a healthy organization anymore, and it is not the premier agency it was over two years ago, unfortunately, and it's very sad to see.

Q. Understood.

A. I would think Laura Knudson, Lori Stophel should be in your group, potentially, as people that have endured his wrath and had to leave earlier than wanting.

So Laura was a bureau chief, and do you want her story from my perspective?

Q. No, we're running out of time. I apologize. We need to move on, and we will reach out to them.

A. The accounting and budget, the wasteful spending, the changes between administrators. And I don't even know what I meant by that note, so never mind about that. Those are, I think --

MR. KRAMER: Let's talk about that drive, gentlemen, what is your -- what is it you'd like to do with that?

(An off-the-record discussion was had.)

WHEREUPON,

acknowledged having been duly sworn to tell the truth, and testified upon his or her oath as follows:

THE WITNESS: Yes.

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Could you state your name, please?

A. Linda Ann Brown.

Q. Ms. Brown, are you now or have you ever been a law enforcement officer in the State of Florida?

A. No.

Q. Have you been a civilian employee of the Alachua County Sheriff's Office?

A. Yes.

Q. And are you currently now a civilian employee of the Alachua County Sheriff's Office?

A. No. I retired.

Q. When did you retire?

A. March 31st, 2023.

Q. And for how many years did you work for the sheriff's office?

A. Thirty-five.

Q. And I would imagine over that time, in 35 years, you worked in more than one capacity.

A. Yes.

Q. You don't have to tell me chronologically, but could you tell me the capacities you served ending with wherever you were serving the last time you left the office?

A. Sure. I began in -- well, we were called Clerk Typist Fours at the time as an administrative assistant in the criminal investigation division. I did that for five years. Then I was promoted to the truly administrative assistant for the majors under Steve Oelrich's time in office, and that was for nine years. And then I was promoted to the records bureau chief, and that was my final assignment for 20 years.

Q. Can you give us sort of a thumbnail sketch of your duties and responsibilities as the records bureau chief?

A. Yes. I oversaw, depending on the era, 20 to 30 employees with several supervisors reporting directly to me, a mail courier. We handled all the public record requests, or the majority of the public record requests, that came into the agency.

We were pretty much the -- I was the actual gatekeeper. Our staff took care of the requests for reports, and then the larger, either attorneys or media, broader-type requests, I would handle, distribute, collect and distribute or respond to accordingly.

We also have something called the FCIC, NCIC, which is your wanted people, your warrants information, all of that goes into those systems. Those transactions were all worked through that bureau, to include the audits that evaluate that service.

Then we also, for the majority of our time, or my time in the records bureau, we took care of the uniform crime reporting statistics and managed to -- we submitted those to FDLE, and we basically oversaw the entire process for that.

We've had different public records. For a time we did the in-car video services. And then all of the reporting transactions, I guess, is the best way to put that, the attachments -- so deputies will submit their reports through the digital system mostly, and then there are paper attachments. All of those come into the records bureau and are digitized into the system, as well as those reports that were needed to go to the state attorney's office, the records bureau personnel took care of those.

We also take care of the off-site management of records and the destruction process for those records as well. That's the broad overview.

Q. I do want to ask one specific question along those lines. It is my understanding that the sheriff's office maintains a system through their cell phones where the text messaging of the cell phones is recorded for preservation. Was that part of the record-keeping function?

A. No.

Q. So if someone had made a public records request to the agency and said, I want the text messages of a particular individual, what would you -- I'm assuming you were the public records custodian. How would you have handled that situation?

A. Yes, I would take that request and forward it to our information technology bureau personnel and ask them to provide me with an estimate to produce.

At which point, once I had the estimate, I would respond to the requester and say, "This is the estimate to produce them, to gather them, produce them. And once that payment is received, if you wish to proceed, a review of those text messages will be conducted to ensure that all public record exemptions are applied appropriately. We will provide you an estimate based on the quantity for the time to do that."

Q. During the time that Sheriff Watson was there with you, did you receive any requests that you remember for his text messages?

A. Nothing is coming to mind at the moment.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. PRR requests, are they -- is that request kept as part of a public record?

A. So, yes. So public record requests come into the agencies in a number of formats. So the emails are definitely saved. The paper copies, I had three years prior for anything that came in. I'm pretty sure we did not get any handwritten letters requesting text messages.

I'm trying to think about topics and text messages, and that's why I say the topics that I recall from -- related to anything with Sheriff Watson, I just don't remember there being -- oh, yes, there was. Yes, there was. What was it?

There were -- I think it was the PBA that asked for text messages for -- and it was a bunch -- it was the commanders. It was between Joel Decoursey, Sheriff Watson. Lance Yaeger was in that mix. There was -- George Corine was in the mix, and there might have been another one or two people. And what resulted from that were very bland messages: Call me about a subject. I need to talk with you. Are you available?

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Let me ask you this question. When that request came in, how were the sheriff's text messages obtained?

A. Through information technology, through the electronic system.

Q. So other than that instance, was there ever a time that you would have been given text messages from anyone that came from the sheriff's telephone saying these are public records that need to be recorded to the system in some way, shape, or form other than that incident which you've already described? I know that's a weird question, and I'll follow up with the why of it.

A. I'm not sure I'm understanding the question, so tell me that again, please.

Q. Let me give you a little bit further background. Our understanding is that the sheriff's office employs a system on the phones themselves that document the text messages to a server that IT can then go to that server, obtain the text messages, give them to you as part of the public records function of the office.

A. Sounds right.
Q. Are you with me so far?
A. Yes.
Q. It's our understanding the sheriff, his telephone has never been connected to that system. Okay?
A. Okay.
Q. So my question to you is, if the sheriff had anything on his phone that's a public record, how is it being preserved by the sheriff's office?
A. It is my understanding that it's not, because I remember -- and I'd have to produce -- I'd have to say produce the responses to be certain, but I seem to remember that I was told at the time the sheriff had not connected his phone or done the proper steps on his phone to be able to document -- was it the text messages, or was it more of the geocoding of his location? I'd have to see the -- I'd have to find the emails to do it.
Q. Understood. But my question is, since you're the public records custodian, or you have been for the administration until you left recently, was there any instance you're aware of where the sheriff had made any other effort to preserve public records that were created by text messaging referencing cases under investigation which would be a public record?

A. Sheriff Watson never worked with me directly or indirectly to preserve any kind of text messages on his phone that I can recall, and I'm pretty sure there's nothing like that.

Q. And when you did have the one public records request for Sheriff Watson's phone that involved his phone you've referenced, you did end up providing public records from Sheriff Watson's phone to the requester?

A. That's what I'm trying to remember. I can tell you I remember messages from Joel Decoursey and Chad Scott and George Corine and all of them saying "I need to talk with you. Give me a call," but I'm trying to think if I remember seeing anything from Sheriff Watson going back to them.

Q. We can easily determine that because the public record response remains a public record at the sheriff's office.

A. Yes.

Q. And the requester was the PBA?

A. I'm pretty certain it was the PBA, and I can even tell you where it was saved in my K Drive, our shared -- we would have a drive that was specific to us and all of our emails and folders, and I maintained

all of that. And I wasn't able to have a copy to leave the agency, but it was in my K Drive under the PBA.

I might actually have that record because at the time we were saving -- I would save things -- any public record response, I would save it in a temp file to be able to duplicate it; and I have all those on a thumb drive from when I left the agency.

Q. Is that the thumb drive?

A. Yes, sir. Now, I haven't looked at it. I don't know that it -- I can't -- I mean, you'd have to test it to see; but it was cleared by our agency IT people before I used it to download the K Drive. So it was to be able to reference anything that I might need to, to help the agency after I left. So I think it should be on there if I saved it to that K Drive, or to that temp file.

Q. We'll address that in just a little bit.

You mentioned that there was an incident recently that you were concerned about that may have been either malfeasance, misfeasance, or unlawful by the sheriff. Can you tell me what that was?

A. It was more of a managerial decision. So after my retirement -- prior to my retirement, Courtney Bereka (phonetic) had been selected to replace me. And effective January 2nd, she was supposed to begin working with me to learn my job and to help with a smooth transition.

So we did not get much time together to work, but there would be instances where something would -- I would take care of a task or a transaction that I thought would be rare and she should have a copy of it, or I would go into her office as the administrative assistant to Sheriff Watson, or executive assistant, excuse me, and share with her. And over that three-month period right before I resigned, she apparently -- and this part is hearsay, but she apparently made the decision that she preferred to remain as the executive assistant rather than transfer to the records bureau chief, and I was not made aware of that until after I left.

So a week after -- I'm not even sure how long. A few days after I retired from the agency, it was announced that somebody else would be taking my position; and that person has always worked in the corrections environment and, I don't believe, has any records bureau experience or law enforcement experience, just from a corrections perspective. He was a supervisor reporting to the bureau chief in booking support.

So he was selected to come over, basically, two weeks after I left. The administrative assistant, Marie Davis, had worked with me for over a decade and is probably the most informed about what I do as my assistant working with me, etc., doing the various tasks. She was also transferred at the same day that the new bureau chief would report. She was transferred out of the bureau and over to the department of the jail to report to the major.

My point of all that is that there are three supervisors reporting to the bureau chief each with only one year's experience or less. Then you take the administrative assistant, and you relocate her to another job that is pretty high requirement -- task requirement as the administrative assistant to the major of the jail. And then you bring in a corrections person with very little, if no, law enforcement experience, and that entire bureau, how do you think that's going to work out? Not well.

No experience, doesn't -- had no common time with the previous bureau chief. I don't know how that bureau is supposed to succeed with those circumstances. I would call that a misfeasance, I think, is how your term is. I would call that a terrible management decision, to have the success of the bureau and -- with all of that bureau works with, how -- why would you do that?

Q. Understood. Were there other changes that occurred after Sheriff Watson took office that were unusual in how the procedures of the office would work or how your --

A. Procedures for the records bureau to work, or the agency?

Q. Well, the agency, the records bureau. I'm not -- I don't want to limit your response.

A. The records bureau under my management continued to do what it has always done, and we -- due to the staff shortages, it was much more stressful and much more difficult, but the bureau did keep its head above water, so to speak, and managed to get the majority of things done and still done well and accurately, completely. A lot of overtime was used to do so.

They are 50 percent down and have been for over a year. There has been efforts to continue hiring through the normal procedures. And at one point I was able to convince them to fast-track people because the alternative solution for the lack of employees was to bring in temp force personnel through Spherion. Those people would be interviewed by the records bureau staff and determined appropriate or not, and then they would go through a fingerprint-based background check, and they would go through a drug screen, and that was it. And then they'd be brought into the agency, given access to all of the software systems and the critical information that we maintain through the records bureau. Versus an employee, when they go through the application process and the hiring process and the background process, they go through both of those two things as well as a psych eval and a physical agility -- or a physical, I'm sorry, just a physical, and then the background check where the background investigators of the agency would check their references and their employment history and determine that they are a good candidate for the agency.

So if we're doing so little for a temp force employee that we're giving the same access to as a regular full-time employee, why wouldn't we fast-track the incoming applicants that truly want a career with the Alachua County Sheriff's Office? Let's fast-track them, get in the door while you're doing the background process that you're not doing for the Spherion employee. Let me go ahead and start training them. If you find something that says they're not going to be a long-term or great employee, and we're not going to hire them, then so be it; but that doesn't happen all that often based on the interviewing process.

So for a short stretch we were able to bring in four employees as -- on that fast-track program, but then after that the sheriff decided that we are not going to fast-track employees. So as such, the hiring process takes anywhere from minimal six weeks -- which I haven't seen anybody come in in a six-week period in forever -- to eight to twelve weeks because it takes a good eight weeks for the full background process to be completed. And then you have to do a file review that goes through the command staff and includes the sheriff, which typically there's a delay in getting a signature from the sheriff. And then, from there, if the applicant is still employed somewhere else, there's a two-week notice that they're giving their former employer. So many times the applicants that we interview that we really wanted would find work elsewhere before we ever got the background process done.

So that is the reason we have a 50 percent deficit in employees in the records bureau, and that's a big part of the agency, especially with civilian personnel. That happens badly, badly with A and B for the payroll specialist and the accounts payable specialist. And that's all I can think of off the top of my head.

But that -- once again, the decisions that are being made are to the detriment of the agency and, obviously, the community.

Q. Is there any other instances that you're aware of where things have markedly changed because the administration changed?

A. So I was told by our -- that the salary personnel no longer have to enter time sheets. That was done almost immediately once Sheriff Watson took office.

Additionally, the sheriff made an order that he no longer would complete -- the sheriff, not he because he wasn't there previously, but that he would not be completing travel and training forms.

Q. For himself or for anyone?

A. For himself. For himself. He would not be completing travel and training forms. And we've done that for Sheriff Oelrich and Sheriff Darnell throughout history.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Was the agency still paying for training and

travel, though?

A. Oh, yes.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. So how does that work?

A. He has an agency credit card, as many of the bureaus do. So when he would go on travel and training or, you know, to gas up his car, he's got an agency credit card. And so he would just charge things off to the credit card, and there's no documentation.

So he goes to the Florida Sheriff's Association Conference, wherever it is. He obviously stays in a hotel. He drives the gas to get there. So he just -- instead of completing a travel and training form that documents that's where he is and what he's done for the last three days of the conference, that he left at such-and-such and came back, which is why his per diem is what it is, that form isn't -- the sheriff doesn't have to complete that form anymore; all others do.

Q. So does he still collect a per diem?

A. As far as I know.

Q. How is the amount of the per diem determined if there's no documentation?

A. I don't know. The accounting budget and personnel would have to provide that to you.

Q. Are those forms kept by records or kept by Alachua County?

A. Accounting and budget. No, by ASO; but accounting and budget, not by records. If somebody had sent a public record request, they would have sent it to records, and I would have forwarded it to our accounting and budget personnel to provide them.

Q. So this is untrue for an undersheriff. He would provide a --

A. That is my understanding. He still provides travel and training forms if he goes someplace on behalf of agency, but the sheriff does not.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Do you know what bank the credit card is drawn on?

A. No we just changed banks, and I don't remember. I didn't note it.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Are the credit cards issued through the county?

A. No, they're issued through our accounting and budget personnel. All of our finance is through the Alachua County Sheriff's Office, A and B. The county only distributes 1/12th of the budget to us monthly, and then it's up to us to distribute that into the various accounts and manage all of our accounting, purchasing, credit cards, everything that we do, payroll, all of that.

Q. Who audits records?

A. The only audits records has is by the Florida Department of Law Enforcement in terms of our FCIC, NCIC transactions and the -- we participate. We're not the direct contact.

So FDLE conducts two different audits related to the agency, and that is one for FCIC NCIC entries and operations, and then the other is for our security awareness performance.

Q. Do you know who audits sheriff's office finance, the accounting and budget process for the sheriff's office?

A. It's an accounting firm, local, and I don't know the name of them. I could get it for you easily, though.

Q. Is it through the sheriff's office that the auditing is done, or is it the county? Like, who orders the audit?

A. It's an independent audit that is done every three years annually, and it just happens, from my understanding. There's no special order for a new audit. It's a routine thing.

Q. When is the last time that happened? Do you know?

A. It's annual. Last year.

Q. Oh, it's annual. I thought you said it's every three years.

A. No. The FDLE audit of FCIC is every three years.

Q. But then accounting and budget?

A. Accounting and budget's annual audit is by a local, if I recall.

Q. It's annual?

A. Yeah.

Q. Okay. Anything else that you have notated that is unusual or meets the criteria that I've described to you that we've haven't talked about?

A. So at some point -- I don't know if you guys have the circumstance to know what I'm talking about.

So many years ago we were -- we, the Alachua County Sheriff's Office, was audited by the IRS. And during that audit, it was determined that, for those individuals that we assigned a vehicle to that were command staff, they had to pay taxes on that as a benefit. We were not doing that taxing correctly. So the outcome of that was, we learned that we had to tax by the highest or most expensive method possible as a benefit to our employees.

When Sheriff Watson came in, that policy was not appreciated, and as such, Jacob Rush was apparently assigned to look into the matter. He referenced Leon County Sheriff's Office, who taxes at a different rate per their policy. As such, Sheriff Watson implemented or changed that taxing procedure to the way Leon County does it. That is against what the IRS audit required at the time. So accounting and budget personnel would have more information on that.

Q. You seem to have provided some additional documentation. What was that in reference to?

A. Well, all it is, there's two reports here. One is a termination report, and the other is the new hire; and it simply reflects all of the people that have left the agency since January 5th of 2021 when Sheriff Watson took office. And what it reflects is -- and I made an adjustment because the guardian participants at the schools is included in these lists, and they are not paid employees of this agency. They had to be for documentation of the training bureau and that sort of thing, but -- so anyway, since that time we have lost 323 employees, many of whom simply left the agency.

You'll note that the reason code is retired, voluntarily terminated, that sort of thing, deceased, but the retirees, many of those people -- I'm not sure "many" is fair, but some of those retirees left because they -- because of the treatment of the agency. So sadly, that's the case.

So 323 employees have left the agency, and since that same time period we've only hired 131. So basically for every three people that have left the agency we have only been able to replace them with one.

Q. What's the net number of positions down?

A. 323 minus 131.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. Is that 192?

A. That sounds right.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. So essentially involuntarily staff reduction by 190-plus FTEs?

A. And the total FTEs is 867.75. And so if you look at the withdrawal percentage, it's 37 percent over two years. If you look at the net, it's still a 20-something percent. It might be just 20 percent.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. Where did you fall into that retirement

category? Were you planning on leaving on 3/31/23?

A. I made my full retirement, but the last two years have been extremely torturous.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Does that list have the date?

A. Yes, has the date of hire, has the date of designation.

Q. Does that include sworn?

A. Yes, it includes everybody.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Does it include the jail?

A. Yes. The challenge is that it is by fund number, so it's a little tricky in terms of figuring who are jail personnel. Some of the funds are truly labeled properly. Some of them are a little more challenging.

Q. But the information is there if you can dissect it.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Anything else?

A. Back to -- well, I won't label it. I will say yes.

What I've observed and take issue with, I guess, is that we have promoted people -- Sheriff Watson has promoted people from deputy and maybe sergeant to positions of major over a very short period of time. And nothing against those individuals.

I didn't know Robert Stafford as the person that went from sergeant to major at the department of the jail. I know Lance Yaeger somewhat as a deputy. At the time I first met him he was a detective, and now he's major and possibly chief of staff; that remains remain to be seen if he stays.

But the point of those things is that Sheriff Watson came in and trusted just about no one in the agency. He demoted the two majors, which is his right, but then he took captains and moved them around from position to position to position. He's constantly moving people around, lieutenants and sergeants. And what that has done to this agency is that you have a lot of people in positions with little to no experience that did not work their way up, so those promotions, those individuals never worked as sergeants, lieutenants, captains. They have none of that management experience in a civilian agency. Yes, Lance Yaeger has military experience, but it's different.

As such, they're coming through the ranks -- they're not coming through the ranks. They're just getting into these management positions, and Sheriff Watson trusts no one except these people that he's brought in around him. As such, the agency is no longer a team effort. Ideas are not being shared.

It's not a healthy organization anymore, and it is not the premier agency it was over two years ago, unfortunately, and it's very sad to see.

Q. Understood.

A. I would think Laura Knudson, Lori Stophel should be in your group, potentially, as people that have endured his wrath and had to leave earlier than wanting.

So Laura was a bureau chief, and do you want her story from my perspective?

Q. No, we're running out of time. I apologize. We need to move on, and we will reach out to them.

A. The accounting and budget, the wasteful spending, the changes between administrators. And I don't even know what I meant by that note, so never mind about that. Those are, I think --

MR. KRAMER: Let's talk about that drive, gentlemen, what is your -- what is it you'd like to do with that?

(An off-the-record discussion was had.)

A. Yes.

Q. You don't have to tell me chronologically, but could you tell me the capacities you served ending with wherever you were serving the last time you left the office?

A. Sure. I began in -- well, we were called Clerk Typist Fours at the time as an administrative assistant in the criminal investigation division. I did that for five years. Then I was promoted to the truly administrative assistant for the majors under Steve Oelrich's time in office, and that was for nine years. And then I was promoted to the records bureau chief, and that was my final assignment for 20 years.

Q. Can you give us sort of a thumbnail sketch of your duties and responsibilities as the records bureau chief?

A. Yes. I oversaw, depending on the era, 20 to 30 employees with several supervisors reporting directly to me, a mail courier. We handled all the public record requests, or the majority of the public record requests, that came into the agency.

We were pretty much the -- I was the actual gatekeeper. Our staff took care of the requests for reports, and then the larger, either attorneys or media, broader-type requests, I would handle, distribute, collect and distribute or respond to accordingly.

We also have something called the FCIC, NCIC, which is your wanted people, your warrants information, all of that goes into those systems. Those transactions were all worked through that bureau, to include the audits that evaluate that service.

Then we also, for the majority of our time, or my time in the records bureau, we took care of the uniform crime reporting statistics and managed to -- we submitted those to FDLE, and we basically oversaw the entire process for that.

We've had different public records. For a time we did the in-car video services. And then all of the reporting transactions, I guess, is the best way to put that, the attachments -- so deputies will submit their reports through the digital system mostly, and then there are paper attachments. All of those come into the records bureau and are digitized into the system, as well as those reports that were needed to go to the state attorney's office, the records bureau personnel took care of those.

We also take care of the off-site management of records and the destruction process for those records as well. That's the broad overview.

Q. I do want to ask one specific question along those lines. It is my understanding that the sheriff's office maintains a system through their cell phones where the text messaging of the cell phones is recorded for preservation. Was that part of the record-keeping function?

A. No.

Q. So if someone had made a public records request to the agency and said, I want the text messages of a particular individual, what would you -- I'm assuming you were the public records custodian. How would you have handled that situation?

A. Yes, I would take that request and forward it to our information technology bureau personnel and ask them to provide me with an estimate to produce.

At which point, once I had the estimate, I would respond to the requester and say, "This is the estimate to produce them, to gather them, produce them. And once that payment is received, if you wish to proceed, a review of those text messages will be conducted to ensure that all public record exemptions are applied appropriately. We will provide you an estimate based on the quantity for the time to do that."

Q. During the time that Sheriff Watson was there with you, did you receive any requests that you remember for his text messages?

A. Nothing is coming to mind at the moment.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. PRR requests, are they -- is that request kept as part of a public record?

A. So, yes. So public record requests come into the agencies in a number of formats. So the emails are definitely saved. The paper copies, I had three years prior for anything that came in. I'm pretty sure we did not get any handwritten letters requesting text messages.

I'm trying to think about topics and text messages, and that's why I say the topics that I recall from -- related to anything with Sheriff Watson, I just don't remember there being -- oh, yes, there was. Yes, there was. What was it?

There were -- I think it was the PBA that asked for text messages for -- and it was a bunch -- it was the commanders. It was between Joel Decoursey, Sheriff Watson. Lance Yaeger was in that mix. There was -- George Corine was in the mix, and there might have been another one or two people. And what resulted from that were very bland messages: Call me about a subject. I need to talk with you. Are you available?

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Let me ask you this question. When that request came in, how were the sheriff's text messages obtained?

A. Through information technology, through the electronic system.

Q. So other than that instance, was there ever a time that you would have been given text messages from anyone that came from the sheriff's telephone saying these are public records that need to be recorded to the system in some way, shape, or form other than that incident which you've already described? I know that's a weird question, and I'll follow up with the why of it.

A. I'm not sure I'm understanding the question, so tell me that again, please.

Q. Let me give you a little bit further background. Our understanding is that the sheriff's office employs a system on the phones themselves that document the text messages to a server that IT can then go to that server, obtain the text messages, give them to you as part of the public records function of the office.

A. Sounds right.
Q. Are you with me so far?
A. Yes.
Q. It's our understanding the sheriff, his telephone has never been connected to that system. Okay?
A. Okay.
Q. So my question to you is, if the sheriff had anything on his phone that's a public record, how is it being preserved by the sheriff's office?
A. It is my understanding that it's not, because I remember -- and I'd have to produce -- I'd have to say produce the responses to be certain, but I seem to remember that I was told at the time the sheriff had not connected his phone or done the proper steps on his phone to be able to document -- was it the text messages, or was it more of the geocoding of his location? I'd have to see the -- I'd have to find the emails to do it.
Q. Understood. But my question is, since you're the public records custodian, or you have been for the administration until you left recently, was there any instance you're aware of where the sheriff had made any other effort to preserve public records that were created by text messaging referencing cases under investigation which would be a public record?

A. Sheriff Watson never worked with me directly or indirectly to preserve any kind of text messages on his phone that I can recall, and I'm pretty sure there's nothing like that.

Q. And when you did have the one public records request for Sheriff Watson's phone that involved his phone you've referenced, you did end up providing public records from Sheriff Watson's phone to the requester?

A. That's what I'm trying to remember. I can tell you I remember messages from Joel Decoursey and Chad Scott and George Corine and all of them saying "I need to talk with you. Give me a call," but I'm trying to think if I remember seeing anything from Sheriff Watson going back to them.

Q. We can easily determine that because the public record response remains a public record at the sheriff's office.

A. Yes.

Q. And the requester was the PBA?

A. I'm pretty certain it was the PBA, and I can even tell you where it was saved in my K Drive, our shared -- we would have a drive that was specific to us and all of our emails and folders, and I maintained

all of that. And I wasn't able to have a copy to leave the agency, but it was in my K Drive under the PBA.

I might actually have that record because at the time we were saving -- I would save things -- any public record response, I would save it in a temp file to be able to duplicate it; and I have all those on a thumb drive from when I left the agency.

Q. Is that the thumb drive?

A. Yes, sir. Now, I haven't looked at it. I don't know that it -- I can't -- I mean, you'd have to test it to see; but it was cleared by our agency IT people before I used it to download the K Drive. So it was to be able to reference anything that I might need to, to help the agency after I left. So I think it should be on there if I saved it to that K Drive, or to that temp file.

Q. We'll address that in just a little bit.

You mentioned that there was an incident recently that you were concerned about that may have been either malfeasance, misfeasance, or unlawful by the sheriff. Can you tell me what that was?

A. It was more of a managerial decision. So after my retirement -- prior to my retirement, Courtney Bereka (phonetic) had been selected to replace me. And effective January 2nd, she was supposed to begin working with me to learn my job and to help with a smooth transition.

So we did not get much time together to work, but there would be instances where something would -- I would take care of a task or a transaction that I thought would be rare and she should have a copy of it, or I would go into her office as the administrative assistant to Sheriff Watson, or executive assistant, excuse me, and share with her. And over that three-month period right before I resigned, she apparently -- and this part is hearsay, but she apparently made the decision that she preferred to remain as the executive assistant rather than transfer to the records bureau chief, and I was not made aware of that until after I left.

So a week after -- I'm not even sure how long. A few days after I retired from the agency, it was announced that somebody else would be taking my position; and that person has always worked in the corrections environment and, I don't believe, has any records bureau experience or law enforcement experience, just from a corrections perspective. He was a supervisor reporting to the bureau chief in booking support.

So he was selected to come over, basically, two weeks after I left. The administrative assistant, Marie Davis, had worked with me for over a decade and is probably the most informed about what I do as my assistant working with me, etc., doing the various tasks. She was also transferred at the same day that the new bureau chief would report. She was transferred out of the bureau and over to the department of the jail to report to the major.

My point of all that is that there are three supervisors reporting to the bureau chief each with only one year's experience or less. Then you take the administrative assistant, and you relocate her to another job that is pretty high requirement -- task requirement as the administrative assistant to the major of the jail. And then you bring in a corrections person with very little, if no, law enforcement experience, and that entire bureau, how do you think that's going to work out? Not well.

No experience, doesn't -- had no common time with the previous bureau chief. I don't know how that bureau is supposed to succeed with those circumstances. I would call that a misfeasance, I think, is how your term is. I would call that a terrible management decision, to have the success of the bureau and -- with all of that bureau works with, how -- why would you do that?

Q. Understood. Were there other changes that occurred after Sheriff Watson took office that were unusual in how the procedures of the office would work or how your --

A. Procedures for the records bureau to work, or the agency?

Q. Well, the agency, the records bureau. I'm not -- I don't want to limit your response.

A. The records bureau under my management continued to do what it has always done, and we -- due to the staff shortages, it was much more stressful and much more difficult, but the bureau did keep its head above water, so to speak, and managed to get the majority of things done and still done well and accurately, completely. A lot of overtime was used to do so.

They are 50 percent down and have been for over a year. There has been efforts to continue hiring through the normal procedures. And at one point I was able to convince them to fast-track people because the alternative solution for the lack of employees was to bring in temp force personnel through Spherion. Those people would be interviewed by the records bureau staff and determined appropriate or not, and then they would go through a fingerprint-based background check, and they would go through a drug screen, and that was it. And then they'd be brought into the agency, given access to all of the software systems and the critical information that we maintain through the records bureau. Versus an employee, when they go through the application process and the hiring process and the background process, they go through both of those two things as well as a psych eval and a physical agility -- or a physical, I'm sorry, just a physical, and then the background check where the background investigators of the agency would check their references and their employment history and determine that they are a good candidate for the agency.

So if we're doing so little for a temp force employee that we're giving the same access to as a regular full-time employee, why wouldn't we fast-track the incoming applicants that truly want a career with the Alachua County Sheriff's Office? Let's fast-track them, get in the door while you're doing the background process that you're not doing for the Spherion employee. Let me go ahead and start training them. If you find something that says they're not going to be a long-term or great employee, and we're not going to hire them, then so be it; but that doesn't happen all that often based on the interviewing process.

So for a short stretch we were able to bring in four employees as -- on that fast-track program, but then after that the sheriff decided that we are not going to fast-track employees. So as such, the hiring process takes anywhere from minimal six weeks -- which I haven't seen anybody come in in a six-week period in forever -- to eight to twelve weeks because it takes a good eight weeks for the full background process to be completed. And then you have to do a file review that goes through the command staff and includes the sheriff, which typically there's a delay in getting a signature from the sheriff. And then, from there, if the applicant is still employed somewhere else, there's a two-week notice that they're giving their former employer. So many times the applicants that we interview that we really wanted would find work elsewhere before we ever got the background process done.

So that is the reason we have a 50 percent deficit in employees in the records bureau, and that's a big part of the agency, especially with civilian personnel. That happens badly, badly with A and B for the payroll specialist and the accounts payable specialist. And that's all I can think of off the top of my head.

But that -- once again, the decisions that are being made are to the detriment of the agency and, obviously, the community.

Q. Is there any other instances that you're aware of where things have markedly changed because the administration changed?

A. So I was told by our -- that the salary personnel no longer have to enter time sheets. That was done almost immediately once Sheriff Watson took office.

Additionally, the sheriff made an order that he no longer would complete -- the sheriff, not he because he wasn't there previously, but that he would not be completing travel and training forms.

Q. For himself or for anyone?

A. For himself. For himself. He would not be completing travel and training forms. And we've done that for Sheriff Oelrich and Sheriff Darnell throughout history.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Was the agency still paying for training and

travel, though?

A. Oh, yes.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. So how does that work?

A. He has an agency credit card, as many of the bureaus do. So when he would go on travel and training or, you know, to gas up his car, he's got an agency credit card. And so he would just charge things off to the credit card, and there's no documentation.

So he goes to the Florida Sheriff's Association Conference, wherever it is. He obviously stays in a hotel. He drives the gas to get there. So he just -- instead of completing a travel and training form that documents that's where he is and what he's done for the last three days of the conference, that he left at such-and-such and came back, which is why his per diem is what it is, that form isn't -- the sheriff doesn't have to complete that form anymore; all others do.

Q. So does he still collect a per diem?

A. As far as I know.

Q. How is the amount of the per diem determined if there's no documentation?

A. I don't know. The accounting budget and personnel would have to provide that to you.

Q. Are those forms kept by records or kept by Alachua County?

A. Accounting and budget. No, by ASO; but accounting and budget, not by records. If somebody had sent a public record request, they would have sent it to records, and I would have forwarded it to our accounting and budget personnel to provide them.

Q. So this is untrue for an undersheriff. He would provide a --

A. That is my understanding. He still provides travel and training forms if he goes someplace on behalf of agency, but the sheriff does not.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Do you know what bank the credit card is drawn on?

A. No we just changed banks, and I don't remember. I didn't note it.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Are the credit cards issued through the county?

A. No, they're issued through our accounting and budget personnel. All of our finance is through the Alachua County Sheriff's Office, A and B. The county only distributes 1/12th of the budget to us monthly, and then it's up to us to distribute that into the various accounts and manage all of our accounting, purchasing, credit cards, everything that we do, payroll, all of that.

Q. Who audits records?

A. The only audits records has is by the Florida Department of Law Enforcement in terms of our FCIC, NCIC transactions and the -- we participate. We're not the direct contact.

So FDLE conducts two different audits related to the agency, and that is one for FCIC NCIC entries and operations, and then the other is for our security awareness performance.

Q. Do you know who audits sheriff's office finance, the accounting and budget process for the sheriff's office?

A. It's an accounting firm, local, and I don't know the name of them. I could get it for you easily, though.

Q. Is it through the sheriff's office that the auditing is done, or is it the county? Like, who orders the audit?

A. It's an independent audit that is done every three years annually, and it just happens, from my understanding. There's no special order for a new audit. It's a routine thing.

Q. When is the last time that happened? Do you know?

A. It's annual. Last year.

Q. Oh, it's annual. I thought you said it's every three years.

A. No. The FDLE audit of FCIC is every three years.

Q. But then accounting and budget?

A. Accounting and budget's annual audit is by a local, if I recall.

Q. It's annual?

A. Yeah.

Q. Okay. Anything else that you have notated that is unusual or meets the criteria that I've described to you that we've haven't talked about?

A. So at some point -- I don't know if you guys have the circumstance to know what I'm talking about.

So many years ago we were -- we, the Alachua County Sheriff's Office, was audited by the IRS. And during that audit, it was determined that, for those individuals that we assigned a vehicle to that were command staff, they had to pay taxes on that as a benefit. We were not doing that taxing correctly. So the outcome of that was, we learned that we had to tax by the highest or most expensive method possible as a benefit to our employees.

When Sheriff Watson came in, that policy was not appreciated, and as such, Jacob Rush was apparently assigned to look into the matter. He referenced Leon County Sheriff's Office, who taxes at a different rate per their policy. As such, Sheriff Watson implemented or changed that taxing procedure to the way Leon County does it. That is against what the IRS audit required at the time. So accounting and budget personnel would have more information on that.

Q. You seem to have provided some additional documentation. What was that in reference to?

A. Well, all it is, there's two reports here. One is a termination report, and the other is the new hire; and it simply reflects all of the people that have left the agency since January 5th of 2021 when Sheriff Watson took office. And what it reflects is -- and I made an adjustment because the guardian participants at the schools is included in these lists, and they are not paid employees of this agency. They had to be for documentation of the training bureau and that sort of thing, but -- so anyway, since that time we have lost 323 employees, many of whom simply left the agency.

You'll note that the reason code is retired, voluntarily terminated, that sort of thing, deceased, but the retirees, many of those people -- I'm not sure "many" is fair, but some of those retirees left because they -- because of the treatment of the agency. So sadly, that's the case.

So 323 employees have left the agency, and since that same time period we've only hired 131. So basically for every three people that have left the agency we have only been able to replace them with one.

Q. What's the net number of positions down?

A. 323 minus 131.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. Is that 192?

A. That sounds right.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. So essentially involuntarily staff reduction by 190-plus FTEs?

A. And the total FTEs is 867.75. And so if you look at the withdrawal percentage, it's 37 percent over two years. If you look at the net, it's still a 20-something percent. It might be just 20 percent.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. Where did you fall into that retirement

category? Were you planning on leaving on 3/31/23?

A. I made my full retirement, but the last two years have been extremely torturous.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Does that list have the date?

A. Yes, has the date of hire, has the date of designation.

Q. Does that include sworn?

A. Yes, it includes everybody.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Does it include the jail?

A. Yes. The challenge is that it is by fund number, so it's a little tricky in terms of figuring who are jail personnel. Some of the funds are truly labeled properly. Some of them are a little more challenging.

Q. But the information is there if you can dissect it.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Anything else?

A. Back to -- well, I won't label it. I will say yes.

What I've observed and take issue with, I guess, is that we have promoted people -- Sheriff Watson has promoted people from deputy and maybe sergeant to positions of major over a very short period of time. And nothing against those individuals.

I didn't know Robert Stafford as the person that went from sergeant to major at the department of the jail. I know Lance Yaeger somewhat as a deputy. At the time I first met him he was a detective, and now he's major and possibly chief of staff; that remains remain to be seen if he stays.

But the point of those things is that Sheriff Watson came in and trusted just about no one in the agency. He demoted the two majors, which is his right, but then he took captains and moved them around from position to position to position. He's constantly moving people around, lieutenants and sergeants. And what that has done to this agency is that you have a lot of people in positions with little to no experience that did not work their way up, so those promotions, those individuals never worked as sergeants, lieutenants, captains. They have none of that management experience in a civilian agency. Yes, Lance Yaeger has military experience, but it's different.

As such, they're coming through the ranks -- they're not coming through the ranks. They're just getting into these management positions, and Sheriff Watson trusts no one except these people that he's brought in around him. As such, the agency is no longer a team effort. Ideas are not being shared.

It's not a healthy organization anymore, and it is not the premier agency it was over two years ago, unfortunately, and it's very sad to see.

Q. Understood.

A. I would think Laura Knudson, Lori Stophel should be in your group, potentially, as people that have endured his wrath and had to leave earlier than wanting.

So Laura was a bureau chief, and do you want her story from my perspective?

Q. No, we're running out of time. I apologize. We need to move on, and we will reach out to them.

A. The accounting and budget, the wasteful spending, the changes between administrators. And I don't even know what I meant by that note, so never mind about that. Those are, I think --

MR. KRAMER: Let's talk about that drive, gentlemen, what is your -- what is it you'd like to do with that?

(An off-the-record discussion was had.)

distribute, collect and distribute or respond to accordingly.

We also have something called the FCIC, NCIC, which is your wanted people, your warrants information, all of that goes into those systems. Those transactions were all worked through that bureau, to include the audits that evaluate that service.

Then we also, for the majority of our time, or my time in the records bureau, we took care of the uniform crime reporting statistics and managed to -- we submitted those to FDLE, and we basically oversaw the entire process for that.

We've had different public records. For a time we did the in-car video services. And then all of the reporting transactions, I guess, is the best way to put that, the attachments -- so deputies will submit their reports through the digital system mostly, and then there are paper attachments. All of those come into the records bureau and are digitized into the system, as well as those reports that were needed to go to the state attorney's office, the records bureau personnel took care of those.

We also take care of the off-site management of records and the destruction process for those records as well. That's the broad overview.

Q. I do want to ask one specific question along those lines. It is my understanding that the sheriff's office maintains a system through their cell phones where the text messaging of the cell phones is recorded for preservation. Was that part of the record-keeping function?

A. No.

Q. So if someone had made a public records request to the agency and said, I want the text messages of a particular individual, what would you -- I'm assuming you were the public records custodian. How would you have handled that situation?

A. Yes, I would take that request and forward it to our information technology bureau personnel and ask them to provide me with an estimate to produce.

At which point, once I had the estimate, I would respond to the requester and say, "This is the estimate to produce them, to gather them, produce them. And once that payment is received, if you wish to proceed, a review of those text messages will be conducted to ensure that all public record exemptions are applied appropriately. We will provide you an estimate based on the quantity for the time to do that."

Q. During the time that Sheriff Watson was there with you, did you receive any requests that you remember for his text messages?

A. Nothing is coming to mind at the moment.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. PRR requests, are they -- is that request kept as part of a public record?

A. So, yes. So public record requests come into the agencies in a number of formats. So the emails are definitely saved. The paper copies, I had three years prior for anything that came in. I'm pretty sure we did not get any handwritten letters requesting text messages.

I'm trying to think about topics and text messages, and that's why I say the topics that I recall from -- related to anything with Sheriff Watson, I just don't remember there being -- oh, yes, there was. Yes, there was. What was it?

There were -- I think it was the PBA that asked for text messages for -- and it was a bunch -- it was the commanders. It was between Joel Decoursey, Sheriff Watson. Lance Yaeger was in that mix. There was -- George Corine was in the mix, and there might have been another one or two people. And what resulted from that were very bland messages: Call me about a subject. I need to talk with you. Are you available?

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Let me ask you this question. When that request came in, how were the sheriff's text messages obtained?

A. Through information technology, through the electronic system.

Q. So other than that instance, was there ever a time that you would have been given text messages from anyone that came from the sheriff's telephone saying these are public records that need to be recorded to the system in some way, shape, or form other than that incident which you've already described? I know that's a weird question, and I'll follow up with the why of it.

A. I'm not sure I'm understanding the question, so tell me that again, please.

Q. Let me give you a little bit further background. Our understanding is that the sheriff's office employs a system on the phones themselves that document the text messages to a server that IT can then go to that server, obtain the text messages, give them to you as part of the public records function of the office.

A. Sounds right.
Q. Are you with me so far?
A. Yes.
Q. It's our understanding the sheriff, his telephone has never been connected to that system. Okay?
A. Okay.
Q. So my question to you is, if the sheriff had anything on his phone that's a public record, how is it being preserved by the sheriff's office?
A. It is my understanding that it's not, because I remember -- and I'd have to produce -- I'd have to say produce the responses to be certain, but I seem to remember that I was told at the time the sheriff had not connected his phone or done the proper steps on his phone to be able to document -- was it the text messages, or was it more of the geocoding of his location? I'd have to see the -- I'd have to find the emails to do it.
Q. Understood. But my question is, since you're the public records custodian, or you have been for the administration until you left recently, was there any instance you're aware of where the sheriff had made any other effort to preserve public records that were created by text messaging referencing cases under investigation which would be a public record?

A. Sheriff Watson never worked with me directly or indirectly to preserve any kind of text messages on his phone that I can recall, and I'm pretty sure there's nothing like that.

Q. And when you did have the one public records request for Sheriff Watson's phone that involved his phone you've referenced, you did end up providing public records from Sheriff Watson's phone to the requester?

A. That's what I'm trying to remember. I can tell you I remember messages from Joel Decoursey and Chad Scott and George Corine and all of them saying "I need to talk with you. Give me a call," but I'm trying to think if I remember seeing anything from Sheriff Watson going back to them.

Q. We can easily determine that because the public record response remains a public record at the sheriff's office.

A. Yes.

Q. And the requester was the PBA?

A. I'm pretty certain it was the PBA, and I can even tell you where it was saved in my K Drive, our shared -- we would have a drive that was specific to us and all of our emails and folders, and I maintained

all of that. And I wasn't able to have a copy to leave the agency, but it was in my K Drive under the PBA.

I might actually have that record because at the time we were saving -- I would save things -- any public record response, I would save it in a temp file to be able to duplicate it; and I have all those on a thumb drive from when I left the agency.

Q. Is that the thumb drive?

A. Yes, sir. Now, I haven't looked at it. I don't know that it -- I can't -- I mean, you'd have to test it to see; but it was cleared by our agency IT people before I used it to download the K Drive. So it was to be able to reference anything that I might need to, to help the agency after I left. So I think it should be on there if I saved it to that K Drive, or to that temp file.

Q. We'll address that in just a little bit.

You mentioned that there was an incident recently that you were concerned about that may have been either malfeasance, misfeasance, or unlawful by the sheriff. Can you tell me what that was?

A. It was more of a managerial decision. So after my retirement -- prior to my retirement, Courtney Bereka (phonetic) had been selected to replace me. And effective January 2nd, she was supposed to begin working with me to learn my job and to help with a smooth transition.

So we did not get much time together to work, but there would be instances where something would -- I would take care of a task or a transaction that I thought would be rare and she should have a copy of it, or I would go into her office as the administrative assistant to Sheriff Watson, or executive assistant, excuse me, and share with her. And over that three-month period right before I resigned, she apparently -- and this part is hearsay, but she apparently made the decision that she preferred to remain as the executive assistant rather than transfer to the records bureau chief, and I was not made aware of that until after I left.

So a week after -- I'm not even sure how long. A few days after I retired from the agency, it was announced that somebody else would be taking my position; and that person has always worked in the corrections environment and, I don't believe, has any records bureau experience or law enforcement experience, just from a corrections perspective. He was a supervisor reporting to the bureau chief in booking support.

So he was selected to come over, basically, two weeks after I left. The administrative assistant, Marie Davis, had worked with me for over a decade and is probably the most informed about what I do as my assistant working with me, etc., doing the various tasks. She was also transferred at the same day that the new bureau chief would report. She was transferred out of the bureau and over to the department of the jail to report to the major.

My point of all that is that there are three supervisors reporting to the bureau chief each with only one year's experience or less. Then you take the administrative assistant, and you relocate her to another job that is pretty high requirement -- task requirement as the administrative assistant to the major of the jail. And then you bring in a corrections person with very little, if no, law enforcement experience, and that entire bureau, how do you think that's going to work out? Not well.

No experience, doesn't -- had no common time with the previous bureau chief. I don't know how that bureau is supposed to succeed with those circumstances. I would call that a misfeasance, I think, is how your term is. I would call that a terrible management decision, to have the success of the bureau and -- with all of that bureau works with, how -- why would you do that?

Q. Understood. Were there other changes that occurred after Sheriff Watson took office that were unusual in how the procedures of the office would work or how your --

A. Procedures for the records bureau to work, or the agency?

Q. Well, the agency, the records bureau. I'm not -- I don't want to limit your response.

A. The records bureau under my management continued to do what it has always done, and we -- due to the staff shortages, it was much more stressful and much more difficult, but the bureau did keep its head above water, so to speak, and managed to get the majority of things done and still done well and accurately, completely. A lot of overtime was used to do so.

They are 50 percent down and have been for over a year. There has been efforts to continue hiring through the normal procedures. And at one point I was able to convince them to fast-track people because the alternative solution for the lack of employees was to bring in temp force personnel through Spherion. Those people would be interviewed by the records bureau staff and determined appropriate or not, and then they would go through a fingerprint-based background check, and they would go through a drug screen, and that was it. And then they'd be brought into the agency, given access to all of the software systems and the critical information that we maintain through the records bureau. Versus an employee, when they go through the application process and the hiring process and the background process, they go through both of those two things as well as a psych eval and a physical agility -- or a physical, I'm sorry, just a physical, and then the background check where the background investigators of the agency would check their references and their employment history and determine that they are a good candidate for the agency.

So if we're doing so little for a temp force employee that we're giving the same access to as a regular full-time employee, why wouldn't we fast-track the incoming applicants that truly want a career with the Alachua County Sheriff's Office? Let's fast-track them, get in the door while you're doing the background process that you're not doing for the Spherion employee. Let me go ahead and start training them. If you find something that says they're not going to be a long-term or great employee, and we're not going to hire them, then so be it; but that doesn't happen all that often based on the interviewing process.

So for a short stretch we were able to bring in four employees as -- on that fast-track program, but then after that the sheriff decided that we are not going to fast-track employees. So as such, the hiring process takes anywhere from minimal six weeks -- which I haven't seen anybody come in in a six-week period in forever -- to eight to twelve weeks because it takes a good eight weeks for the full background process to be completed. And then you have to do a file review that goes through the command staff and includes the sheriff, which typically there's a delay in getting a signature from the sheriff. And then, from there, if the applicant is still employed somewhere else, there's a two-week notice that they're giving their former employer. So many times the applicants that we interview that we really wanted would find work elsewhere before we ever got the background process done.

So that is the reason we have a 50 percent deficit in employees in the records bureau, and that's a big part of the agency, especially with civilian personnel. That happens badly, badly with A and B for the payroll specialist and the accounts payable specialist. And that's all I can think of off the top of my head.

But that -- once again, the decisions that are being made are to the detriment of the agency and, obviously, the community.

Q. Is there any other instances that you're aware of where things have markedly changed because the administration changed?

A. So I was told by our -- that the salary personnel no longer have to enter time sheets. That was done almost immediately once Sheriff Watson took office.

Additionally, the sheriff made an order that he no longer would complete -- the sheriff, not he because he wasn't there previously, but that he would not be completing travel and training forms.

Q. For himself or for anyone?

A. For himself. For himself. He would not be completing travel and training forms. And we've done that for Sheriff Oelrich and Sheriff Darnell throughout history.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Was the agency still paying for training and

travel, though?

A. Oh, yes.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. So how does that work?

A. He has an agency credit card, as many of the bureaus do. So when he would go on travel and training or, you know, to gas up his car, he's got an agency credit card. And so he would just charge things off to the credit card, and there's no documentation.

So he goes to the Florida Sheriff's Association Conference, wherever it is. He obviously stays in a hotel. He drives the gas to get there. So he just -- instead of completing a travel and training form that documents that's where he is and what he's done for the last three days of the conference, that he left at such-and-such and came back, which is why his per diem is what it is, that form isn't -- the sheriff doesn't have to complete that form anymore; all others do.

Q. So does he still collect a per diem?

A. As far as I know.

Q. How is the amount of the per diem determined if there's no documentation?

A. I don't know. The accounting budget and personnel would have to provide that to you.

Q. Are those forms kept by records or kept by Alachua County?

A. Accounting and budget. No, by ASO; but accounting and budget, not by records. If somebody had sent a public record request, they would have sent it to records, and I would have forwarded it to our accounting and budget personnel to provide them.

Q. So this is untrue for an undersheriff. He would provide a --

A. That is my understanding. He still provides travel and training forms if he goes someplace on behalf of agency, but the sheriff does not.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Do you know what bank the credit card is drawn on?

A. No we just changed banks, and I don't remember. I didn't note it.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Are the credit cards issued through the county?

A. No, they're issued through our accounting and budget personnel. All of our finance is through the Alachua County Sheriff's Office, A and B. The county only distributes 1/12th of the budget to us monthly, and then it's up to us to distribute that into the various accounts and manage all of our accounting, purchasing, credit cards, everything that we do, payroll, all of that.

Q. Who audits records?

A. The only audits records has is by the Florida Department of Law Enforcement in terms of our FCIC, NCIC transactions and the -- we participate. We're not the direct contact.

So FDLE conducts two different audits related to the agency, and that is one for FCIC NCIC entries and operations, and then the other is for our security awareness performance.

Q. Do you know who audits sheriff's office finance, the accounting and budget process for the sheriff's office?

A. It's an accounting firm, local, and I don't know the name of them. I could get it for you easily, though.

Q. Is it through the sheriff's office that the auditing is done, or is it the county? Like, who orders the audit?

A. It's an independent audit that is done every three years annually, and it just happens, from my understanding. There's no special order for a new audit. It's a routine thing.

Q. When is the last time that happened? Do you know?

A. It's annual. Last year.

Q. Oh, it's annual. I thought you said it's every three years.

A. No. The FDLE audit of FCIC is every three years.

Q. But then accounting and budget?

A. Accounting and budget's annual audit is by a local, if I recall.

Q. It's annual?

A. Yeah.

Q. Okay. Anything else that you have notated that is unusual or meets the criteria that I've described to you that we've haven't talked about?

A. So at some point -- I don't know if you guys have the circumstance to know what I'm talking about.

So many years ago we were -- we, the Alachua County Sheriff's Office, was audited by the IRS. And during that audit, it was determined that, for those individuals that we assigned a vehicle to that were command staff, they had to pay taxes on that as a benefit. We were not doing that taxing correctly. So the outcome of that was, we learned that we had to tax by the highest or most expensive method possible as a benefit to our employees.

When Sheriff Watson came in, that policy was not appreciated, and as such, Jacob Rush was apparently assigned to look into the matter. He referenced Leon County Sheriff's Office, who taxes at a different rate per their policy. As such, Sheriff Watson implemented or changed that taxing procedure to the way Leon County does it. That is against what the IRS audit required at the time. So accounting and budget personnel would have more information on that.

Q. You seem to have provided some additional documentation. What was that in reference to?

A. Well, all it is, there's two reports here. One is a termination report, and the other is the new hire; and it simply reflects all of the people that have left the agency since January 5th of 2021 when Sheriff Watson took office. And what it reflects is -- and I made an adjustment because the guardian participants at the schools is included in these lists, and they are not paid employees of this agency. They had to be for documentation of the training bureau and that sort of thing, but -- so anyway, since that time we have lost 323 employees, many of whom simply left the agency.

You'll note that the reason code is retired, voluntarily terminated, that sort of thing, deceased, but the retirees, many of those people -- I'm not sure "many" is fair, but some of those retirees left because they -- because of the treatment of the agency. So sadly, that's the case.

So 323 employees have left the agency, and since that same time period we've only hired 131. So basically for every three people that have left the agency we have only been able to replace them with one.

Q. What's the net number of positions down?

A. 323 minus 131.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. Is that 192?

A. That sounds right.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. So essentially involuntarily staff reduction by 190-plus FTEs?

A. And the total FTEs is 867.75. And so if you look at the withdrawal percentage, it's 37 percent over two years. If you look at the net, it's still a 20-something percent. It might be just 20 percent.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. Where did you fall into that retirement

category? Were you planning on leaving on 3/31/23?

A. I made my full retirement, but the last two years have been extremely torturous.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Does that list have the date?

A. Yes, has the date of hire, has the date of designation.

Q. Does that include sworn?

A. Yes, it includes everybody.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Does it include the jail?

A. Yes. The challenge is that it is by fund number, so it's a little tricky in terms of figuring who are jail personnel. Some of the funds are truly labeled properly. Some of them are a little more challenging.

Q. But the information is there if you can dissect it.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Anything else?

A. Back to -- well, I won't label it. I will say yes.

What I've observed and take issue with, I guess, is that we have promoted people -- Sheriff Watson has promoted people from deputy and maybe sergeant to positions of major over a very short period of time. And nothing against those individuals.

I didn't know Robert Stafford as the person that went from sergeant to major at the department of the jail. I know Lance Yaeger somewhat as a deputy. At the time I first met him he was a detective, and now he's major and possibly chief of staff; that remains remain to be seen if he stays.

But the point of those things is that Sheriff Watson came in and trusted just about no one in the agency. He demoted the two majors, which is his right, but then he took captains and moved them around from position to position to position. He's constantly moving people around, lieutenants and sergeants. And what that has done to this agency is that you have a lot of people in positions with little to no experience that did not work their way up, so those promotions, those individuals never worked as sergeants, lieutenants, captains. They have none of that management experience in a civilian agency. Yes, Lance Yaeger has military experience, but it's different.

As such, they're coming through the ranks -- they're not coming through the ranks. They're just getting into these management positions, and Sheriff Watson trusts no one except these people that he's brought in around him. As such, the agency is no longer a team effort. Ideas are not being shared.

It's not a healthy organization anymore, and it is not the premier agency it was over two years ago, unfortunately, and it's very sad to see.

Q. Understood.

A. I would think Laura Knudson, Lori Stophel should be in your group, potentially, as people that have endured his wrath and had to leave earlier than wanting.

So Laura was a bureau chief, and do you want her story from my perspective?

Q. No, we're running out of time. I apologize. We need to move on, and we will reach out to them.

A. The accounting and budget, the wasteful spending, the changes between administrators. And I don't even know what I meant by that note, so never mind about that. Those are, I think --

MR. KRAMER: Let's talk about that drive, gentlemen, what is your -- what is it you'd like to do with that?

(An off-the-record discussion was had.)

records as well. That's the broad overview.

Q. I do want to ask one specific question along those lines. It is my understanding that the sheriff's office maintains a system through their cell phones where the text messaging of the cell phones is recorded for preservation. Was that part of the record-keeping function?

A. No.

Q. So if someone had made a public records request to the agency and said, I want the text messages of a particular individual, what would you -- I'm assuming you were the public records custodian. How would you have handled that situation?

A. Yes, I would take that request and forward it to our information technology bureau personnel and ask them to provide me with an estimate to produce.

At which point, once I had the estimate, I would respond to the requester and say, "This is the estimate to produce them, to gather them, produce them. And once that payment is received, if you wish to proceed, a review of those text messages will be conducted to ensure that all public record exemptions are applied appropriately. We will provide you an estimate based on the quantity for the time to do that."

Q. During the time that Sheriff Watson was there with you, did you receive any requests that you remember for his text messages?

A. Nothing is coming to mind at the moment.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. PRR requests, are they -- is that request kept as part of a public record?

A. So, yes. So public record requests come into the agencies in a number of formats. So the emails are definitely saved. The paper copies, I had three years prior for anything that came in. I'm pretty sure we did not get any handwritten letters requesting text messages.

I'm trying to think about topics and text messages, and that's why I say the topics that I recall from -- related to anything with Sheriff Watson, I just don't remember there being -- oh, yes, there was. Yes, there was. What was it?

There were -- I think it was the PBA that asked for text messages for -- and it was a bunch -- it was the commanders. It was between Joel Decoursey, Sheriff Watson. Lance Yaeger was in that mix. There was -- George Corine was in the mix, and there might have been another one or two people. And what resulted from that were very bland messages: Call me about a subject. I need to talk with you. Are you available?

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Let me ask you this question. When that request came in, how were the sheriff's text messages obtained?

A. Through information technology, through the electronic system.

Q. So other than that instance, was there ever a time that you would have been given text messages from anyone that came from the sheriff's telephone saying these are public records that need to be recorded to the system in some way, shape, or form other than that incident which you've already described? I know that's a weird question, and I'll follow up with the why of it.

A. I'm not sure I'm understanding the question, so tell me that again, please.

Q. Let me give you a little bit further background. Our understanding is that the sheriff's office employs a system on the phones themselves that document the text messages to a server that IT can then go to that server, obtain the text messages, give them to you as part of the public records function of the office.

A. Sounds right.
Q. Are you with me so far?
A. Yes.
Q. It's our understanding the sheriff, his telephone has never been connected to that system. Okay?
A. Okay.
Q. So my question to you is, if the sheriff had anything on his phone that's a public record, how is it being preserved by the sheriff's office?
A. It is my understanding that it's not, because I remember -- and I'd have to produce -- I'd have to say produce the responses to be certain, but I seem to remember that I was told at the time the sheriff had not connected his phone or done the proper steps on his phone to be able to document -- was it the text messages, or was it more of the geocoding of his location? I'd have to see the -- I'd have to find the emails to do it.
Q. Understood. But my question is, since you're the public records custodian, or you have been for the administration until you left recently, was there any instance you're aware of where the sheriff had made any other effort to preserve public records that were created by text messaging referencing cases under investigation which would be a public record?

A. Sheriff Watson never worked with me directly or indirectly to preserve any kind of text messages on his phone that I can recall, and I'm pretty sure there's nothing like that.

Q. And when you did have the one public records request for Sheriff Watson's phone that involved his phone you've referenced, you did end up providing public records from Sheriff Watson's phone to the requester?

A. That's what I'm trying to remember. I can tell you I remember messages from Joel Decoursey and Chad Scott and George Corine and all of them saying "I need to talk with you. Give me a call," but I'm trying to think if I remember seeing anything from Sheriff Watson going back to them.

Q. We can easily determine that because the public record response remains a public record at the sheriff's office.

A. Yes.

Q. And the requester was the PBA?

A. I'm pretty certain it was the PBA, and I can even tell you where it was saved in my K Drive, our shared -- we would have a drive that was specific to us and all of our emails and folders, and I maintained

all of that. And I wasn't able to have a copy to leave the agency, but it was in my K Drive under the PBA.

I might actually have that record because at the time we were saving -- I would save things -- any public record response, I would save it in a temp file to be able to duplicate it; and I have all those on a thumb drive from when I left the agency.

Q. Is that the thumb drive?

A. Yes, sir. Now, I haven't looked at it. I don't know that it -- I can't -- I mean, you'd have to test it to see; but it was cleared by our agency IT people before I used it to download the K Drive. So it was to be able to reference anything that I might need to, to help the agency after I left. So I think it should be on there if I saved it to that K Drive, or to that temp file.

Q. We'll address that in just a little bit.

You mentioned that there was an incident recently that you were concerned about that may have been either malfeasance, misfeasance, or unlawful by the sheriff. Can you tell me what that was?

A. It was more of a managerial decision. So after my retirement -- prior to my retirement, Courtney Bereka (phonetic) had been selected to replace me. And effective January 2nd, she was supposed to begin working with me to learn my job and to help with a smooth transition.

So we did not get much time together to work, but there would be instances where something would -- I would take care of a task or a transaction that I thought would be rare and she should have a copy of it, or I would go into her office as the administrative assistant to Sheriff Watson, or executive assistant, excuse me, and share with her. And over that three-month period right before I resigned, she apparently -- and this part is hearsay, but she apparently made the decision that she preferred to remain as the executive assistant rather than transfer to the records bureau chief, and I was not made aware of that until after I left.

So a week after -- I'm not even sure how long. A few days after I retired from the agency, it was announced that somebody else would be taking my position; and that person has always worked in the corrections environment and, I don't believe, has any records bureau experience or law enforcement experience, just from a corrections perspective. He was a supervisor reporting to the bureau chief in booking support.

So he was selected to come over, basically, two weeks after I left. The administrative assistant, Marie Davis, had worked with me for over a decade and is probably the most informed about what I do as my assistant working with me, etc., doing the various tasks. She was also transferred at the same day that the new bureau chief would report. She was transferred out of the bureau and over to the department of the jail to report to the major.

My point of all that is that there are three supervisors reporting to the bureau chief each with only one year's experience or less. Then you take the administrative assistant, and you relocate her to another job that is pretty high requirement -- task requirement as the administrative assistant to the major of the jail. And then you bring in a corrections person with very little, if no, law enforcement experience, and that entire bureau, how do you think that's going to work out? Not well.

No experience, doesn't -- had no common time with the previous bureau chief. I don't know how that bureau is supposed to succeed with those circumstances. I would call that a misfeasance, I think, is how your term is. I would call that a terrible management decision, to have the success of the bureau and -- with all of that bureau works with, how -- why would you do that?

Q. Understood. Were there other changes that occurred after Sheriff Watson took office that were unusual in how the procedures of the office would work or how your --

A. Procedures for the records bureau to work, or the agency?

Q. Well, the agency, the records bureau. I'm not -- I don't want to limit your response.

A. The records bureau under my management continued to do what it has always done, and we -- due to the staff shortages, it was much more stressful and much more difficult, but the bureau did keep its head above water, so to speak, and managed to get the majority of things done and still done well and accurately, completely. A lot of overtime was used to do so.

They are 50 percent down and have been for over a year. There has been efforts to continue hiring through the normal procedures. And at one point I was able to convince them to fast-track people because the alternative solution for the lack of employees was to bring in temp force personnel through Spherion. Those people would be interviewed by the records bureau staff and determined appropriate or not, and then they would go through a fingerprint-based background check, and they would go through a drug screen, and that was it. And then they'd be brought into the agency, given access to all of the software systems and the critical information that we maintain through the records bureau. Versus an employee, when they go through the application process and the hiring process and the background process, they go through both of those two things as well as a psych eval and a physical agility -- or a physical, I'm sorry, just a physical, and then the background check where the background investigators of the agency would check their references and their employment history and determine that they are a good candidate for the agency.

So if we're doing so little for a temp force employee that we're giving the same access to as a regular full-time employee, why wouldn't we fast-track the incoming applicants that truly want a career with the Alachua County Sheriff's Office? Let's fast-track them, get in the door while you're doing the background process that you're not doing for the Spherion employee. Let me go ahead and start training them. If you find something that says they're not going to be a long-term or great employee, and we're not going to hire them, then so be it; but that doesn't happen all that often based on the interviewing process.

So for a short stretch we were able to bring in four employees as -- on that fast-track program, but then after that the sheriff decided that we are not going to fast-track employees. So as such, the hiring process takes anywhere from minimal six weeks -- which I haven't seen anybody come in in a six-week period in forever -- to eight to twelve weeks because it takes a good eight weeks for the full background process to be completed. And then you have to do a file review that goes through the command staff and includes the sheriff, which typically there's a delay in getting a signature from the sheriff. And then, from there, if the applicant is still employed somewhere else, there's a two-week notice that they're giving their former employer. So many times the applicants that we interview that we really wanted would find work elsewhere before we ever got the background process done.

So that is the reason we have a 50 percent deficit in employees in the records bureau, and that's a big part of the agency, especially with civilian personnel. That happens badly, badly with A and B for the payroll specialist and the accounts payable specialist. And that's all I can think of off the top of my head.

But that -- once again, the decisions that are being made are to the detriment of the agency and, obviously, the community.

Q. Is there any other instances that you're aware of where things have markedly changed because the administration changed?

A. So I was told by our -- that the salary personnel no longer have to enter time sheets. That was done almost immediately once Sheriff Watson took office.

Additionally, the sheriff made an order that he no longer would complete -- the sheriff, not he because he wasn't there previously, but that he would not be completing travel and training forms.

Q. For himself or for anyone?

A. For himself. For himself. He would not be completing travel and training forms. And we've done that for Sheriff Oelrich and Sheriff Darnell throughout history.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Was the agency still paying for training and

travel, though?

A. Oh, yes.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. So how does that work?

A. He has an agency credit card, as many of the bureaus do. So when he would go on travel and training or, you know, to gas up his car, he's got an agency credit card. And so he would just charge things off to the credit card, and there's no documentation.

So he goes to the Florida Sheriff's Association Conference, wherever it is. He obviously stays in a hotel. He drives the gas to get there. So he just -- instead of completing a travel and training form that documents that's where he is and what he's done for the last three days of the conference, that he left at such-and-such and came back, which is why his per diem is what it is, that form isn't -- the sheriff doesn't have to complete that form anymore; all others do.

Q. So does he still collect a per diem?

A. As far as I know.

Q. How is the amount of the per diem determined if there's no documentation?

A. I don't know. The accounting budget and personnel would have to provide that to you.

Q. Are those forms kept by records or kept by Alachua County?

A. Accounting and budget. No, by ASO; but accounting and budget, not by records. If somebody had sent a public record request, they would have sent it to records, and I would have forwarded it to our accounting and budget personnel to provide them.

Q. So this is untrue for an undersheriff. He would provide a --

A. That is my understanding. He still provides travel and training forms if he goes someplace on behalf of agency, but the sheriff does not.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Do you know what bank the credit card is drawn on?

A. No we just changed banks, and I don't remember. I didn't note it.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Are the credit cards issued through the county?

A. No, they're issued through our accounting and budget personnel. All of our finance is through the Alachua County Sheriff's Office, A and B. The county only distributes 1/12th of the budget to us monthly, and then it's up to us to distribute that into the various accounts and manage all of our accounting, purchasing, credit cards, everything that we do, payroll, all of that.

Q. Who audits records?

A. The only audits records has is by the Florida Department of Law Enforcement in terms of our FCIC, NCIC transactions and the -- we participate. We're not the direct contact.

So FDLE conducts two different audits related to the agency, and that is one for FCIC NCIC entries and operations, and then the other is for our security awareness performance.

Q. Do you know who audits sheriff's office finance, the accounting and budget process for the sheriff's office?

A. It's an accounting firm, local, and I don't know the name of them. I could get it for you easily, though.

Q. Is it through the sheriff's office that the auditing is done, or is it the county? Like, who orders the audit?

A. It's an independent audit that is done every three years annually, and it just happens, from my understanding. There's no special order for a new audit. It's a routine thing.

Q. When is the last time that happened? Do you know?

A. It's annual. Last year.

Q. Oh, it's annual. I thought you said it's every three years.

A. No. The FDLE audit of FCIC is every three years.

Q. But then accounting and budget?

A. Accounting and budget's annual audit is by a local, if I recall.

Q. It's annual?

A. Yeah.

Q. Okay. Anything else that you have notated that is unusual or meets the criteria that I've described to you that we've haven't talked about?

A. So at some point -- I don't know if you guys have the circumstance to know what I'm talking about.

So many years ago we were -- we, the Alachua County Sheriff's Office, was audited by the IRS. And during that audit, it was determined that, for those individuals that we assigned a vehicle to that were command staff, they had to pay taxes on that as a benefit. We were not doing that taxing correctly. So the outcome of that was, we learned that we had to tax by the highest or most expensive method possible as a benefit to our employees.

When Sheriff Watson came in, that policy was not appreciated, and as such, Jacob Rush was apparently assigned to look into the matter. He referenced Leon County Sheriff's Office, who taxes at a different rate per their policy. As such, Sheriff Watson implemented or changed that taxing procedure to the way Leon County does it. That is against what the IRS audit required at the time. So accounting and budget personnel would have more information on that.

Q. You seem to have provided some additional documentation. What was that in reference to?

A. Well, all it is, there's two reports here. One is a termination report, and the other is the new hire; and it simply reflects all of the people that have left the agency since January 5th of 2021 when Sheriff Watson took office. And what it reflects is -- and I made an adjustment because the guardian participants at the schools is included in these lists, and they are not paid employees of this agency. They had to be for documentation of the training bureau and that sort of thing, but -- so anyway, since that time we have lost 323 employees, many of whom simply left the agency.

You'll note that the reason code is retired, voluntarily terminated, that sort of thing, deceased, but the retirees, many of those people -- I'm not sure "many" is fair, but some of those retirees left because they -- because of the treatment of the agency. So sadly, that's the case.

So 323 employees have left the agency, and since that same time period we've only hired 131. So basically for every three people that have left the agency we have only been able to replace them with one.

Q. What's the net number of positions down?

A. 323 minus 131.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. Is that 192?

A. That sounds right.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. So essentially involuntarily staff reduction by 190-plus FTEs?

A. And the total FTEs is 867.75. And so if you look at the withdrawal percentage, it's 37 percent over two years. If you look at the net, it's still a 20-something percent. It might be just 20 percent.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. Where did you fall into that retirement

category? Were you planning on leaving on 3/31/23?

A. I made my full retirement, but the last two years have been extremely torturous.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Does that list have the date?

A. Yes, has the date of hire, has the date of designation.

Q. Does that include sworn?

A. Yes, it includes everybody.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Does it include the jail?

A. Yes. The challenge is that it is by fund number, so it's a little tricky in terms of figuring who are jail personnel. Some of the funds are truly labeled properly. Some of them are a little more challenging.

Q. But the information is there if you can dissect it.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Anything else?

A. Back to -- well, I won't label it. I will say yes.

What I've observed and take issue with, I guess, is that we have promoted people -- Sheriff Watson has promoted people from deputy and maybe sergeant to positions of major over a very short period of time. And nothing against those individuals.

I didn't know Robert Stafford as the person that went from sergeant to major at the department of the jail. I know Lance Yaeger somewhat as a deputy. At the time I first met him he was a detective, and now he's major and possibly chief of staff; that remains remain to be seen if he stays.

But the point of those things is that Sheriff Watson came in and trusted just about no one in the agency. He demoted the two majors, which is his right, but then he took captains and moved them around from position to position to position. He's constantly moving people around, lieutenants and sergeants. And what that has done to this agency is that you have a lot of people in positions with little to no experience that did not work their way up, so those promotions, those individuals never worked as sergeants, lieutenants, captains. They have none of that management experience in a civilian agency. Yes, Lance Yaeger has military experience, but it's different.

As such, they're coming through the ranks -- they're not coming through the ranks. They're just getting into these management positions, and Sheriff Watson trusts no one except these people that he's brought in around him. As such, the agency is no longer a team effort. Ideas are not being shared.

It's not a healthy organization anymore, and it is not the premier agency it was over two years ago, unfortunately, and it's very sad to see.

Q. Understood.

A. I would think Laura Knudson, Lori Stophel should be in your group, potentially, as people that have endured his wrath and had to leave earlier than wanting.

So Laura was a bureau chief, and do you want her story from my perspective?

Q. No, we're running out of time. I apologize. We need to move on, and we will reach out to them.

A. The accounting and budget, the wasteful spending, the changes between administrators. And I don't even know what I meant by that note, so never mind about that. Those are, I think --

MR. KRAMER: Let's talk about that drive, gentlemen, what is your -- what is it you'd like to do with that?

(An off-the-record discussion was had.)

Q. During the time that Sheriff Watson was there with you, did you receive any requests that you remember for his text messages?

A. Nothing is coming to mind at the moment.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. PRR requests, are they -- is that request kept as part of a public record?

A. So, yes. So public record requests come into the agencies in a number of formats. So the emails are definitely saved. The paper copies, I had three years prior for anything that came in. I'm pretty sure we did not get any handwritten letters requesting text messages.

I'm trying to think about topics and text messages, and that's why I say the topics that I recall from -- related to anything with Sheriff Watson, I just don't remember there being -- oh, yes, there was. Yes, there was. What was it?

There were -- I think it was the PBA that asked for text messages for -- and it was a bunch -- it was the commanders. It was between Joel Decoursey, Sheriff Watson. Lance Yaeger was in that mix. There was -- George Corine was in the mix, and there might have been another one or two people. And what resulted from that were very bland messages: Call me about a subject. I need to talk with you. Are you available?

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Let me ask you this question. When that request came in, how were the sheriff's text messages obtained?

A. Through information technology, through the electronic system.

Q. So other than that instance, was there ever a time that you would have been given text messages from anyone that came from the sheriff's telephone saying these are public records that need to be recorded to the system in some way, shape, or form other than that incident which you've already described? I know that's a weird question, and I'll follow up with the why of it.

A. I'm not sure I'm understanding the question, so tell me that again, please.

Q. Let me give you a little bit further background. Our understanding is that the sheriff's office employs a system on the phones themselves that document the text messages to a server that IT can then go to that server, obtain the text messages, give them to you as part of the public records function of the office.

A. Sounds right.
Q. Are you with me so far?
A. Yes.
Q. It's our understanding the sheriff, his telephone has never been connected to that system. Okay?
A. Okay.
Q. So my question to you is, if the sheriff had anything on his phone that's a public record, how is it being preserved by the sheriff's office?
A. It is my understanding that it's not, because I remember -- and I'd have to produce -- I'd have to say produce the responses to be certain, but I seem to remember that I was told at the time the sheriff had not connected his phone or done the proper steps on his phone to be able to document -- was it the text messages, or was it more of the geocoding of his location? I'd have to see the -- I'd have to find the emails to do it.
Q. Understood. But my question is, since you're the public records custodian, or you have been for the administration until you left recently, was there any instance you're aware of where the sheriff had made any other effort to preserve public records that were created by text messaging referencing cases under investigation which would be a public record?

A. Sheriff Watson never worked with me directly or indirectly to preserve any kind of text messages on his phone that I can recall, and I'm pretty sure there's nothing like that.

Q. And when you did have the one public records request for Sheriff Watson's phone that involved his phone you've referenced, you did end up providing public records from Sheriff Watson's phone to the requester?

A. That's what I'm trying to remember. I can tell you I remember messages from Joel Decoursey and Chad Scott and George Corine and all of them saying "I need to talk with you. Give me a call," but I'm trying to think if I remember seeing anything from Sheriff Watson going back to them.

Q. We can easily determine that because the public record response remains a public record at the sheriff's office.

A. Yes.

Q. And the requester was the PBA?

A. I'm pretty certain it was the PBA, and I can even tell you where it was saved in my K Drive, our shared -- we would have a drive that was specific to us and all of our emails and folders, and I maintained

all of that. And I wasn't able to have a copy to leave the agency, but it was in my K Drive under the PBA.

I might actually have that record because at the time we were saving -- I would save things -- any public record response, I would save it in a temp file to be able to duplicate it; and I have all those on a thumb drive from when I left the agency.

Q. Is that the thumb drive?

A. Yes, sir. Now, I haven't looked at it. I don't know that it -- I can't -- I mean, you'd have to test it to see; but it was cleared by our agency IT people before I used it to download the K Drive. So it was to be able to reference anything that I might need to, to help the agency after I left. So I think it should be on there if I saved it to that K Drive, or to that temp file.

Q. We'll address that in just a little bit.

You mentioned that there was an incident recently that you were concerned about that may have been either malfeasance, misfeasance, or unlawful by the sheriff. Can you tell me what that was?

A. It was more of a managerial decision. So after my retirement -- prior to my retirement, Courtney Bereka (phonetic) had been selected to replace me. And effective January 2nd, she was supposed to begin working with me to learn my job and to help with a smooth transition.

So we did not get much time together to work, but there would be instances where something would -- I would take care of a task or a transaction that I thought would be rare and she should have a copy of it, or I would go into her office as the administrative assistant to Sheriff Watson, or executive assistant, excuse me, and share with her. And over that three-month period right before I resigned, she apparently -- and this part is hearsay, but she apparently made the decision that she preferred to remain as the executive assistant rather than transfer to the records bureau chief, and I was not made aware of that until after I left.

So a week after -- I'm not even sure how long. A few days after I retired from the agency, it was announced that somebody else would be taking my position; and that person has always worked in the corrections environment and, I don't believe, has any records bureau experience or law enforcement experience, just from a corrections perspective. He was a supervisor reporting to the bureau chief in booking support.

So he was selected to come over, basically, two weeks after I left. The administrative assistant, Marie Davis, had worked with me for over a decade and is probably the most informed about what I do as my assistant working with me, etc., doing the various tasks. She was also transferred at the same day that the new bureau chief would report. She was transferred out of the bureau and over to the department of the jail to report to the major.

My point of all that is that there are three supervisors reporting to the bureau chief each with only one year's experience or less. Then you take the administrative assistant, and you relocate her to another job that is pretty high requirement -- task requirement as the administrative assistant to the major of the jail. And then you bring in a corrections person with very little, if no, law enforcement experience, and that entire bureau, how do you think that's going to work out? Not well.

No experience, doesn't -- had no common time with the previous bureau chief. I don't know how that bureau is supposed to succeed with those circumstances. I would call that a misfeasance, I think, is how your term is. I would call that a terrible management decision, to have the success of the bureau and -- with all of that bureau works with, how -- why would you do that?

Q. Understood. Were there other changes that occurred after Sheriff Watson took office that were unusual in how the procedures of the office would work or how your --

A. Procedures for the records bureau to work, or the agency?

Q. Well, the agency, the records bureau. I'm not -- I don't want to limit your response.

A. The records bureau under my management continued to do what it has always done, and we -- due to the staff shortages, it was much more stressful and much more difficult, but the bureau did keep its head above water, so to speak, and managed to get the majority of things done and still done well and accurately, completely. A lot of overtime was used to do so.

They are 50 percent down and have been for over a year. There has been efforts to continue hiring through the normal procedures. And at one point I was able to convince them to fast-track people because the alternative solution for the lack of employees was to bring in temp force personnel through Spherion. Those people would be interviewed by the records bureau staff and determined appropriate or not, and then they would go through a fingerprint-based background check, and they would go through a drug screen, and that was it. And then they'd be brought into the agency, given access to all of the software systems and the critical information that we maintain through the records bureau. Versus an employee, when they go through the application process and the hiring process and the background process, they go through both of those two things as well as a psych eval and a physical agility -- or a physical, I'm sorry, just a physical, and then the background check where the background investigators of the agency would check their references and their employment history and determine that they are a good candidate for the agency.

So if we're doing so little for a temp force employee that we're giving the same access to as a regular full-time employee, why wouldn't we fast-track the incoming applicants that truly want a career with the Alachua County Sheriff's Office? Let's fast-track them, get in the door while you're doing the background process that you're not doing for the Spherion employee. Let me go ahead and start training them. If you find something that says they're not going to be a long-term or great employee, and we're not going to hire them, then so be it; but that doesn't happen all that often based on the interviewing process.

So for a short stretch we were able to bring in four employees as -- on that fast-track program, but then after that the sheriff decided that we are not going to fast-track employees. So as such, the hiring process takes anywhere from minimal six weeks -- which I haven't seen anybody come in in a six-week period in forever -- to eight to twelve weeks because it takes a good eight weeks for the full background process to be completed. And then you have to do a file review that goes through the command staff and includes the sheriff, which typically there's a delay in getting a signature from the sheriff. And then, from there, if the applicant is still employed somewhere else, there's a two-week notice that they're giving their former employer. So many times the applicants that we interview that we really wanted would find work elsewhere before we ever got the background process done.

So that is the reason we have a 50 percent deficit in employees in the records bureau, and that's a big part of the agency, especially with civilian personnel. That happens badly, badly with A and B for the payroll specialist and the accounts payable specialist. And that's all I can think of off the top of my head.

But that -- once again, the decisions that are being made are to the detriment of the agency and, obviously, the community.

Q. Is there any other instances that you're aware of where things have markedly changed because the administration changed?

A. So I was told by our -- that the salary personnel no longer have to enter time sheets. That was done almost immediately once Sheriff Watson took office.

Additionally, the sheriff made an order that he no longer would complete -- the sheriff, not he because he wasn't there previously, but that he would not be completing travel and training forms.

Q. For himself or for anyone?

A. For himself. For himself. He would not be completing travel and training forms. And we've done that for Sheriff Oelrich and Sheriff Darnell throughout history.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Was the agency still paying for training and

travel, though?

A. Oh, yes.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. So how does that work?

A. He has an agency credit card, as many of the bureaus do. So when he would go on travel and training or, you know, to gas up his car, he's got an agency credit card. And so he would just charge things off to the credit card, and there's no documentation.

So he goes to the Florida Sheriff's Association Conference, wherever it is. He obviously stays in a hotel. He drives the gas to get there. So he just -- instead of completing a travel and training form that documents that's where he is and what he's done for the last three days of the conference, that he left at such-and-such and came back, which is why his per diem is what it is, that form isn't -- the sheriff doesn't have to complete that form anymore; all others do.

Q. So does he still collect a per diem?

A. As far as I know.

Q. How is the amount of the per diem determined if there's no documentation?

A. I don't know. The accounting budget and personnel would have to provide that to you.

Q. Are those forms kept by records or kept by Alachua County?

A. Accounting and budget. No, by ASO; but accounting and budget, not by records. If somebody had sent a public record request, they would have sent it to records, and I would have forwarded it to our accounting and budget personnel to provide them.

Q. So this is untrue for an undersheriff. He would provide a --

A. That is my understanding. He still provides travel and training forms if he goes someplace on behalf of agency, but the sheriff does not.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Do you know what bank the credit card is drawn on?

A. No we just changed banks, and I don't remember. I didn't note it.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Are the credit cards issued through the county?

A. No, they're issued through our accounting and budget personnel. All of our finance is through the Alachua County Sheriff's Office, A and B. The county only distributes 1/12th of the budget to us monthly, and then it's up to us to distribute that into the various accounts and manage all of our accounting, purchasing, credit cards, everything that we do, payroll, all of that.

Q. Who audits records?

A. The only audits records has is by the Florida Department of Law Enforcement in terms of our FCIC, NCIC transactions and the -- we participate. We're not the direct contact.

So FDLE conducts two different audits related to the agency, and that is one for FCIC NCIC entries and operations, and then the other is for our security awareness performance.

Q. Do you know who audits sheriff's office finance, the accounting and budget process for the sheriff's office?

A. It's an accounting firm, local, and I don't know the name of them. I could get it for you easily, though.

Q. Is it through the sheriff's office that the auditing is done, or is it the county? Like, who orders the audit?

A. It's an independent audit that is done every three years annually, and it just happens, from my understanding. There's no special order for a new audit. It's a routine thing.

Q. When is the last time that happened? Do you know?

A. It's annual. Last year.

Q. Oh, it's annual. I thought you said it's every three years.

A. No. The FDLE audit of FCIC is every three years.

Q. But then accounting and budget?

A. Accounting and budget's annual audit is by a local, if I recall.

Q. It's annual?

A. Yeah.

Q. Okay. Anything else that you have notated that is unusual or meets the criteria that I've described to you that we've haven't talked about?

A. So at some point -- I don't know if you guys have the circumstance to know what I'm talking about.

So many years ago we were -- we, the Alachua County Sheriff's Office, was audited by the IRS. And during that audit, it was determined that, for those individuals that we assigned a vehicle to that were command staff, they had to pay taxes on that as a benefit. We were not doing that taxing correctly. So the outcome of that was, we learned that we had to tax by the highest or most expensive method possible as a benefit to our employees.

When Sheriff Watson came in, that policy was not appreciated, and as such, Jacob Rush was apparently assigned to look into the matter. He referenced Leon County Sheriff's Office, who taxes at a different rate per their policy. As such, Sheriff Watson implemented or changed that taxing procedure to the way Leon County does it. That is against what the IRS audit required at the time. So accounting and budget personnel would have more information on that.

Q. You seem to have provided some additional documentation. What was that in reference to?

A. Well, all it is, there's two reports here. One is a termination report, and the other is the new hire; and it simply reflects all of the people that have left the agency since January 5th of 2021 when Sheriff Watson took office. And what it reflects is -- and I made an adjustment because the guardian participants at the schools is included in these lists, and they are not paid employees of this agency. They had to be for documentation of the training bureau and that sort of thing, but -- so anyway, since that time we have lost 323 employees, many of whom simply left the agency.

You'll note that the reason code is retired, voluntarily terminated, that sort of thing, deceased, but the retirees, many of those people -- I'm not sure "many" is fair, but some of those retirees left because they -- because of the treatment of the agency. So sadly, that's the case.

So 323 employees have left the agency, and since that same time period we've only hired 131. So basically for every three people that have left the agency we have only been able to replace them with one.

Q. What's the net number of positions down?

A. 323 minus 131.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. Is that 192?

A. That sounds right.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. So essentially involuntarily staff reduction by 190-plus FTEs?

A. And the total FTEs is 867.75. And so if you look at the withdrawal percentage, it's 37 percent over two years. If you look at the net, it's still a 20-something percent. It might be just 20 percent.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. Where did you fall into that retirement

category? Were you planning on leaving on 3/31/23?

A. I made my full retirement, but the last two years have been extremely torturous.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Does that list have the date?

A. Yes, has the date of hire, has the date of designation.

Q. Does that include sworn?

A. Yes, it includes everybody.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Does it include the jail?

A. Yes. The challenge is that it is by fund number, so it's a little tricky in terms of figuring who are jail personnel. Some of the funds are truly labeled properly. Some of them are a little more challenging.

Q. But the information is there if you can dissect it.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Anything else?

A. Back to -- well, I won't label it. I will say yes.

What I've observed and take issue with, I guess, is that we have promoted people -- Sheriff Watson has promoted people from deputy and maybe sergeant to positions of major over a very short period of time. And nothing against those individuals.

I didn't know Robert Stafford as the person that went from sergeant to major at the department of the jail. I know Lance Yaeger somewhat as a deputy. At the time I first met him he was a detective, and now he's major and possibly chief of staff; that remains remain to be seen if he stays.

But the point of those things is that Sheriff Watson came in and trusted just about no one in the agency. He demoted the two majors, which is his right, but then he took captains and moved them around from position to position to position. He's constantly moving people around, lieutenants and sergeants. And what that has done to this agency is that you have a lot of people in positions with little to no experience that did not work their way up, so those promotions, those individuals never worked as sergeants, lieutenants, captains. They have none of that management experience in a civilian agency. Yes, Lance Yaeger has military experience, but it's different.

As such, they're coming through the ranks -- they're not coming through the ranks. They're just getting into these management positions, and Sheriff Watson trusts no one except these people that he's brought in around him. As such, the agency is no longer a team effort. Ideas are not being shared.

It's not a healthy organization anymore, and it is not the premier agency it was over two years ago, unfortunately, and it's very sad to see.

Q. Understood.

A. I would think Laura Knudson, Lori Stophel should be in your group, potentially, as people that have endured his wrath and had to leave earlier than wanting.

So Laura was a bureau chief, and do you want her story from my perspective?

Q. No, we're running out of time. I apologize. We need to move on, and we will reach out to them.

A. The accounting and budget, the wasteful spending, the changes between administrators. And I don't even know what I meant by that note, so never mind about that. Those are, I think --

MR. KRAMER: Let's talk about that drive, gentlemen, what is your -- what is it you'd like to do with that?

(An off-the-record discussion was had.)

about a subject. I need to talk with you. Are you available?

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Let me ask you this question. When that request came in, how were the sheriff's text messages obtained?

A. Through information technology, through the electronic system.

Q. So other than that instance, was there ever a time that you would have been given text messages from anyone that came from the sheriff's telephone saying these are public records that need to be recorded to the system in some way, shape, or form other than that incident which you've already described? I know that's a weird question, and I'll follow up with the why of it.

A. I'm not sure I'm understanding the question, so tell me that again, please.

Q. Let me give you a little bit further background. Our understanding is that the sheriff's office employs a system on the phones themselves that document the text messages to a server that IT can then go to that server, obtain the text messages, give them to you as part of the public records function of the office.

A. Sounds right.
Q. Are you with me so far?
A. Yes.
Q. It's our understanding the sheriff, his telephone has never been connected to that system. Okay?
A. Okay.
Q. So my question to you is, if the sheriff had anything on his phone that's a public record, how is it being preserved by the sheriff's office?
A. It is my understanding that it's not, because I remember -- and I'd have to produce -- I'd have to say produce the responses to be certain, but I seem to remember that I was told at the time the sheriff had not connected his phone or done the proper steps on his phone to be able to document -- was it the text messages, or was it more of the geocoding of his location? I'd have to see the -- I'd have to find the emails to do it.
Q. Understood. But my question is, since you're the public records custodian, or you have been for the administration until you left recently, was there any instance you're aware of where the sheriff had made any other effort to preserve public records that were created by text messaging referencing cases under investigation which would be a public record?

A. Sheriff Watson never worked with me directly or indirectly to preserve any kind of text messages on his phone that I can recall, and I'm pretty sure there's nothing like that.

Q. And when you did have the one public records request for Sheriff Watson's phone that involved his phone you've referenced, you did end up providing public records from Sheriff Watson's phone to the requester?

A. That's what I'm trying to remember. I can tell you I remember messages from Joel Decoursey and Chad Scott and George Corine and all of them saying "I need to talk with you. Give me a call," but I'm trying to think if I remember seeing anything from Sheriff Watson going back to them.

Q. We can easily determine that because the public record response remains a public record at the sheriff's office.

A. Yes.

Q. And the requester was the PBA?

A. I'm pretty certain it was the PBA, and I can even tell you where it was saved in my K Drive, our shared -- we would have a drive that was specific to us and all of our emails and folders, and I maintained

all of that. And I wasn't able to have a copy to leave the agency, but it was in my K Drive under the PBA.

I might actually have that record because at the time we were saving -- I would save things -- any public record response, I would save it in a temp file to be able to duplicate it; and I have all those on a thumb drive from when I left the agency.

Q. Is that the thumb drive?

A. Yes, sir. Now, I haven't looked at it. I don't know that it -- I can't -- I mean, you'd have to test it to see; but it was cleared by our agency IT people before I used it to download the K Drive. So it was to be able to reference anything that I might need to, to help the agency after I left. So I think it should be on there if I saved it to that K Drive, or to that temp file.

Q. We'll address that in just a little bit.

You mentioned that there was an incident recently that you were concerned about that may have been either malfeasance, misfeasance, or unlawful by the sheriff. Can you tell me what that was?

A. It was more of a managerial decision. So after my retirement -- prior to my retirement, Courtney Bereka (phonetic) had been selected to replace me. And effective January 2nd, she was supposed to begin working with me to learn my job and to help with a smooth transition.

So we did not get much time together to work, but there would be instances where something would -- I would take care of a task or a transaction that I thought would be rare and she should have a copy of it, or I would go into her office as the administrative assistant to Sheriff Watson, or executive assistant, excuse me, and share with her. And over that three-month period right before I resigned, she apparently -- and this part is hearsay, but she apparently made the decision that she preferred to remain as the executive assistant rather than transfer to the records bureau chief, and I was not made aware of that until after I left.

So a week after -- I'm not even sure how long. A few days after I retired from the agency, it was announced that somebody else would be taking my position; and that person has always worked in the corrections environment and, I don't believe, has any records bureau experience or law enforcement experience, just from a corrections perspective. He was a supervisor reporting to the bureau chief in booking support.

So he was selected to come over, basically, two weeks after I left. The administrative assistant, Marie Davis, had worked with me for over a decade and is probably the most informed about what I do as my assistant working with me, etc., doing the various tasks. She was also transferred at the same day that the new bureau chief would report. She was transferred out of the bureau and over to the department of the jail to report to the major.

My point of all that is that there are three supervisors reporting to the bureau chief each with only one year's experience or less. Then you take the administrative assistant, and you relocate her to another job that is pretty high requirement -- task requirement as the administrative assistant to the major of the jail. And then you bring in a corrections person with very little, if no, law enforcement experience, and that entire bureau, how do you think that's going to work out? Not well.

No experience, doesn't -- had no common time with the previous bureau chief. I don't know how that bureau is supposed to succeed with those circumstances. I would call that a misfeasance, I think, is how your term is. I would call that a terrible management decision, to have the success of the bureau and -- with all of that bureau works with, how -- why would you do that?

Q. Understood. Were there other changes that occurred after Sheriff Watson took office that were unusual in how the procedures of the office would work or how your --

A. Procedures for the records bureau to work, or the agency?

Q. Well, the agency, the records bureau. I'm not -- I don't want to limit your response.

A. The records bureau under my management continued to do what it has always done, and we -- due to the staff shortages, it was much more stressful and much more difficult, but the bureau did keep its head above water, so to speak, and managed to get the majority of things done and still done well and accurately, completely. A lot of overtime was used to do so.

They are 50 percent down and have been for over a year. There has been efforts to continue hiring through the normal procedures. And at one point I was able to convince them to fast-track people because the alternative solution for the lack of employees was to bring in temp force personnel through Spherion. Those people would be interviewed by the records bureau staff and determined appropriate or not, and then they would go through a fingerprint-based background check, and they would go through a drug screen, and that was it. And then they'd be brought into the agency, given access to all of the software systems and the critical information that we maintain through the records bureau. Versus an employee, when they go through the application process and the hiring process and the background process, they go through both of those two things as well as a psych eval and a physical agility -- or a physical, I'm sorry, just a physical, and then the background check where the background investigators of the agency would check their references and their employment history and determine that they are a good candidate for the agency.

So if we're doing so little for a temp force employee that we're giving the same access to as a regular full-time employee, why wouldn't we fast-track the incoming applicants that truly want a career with the Alachua County Sheriff's Office? Let's fast-track them, get in the door while you're doing the background process that you're not doing for the Spherion employee. Let me go ahead and start training them. If you find something that says they're not going to be a long-term or great employee, and we're not going to hire them, then so be it; but that doesn't happen all that often based on the interviewing process.

So for a short stretch we were able to bring in four employees as -- on that fast-track program, but then after that the sheriff decided that we are not going to fast-track employees. So as such, the hiring process takes anywhere from minimal six weeks -- which I haven't seen anybody come in in a six-week period in forever -- to eight to twelve weeks because it takes a good eight weeks for the full background process to be completed. And then you have to do a file review that goes through the command staff and includes the sheriff, which typically there's a delay in getting a signature from the sheriff. And then, from there, if the applicant is still employed somewhere else, there's a two-week notice that they're giving their former employer. So many times the applicants that we interview that we really wanted would find work elsewhere before we ever got the background process done.

So that is the reason we have a 50 percent deficit in employees in the records bureau, and that's a big part of the agency, especially with civilian personnel. That happens badly, badly with A and B for the payroll specialist and the accounts payable specialist. And that's all I can think of off the top of my head.

But that -- once again, the decisions that are being made are to the detriment of the agency and, obviously, the community.

Q. Is there any other instances that you're aware of where things have markedly changed because the administration changed?

A. So I was told by our -- that the salary personnel no longer have to enter time sheets. That was done almost immediately once Sheriff Watson took office.

Additionally, the sheriff made an order that he no longer would complete -- the sheriff, not he because he wasn't there previously, but that he would not be completing travel and training forms.

Q. For himself or for anyone?

A. For himself. For himself. He would not be completing travel and training forms. And we've done that for Sheriff Oelrich and Sheriff Darnell throughout history.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Was the agency still paying for training and

travel, though?

A. Oh, yes.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. So how does that work?

A. He has an agency credit card, as many of the bureaus do. So when he would go on travel and training or, you know, to gas up his car, he's got an agency credit card. And so he would just charge things off to the credit card, and there's no documentation.

So he goes to the Florida Sheriff's Association Conference, wherever it is. He obviously stays in a hotel. He drives the gas to get there. So he just -- instead of completing a travel and training form that documents that's where he is and what he's done for the last three days of the conference, that he left at such-and-such and came back, which is why his per diem is what it is, that form isn't -- the sheriff doesn't have to complete that form anymore; all others do.

Q. So does he still collect a per diem?

A. As far as I know.

Q. How is the amount of the per diem determined if there's no documentation?

A. I don't know. The accounting budget and personnel would have to provide that to you.

Q. Are those forms kept by records or kept by Alachua County?

A. Accounting and budget. No, by ASO; but accounting and budget, not by records. If somebody had sent a public record request, they would have sent it to records, and I would have forwarded it to our accounting and budget personnel to provide them.

Q. So this is untrue for an undersheriff. He would provide a --

A. That is my understanding. He still provides travel and training forms if he goes someplace on behalf of agency, but the sheriff does not.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Do you know what bank the credit card is drawn on?

A. No we just changed banks, and I don't remember. I didn't note it.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Are the credit cards issued through the county?

A. No, they're issued through our accounting and budget personnel. All of our finance is through the Alachua County Sheriff's Office, A and B. The county only distributes 1/12th of the budget to us monthly, and then it's up to us to distribute that into the various accounts and manage all of our accounting, purchasing, credit cards, everything that we do, payroll, all of that.

Q. Who audits records?

A. The only audits records has is by the Florida Department of Law Enforcement in terms of our FCIC, NCIC transactions and the -- we participate. We're not the direct contact.

So FDLE conducts two different audits related to the agency, and that is one for FCIC NCIC entries and operations, and then the other is for our security awareness performance.

Q. Do you know who audits sheriff's office finance, the accounting and budget process for the sheriff's office?

A. It's an accounting firm, local, and I don't know the name of them. I could get it for you easily, though.

Q. Is it through the sheriff's office that the auditing is done, or is it the county? Like, who orders the audit?

A. It's an independent audit that is done every three years annually, and it just happens, from my understanding. There's no special order for a new audit. It's a routine thing.

Q. When is the last time that happened? Do you know?

A. It's annual. Last year.

Q. Oh, it's annual. I thought you said it's every three years.

A. No. The FDLE audit of FCIC is every three years.

Q. But then accounting and budget?

A. Accounting and budget's annual audit is by a local, if I recall.

Q. It's annual?

A. Yeah.

Q. Okay. Anything else that you have notated that is unusual or meets the criteria that I've described to you that we've haven't talked about?

A. So at some point -- I don't know if you guys have the circumstance to know what I'm talking about.

So many years ago we were -- we, the Alachua County Sheriff's Office, was audited by the IRS. And during that audit, it was determined that, for those individuals that we assigned a vehicle to that were command staff, they had to pay taxes on that as a benefit. We were not doing that taxing correctly. So the outcome of that was, we learned that we had to tax by the highest or most expensive method possible as a benefit to our employees.

When Sheriff Watson came in, that policy was not appreciated, and as such, Jacob Rush was apparently assigned to look into the matter. He referenced Leon County Sheriff's Office, who taxes at a different rate per their policy. As such, Sheriff Watson implemented or changed that taxing procedure to the way Leon County does it. That is against what the IRS audit required at the time. So accounting and budget personnel would have more information on that.

Q. You seem to have provided some additional documentation. What was that in reference to?

A. Well, all it is, there's two reports here. One is a termination report, and the other is the new hire; and it simply reflects all of the people that have left the agency since January 5th of 2021 when Sheriff Watson took office. And what it reflects is -- and I made an adjustment because the guardian participants at the schools is included in these lists, and they are not paid employees of this agency. They had to be for documentation of the training bureau and that sort of thing, but -- so anyway, since that time we have lost 323 employees, many of whom simply left the agency.

You'll note that the reason code is retired, voluntarily terminated, that sort of thing, deceased, but the retirees, many of those people -- I'm not sure "many" is fair, but some of those retirees left because they -- because of the treatment of the agency. So sadly, that's the case.

So 323 employees have left the agency, and since that same time period we've only hired 131. So basically for every three people that have left the agency we have only been able to replace them with one.

Q. What's the net number of positions down?

A. 323 minus 131.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. Is that 192?

A. That sounds right.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. So essentially involuntarily staff reduction by 190-plus FTEs?

A. And the total FTEs is 867.75. And so if you look at the withdrawal percentage, it's 37 percent over two years. If you look at the net, it's still a 20-something percent. It might be just 20 percent.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. Where did you fall into that retirement

category? Were you planning on leaving on 3/31/23?

A. I made my full retirement, but the last two years have been extremely torturous.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Does that list have the date?

A. Yes, has the date of hire, has the date of designation.

Q. Does that include sworn?

A. Yes, it includes everybody.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Does it include the jail?

A. Yes. The challenge is that it is by fund number, so it's a little tricky in terms of figuring who are jail personnel. Some of the funds are truly labeled properly. Some of them are a little more challenging.

Q. But the information is there if you can dissect it.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Anything else?

A. Back to -- well, I won't label it. I will say yes.

What I've observed and take issue with, I guess, is that we have promoted people -- Sheriff Watson has promoted people from deputy and maybe sergeant to positions of major over a very short period of time. And nothing against those individuals.

I didn't know Robert Stafford as the person that went from sergeant to major at the department of the jail. I know Lance Yaeger somewhat as a deputy. At the time I first met him he was a detective, and now he's major and possibly chief of staff; that remains remain to be seen if he stays.

But the point of those things is that Sheriff Watson came in and trusted just about no one in the agency. He demoted the two majors, which is his right, but then he took captains and moved them around from position to position to position. He's constantly moving people around, lieutenants and sergeants. And what that has done to this agency is that you have a lot of people in positions with little to no experience that did not work their way up, so those promotions, those individuals never worked as sergeants, lieutenants, captains. They have none of that management experience in a civilian agency. Yes, Lance Yaeger has military experience, but it's different.

As such, they're coming through the ranks -- they're not coming through the ranks. They're just getting into these management positions, and Sheriff Watson trusts no one except these people that he's brought in around him. As such, the agency is no longer a team effort. Ideas are not being shared.

It's not a healthy organization anymore, and it is not the premier agency it was over two years ago, unfortunately, and it's very sad to see.

Q. Understood.

A. I would think Laura Knudson, Lori Stophel should be in your group, potentially, as people that have endured his wrath and had to leave earlier than wanting.

So Laura was a bureau chief, and do you want her story from my perspective?

Q. No, we're running out of time. I apologize. We need to move on, and we will reach out to them.

A. The accounting and budget, the wasteful spending, the changes between administrators. And I don't even know what I meant by that note, so never mind about that. Those are, I think --

MR. KRAMER: Let's talk about that drive, gentlemen, what is your -- what is it you'd like to do with that?

(An off-the-record discussion was had.)

A. Sounds right.
Q. Are you with me so far?
A. Yes.
Q. It's our understanding the sheriff, his telephone has never been connected to that system. Okay?
A. Okay.
Q. So my question to you is, if the sheriff had anything on his phone that's a public record, how is it being preserved by the sheriff's office?
A. It is my understanding that it's not, because I remember -- and I'd have to produce -- I'd have to say produce the responses to be certain, but I seem to remember that I was told at the time the sheriff had not connected his phone or done the proper steps on his phone to be able to document -- was it the text messages, or was it more of the geocoding of his location? I'd have to see the -- I'd have to find the emails to do it.
Q. Understood. But my question is, since you're the public records custodian, or you have been for the administration until you left recently, was there any instance you're aware of where the sheriff had made any other effort to preserve public records that were created by text messaging referencing cases under investigation which would be a public record?

A. Sheriff Watson never worked with me directly or indirectly to preserve any kind of text messages on his phone that I can recall, and I'm pretty sure there's nothing like that.

Q. And when you did have the one public records request for Sheriff Watson's phone that involved his phone you've referenced, you did end up providing public records from Sheriff Watson's phone to the requester?

A. That's what I'm trying to remember. I can tell you I remember messages from Joel Decoursey and Chad Scott and George Corine and all of them saying "I need to talk with you. Give me a call," but I'm trying to think if I remember seeing anything from Sheriff Watson going back to them.

Q. We can easily determine that because the public record response remains a public record at the sheriff's office.

A. Yes.

Q. And the requester was the PBA?

A. I'm pretty certain it was the PBA, and I can even tell you where it was saved in my K Drive, our shared -- we would have a drive that was specific to us and all of our emails and folders, and I maintained

all of that. And I wasn't able to have a copy to leave the agency, but it was in my K Drive under the PBA.

I might actually have that record because at the time we were saving -- I would save things -- any public record response, I would save it in a temp file to be able to duplicate it; and I have all those on a thumb drive from when I left the agency.

Q. Is that the thumb drive?

A. Yes, sir. Now, I haven't looked at it. I don't know that it -- I can't -- I mean, you'd have to test it to see; but it was cleared by our agency IT people before I used it to download the K Drive. So it was to be able to reference anything that I might need to, to help the agency after I left. So I think it should be on there if I saved it to that K Drive, or to that temp file.

Q. We'll address that in just a little bit.

You mentioned that there was an incident recently that you were concerned about that may have been either malfeasance, misfeasance, or unlawful by the sheriff. Can you tell me what that was?

A. It was more of a managerial decision. So after my retirement -- prior to my retirement, Courtney Bereka (phonetic) had been selected to replace me. And effective January 2nd, she was supposed to begin working with me to learn my job and to help with a smooth transition.

So we did not get much time together to work, but there would be instances where something would -- I would take care of a task or a transaction that I thought would be rare and she should have a copy of it, or I would go into her office as the administrative assistant to Sheriff Watson, or executive assistant, excuse me, and share with her. And over that three-month period right before I resigned, she apparently -- and this part is hearsay, but she apparently made the decision that she preferred to remain as the executive assistant rather than transfer to the records bureau chief, and I was not made aware of that until after I left.

So a week after -- I'm not even sure how long. A few days after I retired from the agency, it was announced that somebody else would be taking my position; and that person has always worked in the corrections environment and, I don't believe, has any records bureau experience or law enforcement experience, just from a corrections perspective. He was a supervisor reporting to the bureau chief in booking support.

So he was selected to come over, basically, two weeks after I left. The administrative assistant, Marie Davis, had worked with me for over a decade and is probably the most informed about what I do as my assistant working with me, etc., doing the various tasks. She was also transferred at the same day that the new bureau chief would report. She was transferred out of the bureau and over to the department of the jail to report to the major.

My point of all that is that there are three supervisors reporting to the bureau chief each with only one year's experience or less. Then you take the administrative assistant, and you relocate her to another job that is pretty high requirement -- task requirement as the administrative assistant to the major of the jail. And then you bring in a corrections person with very little, if no, law enforcement experience, and that entire bureau, how do you think that's going to work out? Not well.

No experience, doesn't -- had no common time with the previous bureau chief. I don't know how that bureau is supposed to succeed with those circumstances. I would call that a misfeasance, I think, is how your term is. I would call that a terrible management decision, to have the success of the bureau and -- with all of that bureau works with, how -- why would you do that?

Q. Understood. Were there other changes that occurred after Sheriff Watson took office that were unusual in how the procedures of the office would work or how your --

A. Procedures for the records bureau to work, or the agency?

Q. Well, the agency, the records bureau. I'm not -- I don't want to limit your response.

A. The records bureau under my management continued to do what it has always done, and we -- due to the staff shortages, it was much more stressful and much more difficult, but the bureau did keep its head above water, so to speak, and managed to get the majority of things done and still done well and accurately, completely. A lot of overtime was used to do so.

They are 50 percent down and have been for over a year. There has been efforts to continue hiring through the normal procedures. And at one point I was able to convince them to fast-track people because the alternative solution for the lack of employees was to bring in temp force personnel through Spherion. Those people would be interviewed by the records bureau staff and determined appropriate or not, and then they would go through a fingerprint-based background check, and they would go through a drug screen, and that was it. And then they'd be brought into the agency, given access to all of the software systems and the critical information that we maintain through the records bureau. Versus an employee, when they go through the application process and the hiring process and the background process, they go through both of those two things as well as a psych eval and a physical agility -- or a physical, I'm sorry, just a physical, and then the background check where the background investigators of the agency would check their references and their employment history and determine that they are a good candidate for the agency.

So if we're doing so little for a temp force employee that we're giving the same access to as a regular full-time employee, why wouldn't we fast-track the incoming applicants that truly want a career with the Alachua County Sheriff's Office? Let's fast-track them, get in the door while you're doing the background process that you're not doing for the Spherion employee. Let me go ahead and start training them. If you find something that says they're not going to be a long-term or great employee, and we're not going to hire them, then so be it; but that doesn't happen all that often based on the interviewing process.

So for a short stretch we were able to bring in four employees as -- on that fast-track program, but then after that the sheriff decided that we are not going to fast-track employees. So as such, the hiring process takes anywhere from minimal six weeks -- which I haven't seen anybody come in in a six-week period in forever -- to eight to twelve weeks because it takes a good eight weeks for the full background process to be completed. And then you have to do a file review that goes through the command staff and includes the sheriff, which typically there's a delay in getting a signature from the sheriff. And then, from there, if the applicant is still employed somewhere else, there's a two-week notice that they're giving their former employer. So many times the applicants that we interview that we really wanted would find work elsewhere before we ever got the background process done.

So that is the reason we have a 50 percent deficit in employees in the records bureau, and that's a big part of the agency, especially with civilian personnel. That happens badly, badly with A and B for the payroll specialist and the accounts payable specialist. And that's all I can think of off the top of my head.

But that -- once again, the decisions that are being made are to the detriment of the agency and, obviously, the community.

Q. Is there any other instances that you're aware of where things have markedly changed because the administration changed?

A. So I was told by our -- that the salary personnel no longer have to enter time sheets. That was done almost immediately once Sheriff Watson took office.

Additionally, the sheriff made an order that he no longer would complete -- the sheriff, not he because he wasn't there previously, but that he would not be completing travel and training forms.

Q. For himself or for anyone?

A. For himself. For himself. He would not be completing travel and training forms. And we've done that for Sheriff Oelrich and Sheriff Darnell throughout history.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Was the agency still paying for training and

travel, though?

A. Oh, yes.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. So how does that work?

A. He has an agency credit card, as many of the bureaus do. So when he would go on travel and training or, you know, to gas up his car, he's got an agency credit card. And so he would just charge things off to the credit card, and there's no documentation.

So he goes to the Florida Sheriff's Association Conference, wherever it is. He obviously stays in a hotel. He drives the gas to get there. So he just -- instead of completing a travel and training form that documents that's where he is and what he's done for the last three days of the conference, that he left at such-and-such and came back, which is why his per diem is what it is, that form isn't -- the sheriff doesn't have to complete that form anymore; all others do.

Q. So does he still collect a per diem?

A. As far as I know.

Q. How is the amount of the per diem determined if there's no documentation?

A. I don't know. The accounting budget and personnel would have to provide that to you.

Q. Are those forms kept by records or kept by Alachua County?

A. Accounting and budget. No, by ASO; but accounting and budget, not by records. If somebody had sent a public record request, they would have sent it to records, and I would have forwarded it to our accounting and budget personnel to provide them.

Q. So this is untrue for an undersheriff. He would provide a --

A. That is my understanding. He still provides travel and training forms if he goes someplace on behalf of agency, but the sheriff does not.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Do you know what bank the credit card is drawn on?

A. No we just changed banks, and I don't remember. I didn't note it.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Are the credit cards issued through the county?

A. No, they're issued through our accounting and budget personnel. All of our finance is through the Alachua County Sheriff's Office, A and B. The county only distributes 1/12th of the budget to us monthly, and then it's up to us to distribute that into the various accounts and manage all of our accounting, purchasing, credit cards, everything that we do, payroll, all of that.

Q. Who audits records?

A. The only audits records has is by the Florida Department of Law Enforcement in terms of our FCIC, NCIC transactions and the -- we participate. We're not the direct contact.

So FDLE conducts two different audits related to the agency, and that is one for FCIC NCIC entries and operations, and then the other is for our security awareness performance.

Q. Do you know who audits sheriff's office finance, the accounting and budget process for the sheriff's office?

A. It's an accounting firm, local, and I don't know the name of them. I could get it for you easily, though.

Q. Is it through the sheriff's office that the auditing is done, or is it the county? Like, who orders the audit?

A. It's an independent audit that is done every three years annually, and it just happens, from my understanding. There's no special order for a new audit. It's a routine thing.

Q. When is the last time that happened? Do you know?

A. It's annual. Last year.

Q. Oh, it's annual. I thought you said it's every three years.

A. No. The FDLE audit of FCIC is every three years.

Q. But then accounting and budget?

A. Accounting and budget's annual audit is by a local, if I recall.

Q. It's annual?

A. Yeah.

Q. Okay. Anything else that you have notated that is unusual or meets the criteria that I've described to you that we've haven't talked about?

A. So at some point -- I don't know if you guys have the circumstance to know what I'm talking about.

So many years ago we were -- we, the Alachua County Sheriff's Office, was audited by the IRS. And during that audit, it was determined that, for those individuals that we assigned a vehicle to that were command staff, they had to pay taxes on that as a benefit. We were not doing that taxing correctly. So the outcome of that was, we learned that we had to tax by the highest or most expensive method possible as a benefit to our employees.

When Sheriff Watson came in, that policy was not appreciated, and as such, Jacob Rush was apparently assigned to look into the matter. He referenced Leon County Sheriff's Office, who taxes at a different rate per their policy. As such, Sheriff Watson implemented or changed that taxing procedure to the way Leon County does it. That is against what the IRS audit required at the time. So accounting and budget personnel would have more information on that.

Q. You seem to have provided some additional documentation. What was that in reference to?

A. Well, all it is, there's two reports here. One is a termination report, and the other is the new hire; and it simply reflects all of the people that have left the agency since January 5th of 2021 when Sheriff Watson took office. And what it reflects is -- and I made an adjustment because the guardian participants at the schools is included in these lists, and they are not paid employees of this agency. They had to be for documentation of the training bureau and that sort of thing, but -- so anyway, since that time we have lost 323 employees, many of whom simply left the agency.

You'll note that the reason code is retired, voluntarily terminated, that sort of thing, deceased, but the retirees, many of those people -- I'm not sure "many" is fair, but some of those retirees left because they -- because of the treatment of the agency. So sadly, that's the case.

So 323 employees have left the agency, and since that same time period we've only hired 131. So basically for every three people that have left the agency we have only been able to replace them with one.

Q. What's the net number of positions down?

A. 323 minus 131.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. Is that 192?

A. That sounds right.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. So essentially involuntarily staff reduction by 190-plus FTEs?

A. And the total FTEs is 867.75. And so if you look at the withdrawal percentage, it's 37 percent over two years. If you look at the net, it's still a 20-something percent. It might be just 20 percent.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. Where did you fall into that retirement

category? Were you planning on leaving on 3/31/23?

A. I made my full retirement, but the last two years have been extremely torturous.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Does that list have the date?

A. Yes, has the date of hire, has the date of designation.

Q. Does that include sworn?

A. Yes, it includes everybody.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Does it include the jail?

A. Yes. The challenge is that it is by fund number, so it's a little tricky in terms of figuring who are jail personnel. Some of the funds are truly labeled properly. Some of them are a little more challenging.

Q. But the information is there if you can dissect it.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Anything else?

A. Back to -- well, I won't label it. I will say yes.

What I've observed and take issue with, I guess, is that we have promoted people -- Sheriff Watson has promoted people from deputy and maybe sergeant to positions of major over a very short period of time. And nothing against those individuals.

I didn't know Robert Stafford as the person that went from sergeant to major at the department of the jail. I know Lance Yaeger somewhat as a deputy. At the time I first met him he was a detective, and now he's major and possibly chief of staff; that remains remain to be seen if he stays.

But the point of those things is that Sheriff Watson came in and trusted just about no one in the agency. He demoted the two majors, which is his right, but then he took captains and moved them around from position to position to position. He's constantly moving people around, lieutenants and sergeants. And what that has done to this agency is that you have a lot of people in positions with little to no experience that did not work their way up, so those promotions, those individuals never worked as sergeants, lieutenants, captains. They have none of that management experience in a civilian agency. Yes, Lance Yaeger has military experience, but it's different.

As such, they're coming through the ranks -- they're not coming through the ranks. They're just getting into these management positions, and Sheriff Watson trusts no one except these people that he's brought in around him. As such, the agency is no longer a team effort. Ideas are not being shared.

It's not a healthy organization anymore, and it is not the premier agency it was over two years ago, unfortunately, and it's very sad to see.

Q. Understood.

A. I would think Laura Knudson, Lori Stophel should be in your group, potentially, as people that have endured his wrath and had to leave earlier than wanting.

So Laura was a bureau chief, and do you want her story from my perspective?

Q. No, we're running out of time. I apologize. We need to move on, and we will reach out to them.

A. The accounting and budget, the wasteful spending, the changes between administrators. And I don't even know what I meant by that note, so never mind about that. Those are, I think --

MR. KRAMER: Let's talk about that drive, gentlemen, what is your -- what is it you'd like to do with that?

(An off-the-record discussion was had.)

WHEREUPON,

JOSEPH BRANAMAN

acknowledged having been duly sworn to tell the truth and testified upon his or her oath as follows:

THE WITNESS: I do.

EXAMINATION

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Would you state your name, please?

A. My name is Joseph Branaman.

Q. And Mr. Branaman, are you now or have you been a certified law enforcement officer in the State of Florida?

A. I have been, yes.

Q. Are you now?

A. My standards have not lapsed yet.

Q. I'd like to start by reviewing your law enforcement history with you. I know that you were employed by the Alachua County Sheriff's Office, but have you been employed in other capacities as a law enforcement officer?

A. I have.

Q. What is that?

A. I started in Hendry County in 1989. I was an auxiliary deputy. I went full-time in '92. I came to Alachua County in 1995 and worked until 2022.

Q. When you retired?
A. When I retired.
Q. And can you tell me what positions you held at the Alachua County Sheriff's Office?
A. Yes. So I started out in patrol. I became a field training officer and an in-house instructor, and I moved and made detective in 1995. Through the detective progression, I started in property crimes, then moved to crimes against children. I moved to homicide. And then in 2006 I was put on loan full-time to the FBI where I served until I left as a counter-terrorism, counter-intelligence in weapons and mass destruction.
Q. As a -- I don't know the correct term.
A. Task force officer.
Q. Task force officer?
A. Correct.
Q. So you were under the supervision and direction of the FBI, but you were being paid by the Alachua County Sheriff's Office?
A. That is correct. So through the MOU, all of my supervision leave requests, everything was through the FBI. I drove their car, worked out of their office, traveled for them and had minimal responsibilities in the detective bureau in the sheriff's office. I was the team leader for the marine operations underwater recovery team, and then --

Q. Is that the position you were in at the time of your retirement from the sheriff's office?

A. Yes and no. I was -- we'll get to the discipline. I was transferred via phone, and then I went in and said, "I'm done."

Q. Okay.

A. I was brought back to the CID.

Q. So you were transferred to CID, and then in a very short period of time thereafter you submitted resignation and retired?

A. Yes and no. I had submitted my retirement back in, I believe it was, May, and requested leave to burn leave that was on the books -- it was use or lose -- in the way that many others have done to get me to August 10th.

So August 10th was 30 years day-for-day. It's kind of corny, but I wanted to go out on the day I started. And then I was refused most of that leave that I lost, and then I started catching progressive discipline.

So there's something called transitional leave at the sheriff's office. And after that last write-up, I said, You know what? It's not worth trying to get this leave. I'm going to go on transitional leave," which would mean I would be at home to burn that leave. And they made me turn everything in, car, badge, gun, access, and basically for that last month I was not at the sheriff's office sheriff's office.

Q. But you're on-the-books last day would have been August 10th.

A. The 12th. It was a Friday.

Q. Of 2022?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Okay. So we'll get to that aspect of it because I think it relates to other things we're going to talk about. I want to talk about what your current employment is.

A. I am a corporate supervisor with Resilience Government Services.

Q. And that's fancy. I don't know what that means. What do you do?

A. So I am one of nine who work for corporate security in that company. So Resilience Pharmaceuticals manufacturers medicines and vaccines. They also do medical research. We have a very large facility here in the City of Alachua that has a research component to it as well as a manufacturer. So they manufacture what you would buy over the counter from Feussner or Merck, or someone like that would contract with Resilience to produce it.

Q. Got you.

A. They have 22 sites globally, and we have a contract guard force that does the gates. They're the person you would see when you would roll up. Our role is the internal investigations, background investigations.

Q. Internal security?

A. Internal security, insider threat, things of that nature.

Q. And what relation, if any, do you have with the PBA?

A. I am still the president of the North Central Florida Chapter of the PBA.

Q. And is the position that you hold the type of type of position PBA represents people in at this facility. It's not a law enforcement?

A. It is not law enforcement, no. I could not do either one of those roles if it was going to be a conflict, and I have to sign a no-conflict with the company.

Q. Got you. What was your role with the PBA when you were employed by the sheriff's office?

A. From, I believe it was, June 4th of 2021 until I left I was the president.

Q. Okay. And what would you do? What would your responsibilities be to the PBA when you're the president?

A. So the president is responsible for managing the chapter. Our chapter goes from, roughly, Suwannee County all the way down to Ocoee. It's not just Alachua. Alachua is our biggest unit.

So I'm responsible for coordinating with the main office with legal or with the business office to pay the bills, make sure the chapter runs, to provide any information to the state that would allow someone to be represented in a discipline matter, an officer-involved shooting matter, any type of a grievance, and also contract negotiations.

Q. So -- but you do not normally represent -- you don't serve as a representative to an officer in a grievance proceeding yourself?

A. That is correct. We have staff or we have attorneys or contract attorneys.

Q. Understood. So I want to start talking about the 2020 election and ask you if you can describe anything that was unusual, illegal, improper that occurred during the 2020 election between Sadie Darnell and Clovis Watson.

A. Absolutely. So it's standard throughout most chapters that when you have an election coming up, people are going to be seeking your endorsement. So we will convene a board, and we will do interviews. So judge, state attorney, sheriff, whoever, city commission, county commission, those candidates will come in and meet with us; and just like we're doing here, we will ask questions. They will answer it. We usually have a questionnaire that we fill out -- or they fill out.

And then the board gets together, makes the decision of who the person is that would be best aligned with our objectives, which is protecting our public safety officers, and then we would grant that endorsement. It's done by a vote by that board.

So that took place in 2020. The only two candidates at the time was Sadie Darnell -- Sadie was the incumbent -- and Clovis Watson, Jr., who was running against her. The board met. We took a vote, and that vote was to back Sheriff Darnell.

And Bobby Stafford -- you probably heard that name -- he was the president at the time. Several days later, I don't know what the days were -- 2020, as we all know, was kind of a messed-up year. We weren't really getting to meet in person and do things like we normally would. But he reached out to some of us on the executive board. I was senior vice-president at the time. He started saying, "Hey, look, I want to talk about Clovis Watson. We need to kind of take a better look at Clovis."

I was very familiar with Clovis. I'd been here for quite sometime when Clovis was city manager up in Alachua. I kind of knew some of the things that were talked about with Clovis, and did not think that was a good idea. That was some of the things the board had discussed, felt like we had already been over that.

He was very adamant. "We really need to look at Clovis again. I think he's somebody that's going to come in and do good things."

We had a board meeting at some point where him and George Corine, who at that time was a staff employee of the PBA -- he was a past chapter president. He had retired from the sheriff's office. Him and Bobby disclosed to us that they had been having at least one meeting with Clovis Watson and Joel Decoursey, who's now the undersheriff at the Alachua County Sheriff's Office and had served in several different roles at the sheriff's office, Alachua PD, and High Springs PD.

Our first reaction to that was, "Hey, Prez, why are you meeting with somebody outside the board? That's not the way we do things. That's not how we've ever done things. Why is that happening? "

"Well, you know, they reached out to us and wanted to talk to us. We went and talked to them, and we really want to look at him some more."

Some of us disagreed with that. We'd already made a decision. We're not going to go back on our decision.

So this is over a period of days, weeks.

Q. Had your decision already been announced to the public?

A. I don't recall, and any documentation is gone. I went through the office today through the files, and any minutes from any meetings that we had at that time are not there.

When I received the laptop that I've got here from President Stafford when I took over, it was blank. So any documentation and records of who made a motion, when that motion was made, unless he has them somewhere, I don't have them.

So over that period of time they just kept hitting, you know, "Hey, we've had these meetings. We're continuing to meet with them."

I don't know the exact number and who all was involved in the meetings other than George and Bobby, but at some point Bobby personally reached out to me in a phone call, was very adamant, very confrontational, "Hey, look, we need to do this. We need to get on board with Clovis. We need to back him."

I explained, "Look, I talked to a lot of people at the sheriff's office. Nobody that I've talked to thinks that's a good idea."

He says that has. I asked for names. He could not provide names, or would not provide names. And then he went with and stuck with, "Well, I think just a lot of people are scared of retaliation from Sheriff Darnell, so they're scared to put their name out there. They're scared to do this endorsement."

My feeling was and is and always will be that we're an elected board. We're there to serve the members and look out for the members on their behalf, so that's where I was basing my decision.

We then -- he called a meeting via conference call, has everybody on the board on the phone. So that includes people from UPD, Chiefland, all those agencies that I talked about earlier. If they have a contract, they have a board member, so they have a say in this. A lot of them, you know, I have no clue what's going on in their day, so they're kind of going to go normally with what the president says.

So he was driving that train on the meeting of we need to have -- we need to have a new vote. He brings up again that he's talked to people, and they're afraid to go against Sheriff Darnell.

So we hold a vote. Everyone votes to support Clovis except myself; a guy named Chuck Drake, who is on the executive board still; and an outgoing person on the board named David Tuck, who you probably talked to.

So tuck at the time was on the board. He was still at the sheriff's office, and he wasn't employed by PBA. Tuck's response was, "I'm not even going to vote. I'm going to abstain. This is just not ethical."

There's still discussion about it, a lot of back and forth, and Bobby Stafford is like, "You know, this needs to be an unanimous decision. We need to have another vote, and we all need to vote to support Clovis." He just kept manipulating the vote.

We find out there's been a Survey Monkey that's been sent out to the members. We ask for the results of that, and Stafford tells us, "Well, I don't know what the numbers, and I don't have it because I wasn't in this role. Based on the data I have, you know, it's close, but everybody picked Sadie."

I'm like, "Well, hold on. What do you mean, 'the data you have?'"

He's like, "Well, we have to pay money to get all of the results."

I'm like, "We have to pay the money. We can't base a vote on not all the information. That's kind of ridiculous."

So there was a lot of back-and-forth about paying the money. I think maybe I made a motion like, "I make a motion we spend the money to get all of the data."

So they did, and it was still in favor of Sheriff Darnell.

So a lot of back and forth on that phone call again about why are we revoting, why are we changing the endorsement. I suggested we just -- we don't endorse anybody. We just say there's too much back and forth. We'll explain it to the sheriff, we'll explain it to Clovis, and we will support and work with whoever holds that office.

A UPD officer named George Castranova was on the board. He made a motion that we have another vote and that we have to vote for somebody. We can't have a "don't endorse anybody" vote.

So that carries. We have another vote. The results were the same. Myself and Chuck Drake vote for Sadie. Chuck abstains. The endorsement switches to Clovis.

That was pretty early on; and after that, I was not involved in any phone conversations, any meetings. They continued to meet with Clovis Watson and his team, and then we get into the election.

So the -- in that meeting after we were done Stafford admonished everybody, don't talk about this. You know, basically what happened here needs to stay here. We don't need to go tell the members that all of this conflict happened. It needs to be a united front. The message is we, the PBA, are supporting Clovis Watson, Jr.

I had actually typed up my resignation and was going to leave, and my wife talked me out of it. If you don't stay there, nobody is going to have a voice. Like, this guy is going to continue to do foray -- "foray" is the word I'll use in there, but it's going to continue. So I stayed.

The very next day members -- you know, cops can't keep a secret to save their lives. It was out. So we're getting, you know, hate mail, phone calls from members like, "What is going on? We do not want to back this guy. This is bad."

They're mad at the board. "Why did you go against us, the members?"

So I know I did, and I know Drake did, we sprained to people what had happened. I'm not going to lie to people. It's not what we were there for.

So they continued to have meetings. I don't know -- Bobby -- I don't know so much about George, but Bobby was very active in his campaign after that, hanging signs, wearing tee shirts. He was onboard with that from the beginning. That's not something that is that typical.

We do social media. We'll put the endorsement out there. We provide endorsement letters. Election day, if we can, you know, we'll have people out there holding signs, but it was just out of ordinary. I'm not saying that that's wrong. I mean, you believe what you believe, and you back who you want to back; but Bobby was very, very much out there.

June of 2020 a guy named Robert Brinkman -- have y'all heard -- Brinkman enters the race. There is no republican candidate. Republicans are not allowed to vote in the August 18th election. Clovis wins that over Sadie. August 28th, Brinkman drops out of the race. We really didn't know anything about that at the time, so we start taking a look at that.

TV 20 -- and they've probably got a record of it -- goes out very soon after that and does an interview with Brinkman, he's got a "Vote for Clovis" sign in his yard. He never had a campaign event. He never raised money. He never did anything. And then we find out he did the same thing in 2012 for the District 20 race when Clovis won his seat at the state house.

Again, I don't know if that's illegal. It certainly seems unethical and sucky way to win an election, but he did it. He's done it twice with the same guy.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Has anybody said anything about whether or not he might have got paid to do so?

A. PBA is not an investigative body. I can't --

Q. I didn't know if you'd heard.

A. That's always been speculated. I understand he got a vehicle shortly thereafter that he purchased.

I've not done any searches. I know -- I can give you a name of one of the FBI agents that does, I'm assuming, similar to what you guys do, political corruption. I think he took a look at some things, but I'm not privy to anything that he did or found out.

INSPECTOR RIDDICK: All right. Thank you.

THE WITNESS: Yes, sir.

That gets us to Clovis taking office in 2021.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Right. Because we know some of what's here. So, really, I want you to -- if there's something that is specifically, you think, illegal, malfeasance, misfeasance, if you can describe those things. Because there's a lot to talk about here.

A. There is. So he comes back into office. Immediately George and Bobby seem to benefit from their support.

George comes back as a major. There wasn't a lot of heartburn with that, necessarily. He was a captain before he left, so coming back as a major is not -- you know, I told you I came from Hendry County. The reason I left Hendry County was because every four years deputies were getting majors, majors was getting deputies. There was not stability down there, but I've never seen anything like this.

Bobby promotes to lieutenant. He was on the list to be promoted; fair, but then almost immediately he's promoted to be a captain of uniform patrol division. It's a pretty big leap, but the really big leap was when he was promoted right around June to become the major at the jail.

So the major of the jail is essentially the jail director. Bobby has never been a corrections officer. He's never worked at the jail. He's never worked with a multi-million-dollar budget. So your malfeasance to me is putting an unqualified person in a position that they're going to fail. And they immediately put a lady named Dorian Keith kind of in his pocket to guide him through the world of corrections.

But that caused quite a bit of heartburn with our members of, you know, look at you PBA guys. You backed this guy, and now George is a major and Bobby is a major. So it's kind of where all the issues lie with that.

Little things with his narcissistic behavior that happens when he comes in. He immediately transferred everybody who had publicly through social media or other, said something negative about him or made it clear they wanted to back Darnell. He gutted the detective bureau, transferred out people with years and years of experience in CID and then brought in people that were not qualified, and we'll get to that.

Things like on the back of everybody's vest -- you've heard, I'm sure, the patches. You know, spends $3,500 pulling patches off because Joel Decoursey, quote: There's only one sheriff in this agency.

Jason Levy was transferred from his position because he walked up and said, "Hey, young man, how you doing?"

And Jason is admonished by Joel Decoursey, "You will address him as sheriff and only sheriff."

And then Jason is transferred.

A jail person -- and, again, these are things I've heard -- passes him in the hallway and says, "Good morning, sir."

He's called in the office. "You will address him as sheriff."

He creates positions and brings in cronies. He brings in Michelle Sherfield to a position that never existed. He made her a bureau chief of the government community affairs unit. It's a bureau chief of her. So now he's paying bureau chief salary to an employee, taxpayer dollars. She supervises no one. Her title has now changed to director, which is the equivalent of a major. Her salary is still around 78,000; it's in the bureau chief level, but she supervises no one.

Q. Is there a job responsibility?

A. We have no idea what it is. I'm sure there's something on paper that says what her job description is. He will tell you she quails riots. You know, we've had all these officer-involved shootings, and she talks to the community and, you know, we're not going to burn like some of these other places because of the work she does.

If you wanted to interview guy named Rich Lalonde. He sits in the office beside her. Walls are thin. He might have some information about she talks a lot about his campaign and things that don't sound like what she should be doing while she's working.

If you bring up her social media right now you'll see a whole bunch of Facebook lives that she's on the clock streaming from her office, which violates our policy -- excuse me, it's not ours anymore -- their that we've had members lose their jobs over.

Q. Specifically, is there indicia of the sheriff's office visible in those posts?

A. There's not. I know the building, so I know the green paint on the wall and the ceiling tiles, and she's in the clothes that she wears to work.

When she first -- and we also created a position and brought in her son, who was hired immediately after Clovis took office.

Q. To do what?

A. He was initially in the PIO office, public information office.

Q. I understand. What's his name?

A. Brandon Johnson. That didn't last long, and now I believe he is in teen court.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Is he sworn?

A. He is not sworn.

So there was information given to OPS early on about the both of them. They had a very big social media presence, a lot of what our members felt were BLM and anti-cop sentiment on their website, which again, is a no-no as other members have gotten in trouble for. Instead of it becoming a counseling or an investigation, it just disappeared from their website, to my knowledge; but nothing ever happened to them. As of last night when I looked at it, she's still live streaming from her office.

He created a chief-of-staff position, which is a new civilian position that we've never had before.

Q. That's held by whom?

A. Well, right now it's held by Lance Yaeger. It was held by Danielle Judd. Danielle Judd, if you go back and look at the history, is somebody how has been kind of a protege of Clovis throughout his career. She was with him at the City of Alachua. Her daughter was with Clovis at Alachua. She came over as his administrative assistant. She has since left and Ms. Judd has since left.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. And do you know why she's no longer there?

A. I do not know why. I can tell you some of the people that work for her have mentioned that her and the sheriff had a falling out.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Yaeger is no longer the major over CID?

A. No, sir.

Q. When did that cease?

A. As of yesterday, Sunday night. So Lance Yaeger is now the chief of staff; but when we had bargaining Monday, he's still wearing a badge and gun.

So it's a civilian position. I'm not sure how that impacts his high-risk retirement, but he is supervising civilians.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. How do we know that that's a civilian position?

A. He created it. It never existed before. He created it and filled it with a civilian. They do not have anything to do with operations. It's all the admin side, so accounting and budgeting, HR, dispatch center.

Q. I guess my question is too technical. I'm thinking in terms of -- because, obviously, like I can create a position for my agency.

A. Sure.

Q. I don't have this problem because I -- well, I do have sworn officers, but it doesn't matter in my agency.

But when they create a position, is there some kind of designation as to whether this is going to be a sworn position or unsworn position? Because I think that would matter to the PBA, right, if you're renting these folks?

A. Absolutely, because it would -- it moves them out of the bargaining unit, essentially.

So command staff is outside of the bargaining unit. They're not covered by the contract. So once they created a position for him that we'll get to, chief of detectives, he was out of the bargaining unit. He can still be a PBA member. So if he were to go out and have a critical incident, then we could represent him in that; but as far as the contract goes, they're now at the whim of the sheriff.

Q. Is there some designation that's in the process of creating new positions that the office makes to say this is only to be filled by sworn, this is only to be filled by unsworn?

A. I can't speak to that. That would be a Patty Justice question, or Rashawn Flanders.

Q. So they create this chief of staff position.

A. So Daniel Judd comes into that position. So a lot of -- in my opinion, funding that the sheriff had for FTEs was diverted to FTEs that weren't on the books, that he created. And again, I don't know what authority he has to create FTEs. That would be a Patty Justice question. But he created these FTEs, and now they're making six-figure salaries while we have deputies at that time, you know, starting in the low 40s.

Q. And so what about any other conflicts of interest as far as his general counsel is concerned?

A. So he brought in Jake Rush. Jake Rush had been a deputy with us for a period of time. He left. I don't know where Jake went. You know, we don't run in the same circles. So he just appeared and became the general counsel.

And if you ask about any of these promotions, Bobby, George, Jake Rush, like we had no idea this was coming. This was just spur of the moment. The sheriff called me and asked me to do this. But Jake Rush was at his swearing in on the day of.

So Jake Rush is tied to Robert Rush. I don't know how -- you're obviously very familiar with Robert Rush.

I'm not sure how familiar you guys are with Robert Rush. He is a well-known attorney here in town. He makes a living with lawsuits.

Back in the day I was bitten by the K-9 making an arrest. Dogs don't know who the good guy and bad guy is. And I got a letter in the mail from Robert Rush. You know, hey, I understand you were recently bitten by the sheriff's office K-9. I represent and have represented victims of this. I'd like to represent you. So that kind of attorney.

He has ties to Clovis through a business that

Robert Rush is a part owner in, the CSI Academy. Again, this is all stuff that I've been told. When Clovis was in the house, they did something to facilitate that CSI Academy coming here to Alachua County. So now his son is the general counsel.

When we had a media campaign against the sheriff, Robert Rush would write letters against me saying what a great guy sheriff Clovis Watson Jr. is and, you know, how I'm wrong in my facts and figures. So there is still a connection.

Then recently, within the past year, he brought in a guy named Alan Henderson, who was with him in the City of Alachua. There's some great YouTube videos of a deposition with Alan Henderson. In the first eight minutes he admits to removing ballots from a ballot box when they had a city election because the woman came back in and said, "Hey, I ran into Clovis in the parking lot, and I voted for the wrong person. I made a mistake on my ballot."

So he opens up the ballot box, pulls the ballot, destroys it and allows her to revote. So he's now an employee with the Alachua County Sheriff's Office. He was brought on board when --

Q. In what capacity?

A. To replace Tara, Tara. So Tara, Danielle Judd's daughter, has left as his executive assistant. He is now sitting in Diana Jacobs' office managing special projects. Again, if you ask someone what that is, they will tell you they have no idea what he does.

It's my understanding there are some OPS complaints about him with inappropriate comments to female employees, so I don't know the -- he's obviously not someone we represent. I don't know what the status is, but he's still employed there.

The sheriff became involved in promotions and transfers, so that's not something that has ever been normal. And I've been involved in that process from sitting on hiring boards in the detective bureau, from being a team commander and selecting people to be on the team, going through a hiring process with them, interviewing candidates.

We started being told you got to put a picture with a file. You know, the sheriff doesn't know everybody, so he just wants to see a picture of who those people are. So I did have to do that for one of my dive team tryouts, but it never impacted me. I do have knowledge where it impacted other areas, one of which is CID.

Again, I'd been there since '99. At that time CID was different. Somebody had to die or retire for you to go get a chance to go be a detective, and you had to have a pretty good amount of experience and background. You didn't have young people in CID; it's the way things were back then, but there's always been a hiring process. You need to come in, convince that board what you've done in your career that would make you be an asset to CID.

I had a guy named Cleveland Cox who interviewed for CID and was told by the board, "Hey, it's just not your time. Go back, get some experience, make some cases, develop a reputation, come back and see us."

Several days later Cleveland Cox shows up in a shirt and tie and says, "Hey, the sheriff says I'm a detective. Where is my desk?" kind of thing.

I believe Todd Kelly was the captain. It could have been Daryl Bessinger. We've cycled through several captains in CID. They were like, "We had no clue this kid was showing up."

Same individual, Cleveland Cox, tries out for SWAT. SWAT, dive, and bomb are kind of the Tier One special teams where you are put in situations where you got to depend on the person on your right or your left; it's just the way it is.

So for those teams, it has always been an unanimous vote from the team. The whole tryout is an evaluation. People are judging that person on how they interact with the team, how they carry themselves, how safe they are.

My understanding is when SWAT sat down to vote, it was a resounding, "We don't trust this guy to go through a door with us. He's not going to be on the team."

So word got back to the SWAT commander. "He will be on the team, and he will be an operator."

So there's different positions on the team; same as my team with the dive team. You might start out driving the boat and work your way up to getting in the water. SWAT commander did what I did, and he voiced his opinion and was transferred and relieved of command of the SWAT team; and this is a person with years of experience on the SWAT team.

Q. And we are aware of that, so let me move you along a little bit because we're aware of the situation with Lance Yaeger. Unless there's -- again, I'm going to reiterate if there's something you specifically know that was in your presence, I'd be interested to know that.

A. I do. I want to talk about Cox.

Q. Okay.

A. So obviously -- we'll get it out there -- race is going to be an issue with the lawsuits and with this.

One of the complaints from the members are, is that Clovis is promoting people by the color of their skin that aren't qualified. So people are going to maybe tell you, hey, Cleveland is competent.

I was an instructor at the agency. One of the things we do every year is, we do scenarios where we do force on force, direct threat. We put people in their full duty gear. They have sim rounds. We introduce stimulus through firing blanks, yelling, screaming, and they have to go handle a problem.

So this particular situation was a hostage situation in a school. So you had several people sitting at desks that were students. You had a bad guy in the room that is holding a person hostage. You have two teams of three or five that respond to that scene, and then they have to make the bad thing stop. So the other team had made entry into the room, stopped the threat with the bad guy, and were doing a secondary sweep.

So the role players were all wearing civilian clothes. The police officers are wearing their training uniforms, BDUs, armor, so they've got a plate carrier that says -- at that time I think it said sheriff on the back, and that's what they're doing.

Cleveland Cox is on the second team, comes running into the doorway, wide eyed, heavy breathing, with a rifle. I'm one of the students sitting at the desk. He's fanning everybody in the room, looking at everybody in the room.

The other deputy that was already in the room wearing a uniform with a rifle starts to turn around, and I saw it coming. Cleveland fixated on that, and then he killed everybody in the room. He shot the hostages, he shot the other cops, he shot the bad guy, he shot the red-shirt safety officer in the room.

So the negligent decisions and malfeasance of putting people in positions --

Q. That's a failure, I would assume?

A. That's a big failure. In fact, that would almost be a, hey, you need to go home for the day, that was such a bad failure; and it's documented somewhere.

Q. Is it a failure in the sense that now he needs to go back for training? Or is it a failure --

A. He would go back and retrain, absolutely.

Q. And this is for SWAT?

A. No. This is every deputy runs through this every year, but he is now on SWAT.

Q. Right. So what you're saying is that someone who has failed the most basic training in the most egregious format that one could fail, instead of being sent back for retraining is put on the SWAT team.

A. He probably had a remedial that day; because we address it immediately like, Hey, you're going run that scenario again, and you might want to think of some things," but that person is still on SWAT.

Q. Understood.

A. So that's where I think some negligent decision-making on the part of the sheriff is that he's putting other officers at risk, he's putting citizens at risk. You know, God forbid he responds to a school shooting.

Q. I just want to --

A. And then did anything come up with Cox's internal affairs investigations?

Q. Yes, we've talked about it. Just for sake of time, unless you guys want to follow up on anything, I want to move -- because I think it's something we have not heard, is the retaliatory conduct towards you yourself as you're ending the end of your career where because of your -- what I'm perceiving is your role in the bargaining process, the sheriff's office retaliated against you. Is that fair?

A. Fair.

Q. Could you describe what occurred in that regard?

A. So June 4th, 2021, by default I was the senior vice-president. Bobby is now promoted to a role where he cannot be president. I was the acting president for -- what's the term period? Thirty-five days, I believe. An election has to be held.

So Bobby comes to me and says, "Hey, look, man. I know you don't want this. You know, you've talked about getting out before. We're going to put Lance Cannon in this role."

So I again talked it over with my wife. As we're going to find out, she's a lot smarter than I am. She's like, Hey, look, it sounds like they're trying to get you out of there. Maybe you need to think about throwing your hat in for president," so I do.

Another employee at the time named Brandon Kutner, who there's some issues with him and some of the conduct -- have y'all talked about him?

Q. We're aware.

A. Okay. So he throws his name in the ring. He pulls me aside and says, "Hey, I just want to tell you face to face, you know, you've got no chance in hell of winning this. You know, I know everything and everybody, and I'm going to be the PBA president."

Sometime before the election -- and this is a chapter-wide election, so Ocoee is voting, everywhere we have a member, 780-something members are voting on this. Kutner is promoted to the rank of captain and assigned to internal affairs.

I don't know if you've talked to Brandon, and I don't know what he's told you. What Brandon has said is that they promoted me so I wouldn't be the PBA president. That's why that happened. I have no knowledge if that's why that happened.

But I end up becoming the president, and we try to begin bargaining with Sheriff Clovis Watson Jr, and it started back in April of that year. It's now going into September before we even get to the table with him. It's Joel Decoursey, Danielle Judd, George Corine, and Bobby Stafford at the time, they're still there.

Again, what I feel is inappropriate and wrong of the sheriff to do, here he's now got Bobby Stafford and George Corine who had started this contract from the PBA side of the table sitting on his side of the table bargaining this contract.

It immediately started with just not normal things. One of the articles said all deputies will move back into Alachua County, everybody will live in the county. That's some old-school deputy stuff right there. That hasn't been part of a hiring process or hiring requirement since the early '90s. And they were told, no, no. That's a mistake. It's just going to impact with the cars.

So that became an issue of trying to take home cars from our deputies. And we're explaining from our side of the table a bargaining point of, you know, we've got to recruit and retain the best that we can. If you're going to take away benefits and cars and things, we're going to lose people.

So that's how bargaining goes for months until we actually have to file an unfair labor practice; but going back into that to October, we had actually gotten to a tentative agreement where we signed articles. And I get a phone call and a letter sent to my email one morning at work. The sheriff as rescinded all articles.

I called, get Joe Decoursey. He's like, Hey, come over and see me." And he tells me, "Yeah, the sheriff walked in this morning and felt disrespected because of the amount of time it's taken you guys to hold a vote, so he's rescinded everything. Everything is back on the table."

I've never heard of that before, and I've been a part of the PBA as a board member for over a decade. I've never heard of that before.

I'm, "Joel, what do you mean?"

It's been -- I think it was like nine days.

"He feels like this is such a great offer that he was giving you guys, you should have already voted it."

So I explained how big the chapter is. It's contract season. We're doing contracts in different agencies. It was a scheduling thing on our part.

"We didn't know anything about that. We thought you were just for the sheriff's office."

I think incompetence is something on the part of his command staff that leads to his negligent decisions that he makes. They don't know and they don't care to know anything about what it is they've gotten into to try to lead an agency.

George Corine is our major. He's our point of contact. He knows everything we're doing. George hasn't told us everything. I called George, and George is like, "They know everything that you know."

So who's lying? I don't know.

But we kind of get through that debacle, and it starts becoming a media thing. That's the day that Joel walked me in to where they were redoing the sheriff'S suite. I'm assuming you've talked about tat and how much it cost, but his comment that day was, "You know, if you go to University of Florida, and you meet with the president, you will know that you're in the president of the University of Florida's office. We want it so that when you walk into Sheriff Clovis Watson Jr.'s office you know you are in the presence of Sheriff Clovis Watson Jr.," and that's just their mentality.

So throughout the bargaining process they're just putting unreasonable proposals. They're not prepared. Their team changes because they lose people. But one of the statements that I think is important maybe for some of the things you're looking at, and Joel basically said this again the other day.

We had something they needed to make a decision on, and they're like, "Oh, we have to go out of the room and call the a sheriff. The only person who can make a decision at this office is Sheriff Clovis Watson."

So whatever decisions have been made, according to his undersheriff, only the sheriff can make those decisions.

Q. So that occurs in October of 2022?

A. '21.

Q. '21.

A. We're coming in to 2022.

Q. And I believe, if I remember correctly, there's some public discourse over this process.

A. There is.

Q. As a result of that, did the sheriff's office start taking actions against you?

A. Yes. So as the president, it puts me in the position of having to be the spokesperson. And we made a decision -- and we haven't done that -- you've obviously been around a little bit. Very rarely are we out in the public having to result to a media campaign. Because of the egregiousness of what he was doing, that's where we went.

We started a media campaign. We started a social media campaign. As you drove through a intersection in Alachua County, you'd get a pop-up on your phone that basically said the sheriff is doing these things. If you disagree with it, hit this button, and then it would send an email to all of the county commissioners, sheriff's phone number, Ron Desantis, Kat Cammack. It was a precanned message about -- we were trying to get someone to recognize what was happening in Alachua County, and that was one of the things that our members felt, that, you know, Tallahassee wasn't paying attention. Nobody who could anything really recognized what was going on.

So as a result of that, in the bargaining session that took place on April 21st, the state PBA president, John -- I always butcher his name -- Kadajian, he came up.

So the sheriff was in the building that day, and we said, "Hey, the state president is here. Would you like to meet with him?"

So we had a two-on-one with the sheriff, myself, Taz, and Clovis. The meeting was mostly the sheriff talking about himself and pointing out all of his pictures on his wall and then talking about me. And he referenced one of our ads, which was his picture on a milk carton saying "Have you seen the sheriff?" Because we hadn't seen him at the office. He's always telling us he's in Tallahassee, but his mileage and his gas doesn't reflect that.

His quote to me was, "Brandon, you put my picture on a milk carton, but I'm going to take care of that."

So that was the 21st of April. May 2nd, he had by this time created another position that never existed before, which is chief of detectives with the equivalent rank of captain. So he took a school deputy, Lance Yaeger, who had been removed from CID twice for his conduct and his disregard for procedure and constitution. He made him the head of CID, so he was now my boss.

Because of my position at the FBI I held, there is such as thing as a security clearance. I held a top secret FCI clearance. My supervisor also had to hold a clearance so that I could talk to them about what I was doing. He did not at the time have a clearance. That became an issue between Lance and I. He demanded that I -- I don't grant the clearance. That's the department of justice. It was a point of contention between us, but he started demanding that I meet with him every Monday to go over what I was doing?

I don't know if you've met Lance or interviewed with Lance. He very much wants to be bigger than what he is and wants to be in the know of things.

Q. Did that include asking you questions about matters that were under investigation by the federal government?

A. Yes.

Q. Which you don't have the privy to --

A. Correct.

Q. -- share with people don't have the proper clearance.

A. Correct. So I would tell him what I could tell him, and I would not tell him or even bring up things that he didn't need to know about.

My job, I did travel across the country and across the globe. Early in Sheriff Watson's tenure, I flew to India. We arrested a terrorist and brought him back. I think the coolness factor for Lance was there until we didn't get along.

So that Monday, May 2nd, we meet. And he talks to me, and he says, "Hey, I need to bring something up. In the future, you need to do your payroll different than what you're doing." He's like, "You're doing your payroll at the end of the two-week pay period."

I had done it that way for sixteen years through, I think, three captains. I'd never had anybody really take an interest in what I did. As long as I did my job, they were satisfied.

But he's like, "that's wrong. It's again policy, and I've recently had to write people up for that."

I don't know who that was. I don't believe there was anybody.

"So what I'm going to need you to do is, do it at the beginning of the pay period."

Policy says you'll do it every day by the close of business or the end of your shift. That's what he initially said, you're not doing it every day; that's against policy.

"I don't care if you do it at the beginning of the pay period, and if you just adjust it as you go," and that was the reason that I did it the way I did, because my hours change. I might work two days straight. I might come out in the middle of the night and then come back. It just depended on what we were doing. It had never been an issue. It had never been addressed. It had never been questioned. There was never an issue.

So, he tells me that. So, basically, he told me there to violate the policy he's telling me not to violate.

I left, called my wife and say, "Hey, my Spidey senses are kind of tingling. I just had this conversation with this guy. It was really weird, and he talked to me about payroll."

My payroll could only be entered from my ASO laptop, which I was not allowed to have in the FBI space. So whenever I did anything, I would have to go down to my car in the parking lot and work on it or work from home.

Again, she's smart. She agreed. She's like, "Yeah, something is going on. Do what he's telling you."

I went to the FBI office, sat in my car and entered my payroll for whatever was left of the pay period, submitted it and was done. Two days later I had to leave. I was traveling. I have a daughter in college at (unintelligible). So I was making fun-filled drive up the east coast, and I got a call from somebody who said, "Hey, this just happened. Lance Yaeger called OPS, pulled a tracking number on you."

So there's different levels of investigation. So a tracking number is --

Q. We understand.

A. -- the top end of "I've done something bad."

"He's pulling a tracking number on you over your payroll."

I'm like, "Well, that's weird. We just had a discussion about it, and I did what he told me to do."

It was just a heads-up this is happening. Brandon Kutner has told him he doesn't think it's OPS level, but Yaeger is insistent that this happen.

So I go to DC, come back for a Monday morning meeting. "Hey, Captain. Is everything good?"

"Yeah, Jody, everything is good."

"Anything we need to talk about? Anything I need to know about?"

"No, not that I can think of. What do you got going on this week?"

"We're doing this, this, and this."

"Before I go, anything we need to talk about?"

"We're good."

I have yet to be told that I am the subject of an investigation. It is an active investigation still there.

Q. Meaning that there should be a tracking number at ACSO which is in your name.

A. It is there.

Q. But you've never been served with a notice?

A. I have never been served with a notice.

So that started festering with me, and that's kind of when I made the decision I'm not going to finish DROP. I had one -- August of last year was one year. I got one year of DROP. I left four years and a very substantial amount of money that I feel I worked for on the table.

Their favorite tactic is to begin progressive discipline and fire people. We all know if you get fired in the state system, they could go after my pension. I'm not an investment. I am a pension as far as employee.

So I made the decision that I'm going to retire.

So going back on that, February 1st, without warning, in the middle of this media campaign I was transferred out of the task force for the first time. Really, it ticked off the FBI. It goes against the MOU. In the agreement, they're supposed to get 60 days' notice. I was pulled --

Q. Because you're in the middle of investigations.

A. Exactly. I was pulled out without warning as well as the other task force members. So I believe, based on all of my experience with him, that that was a retaliatory thing.

Q. Where were you placed? Where were you ordered to go?

A. Back to CID. So then I was told, "Well, keep working over there, but you're going to have to come to CID once or twice a week." And then I was told, "Move all of your stuff out of the FBI and put it in a cubicle here."

It was, again, I think, incompetence. They pulled that trigger, but they didn't know what to do with me or Jason Francis. They didn't know when the FCC of the FBI is calling them going, "What are you doing?"

He's never met with them. He's refused to meet with them.

One of his first tasks that he gave me back -- I'm skipping, I know -- was, he wanted a bug sweep of his office. He was like, "Hey, you work at the FBI. I need you to come over here and bug-sweep my office." We don't do that.

So I got pulled back February 1st. That lasted a couple weeks, and then we were allowed to go back and resume our duties.

So the OPS investigation against me. Kutner leads the agency. Brett Rhodenizer was put in charge of internal affairs, OPS. I know Brett Rhodenizer. I was his FTO. He called me. I said, "Hey, look, I know this is there. I've never been served, but I've been told it's there."

"I'm going to talk to them. Just let me handle this."

I was like, "I want copies. I want to know what I've been accused of." Per 112, you should have noticed me that I was the subject of an investigation; it hasn't been done.

Brett is a good guy, and he's just like, Let me talk to him." And he's like, you know -- I don't believe it was told to me. Someone else in internal affairs told me that Decoursey called him after he took the position and said, "This investigation is setting there on Branaman. You're going to do it. I want it done."

I believe that it's for insubordination because that's what their go-to is. It's a Level Five, which means it's a fireable offense, and that is their go-to with everybody. When you looked at me funny, it's insubordination.

Brett, it's my understanding, had a meeting with the sheriff, and he said, "Hey, it's gone."

I don't care. I want it. It's gone. I never got copies. I can tell you the number, and we're going to do a public records request for it.

22 --

INSPECTOR SNOWDEN: FC-29?

THE WITNESS: So you've heard this?

INSPECTOR SNOWDEN: No. You've got it written down here.

A. Oh, sorry.

But it's an active investigation to this day, I'm not even an employee anymore.

So that's what made my decision to leave. I submitted a retirement letter May 23rd along with three months of leave requests and said, "Hey, I've got this much time on the books. I have to get it off or I'm going to lose it. I'm already leaving a few hundred thousand dollars of DROP money. I'd like to at least get my time off."

I have a copy here of what was sent back that said -- you know, it's immediately accepted by Joel and the sheriff with notes of "You will be informed as to what your leave will be."

So then I'm told, "No, you can't take this leave the way you requested it."

I gave them names of people that have done it. People have done it since I've left; therefore, I believe I was treated differently because of the position I was in. They allowed it before, and they've allowed it after, but I was not allowed to do it.

"You're an essential part of this detective bureau. We're short-staffed. I need you here."

And I can be pretty direct, and I can -- me and Tic did not get along, so, you know, the conversation was, "That's a bunch of BS. I want to take my leave. I don't want to leave this. You know, my daughter's birthday is in here."

"You're an essential part. You need to be here."

What do you think I'm going to be doing? I'm not starting an investigation into Tiffany Sessions. I'm ending my investigations. I'm wrapping -- and it's going to take weeks to wrap up what I have at the FBI. Some of these FBI investigations are decades. Like there are some that are still ongoing that I worked on in 2006 when I got there. It's just the nature of what it is.

"No, if I need you, I'm going to assign you cases."

So I was a little put out with that, that I wasn't being allowed to fund my leave. He was making me come to work.

I don't think I put it in here, but there was one day he called me in and made me come to work after he had been exposed to COVID the night before. I contracted COVID, and then I was out on sick day; which sick leave is a payout that I didn't want to burn, but I had to burn like nine days of sick leave because I kept testing positive.

So it wasn't that they needed me. It was he's going to prove his point by making me come to work.

Again, my daughter's birthday. My leave slips were put in. So our policy is that whoever gets their leave slips in first, they get that day off. There were, I believe -- we'd have to pull the records -- three other people that submitted for leave after I did. They were given the day off. I had to work. So, again, I 100 percent believe that I was singled out.

July 11th, Yaeger calls me into the office and hits me with a corrective counseling. So under our contract, if he does a corrective counseling, it's not a grievable discipline. And they started doing -- and maybe you've heard this before.

Q. Sure.

A. So they've started doing this. They're giving my numbers corrective counseling so that there's not a grievance that we can file, but it begins with progressive discipline.

I know he was doing did this. And if you talk to Scott Anderson, when Scott was at the courthouse, he started progressive discipline on Scott. Scott has integrity. Scott is an outspoken person, and he was bucking the system.

So I was brought in and presented -- I had quit meeting with him without a witness. So initially my witness that I requested was a guy named John Schabruch, also someone with integrity that I trust.

After the first meeting when John tried to mediate over these days off, suddenly the witness was a guy named Billy Beck. Billy Beck is a recently promoted lieutenant who works for Lance Yaeger, and they have a history of working together throughout. Billy Beck never said a word in any of our meetings. He sat there and stared at the floor, so he wasn't much of a witness or an arbitrator regardless.

The corrective counseling that he is providing me for is for not answering every bullet point in an email, for not telling him that I had responded to a dive call.

So the CID captain is not in the special operations chain of command. He would not have been notified that I was on a dive call. I've never had to notify the CID captain unless it was something for CID. Per the MOU, my direct supervisor was the squad supervisor at the FBI. I notified my squad supervisor where I was and what I was doing.

Also, that's the same person who would approve my leave. He's a former UPD guy, Dave Collins. You know, you had a good run, enjoy your days off, man. We'll work with you to wrap your cases up, but best of luck. Get your days off. And then ASO sided with Lance to deny those days off.

So not answering every bullet point on an email and not letting him know where I was. So I asked to go speak with my representation before I signed anything. Initially, he was going to deny that I do that.

It got heated, like "banging on the fist" heated. Like, "You're going to sign this. If you don't sign this, I'm going to pull a tracking number for insubordination and begin progressive discipline.

My response was, "You've already pulled one tracking number. Let's talk about that one."

That's a -- all of the command staff, when you challenge them on something, they just deflect and move one. They never answer a direct question.

So I reached out to our counsel. She said, yes, she'd go in there and sign it. If there are places to write comments, write comments; there was, and I went through each one of his things.

"You're telling me I'm not responding to your emails. I can give you six emails where I emailed you, and you haven't responded to me. So what's the difference here? I want to attach those. I want it in writing."

"I don't have time for this shit. You're either going to sign it, or it's insubordination."

I signed it, left, and that's -- it wasn't -- the leave at that point wasn't worth me staying there and getting more discipline and potentially losing my retirement, so I made the decision to go into what we call "transition leave." It's something that I helped create with the old administration of burning that leave, but you keep all of your gear, your car. I was actually the example when we did it with Chief Huckstep, who was the chief deputy at the time, of, "Hey, you know, Jody, when you get time to go, we're going to let you take your leave; but if I have a plane crash in Newnan's Lake, I'm going to call you, and you're going to go take the dive team and take care of those needs.

When I turned in my transitional leave slip, it was -- the expression -- and this is me being petty and personal, but Lance Yaeger was about to wet his pants, he was so happy, and he ran down the hall. It was immediately -- which is funny because stuff goes to Sheriff Clovis Watson Jr., and it sits there for months or you never get a response. Mine were signed the day that I turned it in, and it was -- they wanted me to bring in everything the next day.

I believe this was like a Wednesday. And we had an unfair labor practice suit against them that week, so I was actually taking leave. And he's like, "You need to bring everything in tomorrow."

I'm like, "I can't go find a tie tack from 1994 overnight." You know, there's stuff -- I had three pages of property. You know, you accumulate stuff over time that you put in a box. So I was given until the next Monday to turn everything that I owned in to the Sheriff.

So he went so far as to call the FBI and tell them, Jody has to be -- something called being "read out." So when I lost my clearance, I was "read out" my sign saying if I ever write a book, make a movie, I mean, a whole bunch of legal caveats of the knowledge that I had.

And they're like, "Jody is good. We'll get that before."

"No, Sheriff Watson wants this done tomorrow."

And they're like, "We don't work for Sheriff Watson. We'll do this."

But that's just kind of their mentality of where they went with this. They wanted me gone right away. It's very different than how anybody else has ever been treated.

So that Monday at about 8:00 in the morning Lance is calling me. "Hey, where you at? You here yet?"

"No, I got to go to the FBI and do some things. I'll be there."

"As soon as you get here, let me know when you're here."

So I got on property, and he was waiting at the back door. "Where is your stuff? I want your stuff."

I'm like, "I turned my stuff in."

It was just -- the process in the way I left was ridiculous, over the top, not the way that I ever expected or would expect anybody to go into retirement.

The way he treats people when they leave, if they're not kissing the ring, is the term everybody uses, it's ridiculous. You can see it with Linda Brown recently.

But I had to take my laptop to IT. I had to take a radio to the radio shop. He wanted to know where I was every second of the day. "I've got to escort you out. I've got to escort you out of this building. Once you sign as my CID person, you and I don't have to talk to each other ever again. You know, I need your firearm. I need to take your gun. I need to take your badge." It was just very improper the way he did it.

So he took that badge to the sheriff. The sheriff did let me keep my gun. I had to sign my dive team equipment back in. Who's going to sign for that? I am. I'm the team leader. You can't do that. It's not in your chain of command.

HR is like, "Jody, sign the paper and be done with it."

So while I was filling out my final paperwork in HR, he's calling HR, "Is he done yet? Is he done yet? I need to take him to see the sheriff."

I asked HR, "I've still got my door swipe. I want to go say bye to people. I'm still employed until August." That was the big thing, was I should have kept all of that until August.

So HR is like, "We'll leave your door on." They go, "You know when we leave, he's going to make us turn it off."

I get it. So I walked out to go to the sheriff's office, and he was extremely irate that I still had a door pass. Walked into the suite, didn't see the sheriff. Rarely do you see him. I was given my gun by his secretary, and I walked out. He was literally following me down the hall, wanting to know where I was going and what I was doing.

It's kind of long story, petty, but it's just -- it just goes to show the way that I was treated by him.

I took my stuff -- I left my stuff on a desk in CID, went to say goodbye to people. When I came back, it was gone. He had taken it and give it to HR because, "Joe, you need to get out of this building. You don't need to be here," so I left.

By the time -- I don't know if y'all have been to the sheriff's office. There's a Food Lion plaza that's a block away. Before I made it to the thing, there's an email. "Jody Branaman no longer works at this agency, no longer has access to the building. It was just very petty on their part and very, I believe, targeted in the way that they did that.

I didn't get to enter my final payroll, which I think is got to be some sort of violation. "I'll fill out your payroll for you and sign it." So from that day to the end of August, or the middle of August, when I was out, I had no clue what my payroll was. I'd lost all access to the system, couldn't verify it.

Q. Did you suffer a financial loss because of not being able to take the leave, or does --

A. I did.

Q. -- the other type of leave cover that?

A. I had more leave than I had days to work, so yes. I left -- I'd have to go back and pull that, of how many days I actually left on the table that was use or lose.

I chose to leave; but had it not been for feeling this way, I would not have left. I lost about $320,000 of DROP that my and wife and I -- because, you know, if I didn't have to be at Resilience Government Services right now, I would not be there. I would be doing woodworking or on a boat; but I left my DROP money for my health as well. I mean, I don't know.

If you talk to Tuck, there was one day Tuck made me get in the truck and go to the ambulance barn and have my blood pressure checked, and it was ridiculous just over -- every time you dealt with Lance Yaeger, it was just a contentious, argumentative thing.

Q. We are a little bit behind. I hate to rush you, but we're --

A. Can I run through these other members real quick?

Q. Let me look at these, because a lot of these we are aware of.

A. Michelle Swilley being put on a shift opposite of her husband by Lance Yaeger after he told her he was going to do it?

Q. That one I'm not aware of.

A. All right. So Michelle Swilley was a detective, a very good detective. Her husband is a K-9 officer. We work 12 -- they work 12-hour shifts, so Team One, Team Two. If you're on Team One, you're never going to see the Team Two person.

Michelle was targeted. Michelle was a board member with us. She was continually harassed by Yaeger when she was a detective, wanted out of CID. He initially refused to let her out of CID. In one of their conversations he said, "Well, let me ask you this. What if I put you back on the road, and I put you on a shift opposite your husband and you never saw each other? How would that be?"

And she goes, "One of us" -- "both of us would probably leave the agency." Then that's exactly what he did, and she left the agency. She went to UPD.

We had an officer commit suicide a few weeks ago. They did an escort to the -- we were very involved with Nick. So they do an escort to the ME's office. Michelle was there representing UF. Tic walks up to her, tries to shake her hand, and she's like, "I'm not going to do that."

He calls complaining to UF's command staff saying that their officer acted conduct unbecoming by refusing to shake a command staff member's hand of another agency.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Is "Tic" Yaeger?

A. I'm sorry. He is Yaeger. His nickname is Lunatic because of a lot of things he did. Like I said, he was removed from CID twice that I'm aware of.

Frank Williams. You probably have hear ad nauseam about Frank. One of the those you may not have heard was Frank was going to take over the dive team from me. My understanding is, someone was in the room when Lance Yaeger said, "We can't give him that position because Jody recommended him, and he's associated with PBA."

Frank Williams is also -- was one of our bargaining team members. He was fired over a Facebook post.

Chuck Drake, one of my board members, bargaining team members, was subject of an OPS investigation of how he applied Capstone in a training scenario the same way they've always done it. He's been transferred several times since then.

David and Becky Butcher. David Butcher has been transferred several times. He's one of my bargaining team members.

Scott Anderson, one of my bargaining team members. He's now been put in IA, so he's exempt. He can't participate in bargaining. He's also been the subject of discipline.

David; his wife, Becky; and Scott Anderson, they're leaving DROP to get out of there as well. So they're retiring early based on the climate there.

Richie Watkins, he's a jail lieutenant, or was. He's one my bargaining team members. He was demoted to sergeant within his -- you have a year of probationary period. He was demoted for no reason.

Beck is a PBA member. He was a captain. He probably should be the jail director. He was demoted along with Watkins in that same time period, and a completely incompetent captain, John Hoover, who had left the agency in lieu of for, I believe, honesty, is now back and is the captain of the jail.

Glen Stanley, bargaining team member, subject to discipline.

A.J. Brahmi. Mr. Kramer is probably familiar with A.J. He's a traffic guy. He'll write you for 56 in a 55. He's just that guy. He pulled over Chad Scott. There's a video of him pulling other Chad Scott in his patrol car speeding. Chad never completely stops. He just kind of rolls down his window. Brahmi pulls up beside him and is like, "Oh, hey. I couldn't" -- he turned on his blues. "Didn't recognize the car."

Chad is like, "Hi," and keeps on keeping on.

Two days later, Brahmi is transferred out of the traffic unit to patrol, no explanation given.

Michelle Clements. Have y'all talked about Michelle and the radio?

Okay. GPD came up on our channel. It's confined communications. He starts targeting Michelle Clements for discipline.

Jacksonville Sheriff's Office flying in to my airspace?

Q. Yes.

A. Okay.

INSPECTOR RIDDICK: No.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. No.

A. So a detective from JSO -- JSO is a much bigger agency than us -- comes over and says, "Hey, we've got a cargo theft, marine. They're chopping everything up in Alachua County. We've already done the work. We've flown it. We've got aerials. We just need somebody to write a search warrant, get the state attorney on board, and let's get it.

It goes up to the sheriff. The sheriff -- even I was told this. Number one, you don't go out of the county without getting the sheriff's permission. You don't talk to another agency to include going to lunch with GPD. You know, we would go to lunch like, "Hey, what are you guys seeing? Car burglaries?" You don't talk to anybody without permission of the sheriff.

As the dive team commander, in the past, if Levy County called me and said, "Hey, man, we've got a boat in Cedar Key. We need to get out there," mutual aid was just understood, and we would go. Now the sheriff of Levy County has to call the sheriff personally and ask him.

The biggest example of that is Nassau County. They had the officer that was shot and killed -- have you heard this?

Q. Yes.

A. Okay. So this one was JSO.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. We've heard that the SWAT wasn't allowed to go.

A. That is correct.

Q. Do you know why?

A. Because the sheriff wanted that sheriff to contact him personally. I believe it was a lieutenant. You'd have to ask Josh or Rich Howell this.

Their SWAT team commander was basically like, "Dude, he's going to the hospital. They're going to harvest organs on this deputy. We need to go."

"Not until he calls me personally."

Called Marion County, within 15 minutes they had a full SWAT team northbound.

Just his narcissistic behavior is unbelievable.

So the JSO incident, it went up. "You need to have the sheriff of JSO request personally, and I want a letter of apology for coming into my county with his airplane without my permission."

You know, that poor detective was like, "I've never even seen the sheriff. We're huge."

So they very rightfully reached out to FDLE, and I believe it was state-wide. I don't know if y'all got involved or not, but they got it handled with the sheriff's office.

Q. If they got a warrant, we were involved.

A. So I don't know. It wasn't my thing.

Did y'all get into DTF and the way they raided it in the middle of the night and took all their equipment back?

Q. We're aware of it. Only if you have direct knowledge.

A. You'd have to talk to one of the DTF guys that were there.

Q. Well, listen, that's a lot of information.

A. I'm sorry.

Q. We promise you that we're not going to get back in touch with you and ask you to come back to us and give us more specifics on some specific issues, but unfortunately we just have more people scheduled for today.

A. Okay. wherever you need me.

MR. KRAMER: Do you guys want to follow up on anything else before we close for today?

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. There was no active investigation other than the one that you were not told about?

A. I don't know. We were going to do public records request for any and all discipline involving me. If someone hadn't broken the rules and talked out of turn -- you know, as a detective, I would be ticked off if somebody was leaking my information, but I'm very grateful they didn't because I would have never known that this was there and potentially would have been fired.

MR. KRAMER: Okay. Thank you. We're good.

FDLE interview 26 APR 2023

- 2020 Election
  - PBA board meets with Watson and Darnell
    - Darnell is selected for endorsement
  - A few days later Corwine and Stafford reach out to the board
    - They had met with Watson and DeCoursey outside of the board
    - Tell the board that they believe we should look at Watson as a candidate
    - Are told by the board it is inappropriate to have meetings outside of the board
  - Stafford calls me to convince me to endorse Watson
    - States that he believes people are afraid to go against Darnell
    - Cannot provide names of members wanting to endorse Watson
  - Board meeting via phone
    - Asks to have a new vote
    - Tell board that he has talked to members and members are afraid to go against Darnell
      - Cannot provide names
    - A vote is held with myself and Drake voting not to change the vote – Tuck Abstains over his disagreement of what is happening
    - Stafford wants a unanimous vote
    - Stafford and Corwine provide partial results of a survey monkey sent to the members
      - The results show the members want endorse Darnell
    - It is revealed by Corwine and Stafford that the results are not complete because it will cost money to have the full results
      - I move to pay the fee to obtain the full results -Unknown second, probably Drake or Tuck
      - The full results show the members want to endorse Darnell
      - Stafford states that he feels the survey is inaccurate because he believes members are afraid to go against Darnell
        - He cannot provide names
    - Stafford calls for another vote
      - I suggest that we do not endorse either candidate
      - Castronova makes a motion that another vote is held and that we have to pick a candidate – unknown second
      - A vote is held with myself and Drake voting not to change the vote – Tuck Abstains over his disagreement of what is happening
      - The endorsement changes to Watson
      - Stafford admonishes the board not to discuss how the endorsement process occurred. Stated that no matter how we got there, the endorsement was for Watson and we needed to be united in the decision and messaging to members

        - Members find out the next day and are furious.
            - Members new from talking to each other the survey monkey was for Darnell
            - Members begin accusing the board of going against them
    - Corwine and Stafford have an unknown number of meetings with Watson and DeCoursey
        - Are actively working on the campaign
        - Host member meetings with Watson
        - Drake and I are cut out of the loop
    - June of 2020 Robert Brinkman enters the race as a NOP candidate
        - This cuts the Republicans out of the August vote
        - August 18th Clovis wins the majority of the Democrat vote
        - August 28th Brinkman drops out of the race
        - Brinkman never raised funds or campaigned
        - Brinkman had a Watson sign in his yard when he was interviewed
        - Brinkman did the same thin in the 2012 District 20 race for the State House, allowing Watson to win that race
    - Between August and January Corwine and Stafford continue to meet with Watson
- Watson takes office in January of 2021
    - Corwine is re-hired at ASO with the rank of Major
    - Stafford is promoted to Lieutenant
    - Within weeks Stafford is promoted to Captain of the Patrol Division
    - By June Stafford has been promoted to Major and assigned to the Department of the Jail as the Director
        - Stafford is not corrections certified
        - Stafford has never worked in the jail
        - Stafford has no supervisory experience above the squad level
    - Removes "Sheriff" from patches (3K)
        - There is only one Sheriff ~ Joel DeCoursey
    - Transfers of members who vocally opposed Watson take place
    - Abnormal / narcissistic behavior
        - Hey young man – transfer of Levy
        - Good Morning Sir – verbal counsel for not addressing him as Sheriff
    - Watson brings in Michelle Sherfield to a position that has never existed and makes her a Bureau Chief of the newly created Government and Community Affairs Unit and a direct report to the Sheriff
        - She is a Bureau Chief (Lieutenant) of a unit comprised of herself
        - She is now the Director (Major) of the same unit with no staff
    - Watson hires Brandon Johnson (Son of Sherfield) to the PIO Office
        - He is now in the teen court unit
    - Both Sherfield and Johnson had content on FB that would see anyone else in OPS
        - Content was reported
        - It was removed, but no action was taken

        - Sherfield currently has content on her personal FB that appears to be taken in her office while at work

        - Removes Yakubsin as Honor Guard Commander
    - Promotes Eric Hutchinson as an "Acting Lieutenant" even though he had not tested for the position and was not eligible to test.
        - Returned him to Sergeant until he tested and then promoted him over higher scoring candidates
    - Currently has promoted Scott Bonifide to "Acting Lieutenant" of the Civil Bureau
        - Bonifide is close friends of Stafford
        - Bonifide is a PBA board member and was one of the board members who voted to change the endorsement
        - Bonifide has never served in the Civil Bureau
        - Bonifide is not on the current list of promotable Sergeants
        - Bonifde has not taken the Lieutenant's promotional test, and was not eligible (time in grade) to take the last test

        - Bonifide has stated that he intends to serve in the acting capacity until the next test at which time he will pass it and be promoted
        - 7 eligible sergeants are currently on the list to be promoted
        - Mike Richardson has been promoted to Sergeant and assigned to Bonifide's position. (there is nowhere for Bonifide to go back to)
        - Social media posts of SCWJR congratulating Bonifide on his promotion to Lieutenant were changed after complaints were made. FB now says Acting Lieutenant, Instagram still shows Lieutenant.

THE WITNESS: I do.

EXAMINATION

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. So, Captain, you've provided me an email. We're continuing you from the other day. You provided me a copy of an email where it appears this is referenced to the deletion of the investigation against Sergeant Pam James. And if I understand correctly, on November 18th, 2022, about 8:35 in the morning, you informed Major Keith that the undersheriff has instructed you to remove the tracking number for Sergeant James. That's what the email is saying here?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that you're being told it's invalid because of previous orders that he gave to Sergeant Stafford?

A. Major Stafford, yes, when he was major. Yes, sir.

Q. And, of course, I think we've covered this before, but you don't know what "invalid" means?

A. No, I -- I mean, I would assume that he meant that the investigation should be canceled or terminated. You know, I explained to him over the phone that I can't delete items or the tracking number or pieces of evidence that we had already collected, all that was going to be preserved; but that I would notify the chain of command of his direction, and that's what I did.

Q. Was he asking you to delete the items from the tracking system?

A. No. He -- when I said -- because I said those words, that, you know, we have evidence that can't be deleted, he said, "I'm not asking you to delete any evidence. I'm just telling you that the tracking number is invalid."

Q. And then the remainder of the email is you asking Major Keith -- or essentially informing her that you're not going to be able to talk to these people's chain of command and inform all the people of this decision-making because they don't work for you and it's not an OPS investigation.

A. That's correct. We were not investigating the investigation; James' command was. They were working for Major Keith, so I was asking Major Keith to inform his undercommand of what the undersheriff's directions were.

Q. And the final email here is her responding that she's essentially done that?

A. Correct.

Q. Understood. Okay. Is there anything else of reference in regard to incidents between you and mainly Keith in reference to the Sergeant James investigation that you needed to share with us?

A. No, sir.

(Exhibit 1 was marked for identification.)

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. And then the thing that I think we wanted to -- you've provided me with three documents. And in the order which it appears they were created, on April 26th, you -- of 2021, you were a lieutenant at that time. You were a board member of the hiring board, and this was in reference to CID positions?

A. Correct.

Q. And if I understand correctly, you don't know how many positions or you don't recall how many positions you might have been interviewing for.

A. Correct. I don't recall how many vacancies we had at the time.

Q. And as a part of that interview process, each potential candidate would have a recommendation form filled out?

A. Correct.

Q. And the one that's in front of me is for Cleveland Cox?

A. Yes.

Q. And in that form there are multiple persons, including yourself, Sergeant Anderson, and a number of other individuals who are either sergeants or lieutenants at the sheriff's office, all of whom rate Cleveland Cox as not recommended?

A. Correct.

Q. Then on April 29th you send an email -- excuse me, a memorandum, an inneroffice correspondence, telling human resources what has occurred and requesting Deputy Greg Smith be transferred to CID. And then it ranks the candidates that you interviewed -- there were at least 13 or 14 of them -- and ranking Deputy Smith as number one, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And it indicates three individuals, one of whom is Cleveland Cox, who are not recommended?

A. That's correct.

Q. And then approximately almost 30 days later, 25 days later, this is from Todd -- an email to you from Todd Kelly indicating that you are losing Sandy Myers along with six other CID officers.

A. Right.

Q. And how many officers are there in CID, deputies?

A. Well, it's different now than it was then. We had more at that time. We probably had at that time close to maybe between 20, 25 detectives. We're down to about 12 now.

Q. So you would have been losing a quarter of?

A. That sounds about right.

Q. And some of these detectives, including Sandy Myers, would have been the most experienced detectives?

A. Yes. She was a sergeant, I believe. She's a detective sergeant. Absolutely. And she was over the persons squad, which would be homicide and robberies, and absolutely very senior.

Q. And highly effective?

A. Yes.

Q. So they're removing a quarter of your staff, including one of the most seasoned detectives, and replacing them with ten detectives. Ten people would then become detectives?

A. Right.

Q. Which did include Smith, Greg Smith; Jacob Barlow; Feraro; Parsons; Atkins. It included somebody by the name of Cooper. Who's that?

A. That's Michael Cooper. He was the sergeant. He was a sergeant that was coming in.

Can I look at that real quick? Because I -- the formatting might be a little bit -- okay.

Yeah. So it says we'll lose Myers and O'Quinn; these were two sergeants. So Myers was persons, and O'Quinn was property.

So down here we are getting Pardue as a sergeant and Cooper as a sergeant. So those two are the sergeants that replaced Myers and O'Quinn, and then the rest are detectives. And I believe Smith, who was our number one selection, was the only one with previous investigative experience.

Q. And Cox is not recommended, and there's another person who wasn't even asking for the position, if I understand this correctly.

A. I don't recall. I'd have to look.

Q. No, maybe that's it. It looks like these other people may have been on this list, other than Cleveland Cox. And are you ever provided any reason why Cleveland Cox is being added to a unit for which he's not recommended?

A. No.
Q. Is that unusual in your experience?
A. Yes.
Q. Is it potentially detrimental to the agency?
A. Very. There are really good reasons for not recommending Cleveland Cox.
Q. Is one of them because he had engaged in highly questionable conduct towards a former -- a person who's the mother of one of his children?
A. Yes.
Q. Including threatening conduct, which would have caused you concern?
A. Yes.
Q. Would that conduct also concern you that he wouldn't be able to maintain his proper temperament and control in a dangerous environment?
A. Absolutely.
Q. Were all those reasons one of the reasons why he wasn't recommended?
A. Yes.
BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:
Q. Any of the individuals that were transferred, do you believe that was retaliatory in any ways?
A. That would be hard to say at that time. I really don't know. At the time it was very shocking to have all those people.

BY MR. KRAMER:
Q. It's been suggested that the individuals who transferred out of -- CID individuals, at that point, which would have been 2021, within about six months of the election those were the individuals who had expressed some level of support for Sheriff Sadie Darnell. Do you know?
A. I really don't know the answer to that. I'm not on social media; and I really do stay kind of separated from that kind of thing, so I can't say for sure.
Q. Is there anything else we talked about that you feel like you need to clarify or provide further information?
A. I just wanted to clarify on the previous time that we spoke you asked about providing things in writing, if I've been asked to not provide things in writing.
I was working under Lance Yaeger for a while. He was the chief detective captain over CID, and I was his lieutenant. And then also I've worked for him as the chief detective and he being the major. He has told me on multiple occasions that the sheriff does not prefer things in writing because of public record issues, that he would prefer verbal briefs and/or to have documents read to him as opposed to passed to him or sent to him. And so he -- that's on multiple occasions I've heard him say similar things like that.

And then in one particular instance that I thought of later was for one of our victim advocate positions. They work under us in CID. We had a number one candidate, a person that we wanted -- I don't recall if she was number one at the time, but she worked in another area. She worked in the jail, I think in classification or something like that. Her last name is Georgieva.

So her name was submitted as someone to be selected as a victim advocate. She wasn't moved. She wasn't transferred or appointed to that position, I think, potentially due to jail staffing; I'm not sure, but several -- so when I moved over to OPS, and then I came back to CID, Lieutenant Beck -- I believe it was Lieutenant Beck came to me. And he actually forwarded an email to me and said for these reasons he thinks that some staffing has improved at the jail, and that's the only reason he could think of why she maybe wasn't allowed to transfer over; but he said he was strongly recommending that if we still have an opening in victim advocate, that we reach back and select her.

I was actually on the board when she was interviewed. I remembered her from my previous stint in CID. I agreed. I thought she would be a great fit.

So I took his email, and I sent that to Major Yaeger at the time. And then Major Yaeger called me and asked me to come and speak with him in his office. And he basically explained to me that she was not going to be selected, and that there were reasons for it. And, you know, in the future I should maybe come and have a conversation with him before sending him an email like that because he might know -- he might be privy to things that I'm not privy to, and we should resolve these things with a conversation.

Q. With the inference being -- or the actual statement being that whatever these reasons are why we're not going to make this transfer, change, or promotion, we do not want to reduce them to writing because it will create a record?

A. That was my interpretation of it, yes, sir, and that he just preferred to have a conversation about these things ahead of time so we didn't look bad when we submitted things that we knew weren't going to get approved. We're submitting these things to the sheriff.

One of the reasons that he mentioned for her potentially not being allowed to come besides staffing at the jail was that she apparently, in the previous time after she had not been selected, had reached out to another entity, another job somewhere in the county, applied somewhere else, and so he felt that that was maybe a slight to the sheriff's office. Or I don't know if he was saying he felt that way personally or if that's how the sheriff felt, whatever the case may be, but that was potentially part of the reason.

Q. And a reason he would not want it reduced to writing?

A. Yes.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. What was her name?

A. Her last name is Georgieva. I believe her first name Dayana. I think that's right. I know Georgieva is her last name. She works at the jail.

MR. KRAMER: Anything else?

THE WITNESS: No, sir.

MR. KRAMER: That's it. Thank you.

I told Captain Beck this morning after you and I spoke. Captain Beck has already informed Lieutenant Scott. I'm not sure if Sergeant James knows - She is off on Friday

Thank you

Good morning Major Keith,

As a follow up to our conversation, the Undersheriff instructed me that the tracking number that was pulled for the current investigation on Sgt. Pam James is invalid because of previous orders that he gave to Major Stafford. Please let me know if you need anything else.

Thank you,
Chief Inspector Jon Schabruch

RE: Detective Selection

Detective interviews were conducted on April 26th - 28th, 2021. The interview panel consisted of myself, Lt. David Tuck, Lt. Scott Anderson, Sgt. Rich Howell, Sgt. Karyn O'Quinn, Sgt. Sandra Myers, and Sgt. Nancy Marzouk-Brainerd. Deputy Gregory Smith is the first choice for the position. There is currently one open position in the Property Unit. There will be an additional Property Unit vacancy when Det. Randy Enos retires in July and a vacancy in SVU when Det. Monica Herrera is officially promoted to Sergeant in May.

I respectfully request that Deputy Gregory Smith be transferred to the Criminal Investigations Division as soon as possible.

The rank of all the candidates is as follows:

1. Gregory Smith
2. Jacob Barlow
3. Luis Forero
4. Gabrielle Hunter
5. Lloyd Smith
6. Travis Parsons
7. Michael Adkins
8. Ivan Useche
9. Gregory Guzman

WHEREUPON,

STEPHEN MAYNARD

acknowledged having been duly sworn to tell the truth, and testified upon his or her oath as follows:

THE WITNESS: Yes, I do.

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Could you state your name, please?

A. My name is Steve Maynard. I'm a captain here at the Alachua County Sheriff's Office.

Q. Captain, could you briefly describe your experience in law enforcement?

A. I'm coming up on close to 27 years. I supervise multiple bureaus here at the Alachua County Sheriff's Office; that includes both courthouses, criminal and the civil courthouse. I supervise the civil bureau, I supervise the training bureau, and I also supervise the warrants bureau; so it's multiple areas.

Q. Have you served in other roles in the Alachua County Sheriff's Office?

A. Many.

Q. Is all of your law enforcement experience with the Alachua County Sheriff's Office?

A. It is, the entirety of almost 27 years.

Q. So I want to start by asking you whether or not you are involved in any aspect of the discipline actions that have been going on against Captain Rebecca Butcher?

A. "Yes" is the answer.

Q. What was your involvement?

A. So initially, which you probably already know, it resulted in a corrective counseling where Lance Yaeger, or Major Yaeger, provided a corrective counseling to Captain Butcher. I was not privy to any of that, never saw it, never saw the statements, haven't read it and don't intend to.

Sometime later -- and I had heard through the, you know, the "water cooler" type thing that the allegations against Captain Butcher were based on her demeanor and her tone in the middle of a conversation and a corrective counseling. That was kind of strange, you know, that someone would be -- that an administrative investigation would be launched because of someone's tone and demeanor. Typically, you would look like it would be something that you said, you spoke, some action, something, not necessarily a tone and demeanor. So that's what I heard through the "water cooler" type thing.

I learned that Major Yaeger was going to launch an administrative investigation. He came to me, and he told me that, "Hey, I'm going to have an administrative investigation against Captain Butcher, and I want you to stand in as a witness in me providing the paperwork, the administrative paperwork, to Captain Butcher."

That was the first I heard of it, so I said -- I didn't say yes, no, nothing, no response. He left. He went off to do, you know, additional work, and then my brain started reeling. Okay.

I made -- you know, I saw that this was going to head down a very dangerous area of the sheriff's office for a variety of reasons. I saw that it was going to be potentially bad for the sheriff's office. It was going to be potentially bad for a 30-year veteran, Captain Butcher. It was potentially bad for Major Yaeger. It was potentially difficult or dangerous for a variety of reasons. It didn't sound to me like it was a good idea.

So I decided to take -- which is the only time I've ever done this, but I asked Major Yaeger to come to lunch with me. I said, "Let's go to lunch together. I'll buy."

So I took him to lunch, and I asked not to have this investigation. I said, "I don't think it's a good idea," and I gave him a plethora number of reasons why I thought it was a bad idea to launch an administrative investigation on someone over their tone and demeanor. He listened quietly. You know, I told him all the reasons I told you. I said, "It will be bad. It's going to" -- bear with me. I'm looking at my notes here.

I asked him to stand down with his investigation, is the actual way I said that. I told him that it was going to be bad for the sheriff's office. It was bad for the command staff. It was bad for -- you know, again, for Captain Butcher, for him, and especially given what I had heard about the allegations.

I said -- and this is a quote: Please reconsider. This investigation will tear the command staff apart, end quote.

Major denied my suggestion and requested -- and request and went on forward with his administrative investigation.

I told him I didn't want to be part of his investigation, that I could sit in as a witness; however, I didn't want to read the investigation, I didn't want to be privy to any of his witnesses, I didn't want to be privy to any of the statements that were made by other captains, I didn't want to see any evidence, don't want to be a part of it. I told him that.

Despite, he had, I guess, a conversation with the sheriff and made a decision that I was the guy that was going to sit down as a witness while she was provided her administrative paperwork.

I didn't feel like I had a choice to whether or not I could be a witness. Frankly, they were running out of captains to talk to. I was the lucky one.

By the way, I'm personal friends with Captain Butcher and have been for almost 30 years. That's part of the reason I didn't want to be in the room.

Major Yaeger told me that he had no plans to question or interrogate Captain Butcher. He told me that -- made that crystal clear to me, "Listen, I'm not going to interrogate her. I'm not going to ask any questions."

That kind of put me at ease a little bit. Okay. He's not going to ask her questions, blah, blah, blah. I said, "You're just going to provide the administrative paperwork, right? The normal confidential" -- you know, I think you have to sign that, you know, here's the allegation, yeah, yeah, yeah, boom, boom, boom, that's it. "That's all we're doing, right?"

"That's all we're doing."

"Okay. Very good."

I was simply in the room while she was being provided the administrative investigation paperwork and acknowledging of receipt, basically, that she was getting the paperwork.

When she was taking receipt of the paperwork, I noticed Major Yaeger was visibly nervous. I could tell he was very -- like most people are, like I'm nervous now. I mean, he's nervous while he's trying to do the -- you know, to provide the administrative investigation because he doesn't do those all the time. In fact, I don't know that he'd ever done one before ever. So it may have been his first; I don't know. And he was reading the investigation paperwork verbatim, including the administrative investigation response form.

So, obviously, in our packet it gives the subject employee an opportunity, if they choose, to make a statement unless it's a compelled statement. It gives them an opportunity, if you want to make a statement, if you want to do something, you know, verbally, in writing. You know, you want to do it recorded, that's fine too, whatever. So I was prepared for all of that. You know, again, no big deal. Nothing was alarming at that point.

When I walked into the room I knew that Becky was going to be -- I say "Becky," Captain Butcher was going to be alarmed because -- you know, what's this all about? She had no idea she was being, you know, bam, just hit this coal flat-feeted, basically.

And right before she went in, I actually looked at her -- which he could see, by the way. There's a window he could watch -- this little mirror, rather, and watch us. I looked at her, and I said, "Deep breathe."

So I was trying to calm her down because I knew she was going to be very angry, and I was concerned that she may respond in such a way that could cause her to be fired or some other further damage that could happen. So I was trying to visibly calm her down as best I could, but I couldn't look at her and tell her that because, again, there's a mirror there where he could see while I was seated right next to her.

Anyway, we're back in the room again. So he's reading this paperwork verbatim. So I witnessed him tell Captain Butcher that this was only an administrative investigation, and it was not a criminal investigation; he said that multiple times.

Despite this, Major Yaeger read Captain Butcher Garrity warning, and it clouded things. When that happened automatically, and he started reading the Garrity warning, I'm thinking, you know, a better way of saying this is was probably: Hey, I'm going to provide you response statement. You can choose it if you want. If you want to, you know, make a statement, that's fine; if you don't, that's fine too. If you want to, you can do it recording, you can do that, you know, in written. It doesn't matter. It's up to you. "It's your option" type thing.

That wasn't crystal clear, and she was provided Garrity at this meeting. So that put me at -- you know, at that point I'm thinking, okay, but he's still saying other things in the room. He's saying she's going to have an opportunity, she may, she choose. So in my mind I'm thinking, okay, he's giving enough to make sure that she knows that she has the opportunity to make a statement but doesn't have to make a statement, but he didn't say that. I wish he had made that more clear. And I think that was just because he was reading aloud in the administrative packet rather than speaking, saying,

"You can make a statement if you'd like. I don't have any questions, but here's the form if you'd to," you know, that type of thing.

So that kind of put me -- you know, I wasn't 100 percent comfortable with all of that; but again, it was done. I made a statement on the record while I was there that I was concerned about becoming part of the witnesses where, you know, she -- now I needed to provide an additional witness statement because I was there in the room.

So I made, you know, something out loud and said, "Hey, listen, I'm just here, Captain Butcher. I've never read your investigation." I still haven't, by the way. "I haven't read it. I haven't seen the statements from any of the witnesses. I'm only here as a witness to make sure that you're afforded all this" -- "the paperwork and make sure that you have your rights, your rights are afforded" as a way for me to try to correct myself -- not to say "correct," but protect myself in the room, basically.

So then as we moved forward, General Counsel provided an affidavit, which again, I wasn't necessarily -- I didn't really necessarily think that that was coming. So when he just brought it to my desk, said, "Hey, I have an affidavit here for you for you to look at. Read it and make sure it's correct," blah, blah, blah, "because you have to get it notarized, and it's part of the affidavit for the investigation," I said, "Okay. Thank you. I'll look at it. I'll review it" type thing. That's why I asked for additional information. I said, "Do you have the transcript? Do you have the recorded portion of what happened in the room? I'd like to see all of that so that I can make an informed decision on that."

And ultimately he did, he provided everything.

Q. Let me just ask you this. The affidavit that he provided to you, the things he wanted you to swear to, he had never conferred with you about them prior?

A. He provided it to me. He provided it to me, yes, but we hadn't talked about it or discussed it, no. He just provided me the affidavit for me to read and look at it.

It was almost like he was standing there with me, waiting for me to go ahead, you know, and read it quickly, and that's not the way I work. I give it to the 20-minute rule. I like to look at it. I want to read about it. I want to think about it. I want to -- you know, if it's not an emergency -- at least it wasn't an emergency for me -- I wanted to read it and think about it a little bit, so I did.

Q. Is that the affidavit that you originally were provided that you've marked with the word "draft"?

A. Correct.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. Just so I understand, when Major Yaeger got with you about sitting in on Captain Butcher's investigation, was that the same day?

A. No, I don't think it was. I'd have to look at my records 100 percent, but I don't think it was the exact same time. I think it was a day or two after that.

So I'd had that lunch saying, you know, I don't think it's a good idea. Let's not do this. You know, it's not -- at this point the shot hasn't been fired. Let's not have an investigation for somebody, a 30-year veteran's, you know, tone and demeanor. Maybe give her some time to kind of calm down, whatever. You know, we bring other people into the room. We talk about it like grown men and women, and we have a conversation but not launch an administrative investigation for something over -- a 30-year veteran's career on tone and demeanor.

If somebody had launched an administrative investigation for my tone and demeanor in my time here at the sheriff's office for 27 years, I probably wouldn't be employed anymore.

Q. I just wanted to clarify. You wanted to review the recording. You said that you announced yourself in the room. Was that being recorded?

A. It was. It was recorded.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. So there's a third page attached to the affidavit?

A. Yes. So the third, that is my records, but I'll show you.

So what I did is, I saw this, and I wrote draft on it to make sure that this didn't leave the room. Well, you know, I'll shred that. No, actually, I think I'll take that, because I had already signed it at that point. I said, no, I'll hang on to this, get a little more clarification on this. Let me read it, that type of thing.

I came back to him with another draft of what I thought was more correct in what I thought.

Q. This would be -- what's on the third page would be a replacement for paragraph 6?

A. Yeah, but this is not -- again, this came out at my house; because this, there was no third page on this. It's 1 and 2.

What I did is, I went home, I read it. I listened to the recording of it. I looked at the transcripts carefully, and I read all the way through it to see what type of language he utilized to make sure it wasn't a compelled statement.

So I did, I went all the way through the transcripts. And as I'm going through it, as I read through it, before I signed it, I wanted to see what the specific language was.

So I did. I went through it and looked at the transcripts where he says, "I'm going to give you an opportunity."

I actually looked in the description -- or the -- the Websters to see what opportunity, what does it actually mean? What's opportunity? Opportunity gives somebody a choose -- a choice, right? It's not a compelled order. You know, you can only have one thing you can do. These are opportunity. So I wanted to look at that, and I wanted, before I signed it, again, to make sure, hey, did she have an opportunity, or was she ordered to provide a statement.

So again, I read all the way through it. "If you" -- "if you," and I looked at "if you" in the transcript. Well, "if you" is again giving her an opportunity. If you want, you know, you can have a recorded statement or a written statement.

So it was somewhat clouded. Again, the better way to have written this -- I know what he was trying to do. What he was trying to do is to provide her a response, an opportunity to provide a response. In my heart, I don't believe that he was trying to order her to do anything. That's the reason I looked all through, to see if, you know, there was language in there that shows, you know, that he didn't order her. I don't think he tried to order her.

So I looked all -- if you want. "If you want" is not an order. "If you want." That's a choice. That's an opportunity. The type of language I looked to make sure that I was going to be okay with signing this affidavit. Am I okay saying that she wasn't ordered. That was what I was looking at, the two-prong thing, you know, was she ordered and compelled, and was she questioned and interrogated.

Was she questioned and interrogated? No, she was not. Was she ordered? Again, there needed to be some clarity. It should have been a little more; but what they did is, instead he used language like "if you want, you can have an opportunity to make a response," that type of thing. That was my concern with the affidavit.

So what I did, I went back to him, and I said, "Hey, I have a problem with the affidavit. I would like for you" -- and this is General Counsel. "I would like for you to amend Bullet Number 6."

I have no problem with the rest of this stuff. It's all factual. Number 6, I'm a little concerned. So I struck through it while I was in his office. It basically says "I observed Major Yaeger tell petitioner multiple times that she was not being ordered."

Well, that's not technically correct. As I read through it, that language is not there. What's there is "opportunity, if you want" type language. So I drafted this and said, "This is what I'm more comfortable with."

He read it, and then he, you know, being typical, you know, attorney-type thing, I think, he was trying to wordsmith it so that it was maybe a little more grammatical correct. What he did and he came up with, he goes, "How about this? Is this okay for you?"

"I observe Major Yaeger clarify to petitioner multiple times that it was her option to provide a statement."

I read it, again read that, read this, read this, and said, "Yeah, I'm okay with that. I'm okay with that statement. I'll sign that." So I signed it. This is my copy that I was signing.

Hopefully, that clarifies what happened with the affidavit.

MR. KRAMER: Understood.

Is there other questions on that?

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. The next issue that I'm aware of to discuss with you is Travis Devinny. Are you familiar with who Travis Devinny is?

A. I am.

Q. He is a deputy sheriff?

A. He is. He's a deputy sheriff here at the Alachua County Sheriff's Office, has been for a long time.

Q. Is he under your command? Or not at the moment, but at the time we're about to be talking about?

A. Normally, he's not. I can kind of give you a little bit up front so that you can kind of understand what happened and how it happened type thing.

So we are dangerously low staffed at the sheriff's office, in my opinion. Across the board, we're anywhere from 30 to 36 percent. I've seen -- it depends on where you go to other bureaus. And our staffing is not good.

Part of my responsibility is making sure the judges, people that come into the courthouse, whether it be witnesses, whether it be victims, you know, attorneys, judges, etc., part of my responsibility is making sure that place is safe and secure, that it runs the way it's supposed to. When I'm short staffed as bad I am -- and I'm down 11 sworn positions, and I'm down three civilian positions currently.

Q. The green coats?

A. Green coats, yeah. But I'm down 11 sworn deputy sheriffs; those are gun toters. So I always -- what I look at, what really matters to me, to be honest with you, I hate to say it that way, the green coats have a very vital position; they do, but there's no substitute for what's at the front door and what may happen when someone comes through the front door and is an active shooter. I have to have a gun toter there, and I have to have a certain -- in my mind, it's my responsibility to make sure the right number of people are at the back door -- because we have duty stations all the way through where I need at least one here, I need at least three here, I need at least two there. I have -- every judge and bailiff, I have to have a gun toter. If a judge is on the bench, I'm going to have a gun toter there.

So because we're short staffed, I have to pull other people from the across the entire agency to be able to staff those deputy positions to make sure the courthouse is safe. I'm not going to complain about it; it is what it is, but I'm going to get the job done. That's what I do.

So we send out an email. It goes out agency-wide for all sworn personnel, and we provide them an opportunity to sign up for nonprotected -- because that's important, nonprotected overtime.

Q. I don't know what that means. If you can, explain it to me.

A. I can. So there's two different -- so you have protected overtime, which is like extra duty. So extra duty is protected, and so it doesn't -- it is -- will always be time and a half no matter if you take time off, no matter if -- you could be off the entire two weeks, but that extra duty will always be paid at a time-and-a-half rate.

Q. Understood. If you haven't worked enough time in a pay period to get overtime, if you do this job, protected overtime, you're getting time and a half no matter what.

A. Correct.

Q. Okay.

A. And I've asked to have that protected, but it was -- it's been denied. So the overtime at courthouse, both courthouses, is not protected, so people sign up knowing that. In other words, if they took, you know, eight to twelve hours off of leave during that pay period, they're not going to sign up for me because why would they? Because they're not going to get time and a half. So they know that it's protected or it's not protected.

So now we get back probably to what's your actual question. I just wanted to make sure and explain about the overtime and how we got here.

Q. How does Travis Devinny fit into this?

A. So to that, Travis Devinny is one of a handful of deputies and supervisors that routinely sign up to participate for voluntary overtime. It's not -- they're not mandated to do this. They volunteer to do it.

We send out this email. They respond to us, and they say, "Hey, I'd like to sign up." If I need three people that day, you know, "I'll be one of them." He does that routinely, anywhere from two to three, maybe sometimes four times a month, and he's one of my -- and I've never had a problem with him. He's always on time. He provides, you know, good -- you know, it gives me some -- I'm trying to find that right word, but he does a good job for me.

So he's one of -- like I said, anywhere from two to four shifts per month he signs up.

Q. Okay. And at some point -- well, let me ask you this. Is your understanding that restricting either protected or unprotected overtime from an employee is a form of discipline?

A. I think that's a problem; I do. I think that if a person -- and I can tell the whole story. If you'd like me to go --

Q. Sure.

A. -- back to it, I can just tell the whole story of what happened.

So Travis signed up. He signed up. I saw him on my roster, blah, blah, blah. He's going to work with me, boom, boom, boom.

I got a call from the major, Major Yaeger, who was my direct report at that time. He called me into his office, closed the door. He tells me, "I don't want you to allow Travis Devinny to sign up for overtime in the courthouse anymore".

So I'm thinking -- you know, again, I was just trying to wrap this over my head. Okay. I said, "Is there something I need" -- so I asked, "Is there something that I need to know about Devinny? Did he do something in the courthouse? Is he under investigation? You know, can you provide me some reasoning as to why I couldn't" -- "that he doesn't sign up anymore or can't sign up anymore?"

He said -- this is a quote. He says, "Travis is a cancer here at the agency, and I don't want that cancer to infect other employees in the courthouse."

So I asked him, I asked Major Yaeger, "Can you give me an example of where he's said something?"

So what I'm looking at, in my mind, okay, did he say something to trash the administration and/or the sheriff, whoever? And if so, can you give me a date and time, because that's actionable, where I can actually investigate that? Potentially there's a violation there, that type of thing.

He said, "No. He's just a cancer, and I don't want him there anymore."

And I said -- I told him, "I'm not comfortable with that, Major. I'm not comfortable with that. I'm not comfortable with disciplining somebody if" -- "you know, you're telling me there's no investigation, there's no" -- blah, blah, blah. "So you're just going to tell me to not schedule him anymore?"

He said, "Yeah, that's exactly what I want. I want you to not schedule him anymore."

I said, "Okay. So I'm going to go to him, and I'm going to tell him that he can't work overtime anymore at the courthouse?"

And he said, "No, I don't want you to do that."

I said, "Well, don't you think that that is the right thing to do, that he's owed an explanation as to why he can't work in the courthouse anymore?"

He said, "No, I don't want you to do that. I want you to just make sure that he's not scheduled anymore."

And I have a sergeant that does the scheduling in the courthouses. Her name is Karyn O'Quinn. I was -- and part of my responsibility is to make a decision on who actually does the schedule and who doesn't. So I decided that I wanted -- and Karyn O'Quinn is about to retire, Sergeant O'Quinn is about to. So my decision was that I wanted Lieutenant Gunn, who supervises the courthouse, he is the supervisor over Karyn O'Quinn, I want Lieutenant Gunn to do the scheduling from that point on.

So I have a telephone conversation with Karyn O'Quinn. I was kind of -- I wasn't comfortable with what happened with this whole conversation where we're not going to schedule him anymore. I read the contract. I read the deputy's contract, and I read directives to see if I felt like that there was a violation of some sort where I could restrict someone from doing overtime; and as I read through it, I didn't see anything. I couldn't see anything that would, you know, allow me to prohibit someone from voluntary overtime.

I told Major Yaeger, "We need to be very careful. You need to be very careful because you're taking pay away from an employee without doing any kind of investigation."

It was problematic for me. I wasn't comfortable with it.

So I had a conversation with Karyn O'Quinn on the phone, and I told her, "This is what happened. I've had a conversation with my major, and he said he doesn't want Travis Devinny to work the overtime anymore at the courthouse."

She said, "Well, that's a problem because he's one of the go-tos that always signs up. I really need him. In fact, he's on the schedule right now coming up tomorrow."

I said, "I understand that. That came from my boss. It came from the major, and the major decided that that's not going to happen. He's not allowed to work overtime anymore."

So she said, "I don't like it."

And I said, "Yeah, I don't like it."

She said -- she said this to me. She said, "Can I get that in writing?"

And I said, "Let me think about this." I said, "I'll get back with you."

So I decided to make a decision. My decision was to take the scheduling away from Karyn O'Quinn, give it to -- which I was going to do anyway, and give to Lieutenant Gunn.

I had a conversation with Lieutenant Gunn. Lieutenant Gunn is closer with my rank. So I wasn't super comfortable with having this conversation on how this is going to proceed with a sergeant when I'm at the rank of captain, but I will have that conversation with Lieutenant Gunn.

I confided in Lieutenant Gunn and told him exactly what the major said. He said, "Well, don't you think that he" -- he had the exact same questions that I would have. "Don't you think that that's wrong?"

And I said, "Yeah, I don't like it either." I said, "This is what we're going to do."

I said, "I got a direct order from my major who says that we're not going to schedule him anymore." I told Lieutenant Gunn, I said, "I'm not going to violate that direct order, but here's what's going to happen, and here's how it's going to play out, and this is what you're going to say, Lieutenant Gunn."

I said, "When he does question why he's not on the schedule, and Travis says, 'Well, you don't need me anymore? Why aren't you scheduling me?'" -- because he will. He will because -- it's going to come up because he is regular. He helps, you know, two to four times a month. It's going to come up. It's not going to just go away. I told Lieutenant Gunn to tell him that Captain Maynard told me that I couldn't schedule you anymore on the overtime, and tell him to call Captain Maynard.

And I did that intentionally because I knew that what would happen inevitably is, Travis Devinny is going to call me or he's going to email me, and he's going to be, "Captain, you know, how come I can't sign up for overtime anymore?"

And my response would be, "Because the major said that you're a cancer to the agency, and that you cannot be scheduled overtime anymore," and I was going to lay it out.

And I knew how it was going to play out. I knew that that was not going to -- that's not going to be kosher. That would cause problems in the agency, but it was the lesser of the two evils. It was, you know, buck my supervisor and tell him, you know, I'm not going to do your order, what your order is, or do I let this thing play out and let it -- see how it rides. I know how it's going to play out.

I even told Major Yaeger, I said, "This is going to play out bad; I'm telling you, it will."

And he said, "I'll own" -- this is his quote. He said, "I'll own this. When it comes up, I'll own it."

And we'll see. We'll see if he owns up because he -- he told me that.

Q. So did all this happen?

A. So ultimately, no. So he -- he was scheduled. Lieutenant Gunn or someone -- it doesn't matter. It really doesn't matter to me; I don't care, because at the end of the day it was going to play out one way or the other -- told Travis Devinny this, and told him that he was being singled out and he would not be -- he's not able to sign up for overtime anymore. Everybody else is, but he can't.

So he lodged a complaint. He lodged a complaint, and that complaint -- at the time I didn't know he had lodged one, but I was waiting because it was a matter of time, it was coming. He lodged a complaint, and it went, I guess, to Colonel Scott.

Colonel Scott called me into his office and said, "Captain, did you tell Travis Devinny that he couldn't sign up anymore for overtime at the courthouse?"

And I sat there, and I said, "No, sir. No, I didn't. Not only did I not say that, but I warned Major Yaeger that that was not a good idea, that I thought it was unethical and it was not proper."

You can't single out a single person and say that they can't do something that everybody else can do without an investigation or some sort of sanction. There was no sanction at that time that I'm aware of. He was doing a good job for me.

Again, I told all of this to Colonel Scott. I said, "He's doing a good to job for me. I haven't had any problem. I'm not aware that he's trashing the agency in front of the courthouse" -- "in the courthouse in front of other people. If they can give me a specific date and time of what happened, maybe I'll investigate it," I said, "but I told him that's not a good idea, and it shouldn't happen."

And the colonel had some choice words.

Q. To you?

A. Yes. Not directed to me, but some choice words like, you know, "Is he stupid?"

Q. Who is the "he" in that statement?

A. So that is Colonel Scott making a comment about Major Yaeger.

Q. Understood. And then what transpires? Does Devinny ultimately stay on the list, or is Devinny removed from the list?

A. The colonel made the correct decision that you can't do that. He's able to work overtime. He still -- he can sign up today anytime he wants. So it was remedied but through some navigating, you know what I mean, where -- you know, where I'm trying to convince my boss that that's not a good idea, and I'm trying to protect you, blah, blah, blah, don't do this.

And then I had to tell my lieutenant, "Here's how it's going to play it. It's a matter of time.

Just let it roll how it's going to go. And then when it comes to me, put it completely on me, and I in turn am I going to turn and say, 'Uh-uh, not me. Major Yaeger said that.'"

Q. How does the correction get communicated down the line back to Lieutenant Gunn, maybe the sergeant, moving on to Travis Devinny, the correction of Major Yaeger's erroneous direction?

A. I can't answer that because I don't know. All I was privy to is that the major said, you know, he's able to sign up whenever he wants.

So I in turn called my lieutenant and said, "Put him on the schedule. Put him on the schedule anytime he wants. He's welcome just like everybody else."

So it was corrected.

Q. What do you think the time frame is between the notification to -- I guess the first notification is to Karyn, to the sergeant, to the time that he's back on the schedule? Is it a day? Is it a month? How long is that order standing, I guess, is the way to put it.

A. I'm speculating because, again, I don't know. I'd have to do some research, but I -- maybe a week. I'd have to look.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. Did he miss out on some overtime days of work at the courthouse?

A. That's possible.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. It seems like he would have because you're indicating that he was on the schedule the next day, so he would have at least missed that one.

A. Well, he didn't -- I don't think he missed that one because it was too late for us to even make notification.

It's a big deal when I have somebody who's filling a spot and then all of a sudden I have to remove them, and I have a spot. Now I've got to stop and interview -- or, I'm sorry, stop, you know, potential trials, etc., etc. because, again, I'm short staffed. So I need everybody I've got. I don't have extra. I don't have any extra floating around anywhere. So it was too late, I think, on that one schedule that we're talking about.

I'm pretty sure the captain, she said, "Well, he's already" -- "he's supposed to be here in the morning."

I think that was too late. So I think he wound up working that last, but he may have missed out on the opportunity to sign up for other. Because I can't remember how long that time span went, I can't say that 100 percent.

MR. KRAMER: Understood. Is there anything else that you brought for us that you are concerned about, that you're prepared to talk about today?

I don't know if you guys have any follow-up questions on this, the Travis Devinny or other issue.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Not really Devinny, but as far as how short you are in the courthouse. And apparently you've had to cancel stuff before. Has the chief judge expressed anything about this?

A. Yes, I have expressed -- we have a security meeting. The security meeting, typically it's Judge Colaw that sits in on the security meetings. And I've made them aware that we're short staffed, and it's a difficult situation for us right now.

And what happened with COVID, and I think it happened probably for everybody, you're backed up. So we're backed up. With subpoenas, we're backed up. With trials, we're backed up. So we were trying to -- while being short staffed and people being sick and resigning and, you know, retiring, blah, blah, blah, with all of that, they're trying to get caught up.

So while they're getting -- there's more trials than ever; but between the courthouses, we would have as many -- I've seen as many scheduled as five in a week. That's a lot. That's a lot for our courthouse to try to swallow and deal with. Now, we know that some of them will likely go away, but, you know, I have to plan for all of them.

So the way I plan, and the way we have planned, is for the worse case scenario; and that's just the way you do the scheduling, and then you have to be ready in a moment's notice to pivot at some point, if that answers the question.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. They may not understand. Maybe you can help them understand. Would it be fair to say that Judge Colaw is not tolerant of delays in his trials?

A. He's not.

Q. So part of the stress to you would be that you're going to have a judge who's going to order you to make this happen even if you don't have adequate people to do it?

A. So Judge Colaw doesn't -- has never said that, or the chief judge has never told us to, you know, "make it happen" type thing.

I have made recommendations through the administration multiple times in separate types of mitigation strategies, if you will, to deal with when we're short staffed. Things like let me communicate with court admin and say, hey, listen, we're short staffed this week. I got three out for COVID. Can we maybe delay this trial? Can we, you know, maybe schedule and finagle, you know, and move this hearing here or do this to try to help with that? And I was denied to do that. I was told --

Q. Denied by your administration, not by Judge Colaw?

A. Correct. Judge Colaw would never do that. He would facilitate, and he's always been very fair and reasonable; and also, frankly, court admin is. They're -- you know, they're trying -- we're all on the same team. We're all trying to get the exact same accomplished, but I was asking for a little accommodation, for an opportunity to communicate first with court admin and say, hey, here's the circumstance. It's difficult for me to make this happen.

And they have actually told me that they would work with me; they would. There's no problem.

But I have to be super careful because when my administration says that you're going to make it happen, you're going to make it happen; so I'm going to make it that happen.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. One more question on the Travis thing. Was Yaeger ever disciplined or anything done with him for his obvious improper order as far as you know?

A. As I know it, no, there was no discipline; but again, I can't speak to that. I wouldn't see a corrective counseling. I wouldn't see, you know -- I could go look at, just like everybody else, public record and see if there was something documented, but no, sir, I'm not aware of how he was disciplined at all.

MR. KRAMER: Thank you very much for your time today. I can't guarantee that we won't bring you back, but I thank you for your time today. This concludes your statement.

WHEREUPON,

TRAVIS DEVINNY

acknowledged having been duly sworn to tell the truth, and testified upon his or her oath as follows:

THE WITNESS: Yes, ma'am, I do.

EXAMINATION

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Sir, could you state your full name, please?

A. My name is Travis Edward Devinny.

Q. How are you currently employed?

A. I'm a deputy sheriff with Alachua County Sheriff's Office.

Q. And you're a sworn law enforcement officer in the state of Florida?

A. I am.

Q. How long have you been a sworn law enforcement officer?

A. May the 26th will be 25 years.

Q. And not necessarily in chronological order; but ending with whatever your last assignment was, can you review for me your work history and what you've done as a law enforcement officer?

A. Currently I'm in uniform patrol. Going back to -- you want to go backwards or forwards?

Q. It doesn't matter.

A. I have to go forward. It's like saying the alphabet backward; I can't. I started with City of Clearwater Police in May 26 of 1998, spent one year there. I was a uniform police officer.

I came up here to Alachua County June 7th of 1999. I was in patrol for about a year. I went to the special operations traffic safety bureau for two years. I left the traffic bureau in 2002, went back to the road as a field training deputy for about a year and a half.

I went to the drug unit in January of 2004. I stayed in the drug unit until April of 2014. Eight of those years I was assigned to drug enforcement administration. I left April of 2014.

I went to our full-time warrants bureau from April of 2014 until July of 2017. I went back to the road as a field training deputy.

I got sent to juvenile resource bureau in September of 2019. I came back to the road sometime in '21, maybe February of '21. I stayed on the road until August.

I got sent back against my will again, back to the juvenile relations bureau. I stayed there until February of last year, where I'm back on the road as a uniform patrol.

Q. You mentioned that you were sent to the juvenile relations bureau against your will. What does that mean?

A. I got a phone call the second time, and it said, "How would you feel about going back?"

And there was some issues with why I left -- and I'll say it. It's my -- whatever. I was at the time going through a divorce; and it was super bad, so I asked to leave the bureau.

Four months later they said, "How would you feel about going back?"

I said, "That's a terrible idea." I said, "I don't want to. I got to make some phone calls. Please don't do this to me."

And then I called them back to tell them no, and he said I was transferred.

Q. Who was the person you were referring to when you said you spoke to "them"?

A. The one I spoke to on the phone was Lieutenant Richard Malone, but I knew that he was in a meeting with some other command staff.

Q. Is that unusual in some regard, or did you regard that as being for some reason done to you as a form of punishment?

A. Yes.

Q. What was your basis for feeling that way?

A. I'm not -- I'm not 100 percent sure. Part of it at the time was -- what I believe was because of lieutenant -- I think she was a captain at that point, and then probably because of Chad Scott. We have history back from 2006, '7, when he got terminated from the sheriff's office.

It's no secret that I did not like being in the school, like I said. And I believe that they sent me there out of sport, for fun, and it was pretty awful.

Q. Okay. So let me ask you this, or at least start with this. At some point did it become a problem in the sheriff's office that the deputies who staffed the courthouses, that there are an insufficient number of them?

A. Yeah, I think part of -- I worked there part-time some off-duty. I think they're like somewhere between ten or fifteen positions short.

Q. And once that occurred, did you -- did it become, I guess, known through the agency that you could -- I'm not sure what the technical terms are, but what I would call pick up a shift, an extra shift there?

A. There's emails that come out monthly about, hey, here's the shifts that we have available. Here's how many deputies we need for this day, either the civil courthouse or the criminal courthouse. This is what we need. If you want to work an eight-hour shift, just send an email back, and we'll put you on.

Q. And did you accept that inquiry and --

A. I did. I've worked in there for about a year on most of my off-duty days.

Q. Is that -- I don't know that it matters, but so you can earn additional income?

A. Yes. I'm in my high five, trying to stack my retirement.

Q. Is that important to you?

A. Very.

Q. And is there any kind of -- that you're aware of, sort of filtration or screening? Or is it if you apply, and you're available, you get to work there?

A. It's for -- the way I understand it is, when the email comes out, the first person -- everybody -- everybody gets to work. So the first person that says, "I want May 16th from 8:00 to 5:00. I'll work the criminal justice center," they'll say, okay, Travis is on 8:00 to 5:00.

If you send another one, they're like, sorry, it's already filled. Do you want another one?

So it's first come, first served, and whatever days are available.

Q. Up until your most recent suspension from the agency, had you ever been denied an opportunity to work there?

A. Prior to this?

Q. Yes.

A. Never.

Q. All right. So I want -- I don't want to talk about whatever happened that caused them to -- whatever the incident was that they are using as a basis to suspend you. I'm not asking you any questions about that, and I don't want you to provide any information about that. So if you think my question calls for that, it doesn't. I just asked you a bad question.

A. Okay.

Q. So at some point -- and I don't know the sequence of events, but my understanding is, is that there is -- around the same time there is a complaint against you for something that happened, and you make a complaint to the agency regarding the command staff.

A. Yes.

Q. First of all, can you give us the sequence of events timing-wise as to what occurs?

A. So my complaint against the command staff, it starts on February 21st. I had a conversation with another employee about a friend of mine who killed himself. And I had some issues -- we -- the day that everybody found him when he died.

So we all go over there to his apartment. Some command staff showed up, the sheriff showed up, Colonel Scott showed up, Lance Yaeger showed up, and a bunch of other people. And then they all dismissed us, they made us go away so they could do whatever they wanted to do. And then we came back, and then we took Nick to the ME's office.

So part of the conversation that I had on the day of his funeral was because of the day at the ME's office. We were standing there. They were unloading Nick to bring him on the inside, and for whatever reason, you know, they line the hearse with deputies and uniform personnel.

So I saw the sheriff, Colonel Scott, and Yaeger make their way. They pushed the crowd. Everybody was standing there, all of his friends. They have no idea who this dude is. And they went up, and they put their hands on him; which was completely disrespectful, is what everybody thought. So that kind of set the tone for me. I was super, super angry.

And then on the 21st, the day that he had his service and all that other stuff, I had a conversation with Victor Pino-Diaz. And I was super angry, and I said some things to him, that I thought it was disrespectful that they touched my friend; that they have no idea who he is.

Anyways, he calls Yaeger, tells him what I said. Yaeger calls my boss, and then we start going from there. Because of that conversation -- I'm trying to think what day that was.

Q. Dates are not important.

A. Okay. So fast-forward like a week or so. I get called by my captain and my supervisor, Rob Townsend. He tells me we're going to have a meeting.

So they start talking to me and do this -- we have a process called a fitness for duty to make sure, one, that you're mentally healthy enough to work and blah, blah, blah. So they start taking me down this path.

Everybody realized we said what we had to say. I did not get fitness for duty, and then we left it. It was a very long conversation.

The next day we were -- me; my boss, Rob Townsend; some other deputies were having breakfast at

The Mill restaurant like we do every day that we work. We were all finished, standing outside, and Rob tells me that -- command staff pulled up. He looks. He goes, "Oh, man. It's Yaeger. This is going to be super awkward because of" -- I'm missing something inside there. I know that I'm missing something.

There was, I think, just a conversation and -- I'm missing something; I know that I am.

Anyways, so I just stood facing Rob. Rob was facing out. Yaeger gets out, goes inside. I don't say a word. We leave.

Rob calls me and says, "You need to come meet with him again."

So I go meet with him. He says, "I was called by Lance Yaeger. Lance Yaeger says that I'm to verbally counsel you because you didn't address the senior command staff member. He said that was completely disrespectful. And if you don't" -- whatever. If he catches me not addressing a command staff member, that he'll write me up. If he hears that I'm not addressing citizens properly, that bad things are going to happen.

So we leave there, and I'm like, this is getting ridiculous. So I do a complaint intake form for a hostile work environment on Lance Yaeger.

Q. Let me just make sure I understand. Prior to The Mill restaurant, there's been no communication from Lance Yaeger to any of your command staff saying, "Hey, you know, what's going on with Travis?" or anything of that nature; but he's aware that you feel he has disrespected your friend who has died due to suicide because you communicated that to people who know him.

A. Right.

Q. And that when he walks into this restaurant that you simply don't say anything to him?

A. It was actually a parking lot. We were in the parking lot.

Q. You're in the parking lot, but he's walking into the restaurant. Do other people acknowledge him?

A. I think Rob did. And there was -- Pillar was there, Pennant was there. I don't know that they acknowledged him. They may have given him a head nod, but I wasn't looking at them.

Q. But you said nothing, you did nothing.

A. Correct.

Q. You didn't make any comments to anyone?

A. No.

Q. You simply stood quiet.

A. Right.

Q. And it is shortly thereafter that your commander, whoever your next change of command is, gives you a verbal counsel that your failure to acknowledge the presence of Lance Yaeger is going to subject you to discipline?

A. Correct.

Q. All right. Continue.

Oh, but that is the basis of your first complaint, that he's creating a hostile work environment?

A. That is.

Q. So continue. What happens next?

A. I filed that. That was a Thursday, whatever date that was; maybe March 2nd, I think. So I file a complaint intake form. It goes up to OPS, our office of professional standards, or internal affairs. I also requested a meeting with the colonel, with Colonel Chad Scott.

So I have a meeting with Inspector Scott Anderson and Hutchinson on the following Monday, like the 6th, March 6th, I think it was. And I also have a meeting with Chad Scott at whatever it was, 1:00 or 1:30.

Q. Can I interrupt you just for one second? I apologize for interrupting; and I shouldn't, but I want to make sure of something.

Is there anything in the rules and regulations, for lack of a better term, that I understand of the sheriff's office that requires you to acknowledge the presence of a senior command staff officer, that that does violate some rule at the sheriff's office?

A. It's on a broad spectrum, yes. There's something in there about chain of command and something else, but there's not -- not expressly for that.

Q. So there might be something that says you have to act like a respectable deputy sheriff, but there's nothing that specifically says you have to acknowledge Lance Yaeger -- you don't have to salute him.

A. Absolutely. That's correct.

Q. I apologize for interrupting. You can continue. You've set these meetings now.

A. So I wanted to make sure -- once I had my meeting with our internal affairs, office of professional standards, that meeting, I said, look, I have a meeting with the colonel at whatever time -- I think it was supposed to be at 1:00, and it changed to 2:30.

I said, "Am I allowed" -- because I signed Garrity. I said, "Am I allowed to talk about this with the colonel, or am I going to get whacked with some discipline for speaking about it?"

He said, "Let me figure it out, make some phone calls. I'll let you know."

So later on that day Anderson calls me and says, "We were told that this investigation is going to the colonel, and he's going to handle it. So you are allowed to talk to him because he is a part of the investigation."

We have that conversation; that's on the 6th, and then it's done.

Then we fast-forward. I get called by Captain Levy, and he wants to give me -- I go into his office, and he gives me an IOC that was authored by Lance Yaeger. It was on March 7th, and it details -- that's the first one that I'm aware. It details what he thought with me in the disrespectful and calling Townsend to have me counseled. I'm trying to find that. That was on the 7th.

Apparently, that goes from Lance Yaeger to Colonel Scott, but it goes to OPS first the day after I testified at OPS about him. So he launches his own OPS thing. OPS declines to investigate it. It comes back down to the -- Captain Levy writes his IOC back up the chain in response to Yaeger's IOC.

So then I forget what actual date, whatever date on the captain's IOC is whatever the day the meeting was, because he finished it right in front of me. And then -- whatever date is on there. I'll get that in a second.

So we finish up with that, and I think you were asking me about the courthouse stuff.

Q. Correct. I'm aware of what happens at the courthouse situation. I don't know if that was ever communicated to you, that these communications about your participation in the courthouse is being potentially limited by the administration. I don't know if you ever received that communication.

A. Not because of them. I got a phone call on a Monday; I forget what date, but from Sergeant Karyn O'Quinn. She told me, "Just so you know, this is happening to you. It came down that you're no longer allowed to work the courthouse. I asked for an answer they couldn't give to me; so as far as I'm concerned, since I didn't get an answer, you're free to work tomorrow," like I was supposed to.

So I did, I show up. Lieutenant Marvin Gunn and her bring me to an office and said, "This will probably be the last day that you're allowed to work inside here. It came down from Yaeger, it went to Maynard, and then to us that you're no longer allowed to work. You're not allowed to ask any questions about it. It is what it is. So after today, that's it for you."

So I sent a series of emails up asking for clarification, and I have those if you'd like them.

Q. Can I just ask, are these all copies that we can keep?

A. Yes. I have the emails.

But essentially, I ask why. I'd like clarification. It goes up through my chain and goes to Jason Levy to Colonel Scott. Scott said that he has no idea. He defers it to Maynard. Maynard says it's rectified at the colonel's level.

They still haven't provided me an answer as to why I'm not allowed to work in the courthouse, just only that it's rectified.

Q. And do you in fact work additional days after that day that you have a conversation with Karyn O'Quinn?

A. That was a Monday. I did work the Tuesday, and that was the last one.

Q. And is that because they suspended you?

A. I got suspended April 6th, so --

Q. Let me rephrase. So you work that Monday. You work that Tuesday. Were you scheduled to work any additional days, but the suspension stops you from working additional days?

A. Suspension did stop me from working a bunch of days, but I don't know if I had it prior to the suspension. That might have been before the last day I signed up for it. I don't know if the new list had came out yet or not.

Q. As was your regular course of practice, having requested additional days, you either didn't work them or you didn't receive permission to work them because, before you could work them, you were suspended?

A. There's an email that I sent asking for clarification from Marvin Gunn, and he says that I'm now allowed to work any of the days I want. I put a whole list of them that said I am allowed to work whatever days. I did sign up for them. I can't remember if I worked in that list or not. I don't know where --

Q. We can figure that out. And you may be able to just provide us the emails, and the timeline can be created from them. But here's my question.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Again, without telling me anything about what happened, where in this timeline does the incident for which they will ultimately suspend you occur?

A. I think it's March 31st.

Q. What day do they suspend you?

A. I'm sorry. March the 26th is when it happens. I get suspended April 6th.

Q. And, if you know, when from the date of the incident is there the initiation, if it ever happens, of an IA complaint regarding that incident?

A. I think it was a Tuesday. I got suspended on a Thursday, and I think I either got served the 4th of April, or they notified me of the complaint maybe the -- either Monday or Tuesday. I think it was Tuesday.

Q. Let me ask you this. Was the command staff, your command staff, aware that the incident for which you were ultimately suspended had occurred prior to the IOC complaint, or the OPS complaint?

A. Yeah. The way I understand it is that they -- of the incident, notifications were made up the chain, going through Colonel Scott, that said, hey, this is what happened.

It got through my sergeant, my lieutenant.

It got to Captain Levy. Captain Levy asked the question, does he need to be suspended; they said no.

Q. And did you continue to work from after that, the date of that Tuesday -- or excuse me, the Sunday, did you return to service after that incident?

A. Yeah, I did. I worked -- that's April 3rd, is the actual complaint. I worked all the way up until April the 4th, is when -- I got suspended on the 6th, but I think I was off. So off on a Wednesday. Thursday was my normal days off. And I worked -- that Tuesday was my normal workday, so that's the day that I worked. It's probably, whatever, the 26th through the 6th, is how long it took.

Q. And I don't know if you can answer this question; if it's beyond your knowledge, please feel free to say so. Is a suspension normal or customary when this type of complaint has been made against an officer?

A. It can be. It's not -- suspensions are pretty uncommon. In my 25-year career, deputies being suspended is a pretty unique event. It's not something that normally happens; let's say that.

Q. Let me see if I can rephrase the question this way. Are you aware of incidents of this type where officers have been allowed to continue to work through the full completion of the OPS investigation while that type of complaint is pending?

A. Yes.

Q. Is that commonplace?

A. It is commonplace.

Q. Have you ever heard of anyone being suspended for this level of alleged violation?

A. No.

Q. And what's the current status of that investigation?

A. I was notified Thursday that the inspector is done writing it and it was pending a review at the captain's level, which is, I'm assuming, where it's at today.

Q. And have you had your opportunity to go in and review all of the evidence with regard to the case?

A. I did.

Q. And have they disclosed to you whether or not they intend to discipline you?

A. They have not.

Q. Okay. Now, during the course of that investigation, or if I'm wrong about what investigation it is, are you -- are you under the belief that any official document within the sheriff's office was improperly altered as a result of that investigation or during the course of that investigation?

A. So I have -- I have an email from Inspector Anderson from the 24th, because he is the lead inspector; and he notified me of the 45-day window for complaints per OPS policy manual, blah, blah, blah, and in that it kind of details about this is where your investigation is at. I believe it says that the undersheriff verbally told Captain Jenkins to make the case go away; he wasn't going to do that.

Q. I'm sorry. I need a little clarification. Are we referring to your complaint against Lance Yaeger now?

A. Yes. I'm sorry. Yes. Not the one that I'm suspended for. This is the Lance Yaeger. This is all -- that email and this IOC that I'm about to show is all about the Lance Yaeger investigation.

Q. Understood.

A. So we get that, that is April the 24th, from the lead inspector of our OPS section; but then the day I was suspended, I have this IOC. This was authored by Hutchinson. It was given to Captain Jenkins, who delivered it to the undersheriff in a meeting between him and the undersheriff and Jake Rush; the three of them were in there.

He delivers his OIC. He said that this investigation -- I'll let you read it -- needs to continue. It shouldn't be made to go away. It is detailed, it is thorough, it is legit, it is righteous. It needs to be investigated.

I was told this Thursday, the day I was suspended -- before I give this, I was told on a Monday when everybody came back to work that Hutchinson wasn't there this day; that Hutchinson asked, "Why is Devinny suspended? I'm running this investigation," and that Kelvin Jenkins openly, in the middle of OPS, on the floor, says, "I delivered this IOC. It needs to be investigated."

The undersheriff came unglued and said that deputy sheriffs should not be sniping command staff members; it should never happened, and it won't happen. "Is Devinny working?"

And Kelvin Jenkins said, "I'm not sure. I'm not sure what the schedule is."

He says, "No. Why isn't he suspended? You suspend him immediately."

So Kelvin called, talked to Scott Anderson. He said, "Draft paperwork, go to his house, and go suspend him."

This is the IOC that I was given. Not I was given, but that is what was given to the undersheriff. We got that on a public records request.

The way I understood it from --

Q. On the document you've just given me there, whose handwriting is that?

A. There is -- I'm not sure on the top. This is Undersheriff DeCoursey's. The green writing is the sheriff. This is allegedly Kelvin Jenkins with the circle and the arrow.

The way I understand it, those comments were not on there as he delivered it; otherwise, he would not have delivered it to the undersheriff saying that the investigation needs to push forward.

Q. At some point, the question is, is there anything that is changed from what was written to what ultimately you -- goes into the records at the sheriff's office?

A. Correct. Captain Jenkins brings an IOC to the undersheriff saying this needs to be investigated, and now there's comments on there that says he found -- "he" being Captain Jenkins found it unsubstantiated; and it shouldn't be going forward, which is not -- it's not what happened.

Q. So what you're saying, if I understand it correctly, is that Captain Jenkins goes up the chain to his command, the undersheriff or what have you, and says complaints against Major Yaeger need to be investigated?

A. Correct.

Q. He goes in a meeting, and they then say that's not what this is going to be. It's going to be that everything is unsubstantiated?

A. Correct. And I get suspended literally in the same sentence.

Q. As a result of that meeting, you are suspended because -- essentially because you have made a complaint against the major?

A. Yes.

Q. Got you. Understood. All right. Now, I just want to clarify something. Is this the only complaint you've made about or against Major Yaeger?

A. Yes.

Q. Are you aware of anyone else who's made similar complaints?

A. Oh, there's a bunch of people.

Q. I mean, formally made complaints through the office of professional standards?

A. That I don't know.

Q. And so would I be correct that an OPS number would have been drawn on the complaint against Major Yaeger?

A. It should be.

Q. And that it's ultimately taken over by Colonel Scott?

A. Oh, you talking about my investigation? It says there is a tracking number associated with that, yes.

Q. But Colonel Scott ultimately is the one who handles the entire investigation?

A. Well, it goes to -- this is the way that I understand it. It goes to Colonel Scott. Colonel Scott tries to pass it off to somebody in patrol, gives it to Jason Levy. Jason Levy tries to give it to Lieutenant Joe Paul Hood. I think they declined and said that, "I don't think a lieutenant should be investigating."

It goes back up to the colonel and then back to OPS.

Q. And so ultimately the investigator is Eric Hutchinson?

A. Yes.

Q. Who then reports to Kelvin Jenkins?

A. Yes.

Q. And then that goes back to the colonel?

A. It goes straight to the undersheriff.

Q. Straight to the undersheriff. Do you know what the recommendation is coming out of Eric Hutchinson's hands?

A. It said from like the last sentence inside the IOC that it needs to be -- this needs to be investigated.

Q. I'm just confused, and maybe someone can explain it to me. I'm not sure why they're -- if they accepted it, gave it a tracking number, and then it went through all these people, and there's all this information with regard to it, what -- it seems like it is investigated.

A. It is investigated. Well, they did an interview, like it says on there, with Sergeant Rob Townsend. They didn't do any more interviews because they got verbally told to tank it by the undersheriff. That's why they wrote a thorough IOC saying here's what we have. It's legit. It needs to be investigated. That's when Eric Hutchinson gave it to Kelvin Jenkins. Kelvin Jenkins hand-delivers it to the undersheriff saying that we need to do this. He comes unglued. I get suspended, and then there's comments on it that say it's not substantiated. Then why would you bring it to the undersheriff? That's my question.

Q. Is there something else you wanted to share?

A. No. I just want to make sure that -- in the IOC it says they proceeded with the investigation. They talked to Rob Townsend. He said whatever he said. It looks like, because of his interview, then they were told to stop after the interview, because they have to report every step of every investigation up the chain. There is no secrets, apparently. They said stop it. They said, no, we're not going to stop it.

So that IOC is based off my testimony and Rob Townsend's testimony.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. You were suspended for the allegation of excessive force, right?

A. (Nods head.)

Q. Was there an actual complaint made by whoever you arrested?

A. No. It was a -- I self-reported, because we have reporting documents for any time that we have to use force at all.

Q. So you did the normal use of force?

A. I did the normal use of force. My boss reviewed it. He did his use-of-force paperwork and went up the chain. So there is no complaint. It's just the use-of-force policy that says it has to be completed.

Q. So how did that get to where you're suspended for excessive use of force?

A. That's a great question. That is a perfect question, but I would defer to the IOC offered by Eric Hutchinson and delivered by the captain to the undersheriff about sniping command staff members as to why I was suspended.

Q. So the review of the use of force, everything was -- the captain agreed that it was within the policy on up the chain?

A. I respectfully have to decline to answer that.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Let me ask if I can ask this: That investigation is essentially complete other than going through the executive process of whatever they intend to do about it?

A. As far as I know. As far as we know, that is.

Q. And, again, I hope you can forgive my ignorance. I'm guessing that you've used force in your 25-year career before.

A. I have many times.

Q. And you followed the exact protocol as long as it's been the protocol when you've had to use force?

A. That is correct. I mean, not only that, but I'm also a use-of-force instructor. I'm a defense tactic instructor. I train outside of work. I'm almost at an instructor level in that practice, and I've never in 25 years had a use-of-force complaint, ever.

Q. And to this day, that remains true because there is no complaint here?

A. Yes.

Q. There is no human who is complaining against you?

A. That is correct.

Q. You have simply followed the sheriff's office procedure which you teach to others in that if you use force, you report that use of force?

A. Yes.

Q. And that that use of force, to your knowledge, went through the normal process of how use-of-force incidents are dealt until it reached the command staff, who said suspend him?

A. Correct.

Q. Other than this, is there anything that you're aware of that has occurred at the sheriff's office that is illegal, that's happened that's unlawful that you'd like to share with me?

A. I would not, no.

Q. Is there anything else that you think we need to cover?

A. No, I don't think so. I don't think so.

MR. KRAMER: Then that's it. We'll go off the record.

WHEREUPON,

ARABELLA BLIZZARD

acknowledged having been duly sworn to tell the truth, and testified upon his or her oath as follows:

THE WITNESS: So help me God, yes.

EXAMINATION

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Could you state your full name, please?

A. Arabella Blizzard.

Q. At any point in your life have you been a sworn law enforcement officer?

A. Most of my life, yes?

Q. How many years of your life?

A. Twenty-eight years.

Q. Could you tell me what agencies in the state of Florida you have worked for?

A. Just the Alachua County Sheriff's Office.

Q. While you were at the Alachua County Sheriff's Office, can you review for me the positions you held, ending with what was your last position when you were there?

A. Okay. And this is rough because I don't have my resume in front of me. I was a deputy on the road for approximately six years. Then I became sergeant. There was a detective stint in there and a narcotics stint in there. Then I finally got sergeant.

I was a sergeant for something like five years, and then I became lieutenant; and that was 11 years. That was a long time. I didn't think I was going to get picked out of the basket, but I did.

I got acting captain. I was only covering for someone that was doing the jail, so I came back to lieutenant. And then I got captain in 2016. I did that for six years, and then I was promoted to major a year ago this last July. So it would have been July 2021, I guess, and I did a year as a major.

Q. All right. So when Sheriff Clovis Watson comes into office you were a captain?

A. I sure was, special operations.

Q. And then once he takes office does your role stay the same while you're captain, or do you move around? Because I know there's more than one thing captains do at the sheriff's office.

A. They left me alone, surprisingly. When they came -- I don't know if y'all are aware -- you probably don't want to hear all this shit; maybe you do.

I worked for Sadie Darnell for all her terms. I was in all the campaigns she had. I was the front person in her last campaign, which she lost to Clovis

Watson Jr. I was on Facebook. I was on the news. So I was left alone.

He came to several of my command posts, and he was very complimentary on the job that I did, et cetera, et cetera. I really didn't see much of him at first.

We had a call where a guy basically blew himself up, burned himself, and I was the commander of that. That's what I specialized in, was command post work. So I go out with the SWAT and all the teams, and I basically make decisions.

They came to a particular scene, and it was out in Fairbanks. And they always parked their vehicle -- like they never got out. They would park and just watch.

And they had me come over, and I was telling them, hey, you know, this is three different scenes. We ended up having the fire inspector scene. We had the FDLE scene. And then we had the shooting scene, and we also had the scene of original crime, which is domestic violence. That was a lot. And FDLE is out there. It was a lot.

So I told them I can't keep coming back over here. I have to stay at the command post. If you need me, you have to text me. I can't run anything by anybody. We're going to have to make decisions in a minute because this is getting hairy. And they were, like, fine.

So I went back over, and like it went like -- I mean, it was quick. First it was like we shoot gas in there. Then the guy sets the place on fire, and then we deal with all kinds of other things. So it lasted about maybe -- in the heat of it, maybe a couple hours.

So when we were done, I went back over to the truck; and I took out the phone and said, "Hey, this is what the scene looks like from the units, the SWAT team that's right up front to the house. This is what happened."

They was like, "We heard on the radio. That was great," yah, yah, yah. And then probably -- I don't know which month that was, but in July I got promoted.

Q. So when you become a major, what are your duties and responsibilities?

A. I had at first -- because George had left. I worked with George, and then George resigned. When he resigned, I had everything. So I had patrol, I had, you know, judicial services training, I had CID, basically the entire -- everything.

Q. So there was no other major at that point?
A. No, not for a while.
Q. Was there an acting major?
A. No. Uh-uh.
Q. And was now Colonel Chad Scott in the agency at that point?
A. No, not yet.
Q. So the command structure would have been the sheriff, the undersheriff, then you?
A. Uh-huh.
Q. And where was now Major Yaeger at that point?
A. At that point Major Yaeger was a deputy sheriff on the road.
Q. So at some point you -- I guess, they hire -- how does someone else become major, I guess, is my next question.
A. I have no idea. I can tell you how things transpired, if you'd like.
Q. Sure.
A. So I was a major, like I say. I hate it that I don't have like a lot of timelines for you guys, but I was a major for maybe, I would like to say, a few months. And there was a lot of moves going on, which I had no say-so in.
Daryl Bessinger -- during that time David

Clark died. I'm sure you guys -- that's been brought up in here, David Clark died. I had gotten his job, if that makes sense, because Simmons and Clark were the majors under Darnell. And so all that transpired where they were put down ranks, which sheriffs can do.

Q. Sure.

A. And then I got his job. Well, he died shortly thereafter. So when he passed, he moved some people. Daryl Bessinger came over, and I'm pretty sure he came over before Clark died; yeah, he did, because I'm the one who notified him of Clark's death.

He worked real hard for me. He had already been there and moved out twice, I think. He was moved out already by Clovis Watson. Then he was moved back by Clovis Watson to my absolute happiness because he's a great commander.

So I had him for a short time until David Clark's funeral when he used the word "redneck" when he was describing -- he was up on the podium, and he was talking at the funeral, saying, "Yeah, we were all just a bunch of rednecks when we started. Now look at us."

I guess they got offended by the word "redneck," but no one will say that's why he transferred. But he was transferred into David

Clark's office, his dead best friend, and given David Clark's truck; and I tried to stop it, but --

INSPECTOR SNOWDEN: Given David Clark's what?

THE WITNESS: His vehicle.

INSPECTOR SNOWDEN: Oh, okay.

THE WITNESS: So he's basically -- that was his best friend.

So then, not even two weeks, I think -- I don't know, timelines are messed up -- between David Clark passing he was transferred. Then --

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. With all these transfers are occurring all these moves are being made. You've been with the agency at that point 20-plus years --

A. Yeah.

Q. -- and you're probably the most experienced command staff person. Why are you not being consulted about how -- who should run what and who has the skills and abilities to run what?

A. I asked my boss that many times.

Q. What was the answer?

A. He said, "Clovis Watson is a new sheriff in town. He doesn't know these people. He needs to get to know his job. He needs to decide who he wants to put in these places," and that's basically it.

Q. And are you given the opportunity to explain to the sheriff and the undersheriff who in the agency has which skill sets to do which jobs?

A. I went down there myself. I was never asked to explain anything. I went down there after every single transfer to say, "Hey, why are you transferring this person?"

I was difficult. I was the one that went down there and said, "Hey, this isn't right."

I did that with David Bessinger, and I was told the sheriff wants to go another direction. That's kind of what they told everybody, "We're going another direction. We're reorganizing. We're doing whatever."

I'm like, "You do realize that you're giving him" -- because what they do is put people at the jail. They put Michelle at the jail. They put Daryl at the jail. They put David Clark at the jail.

You see the pattern there? It's kind of like out of sight, out of mind, which sheriffs do; I get it, but they did it more to see if they could get people to leave or if they could break them and make them upset, which works in all four of those cases.

Q. I want to come back to that, but I just want to clarify something with you. Being a commander and having this level of familiarity with the agency, do you know the training and the skills of the various officers within the agency?

A. Absolutely.

Q. And are you advising them things of the nature of you're placing someone in a position for which they are untrained?

A. Yes.

Q. They do not have the proper training, they don't have the proper skill set, and they don't have the proper ability to do the job that you're giving them?

A. Yes. I can give you several examples if you want. I don't want to interrupt.

Q. No. No, please.

A. So when Daryl Bessinger was moved, he was very upset, very upset. He had already been upset about his friend dying.

And one real quick thing about the friend dying. His shotgun is still sitting in property because an IOC was written by Paul Hinson wanting to give the shotgun to David Clark's son, and they said they wouldn't approve it.

So I held onto the IOC, and I went downrange with it three or four times; each time I was told no.

I handed it back to Chad Scott, so he's still going to have that somewhere. To this day, it's never been approved.

And the wife came and got the gun from property; and when she got his gun from property, it started a show because they said she had to come to the sheriff and get his gun. Well, she didn't want to go to the sheriff and get his gun. She hated him. She didn't like him. She blamed him for David Clark's death.

So when property gave her the gun, this big thing blew up. We had to get a new form. There was people that got talked to about it. I was asked did I know about it. Of course, I didn't know that he came to get the gun; and if I had known, it really wouldn't have bothered me that his wife came to get his gun, you know.

Q. Can I clarify one thing?

A. Yeah.

Q. The gun is in the property of the sheriff's office?

A. Yeah, it's his service weapon.

Q. Oh, okay.

A. He was there for like 30 years.

Q. Right.

A. Well, if someone dies in the line of duty, they obviously have a ceremony. They give all that stuff -- if someone dies -- like he didn't die in the line of duty, so it wasn't normal for any kind of ceremony with the gun or anything like that; but for the wife to come up and get the gun is not unusual. Does that make sense?

Q. It does. I just -- it would be of greater concern to me if the property they were attempting to hold wasn't sheriff's office property.

A. And the shotgun was sheriff's office property too, but there was no reason that -- he was like, "If she wants the shotgun, she's going to have to come get it."

Well, she didn't want to come get it. And it was the same thing with the shadow box. She didn't want to come get the shadow box. She didn't want to step foot in there. And finally, Kenny Holt went in there and had some words with them and was able to get the shadow box. No, that was Daryl Bessinger.

So the shadow box in this case, David Bessinger, my ex-captain that had been moved out to the jail -- he hadn't been moved out yet. Gosh, there's so much shit.

He hadn't been moved out yet. He went and got the shadow box, took the shadow box to the funeral, to the church. When the sheriff got to the church he noticed the shadow box was in the front and said, "How did he get the shadow box?"

I didn't realize David had taken the shadow box; but even if I had realized it, I wouldn't have had a problem with it. You know what I mean? Like it's a funeral. This is kind of sad. I'm not going to ask his wife to come get a shadow box. So I had no problem with it even if I had known about it. So that was another reason that I think that Daryl was transferred to the jail.

I know this is all kind of confusing because it all runs together, because right after the Daryl thing came the Yaeger thing. So now you can touch on that.

Q. What happens with Lance Yaeger?

A. Well, one day I'm told that Lance Yaeger is going to be acting chief detective, to which I replied, "What's a chief detective?" because we've never had that rank.

He was a deputy. He never took the sergeant test. He never took any of the promotional tests. He didn't even take one and fail it. So I was like this is going to go over with a bang, and I told him that.

"No. Sheriff wants him there. You need to train him. You need to show him, you know, the ropes."

And I was like -- I thought it was a terrible idea.

Q. Well, let me ask you this. How long would it take to train someone to be a captain if they're coming out of being a deputy?

A. It was a complete and utter frustrating experience, because I've been through all the ranks, I've taken all the tests. So the first thing I did with him is, I sat him down. I said, "Look, no one is going to respect you here. You're going to have to work extra hard with your people because you didn't take the test. There's people who have taken every test, failed it and gone through the ranks; and here you are showing up, and you're instant captain, even if it's acting."

He said, "I want your job." He wanted to be a major.

I said, "You can't do my job." I said, "You haven't done any kind of investigations. You haven't" -- "I'm not talking about criminal investigations. I'm talking about employee investigations. There's certain things you do in employee investigations to protect people's 112 rights. You prepare everything. You know, sometimes they will object; and when they do, you have to get up, you have to go to the sheriff. You have to tell the sheriff, hey, PBA, or even the employee, objects to this line of questioning, whatever it is. There's things you have to do. You have to have that experience. You don't have the command post experience as a commander. You don't know how to supervise people. I mean, you don't know how to do the paperwork." I went on and on. I said, "I have a lot to show you," I said, "and I can't give you experience."

He was like, "Well, I was in the military."

I don't know. He just kept taking about all his leadership in the military, how many men he led and all this other stuff.

And I said, "It doesn't matter here. This is civilian law enforcement. It doesn't matter here. Nobody cares about all that stuff that you did."

And he didn't like that. He didn't like anything I said to him, actually.

At one point his wife -- I took that day off, and his wife put a post on Facebook about me; and I knew it was about me. And I took a day off, and I had -- I worked all the time, the phone rang all the time.

I'm laying in bed, and I'm looking at my Facebook when I woke up. I just checked the news and stuff, and I see a post about, oh, you can try to break somebody down. It just shows that you're -- I don't even remember what it -- just -- it was obviously about me.

So I blocked her, deleted her, did all that stuff, made sure that I got rid of it. I didn't want it coming in no more. And I called him on the phone, and I said, "Hey, what's up with your wife?"

He said, "What do you mean?"

I said, "Let me tell you something. If you have something to say to me, you need to tell me, not your wife. She said some passive-aggressive crap on Facebook about me."

He goes, "Yeah, that was about you."

I was like, "Dude, yesterday when we were talking you never said you had an issue with the things I was counseling you on. I have to try to make this work with you. I don't have a choice with this."

And he says, "Well, I just went home and told her. I can talk to my wife."

And I said, "You need to control your wife."

I was mad.

So the next day I came back in to work, he apologized. He told me he told his wife not to do it anymore. I said, "Well, it doesn't matter. She has no access to my life now because I got rid of it."

So that's the kind of stuff -- he would look at me in my face and act like he was okay, and I was giving him good counsel. I was telling him, hey -- he wanted to move the secretary's desk in front of his office. Well, she's everybody's administrative assistant. She's in CID, so she's -- all the detectives use her for all kinds of different things. She's not just his -- but he wanted that. He wanted the importance of having an administrative assistant right there in front of his office. I said, "No way, you're not doing that."

There was several times he tried to write people up for honest mistakes. I said, "No way. You're not doing that." I'd tell him no. "No, you're not doing that," and he would get really mad.

And then -- I could see it was really -- it was really difficult, but I knew I had been tasked with it. I was trying, for the best of the agency, to try to school him up as best I could.

I'll give you another example. Judge Wright and him are friends, I guess. And he wanted Yaeger to do the, whatever, like "all rise" at the swearing in of him. Okay? I don't know if you remember that whole thing.

Q. I was there.

A. Yeah, so you remember.

So Yaeger, I call him on the phone and said, "Hey, you need to go home and get your dress uniform on."

He's like, "Can't someone else do it?"

I said, "Let me tell you something. If you don't go up there in your dress uniform -- haul ass to your house, look spiffy and good and polish everything you have, you're not getting promoted. You can't just say no to a judge, and you can't say no to a sheriff who's already said that you have to wear your dress uniform. Are you kidding me?"

So he goes home; he's complaining about it. He comes back, standing at the front, right? Josh Crews, who is ironically -- they replaced me three times. He's my third replacement. He was in -- he's lieutenant at the time. He's in the courtroom because he's in charge of the courthouse.

When I walk up, he's like, "Well, where is his brass? Why doesn't he have any brass?"

I had to go get the property to get his brass because he didn't have it. So I gave it to Josh Crews. Josh Crews is dressing him and everything. It's like -- he didn't understand like what that means. He didn't -- it's just like a no-brainer.

Like when you're law enforcement, if you're an upper-ranking person, you have to go to these things, and you have to look good, and you have to be nice about it. Don't complain, right?

So he does that. So basically the whole time I spent with him was just like that. It was just like pulling teeth, pulling teeth. And I would go down to my boss -- I'll give you an example.

So the DTF -- I'm trying not to curse. The DTF --

Q. So the DTF thing is the sheriff pulling out of the drug task force --

A. Oh, yeah.

Q. -- and the burglary?

A. Yeah, that whole thing. If you went to some of the meetings, you saw him posturing. Basically, he's a gun without bullets. I mean, I know that's an awful way to say it, he's a gun without bullets. He's like what are you going to do? What are you -- what are you going to do? You don't know what to do.

So the DTF thing. This is an example of the way he thinks. So Brian Jones -- this is like when there was a big riff. We were not allowed to ask for backup from them even though they were right there. So as it was, we had two K-9s on that unit.

Q. Let me clarify that statement. You said "we were not allowed to ask for backup from them." The "we" is the sheriff's office, and the backup is the Gainesville Police Department?

A. Yeah, on the interstate. That group on the interstate.

Q. Let me flesh that out just a bit, if you will.

A. Okay.

Q. So under normal circumstances, if an officer needs backup, one would call on the radio and say, "I need backup"?

A. Yeah. If Jolly the Green Giant shows up, it's all right.

Q. Whoever is closest and most available does that backup work because it's an officer safety issue?

A. Correct. Yeah.

Q. But in your scenario, what you were working under is that the sheriff of the agency has said that you cannot allow Gainesville Police Department --

A. Correct.
Q. -- to back up an Alachua County sheriff's officer who may need help on the interstate?
A. Yes.
Q. Now, is the interstate a dangerous place to --
A. Oh, yeah. When people are hauling drugs and sex trafficking, yeah, they'll kill you.
Q. So did you as a senior command staff officer consider that order to be unsafe?
A. Completely.
Q. Did you consider it to endanger --
A. Yes.
Q. -- the life, the safety, and the welfare of Alachua County --
A. I did.
Q. -- sheriff's deputies?
A. Uh-huh.
Q. And did you do or make any effort to convince the command staff that that was unsafe?
A. Yes, we talked about it in meetings that we had. And I also told my boss, I said, "Who are they supposed to get to back them up?"
Which comes to another point I'm making about the same thing. We have two K-9s up there, right? So what we were doing -- because we had a vacancy because we had a guy named Jay Stephenson leave. We had a vacancy, so basically, one of those dogs had to sit at their house. They were single-purpose dogs. They weren't apprehension dogs, but they're still dogs. I mean, they still have a psychological effect on a traffic stop.

So one of the dogs was home because they had to transport someone. So if they have two people and one dog at the house, and say they're together, and one of them makes an arrest, that transport unit has to go. So now you got someone all by himself, which basically is ineffective and unsafe. Okay?

So I say let's fill that slot because we're not using these dogs. They're expensive. The dog is not working. It's sitting at their house. Every day it sits at the house, even though they go back and forth, the dog is becoming ineffective. Those dogs have to work. They didn't want to hear it.

Then I found Stadnicki, who's up there now. I said, "I have a third person. He passed everything. He did this and that. He can go up there."

They were like sheriff never met him. Sheriff doesn't know him. He hasn't come by here to say hi or anything.

Here's the thing. They like people to come by and introduce themselves if they wanted to get promoted or to a position or something like that. Like, I'm old school. Even as a major, I would go, and I would go by the sheriff's office -- I don't report directly to him. I report to the undersheriff. So I would actually say, hey, man, can I go speak to the sheriff? Because I am old school, and I have respect. You get what I'm saying?

They expected people to come and see them; and when they didn't, they get offended.

He goes, "Well, we didn't get a picture of him."

We have to have a picture of everybody that wants to go places. We have to do an IOC, attach the pictures of everyone -- you've heard this before. We have to attach a picture of everyone who wants the job.

Q. Why?

A. I have no idea. I asked him. I said, "Why do you need these pictures?"

They said, "Because the sheriff doesn't know anybody. He just wants to see who it is."

That's what he told me on several occasions, actually. Because I kept having to kick back the IOCs, so my commanders were getting pissed; and they were getting very, very frustrated because they were like, in the past when you wanted someone, and they were specialized, like you said before, you knew they could do the job, they had the skills -- I grew up with these people. I know what their weaknesses is, their strengths. Even if I don't personally like someone, if they're good at their job, and that's the job they're good at, they deserve that job. I don't put personal anythings into my selections. I go with skills, skill level; that's what I go with.

So he didn't want to give me Stadnicki. So we had a meeting one day, and the sheriff was there. He was talking some moves. The only meeting he's ever invited me to, the only meeting, where he was talking about moves and promotions. And Chad was there, I was there, Bobby was there. It's the only one, so I was amazed I was invited because normally I got called, "Go demote this person. Fire this person." I was never included in any decisions.

He was getting ready to get up, and I said, "Sir, what about Jeff Stadnicki?" Which a lot of people would think it's pompous, but I was getting desperate because it's an officer safety issue.

He was like, "Which one was that?"

And I said, "Well, he's the one that I wanted to put up there on the interstate because we only got two people. It's an officer safety issue."

"Oh, I don't want to do that today."

So I had to tell the sergeant, who was Brian Jones, that we weren't going to do that again; and he was counting on that guy because, again, it's an officer safety issue.

So back to Brian. Brian is up there alone some weeks later, and he makes a traffic stop with 45, I'd like to say, kilos or pounds of cannabis. I think it was pounds, because kilos aren't cannabis.

He stops them, and he asks for backup. And Michelle is going to go all into it, because that's how Michelle got her ass reamed. And I was there for that scream session. But basically, he got really like angry because Brian asked for backup, because a GPD officer was right there. And now you've stopped somebody with all that cannabis. What are the chances that that person is going to open fire on you? You can't put him in your truck. You have a dog in there. Your other guy is gone. What do you do? You got to have backup. If you call for a deputy, the deputy is coming from probably Archer Road. There's not time. I would have done the same.

He called for backup after he was told he's not allowed to call them for backup. He didn't call them specifically. He just said he needed backup; they heard, and they came. Cool, right? You would think.

The dispatchers at this time are also upset because they felt it was an officer safety issue, and I'm sure Michelle will touch on that.

So Michelle dispatched the GPD guy. She dispatched him, so he went. And, you know, I was like awesome. I'm not even thinking why did you call the guy from GPD. It didn't even cross my mind. I was like, "That's great."

Well, it crossed their mind, because they called -- it was a really big thing -- and they asked me, "Why did GPD go back him up?"

And, of course, Michelle is the one that actually asked him to, which bravo for her because God knows what would have happened to our guy. Our guy is the most important thing.

So Yaeger comes in my office and says, "That's insubordination. I'm pulling a tracking number." Insubordination.

Q. He's pulling a tracking number on --

A. He said he was going to pull one on Brian because Brian asked for backup and GPD showed up. Totally nuts.

I told him, "I will not do that." I got pissed. I said, "You will not do that."

"It's insubordination, the sheriff said. The sheriff said."

I said, "He's alive. So you think" -- "what's more important here?"

It's like he had trouble differentiating commonsense things. Like everything went to paper. Everything went to "you disobeyed my order" instead of like, okay, what's the whole picture? Which is what a commander does.

A commander has empathy. They're intelligent. They have experience, and they have job knowledge. So they look at everything as a whole. They don't just look at this person did something after they told them not to. Well, why did they do it? He doesn't have that capability because he has no experience, which is back to what I said.

So Brian, his lieutenant is Josh Crews. So Josh Crews comes in my office completely hot and says, "You can't let this happen. You can't let this happen."

I said, "Don't worry, Josh. Sir, I got it handled. I told him he can't do it."

He said, "I think he's going to try to do it anyway."

So probably about the last four months of my tenure he started going around me. The administrative specialists down there, they knew me. They would call me on the phone and say, "Hey, Lance is down there with the sheriff." That happened several times.

So I would say, "Hey, why are you down there with the sheriff? What are you doing?"

And he was like, "Oh, well, he just called me. What was I supposed to do?"

You know, it was like a -- it was like a -- that was his due. Does that make sense?

Q. Yes.

A. And I started realizing that he didn't call me down there because I wouldn't do what he wanted me to do. He was calling Lance down there because he would do what he wanted him to do, and I wouldn't do it because it wasn't right.

So I went down to see my boss that day, after Josh came in my office, and said, "Listen, I know that Lance comes down here. And I want you to understand that if you do this, if you allow Lance to do this, that it's not right."

And I also told him, "He's never going to get one more marijuana seed for you up on that interstate. What would be his motivation? What would be any deputy's motivation to do anything proactive after they're given an insubordination charge, which is points? It's serious stuff. It's like days off, and you're going to do this to this guy?"

And then I kind of appealed to him and said, "And besides" -- this is awful, but I said this to save my guy. I said, "GPD, you know, they're going to see, man, you've got all this dope." You know, you got all this dope, and we showed them type of thing; and that got -- that appealed to him.

So he said -- talking about my boss, the undersheriff. He says, "Okay. Then you don't have to. Yeah, it's fine."

I said, "So I don't have to write him up?"

He said, "No."

So I immediately went to Josh and said, "Give him corrective counseling, discuss the incident."

Q. But corrective counseling is a form of discipline.

A. He didn't get a corrective counseling. He got a verbal counseling. I call it corrective counseling, but he got a verbal counseling. Discuss the incident.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:
Q. Because that would count as a counseling that nothing else --
A. If you discuss the incident with someone, you cannot discipline with a corrective counseling or anything else. It's a 112 thing, which Yaeger was not familiar with; and we'll get to that in a minute.
BY MR. KRAMER:
Q. Let me just make sure I understand. So the reason you go to Josh and say go discuss the incident with him is because you understand, once that occurs, he can't be given a corrective counseling, which is an actual form of discipline?
A. Because I didn't trust Lance not to go do it anyway. And I called Lance and said, "I went to the undersheriff. You are not to do that."
Q. Can I just ask one clarifying question? The officer from GPD that responds is a task force officer who's working the interstate; or is it just he's some GPD officer who happens to be close by, and the communication center knows that, so they just send that, whoever that random officer is, to help the deputy who's conducting a major drug interdiction operation?

A. You're going have to ask Michelle that, but I will tell you I was under the impression that it was a drug task force GPD officer that was right there in the area; but again, she would know because she got in trouble for that. She got in a lot of trouble for that.

Q. I will clarify it with her, but I just want to make sure I understand. The sheriff is saying that no GPD, whether they're on the task force or not on the task force, because GPD has its own task force, can back up a drug interdiction officer on the interstate?

A. Yeah. He said we cannot ask any of the GPD -- if you did a public records request, you'd probably see some emails. I don't believe they'd be from me, but I know that there were some emails for clarification on the point. They told us to please stop in writing; I did it anyway. I'll tell you a little later what I did.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Major, did they say it's just the interstate -- the interdiction team that couldn't ask for a backup, or was it ASO-wide?

A. No, just the interdiction team; because he was having an issue with -- I went to all these meetings.

You were in some of them.

He was having an issue with the state attorney's office. He felt like they were going behind his back getting this task force together when in essence he was welcome to join the task force. He chose not to join the task force, and he was being difficult. And it's the same thing with the drug task force, not the regular interdiction team, but the drug task force. It was a very dramatic thing where I felt like I was going through a divorce. By then, Chad Scott was there, so I only had my area. I didn't have patrol too.

So when I had my area, I was at every meeting, and I would just sit there. I don't know if he ever looked at me. I was just disgusted. I'm like why are we not -- why are we -- like this isn't New York City. We all know each other. Why can't we just have a task force? Why can't we just work together? You know, why does it have to be this way?

So this is the worst part of it; and I'm sure Josh would be upset that I said this, but I'm going to tell you. This is how much this man stressed people out.

So Josh was so stressed out about him getting this write-up, his lieutenant was so stressed about it. I come in, and I say, "Hey, no problem. It's not going to happen." This is right before I told him, "Hey, go talk to Brian." And he gave me a hug, and he cried.

And that was a day in my office I was like this is a SWAT commander crying. What's going on? You know what I mean? And that was the first of five, six, seven deputies coming in my office crying. It just breaks you down mentally. It's -- and for me, that was kind of the beginning of the end for me. I started getting more angry about the things that were going on.

But Brian didn't get written up. He got out of that one.

Q. I just want just to clarify, when this officer, Brian -- what's his last name?

A. Jones.

Q. Brian Jones?

A. Sergeant Jones, yeah.

Q. Sergeant Jones. He doesn't request GPD. He just requests backup.

A. Yeah, but he knew that there was nobody -- there could have been an ASO person.

Q. Right. Some ASO deputy could have been cruising by somewhere near him, but he couldn't possibly know that. He doesn't have that information available to him, right?

A. Yeah, and as a cop, you can't -- Nothing is planned as a cop. Nothing is planned. You can never say, okay, I'm always going to have this place I'm going to eat at. I'm always going to have this person to back me up. I'm always going to drive my car. They don't even know if they're going to go home. You don't know what's going to happen.

So for someone to say you can't ask this entity for backup, you can't do that because you can't ever say things for sure.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Does ASO have a consolidated dispatch?

A. They do, but these guys had a different channel.

Q. But still you've got ASO dispatch for GPD?

A. Oh, yeah, Michelle was dispatching that day.

Q. And they would know better than anybody who is the nearest backup?

A. Correct. Yeah, and Michelle knew that there was somebody there, and the person happened to be a GPD officer.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. But Sergeant Jones can't look on a computer. He can't look in his car.

A. No. He's trying to watch this guy, this runner that's probably going to get killed whenever whoever it is finds out that he lost all their dope. So that guy is nervous, so he's looking at that guy, justifiably.

Q. I just want to ask you this. As best you can, can you help me identify who would -- how would I identify within the agency the emails that would indicate that the sheriff was not allowing GPD to back up the task force?

A. I would look at Yaeger's emails, because Yaeger probably put something out telling them not to do it.

Q. Was Yaeger in charge of the task force at that point?

A. Yeah. Because I had Yaeger, he's my CID guy. So he had detectives, he had the task force, he had forensics. Like he has that whole section. And Steve Maynard, who you probably already talked to, good guy, he was one of my captains that had the courthouse. And when we get to that, that's another thing I got to tell you about that was not okay.

But yeah, the task force thing was insane.

It was just -- it was so -- to me, it was ethically wrong, I felt.

Q. Right. It was endangering lives of police officers.

A. Yes. I felt gross about it even though I did everything I could. I kept him from getting written up. There was a meeting. I was at my office. And Ms. Judd comes down to my office, and she basically was like, "Oh, you got to come down to the sheriff's suite right away." She's like panicking.

I said, "Sure. What's going on?"

She wouldn't tell me.

So I get down there, Michelle is in there. Judd is Michelle's supervisor. She doesn't work there anymore. She quit too. We were all at this table. It's the undersheriff, Chad Scott, the sheriff, Michelle. I think Chad was there. No, maybe he wasn't. So you got Michelle, the sheriff, Judd, and me, and the undersheriff.

And she's like letting her have it. He's like pissed at her. She's crying and stuff. I'm like, what the hell is going on?

So I sat down, and I quickly realized that he's upset about her dispatching the GPD officer, the closest backup. So he's going, you know, "There's nothing we can do about it. There's nothing we can do. Is that what you're saying?"

That's kind of what I walked in on, and she starts crying. And she was just like, "No, because I would do it again," basically, is what she said to him.

And then he basically was -- just basically just giving her shit over it. So she gets up; she runs out, and it's just me and him. And I'm just sitting -- and Judd. And he goes, "And this is something in your area. Don't worry. I fixed it" to me; because I guess he was bothered, and he had to let somebody have it.

I looked at him, and I'm like, "Oh, yeah? What was that?"

And he goes, "Don't worry about it," and he like walked over to his desk.

And I said, "No. You brought it up. If I'm responsible for it, I want to know what exactly you fixed and why I wasn't asked to fix it. I would like to know."

Basically what he was talking about was the -- her dispatching the person and my guy asking for backup; which I had already handled, and he didn't even know it because his undersheriff didn't tell him that. Does that make sense?

Q. Yes.

A. In his mind, I just didn't do anything about the whole thing; and so he was pissed at me, but the whole thing was insane.

So I was just sitting there going like, really? She comes -- she comes back in. I hear her just raising hell. He's like -- and when he's done with you, what he'll do is, he'll go over to his desk. He's done with you. He'll just start doing stuff.

So I said, "Okay." I said, "I'll see you later, Sheriff."

He didn't answer me. So I leave, and I go out in the hallway. I hear Michelle going, "I will not put up with this." She's yelling.

I was like, "Michelle." Because, to me, don't lose your job without getting another job, you know. Don't do that. So I pushed her into the chief of staff's office. She's crying, "I will not be spoken to that way."

It was pretty hellacious. He really was lighting into her for doing her job, which is to get backup, nearest backup, for an Alachua County sheriff's deputy.

Q. And she's telling him, "I'm not going to" --

A. She pretty much told him, "I'm not going to do it. Next time I'm going to have to dispatch the nearest person." Because he wanted her to say it's never going to happen again, which she didn't want to say because then she's not doing her job. She's basically not taking care of the deputies, which is her job.

So if I ask for backup and there was a GPD officer a street away, and she was to promise him that it would never happen again, I'm getting my butt kicked while waiting for ASO who's 15 minutes away. She's not willing to commit to that.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. So if we pulled the emails from Yaeger and probably the lieutenant, Josh Crews --

A. Yeah, Josh was against it too.

Q. And Brian --

A. Brian Jones too. Brian probably wrote back and said -- in writing and probably said: And so you're saying that -- I bet you.

Q. Because it would have had to have been communicated from Yaeger to them --

A. Yes.

Q. -- in some way, shape, or form?

A. Yeah. I bet you'll find something. That was pretty atrocious.

Now, I can't remember whether or not, in the end, if we had two separate channels. We did have the same channel for a while; but I think it became two separate channels, and that's why Michelle had to do what she had to do. And she'll be able to tell you that.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Thank you. That -- because we're just going to run short of time. Is there other incidents of that nature where the command staff is endangering the --

A. Yes.

Q. -- safety of officers by their orders?

A. Yes.

Q. Can you explain?

A. Okay. The courthouse was -- really, all my areas, including patrol, was running extremely short to the point that there was a -- I think there was a gun missed. An attorney had a gun. He had brought it in by mistake.

But the courthouse, they were literally -- Captain Maynard was working shifts at the courthouse as a captain; that's how bad it was. So they're telling me, the major. So I'm like going, shit, I've got to go down there every day and talk about this. Talk about, hey, this is dangerous. Hey, my warrants unit has had enough. They don't -- they were down to one team, one team, because they were all leaving or they were getting transferred or whatever.

So I told my people, "I want" -- "every day I want you to send me a report, to include Yaeger" -- you'll see that if you look at my emails, and Yaeger's and Steve's. "Give me a flowchart of how many are leaving, how many people are still there, what you're supposed to have, and what you have."

Because we were hiring overtime at the courthouse, right? But no one would work it -- which is why Steve had to do it -- because the sheriff would not allow them to wear their uniform of the day.

So to expound on this, the disputes -- we designed before I left a tactical uniform. I was the project manager on that. And we did it so that the deputies would have comfort in the summer and they weren't wearing the polyester and all that kind of stuff, and the deputies really liked it.

Well, the road deputies had to take their vest out of the carrier into the other carrier, put that on, put on a tie and long-sleeve shirt to work the courthouse. Now, who's going to do that when you have to work the next day?

So they couldn't get anybody to work the courthouse, so I went down there; and I had a meeting with Steve and the undersheriff, and we brought a sheet of paper where we said, hey, we're having real issues. It's an officer safety thing. Steve says he still has the piece of paper. It has everything on it. We gave him four options. We said surely one of these options will work for you guys.

Number one, allow them to wear their duty uniform if they work patrol.

"No, absolutely not. If they want, the sheriff will put them all in long sleeves and ties. We'll just have them wear that on the road every day if they have a problem."

So I just quickly shut up because, if I had said anything else, he was going to make them all wear ties and long sleeves on the road. You can get a stroke with that.

Secondly, I said, "Let's talk to the chief judge. Let's see if the chief judge can change some of" -- because it's at the COVID rush, you know, of course. "See if the chief judge can schedule fewer jury trials so we don't have to have as many people."

Well, first, he said, "Let me talk to the sheriff."

And then I said, "Well, can we pay them protected overtime? Because right now, if they take annual leave, they're getting straight time. There's no incentive."

He said, "No, absolutely not. In my day, I was a police officer for this many years." They both knew everything. "Oh, in my day, we did this. We worked for free. We did this. We did that."

Well, it's fricking 2022 at the time. Like, that's not true anymore, you know.

And I'm trying to think of what the other one was. That's pretty much the ones that we had. And they didn't like any of the options, right?

So I said, "Well, when are you going to talk to the sheriff about the chief judge thing? Because if you could get that done for me, that would help me a lot."

Steve's sitting there, and he says, well, you know -- we handed him the sheet, and then Steve kept it. I said, "If you could do that, yeah, that would help me out a lot."

Within five minutes, he calls me and says, "Sheriff says no because he didn't want the chief judge to know how understaffed he was," and that's dangerous. It's dangerous. And it was the same way in all my areas.

I had detectives that were having to let people's burglaries sit at their house. If your house got broke into, would you want somebody to look into it? Nobody was looking into it. We had the shootings that were going on at the time. Crimes against people were more important.

And one last thing on Yaeger.

So yeah, that was dangerous. The staffing was dangerous. We kept saying it. Becky kept saying it from patrol side, saying it, saying it.

Yaeger, I had three of his employees in one week come see me before he got promoted; three. They came in my office -- one of them was a secretary, one of them was Scott Anderson, and one of them was Josh Crews -- telling me that he was treating them bad, talking to them disrespectfully. Nothing that would warrant an OPS investigation, but just doing the things I told him not to do.

I said treat people with empathy and respect. That way, you'll get respect, you know, that whole speech I gave him a million times. So I did an IOC, and that should be clerked in. The sheriff's secretary clerked that in; I made sure. And I wrote it to him, Yaeger directly. It's in his file forever.

I didn't give him a corrective counseling on purpose, and I didn't give him anything else on purpose. I gave him an IOC, which he signed; and it basically says: I've had these three people in my office this week. You need to watch how you talk to people as we discussed, basically.

And I made sure that it was clerked in because I didn't want him to treat people badly, because I had already told my boss he was treating people badly. So I went down to my boss, and my boss got a copy of it. Of course, he didn't care.

Next thing you know, the sheriff calls me down there and says, "Do you think I should promote Lance Yaeger?"

I don't know when he called me. I'm sorry. I didn't --

Q. That's okay. No worries.

A. He said, "Should I promote Lance Yaeger?"

I looked at him, and I said, "Well, I tell you, you're going to get work out of him. He's going to work those people to death, he's not a leader, he's not kind to people, he's not empathetic, nobody likes him, he hasn't earned it," et cetera.

So he sits back in the chair, and he looks like of kind offended; because if you don't -- you know, I should have said, oh, yes, promote him, great choice.

I said, "I've been training him all these months. He doesn't get it. He doesn't have experience. He hasn't gone through the ranks. He doesn't understand it. He doesn't get it."

And he looks at me, and he said, "What about his military? He has this wonderful military record."

I said, "All due respect, Sheriff, nobody cares about that. Nobody cares about his military record. This is civilian law enforcement."

And again, people have taken the sergeant's test, lieutenant's test. They've sat for 11 years before they made captain. They've done all these things.

There's a process to being a command staff member, and that process is going up stairs. Sometimes people fall down the stairs several times; but they go up stairs, and that alone is worth the respect of their rank. If they don't climb the stairs and they don't even take the test at all and fail it even, they don't get anybody's respect because they're basically being put in a position that they didn't earn. And what they're doing is disrespecting people.

You're not even a good leader. You're not even doing a good job.

So he said, "Thank you. I appreciate it." And then he promoted him probably a week later.

Q. From the effective rank of captain to --

A. Acting chief detective to chief detective.

Q. Okay. Understood. So essentially, acting captain to captain.

A. Yeah. He was acting. I was supposed to be training him, which I done the best I could; but to be honest with you --

Q. Essentially, as I understand it, to put it very succinctly, he becomes an acting captain. Your job is to train him to be an actual captain.

A. And it's hard.

Q. He is a total failure --

A. Yeah.

Q. -- to all the training that you've given him.

A. I feel like it.

Q. You report his total failure in his training to the sheriff, who then responds to that report of failure by promoting him to actual captain.

A. Yeah. And he called me down there. I didn't ask to see him because I had already told my boss -- but by that time he'd been coming down there on his own, doing things on his own around me. And they didn't want me around because I was always objecting, and they didn't like that.

INSPECTOR RIDDICK: Yaeger was always coming down there?

THE WITNESS: Yeah, by himself.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. And so, now, is this getting towards the time you were getting ready to leave the agency?

A. This was probably a couple months before.

Q. And so he becomes now a captain. Is he still in that position when you leave the agency?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. So did they just essentially give him your job?

A. No. My job was vacant for about six months. I wish you had more time because there's some really bad shit.

Q. We can make more time.

A. Yeah, and I'll try to hurry.

Q. We can come back.

A. Yeah, but it's fresh in my mind; and I'll try to hurry if I can tell you.

Q. You can give me like a summary, but that doesn't mean we can't come back.

A. Yeah. I was just fixing to give you a brief, slow summary, yes.

So when I left, I couldn't take it. I told them that I -- it was my time and all this other kind of stuff; but in reality, starting in May of '22, I was just so -- I just -- I felt like things were going to go bad. I didn't want to be associated with it. Ethically, he was -- everything he was doing was gross; I didn't like it. I didn't like calling people to demote them, fire them, and I didn't even know what happened. I didn't know what they did.

I called Matt Yakubsin to tell him he's demoted, and I didn't even know what he did. And I asked what he did, and I was told the sheriff is reorganizing. I didn't even know what he did.

And I fired Denise Scott, who is Chad Scott's ex-wife but the mother of his kid. So he's in his office. And I had the papers to fire her. I didn't even know I was firing until I got the papers. So I had my lieutenant and Yaeger get a conference room, and I went in to see Chad.

I said, "Hey, Chad, just so you know, like, I'm about to fire your ex-wife."

He's like, "What? What?"

I can't believe they didn't tell him as close as they are. And I fired his ex-wife, and I did it away from his office. But that's the kind of shit I used to do.

And the memorial, I'll touch on that real briefly. We had a meeting about the law enforcement memorial, and this was 2022. This wasn't the year we put it on. This was the year after.

So Michelle Romas and her sister always have The Sheriff Walk. It's America. Great. You're the survivor of a terrible thing. You should pick who -- and I know the family very well.

So they called Kaylie Biel; Frank Kinsey, who was the commander because he took the honor guard away from Yaeger when they demoted him; which I don't know why they demoted him. And he looks at me, and he says, "Sheriff Clovis Watson. He's the sheriff of Alachua County. He will walk down."

I said, "Respectfully, I was an honor guard commander for 11 years." I said, "That's not how this works."

He said, "Clovis Watson Jr. is sheriff." He did it again.

I looked at him, and I said, "You're supposed to get with the organizer. The survivor picks the person that they would like to walk them down the aisle. It's up to them."

He was like, "Do you have a problem with what I'm asking you to do?"

I said, "I'll tell you what. I'll call the organizers and the survivors."

He said, "No, you won't call anybody. You're just going to do it."

Now, you can tell how uncomfortable Frank Kinsey was.

So I leave the room. I called the organizer, Tracy Thunderbird. I've known her for years. I didn't tell her any of this. I just said, "Hey, I need to get in that group there."

I called Michelle Romas. I said, "Yeah, you know, if you don't mind, I'd like to see y'all again."

I felt terrible about that. I felt like I did something bad; but I knew that if I didn't do it, I was going to get in trouble or demoted. But I did it my way. Does that make sense?

Q. Yes.

A. But I still felt disgusted, but I had to do it. I had to do it. And when I got there, they made sure the whole time to make sure I wasn't speaking or looking at Sadie Darnell. I ignored her like she was not there.

And then the other thing --

INSPECTOR RIDDICK: Is that normally who would walk somebody down the aisle?

THE WITNESS: They usually have one escort. This year, if you noticed -- I watched the memorial. They asked me to take the retiree flower down, and I said it's too soon. I didn't do it.

I watched it on TV, on Facebook. They injected Yaeger this year to stand by Sadie Darnell to make sure that there was that imprint.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. We may decide to come back and continue this discussion, but I do want to ask one question before we close.

So you've notated a lot of transfers within the agency that were not within the normal course of business and may have been inappropriate. You worked for Sheriff Darnell for many years. Did you work in the sheriff's office before Sheriff Darnell?

A. Uh-huh. I worked under Sheriff Oelrich. And then, also, we had an interim sheriff for a little while when he left to run for office, and then after that we got Sadie Darnell.

Q. And during the entirety of your career, prior to that time, had you ever experienced transfers where people had not tested properly for the transfer?

A. Never.

Q. Or people who were wholly unqualified and well known to be unqualified within the agency who were put in positions for which they should not serve and were not qualified to serve?

A. Never.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Are you familiar with any retaliatory conduct that came from the top down?

A. Yeah. That was my next thing I was going to try to see if I could try to fit in, but I know you guys got to leave.

Q. No, it's not us. We just have --

A. A million other people who want to talk?

Q. Well, it's just that we're going to run out of time. We're already an hour behind. What do you guys want to do?

(An off-the-record discussion was had.)

MR. KRAMER: Let's just pause here knowing that we're going to come back. I'm not going to inconvenience you too much with another subpoena, I'll just schedule you another time.

(The statement concluded at 10:59 a.m.)

WHEREUPON,

MICHELLE KLEMENT

acknowledged having been duly sworn to tell the truth, and testified upon his or her oath as follows:

THE WITNESS: Yes.

EXAMINATION

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Could you state your full name, please?

A. Michelle Klement.

Q. And, Ms. Klement, were you at one time in your career an employee of the Alachua County Sheriff's Office?

A. Yes, for a long time.

Q. How long?

A. Twenty-seven and a half years, I think.

Q. And in what capacities did you serve at the Alachua County Sheriff's Office?

A. I was always in communications. I started out as a 911 call taker. We were in the basement on 12 Southeast 1st Street, right around the corner here.

Within my five and a half, almost six years, I then became a supervisor, which meant I learned all the positions within the center. I promoted to supervisor. A couple years after that I promoted to the training area. I trained all of the 911 call takers, did all their quality assurance. I instructed. The State of Florida implemented the department of health curriculum to which I became an instructor for that. So we would instruct their -- we're known as our regional kind of instructor house under Sadie Darnell.

Then I made commander. I was a false-alarm unit person. I was a shift-commander-type deal. I was Pat Ford Thomas' administrative commander. I promoted to the director of communications. And then when the sheriff came on board, Sheriff Clovis Watson Jr. came on board, I was assigned the promotion of technical service division manager.

Q. And what are the job responsibilities of that position?

A. The division manager? I was essentially in charge of -- I was told -- I was promoted, actually. I was one of only two people that were -- technically received a promotion under Clovis Watson Jr., but never spoke to him. We only spoke to George Corwine, who was the major, I think, at the time.

I was told I would be division manager; that they let the previous division manager go, James Lanier, who was my division manager. I was in charge of CAD area; the GIS personnel, which is only two, one of each; all of the training personnel, which was a training commander position at the time; a supervisor for three, four-ish, one was part-time, quality assurance instructors; and then all of the communications personnel, which was 89 FTEs. At the time he took over we had seven -- we were down seven positions. And then I had all of the radio shop.

So the radio shop was in charge of all the radios for the division -- excuse me, for the entire sheriff's office, so all the jail as well, and then the cell phones. They were in charge of cell phones, radios. They did PMs for ASO cars, stuff like that.

Q. I want to ask you just a general question. Do dispatchers and call takers serve important safety functions for officers on the road?

A. Yes. We are considered the first responders for a reason. The problem -- one of the -- I don't know -- seriously, I have no idea what you're going to ask me; but one of the problems that the sheriff and I would butt heads about, not specifically through his various people that I would have to speak to, is that we became so shorthanded that we were running our people into the ground. They were exhausted. And what happens is, even on admin lines and on 911 lines, you don't know what's on the other end of that line.

So what happens is, we can triage calls all day. We can leave them on the screen. We can stack them 50, 60 deep, but we don't have the luxury when you answer the phone to know what's on the other end of that line. So we would get robberies on administrative lines.

There's a Florida state statute, I believe it is, but we have to answer 911 lines within -- or 90 percent of the 911 lines within 10 seconds. And I ran our phone stats every three hours. That is a requirement that I did. Our phone vendor said it's very rare that anyone in the entire state of Florida that they have dealt have ever done what we did, but I like to be proactive and not reactionary. So every three hours I want to know -- I did want to know how -- I don't do that anymore, but did want to know how our call takers were doing. And we would process half a million calls a year. They were exhausted.

Q. But as far as the dispatchers are concerned, can you explain the role that they play in keeping officers safe while they're answering calls, specifically on the highway?

A. Oh, I now know where you're going.

Okay. So as far as -- dispatchers are required to answer the radio, and they are required to do it efficiently, promptly, and immediately respond to whatever requests are asked of them. And sometimes I would discipline dispatchers because they would get a little snippy or they'd be upset because traffic units are running traffic too much. I used to tell them that is their job, and that is their only job, is to run traffic.

So -- but yes, they take a call for service, they dispatch it; and in between that, we have units that run traffic on the interstate all day, we have units that run traffic all through the county.

But if you're talking about the drug interdiction unit, I know where you're going with this.

Q. Correct. That is where I am going with this. My question really is, did you ever receive a directive from the sheriff's office that you consider would endanger the safety, the welfare, or the life of a deputy sheriff working the interstate on who you could dispatch to back that person up?

A. Yes.

Q. Can you explain that situation?

A. Yes. And we asked clarification multiple times. So initially I was told by the undersheriff that -- the undersheriff himself, that HIDTA was not going well with the sheriff's office and GPD, and that someone up above -- he did not name who -- that HIDTA said that the sheriff did not play well with others; and therefore, they were kicked out of HIDTA.

He was upset about that. He figured it was all about money, is what he specifically spoke to me. That's exactly what he said to me in his own office in one of my passing points.

What I was told is that GPD would no longer be running traffic for their HIDTA team, which is their highway interdiction team, on the interstate. And I said, "Okay. Well, do we know what the protocols are? If they ask for assistance, are we going to send someone?"

He said that they had asked for clarification from GPD. Then that was our one conversation, and that was it. Beyond that, they were trying to work a way out of the system through the radio system to make sure that GPD could not ever come to ASO channels, and they were trying to do a back-around where they could not ever talk on our channels.

Q. You have to excuse me. I don't understand any of what you just said.

A. Well, I do have -- I have an email. I'm like I don't know what you could possibly talk about.

April 13th -- this is 2022 -- where I had asked specifically -- one of their lieutenants at GPD had asked if they could start talking on our ASO channel again. And I said I -- it was Lieutenant Ford. This came April 22nd -- excuse me, April 11th of 2022. And basically, Lieutenant Ford -- I don't know if you know Mark -- basically says, "Hey, Kim. Were you able to get an answer from the GPD interdiction folks as to whether they can be on ASO primary? The lieutenant reached out to me this morning. Thanks."

We were directed we could not provide any answer at all to any agency whatsoever during conflicting situations. It must go through the sheriff himself.

So Kim said that "This was brought to the attention of the sheriff last Thursday" -- so the Thursday prior to April 11 -- "for approval, and unfortunately I have not gotten any updates. I will let you know soon."

So I sent to Danielle Judd, who was at the time our chief of staff. I've been informed that May 5th she's no longer there anymore, that she resigned. But April 11th I sent it to Danielle FYI only.

I said at that time, "Can you please give us verbiage that we can give to GPD? Because we do not feel comfortable saying no, you cannot do a traffic stop on our channel."

Ultimately, at the end of the day, they had their own channel they could do a traffic stop. This is the memo that they finally sent to Chief Scott that was acting at the time. And I did not give this to our dispatchers because I didn't feel -- it looked like it was chaos between the two agencies, and I did not educate the staff. I only educated them that they were not to do a traffic stop on ASO channel, which to me was a very ineffective and unsafe method, if that's what you're trying to get at, yes.

Q. Well, it is --

A. And they did end up doing traffic stops on our channel because, apparently, something was pushed through the cracks; and inadvertently or intentionally GPD had said that they had received approval, which caused a mass chaos on the day of -- I think I have it written down somewhere, where GPD was -- did tell communications that they were able and approved to do traffic stops. Ultimately they did a traffic stop, but I was told by the sheriff absolutely not under no circumstances -- it was actually a very heated discussion.

Q. What you're talking about is what channel they're going to use, right?

A. So yes and no. So when GPD and ASO ran traffic, they ran it together for the safety of the units because GPD is not trained in the way that highway interdiction that FHP and ASO come up -- enter the interstate safely as well as approaching traffic and getting off the interstate, or getting onto the interstate and doing their truck stop. So they always did a truck stop on ASO Channel 1 jointly, and their backup was always what was on the interstate.

So as a dispatcher and -- because I would work in the center too. As a dispatcher and as the division manager, I asked for guidance. How do we handle these situations where, one, if GPD is even doing -- so basically, the sheriff said to their -- his command staff and me, "You will not allow GPD to do traffic stops on ASO Channel 1. They must do it on their own channel."

So this is a shared system; I'm sure you know, it's the -- it's GRUCom. Any law enforcement within our area can flip through and go to those primary channels. I even think the media has access to ASO Channel 1 and ASO Channel 2.

So GPD was told, "You must do your truck stop on your channel," which was Channel 1 or 2 for them. My question was, because we ran a dispatch center, which was comprised of GPD as well as ASO, what do I tell the GPD dispatchers when their unit needs help.

And so GPD, obviously, the City of Gainesville is very extensive, and their property is all over the place as far as their jurisdictional boundaries. Do we send ASO to assist them? Do we call FHP to assist them? Do we do an all-broadcast to see if anyone -- and I continued to receive no direction from them whatsoever. They said they would get back to me, and they never did.

When I left, I still had no idea what decision had been made.

Q. So you're left to basically just use your best judgment?

A. Yes.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Did you write any IOCs about that?

A. I wrote emails. I have notes. I actually got counseled. I was accused -- it was a big deal later about that.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. I want to move on to a specific situation which involved a Sergeant Brian Jones from the Alachua County Sheriff -- I mean -- yeah, the sheriff's office. He was a drug task force officer, a drug dog officer.

A. Yes.

Q. Where he made a truck stop and --

A. No, that's not true. Marry Beth Davis did a truck stop. So Mary Beth, I spoke to her that morning of the incident.

Q. Is Mary Beth Davis also a drug task force officer?

A. Yes, but she's from GPD. Brian Jones is for ASO, and he can do traffic stops on his channel all day long.

Q. I understand. I want to see if we're talking about the same incident.

A. Okay. Yes, sir.

Q. Which is at some point Brian Jones has made a truck stop or is on a truck stop, I'm not sure, where he's going to discover 43 pounds of cannabis. Are you familiar with this traffic stop?

A. Yes, I believe I am. I was not involved in it, but yes.

Q. But at some point my understanding is that you are going to be involved in some kind of discussion with the sheriff about providing or the combined communication center somehow sending a GPD officer to back up Sergeant Jones, who is by himself on the interstate with someone who has 43 pounds of cannabis.

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. So could you please take me through start to finish what happens with that situation?

A. Hypothetically, those units run together as a group. They may be several miles apart, but they always back each other up; and it's as simple -- because the radio traffic is busy all day long.

Jones is, I want to say -- although I've been gone for several months, I want to say he was Papa 343. So he would just say, "Papa 343 to 680," and they would know then bring a dog or go for backup. That's all they would say, because the radio -- they failed to split the channels, but they would do everything on that one channel. So they would run warrants on that channel. They'd run traffic. They do dispatch, and they would do jail transport. So they kept it very specific and generic, especially for those units. We never got involved so much unless they needed assistance for some reason.

We would check on them every 60 seconds from the time of the first traffic stop and then every five minutes thereafter. Other than that, usually, once they were safe, they'd say 1054 1015, which means don't check on us any longer because they knew they would be searching the vehicle and be there for a long time.

Traditionally, if he needed assistance, we would look on the screen. Even though they were GPD's interdiction units, only two of them, they worked on ASO's primary channel because they were always on the interstate. The GPD dispatcher was not as familiar with the interstate mile markers. We did a lot of cross-training, so sometimes you would have ASO dispatchers work GPD, and GPD work ASO. We did that for consistency's sake.

But we knew when he said something, that that's where you would go, particularly -- I wasn't there that particular day, but if I had been, a normal thing would be just to send either his ASO partner, which at the time was a little redhead with the black dog. I'll remember his name in a minute. That's Brian Jones' partner for the drug interdiction unit, and it was Mary Beth with the new guy. Out of the four of them, if one did a traffic stop, they would choose one of the other three or all of them would go. It's very rare that they would all just go together unless it's something huge. It's something that just two of them can handle.

So traditionally he would just say -- he would specifically say who he wanted to go to him, and he would just call them by name, just by their ID, 680 or 687, which was Mary Beth's ID at the time; and she would go or he would go and back him up. That was it.

As far as communications, if he didn't have backup, he would say send me 1038; and we would immediately send an ASO unit because we were told GPD units were not allowed on our primary ASO Channel 1.

Q. So how does it come to pass that you end up in the sheriff's office with him screaming at you about this traffic stop?

A. Well, it was a different traffic stop that you're referring to. Or about this incident, not that you're referring to.

So communications, we called it -- we would evacuate the center. We would do a planned evacuation, or a -- we call it COOP, continuity of operations planning. So basically we'd COOP, we'd send them to the basement. During that time we would do any major maintenance. We were having generator repair and different things that would take place in our huge communications center.

I happened to be on a ladder painting the kitchen when our staffing was really pretty crappy that day. And Kim Kutner, who is the director of communications and was my right hand at the time, she was going to the basement. It was about 1445 in the afternoon. And Kim was backing up from the ASO communication center and headed to the basement here at 12 Southeast 1st Street in the county admin building, and she sent me a text that said, "Hey, can you please look at this text that Susie sent me?"

Susie Westfall was the -- basically, it's the equivalent of a lieutenant. She's the communications commander; and she runs that shift, which should be comprised of two supervisors and their employees.

Susie sent her a text and said, "Hey, Sergeant Jones just text and said" -- excuse me, GPD Sergeant Davis, or Mary Beth -- I don't think she was a sergeant, actually -- said that she had just received permission from their captain that said GPD received permission they may now start doing traffic stops on ASO Channel 1.

Kim said, "Can you please verify the validity of this?"

So you would like to assume that it's correct, right, and I would not have to go verify. So I climb down off the ladder. I go to my office. I had been in the kitchen cleaning and painting all day and kind of getting ready for the staff to come back. So before I waste my time and my boss' time to call her, I decided to check my email real quick.

So I checked my email. There was no indication that that memo had been discussed or -- and that memo was only done because I had finally -- my hair was on fire, and I was jumping up and down and said, "Can you please write something and send them something? Because we're tired of getting involved in the middle of this, and we still have no idea how to handle this situation."

So I called Danielle Judd. She answered immediately; she was really good about that. And I said, "Hey, Danielle." I said, "This is Michelle. I'm over here. I just received this text that GPD has now received permission. They're starting to do traffic stops. Do you know anything about it?"

She said, "My goodness. No, I don't." And she said, "I would think I would know, and I haven't heard anything."

I said, "Okay. Can you find out for me?"

She said, "Just hold on right this second. Just stay on the phone."

I said, "Okay." I had her on speakerphone.

She must have had me on speakerphone now. And so she told me that she was going to go find the undersheriff. She said, "I'm going to find the undersheriff and I'll" -- "just hang on."

Well, the undersheriff was at lunch, allegedly, with -- he was -- at the time he was a major, Major Chad Scott.

So she comes in, and she goes -- and she's speaking very hastily, and I can tell she's extremely nervous and she's stuttering a little bit, which she does only when she's nervous or she's flustered.

She said, "Michelle, I couldn't find the undersheriff, but the sheriff is right here."

And he goes off on the phone. He starts yelling and screaming. He wanted to know -- he wanted to know right then and there who authorized those GPD units to do traffic stops on his ASO channel, for one.

I told him, "Sir, I didn't have that information," which was why I was calling; that I knew it didn't feel like it was correct because I had not received anything from the top, but that I had been busy that morning and perhaps I had missed something and that's why I was seeking clarification.

He began to yell and scream and that he must have -- I had heard rumor and speculation that many times he had threatened to just fire people all the time just when they upset him, just -- they were going to fire them; and it made it ring true immediately when he said, "I'm not saying I'm going to fire someone," but he's screaming through the phone. He goes, "But I'm telling you right now, when I find out who did this, they will be moved, they will be moved," and he's screaming. And this is only on speakerphone.

And I said, "Sir, I can assure you," I said, "without even looking into it right at this moment, I can assure you without a doubt that no one in the communications realm would have authorized this." I said, "But if you'll give me a few minutes, I will research, and I will call you back, and I will call Danielle, and I will find out."

So I hung up. I was like, dear God, this is not going to be; but I'm going to get the answers, and it's going to be fine. So I start -- because they're in a different building now, and they're miles from us -- normally, I would just get up, go into the communications center, which is right there and combined near my office and just find out for myself.

So I look at the CAD system. What's the supervisor for communications who took the traffic stop? I look at the second traffic stop. It's the other supervisor who's also on overtime. Those two supervisors are on overtime because we were going to have a supervisors' meeting that afternoon about 1600, I think it was. But anyhow, they're both working overtime because they're so shorthanded because people keep quitting.

So I find out that allegedly one of the captains at GPD told the GPD drug interdiction unit, yep, we got a blessing; that they're allowed to start doing traffic stops. So they were happy as can be. So to be kind, they called GPD dispatch and said, "Hey, we've just been told we have been approved to run traffic back on ASO Channel 1. We're excited. We're going to move over there in the next few minutes." Initially, yes, that's exactly what they started doing.

So I called Danielle up. I told her. She said, "Okay. Well, the sheriff wants you to come over here. He wants you over here immediately."

I said, "Okay."

So I walk over there. I'm wearing jeans. I'm disgusting. I have paint all over me. My hair is up, and I have a bottle of water and my phone and my glasses. So I go over there, and I go see Danielle first. She's looking at me, and she is like -- I won't tell you my hillbilly term, but she's looking nervous and she is frazzled. I'll just leave it like that.

She's like, "Sheriff Watson is in there."

I said, "What?"

She goes, "We're waiting for the major. We're waiting for the undersheriff. We're waiting for" -- she started saying a few more.

I said, "Okay."

I don't know if you know, like you come into the main suite; and this is the assistant, this is Danielle's office, then now the sheriff is way back here in his humongous, very nice office that he has.

So I walk in. It's just him, and he's pacing back and forth, back and forth. And no one else is there, it's just me. And Danielle leaves my ass -- sorry, I cuss a lot. I'm doing really well. I'm doing really, really well.

She leaves my ass there, and she's like, "I need to" -- and she -- it's kind of funny. I know my neck is red because, I'm telling you, I have not slept for a year because of this man. But anyhow, I've just got to somehow get it out of my system.

She leaves me in there, and she tells me, "I need to go find the other people. I'm going to go find Bella. I'm going to find these other people."

Is said, "Okay." I'm thinking he's just not going to say anything to me. I'm going to sit here, and he's going to -- no. He starts reaming my ass out.

So he tells me, "I'm here to tell you now I want to know" -- and his arms, arms -- "I want to know why it is that you let him do traffic stops."

I said, "Sir" -- and he goes on to say that he got rid of that man, which made me believe it was the man previously that he got rid of and I took his position. I didn't want his position but basically assigned, I was assigned to it.

He said, "I got rid of that man because I thought you could do the right thing, and now here you are. And no wonder people disrespect me."

So he's starting -- at that point in time I'm kind of like checking out. I'm like, get ahold of yourself. I cry when I'm pissed, and it is one of my -- I have several weaknesses, but that's my biggest weakness. It pisses me off that I cry, and then I get even more mad at myself. Because I would really like to just chunk that bottle of water at his head, which I knew I couldn't, I wouldn't do. I don't need anger management. I know how to control that, but I was pissed off. I'm like, this is great.

So at the time Bella walks in; and she doesn't who he's talking to, but she can hear it. She could hear it when she came in. And so she knocks, and she goes, "Sir, is it okay to come in?"

He goes, "Yep, come on in."

So now it's me and Bella, and Bella is looking at me. I'm not crying yet. I'm just like, here we go. So we're waiting for people to come in there. The undersheriff gets there. Danielle Judd comes in. It's Chad Scott, who was the major. It was the sheriff himself and Bella; and I want to say somebody else, but I can't remember who.

And so he goes on to ask what happened. So I say exactly what I told you. You know, I was up there and -- so he's like, you know -- and the undersheriff said, "Yeah, you know, GPD" -- or, excuse me, Chad Scott said, "GPD, everybody disrespects the sheriff. Everybody is just disrespecting him left and right."

And I said, "Well, I'm sorry this occurred, sir. I will" -- and he goes on to say did I give that memo, did you -- he said, "I don't know why your dispatchers took those traffic stops."

And I am just shocked that he --

Q. I just want to ask this question. What stops -- GPD has the channel on their radio in their car, right?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. They can just tune to that radio and do what they want.

A. Yes.

Q. So what is it that stops them from using whatever channel this is?

A. Nothing stops them.

Q. What are you supposed to do? Are you going to get on the radio and say, "Get off this channel"?

A. Yes, that's what he wanted us to say.

Q. And what would they do? Just shift to another channel? Is that what they want them to do?

A. Yeah. They want them to go back to where they came from and don't ever come back to ASO channel.

Q. Okay.

A. He starts to ream me and ask me if I sent that memo. I said, "No, sir, I didn't."

"I want to know why. Why did you not send that memo?"

I said, "Well, the memo sounds very confrontational, or it leads the staff to believe that there's conflict between the agencies."

I turned to Major Scott, who at the time was in charge of all of the law enforcement area. I said, "Major Scott, did you send that memo to your captains of patrol?"

And he went, "No."

I'm like, "Okay. So no, I did not send the memo; but I will go send the memo, and I will send an email that says" -- and here's the email that I sent -- "that they are not to do traffic stops. You are to immediately tell them to switch back over."

He goes, "All right."

I said, "Sir, I'm so sorry that this occurred." I said, "I apologize. Clearly, unfortunately, I guess, GPD units were told incorrect information." I said, "Now the dispatchers are going to be gun shy." And I tried to go on to say how things have happened.

I said, "Major Scott, when you were at GPD, we have it set up" -- and our CAD systems were there. I specifically set it up years ago when I was just director because I would go in there and would work traffic detail, and they would do like joint operations.

If APD, who's not dispatched by communications, at the combined communication center -- I said, if they said "APD 5 1050," which is a traffic stop, that's a code for it, 1050 -- on ASO Channel 1 -- that's not an agency that we provide a dispatch service for. So we provide a dispatch service for the three law enforcement agencies: ASO, GPD, and High Springs PD; those are the agencies.

If APD 5 said, "APD 5 1050," we would be like, whoa, this guy is on the wrong channel. And we would say, "APD 5, be advised you're on ASO Channel 1." We wouldn't tell him he couldn't do it. We would just say, "Be advised you're on our channel."

If he says, "APD 5 1050," we'd put him on duty, we'd put them on call as a generic unit. Or even if they said "APD 650," we would a generic APD 2 -- think I had seven of them. And we would put that fake fictitious unit on a call where they're at, begin to run the call -- run the tag, send them back up. And then we would simultaneously contact APD and say, "For some reason, your unit is doing a traffic stop on our channel."

It sounds odd, but that's what we would do. So I tried to explain to the major that --

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Why would you do that?

A. Because it's a safety concern. Traditionally -- I mean, I started in '95. I've had my own shots-fired incidents. We do traffic. Traditionally, that's when -- the suspects know -- I imagine your guys have your career -- I'm sorry. I don't even know beyond your names what you've done.

Traditionally, a suspect knows that they're going to shoot you versus -- so we automatically -- and that's why we have the protocol. A traffic stop is the only call type within the first 60 seconds we do a unit check on them, and then after that it's every five minutes; but that first few seconds of that traffic stop is critical.

Q. So it goes without saying that you're not going to stop that traffic stop to get him off that channel?

A. Absolutely.

So I say that, and it pisses the sheriff off even more. He doesn't want to hear. He just wants me just to shut up and tell him, yes, sir, this is what will be done; so I say as close to that as possible.

I said, "Sir, I'm sorry this occurred. I will go back, and I will talk to the dispatchers. I will inform them that you no longer absolutely under no circumstances want GPD to do a traffic stop on your channel; and they are to tell them 1054, go to GPD Channel 1."

He's like, "Yes." And he goes, "And this will never happen again."

And that's where I said, "Well, sir, I would hope that that would never happen again, but it's muscle memory."

Some of these dispatchers -- and for me at the time I was there 26 years. It's muscle memory. And those traffic units on the interstate are fast. They flip out a traffic stop fast as can be.

That's what pissed him off. He went off. He flailed his arms. I want to say he slapped the table; but he certainly flailed his arms, and he said, "And no wonder all these other people around this agency in" -- I guess in different cities, and GPD disrespects him. He has his own division manager who's going to disrespect him.

And so he starts going off, and at one point in time basically about that -- that I can't just say they're not going to do it again. And to me, I'm not one that's going to blow smoke up your ass. I'm going to tell you the possibility that it could occur again. Will we address it as he would want us to? Yes, but we're not going to -- I can't tell him it's not going to happen again. It could and would likely happen again.

So he went off on me. I began to cry. So I just said, "Can you please excuse me for a moment? I need to use the restroom."

And I was not even gone four minutes, and I get back. They're all gone. They get up. They're meeting me at the front of the door, and I'm hot. At this point in time they leave all my shit, which wasn't a lot, in his office, in his suite.

So Major Scott is there at the door, Bella, Judd, and me. And Danielle is like, "Are you okay? What are you going to do? What are you going to do?"

I think they thought either I was going to go in there and, I don't know, maybe physically hurt him, accost him; I don't know. I was more pissed, but I was more pissed at myself that I cried. But I was shocked that here is a sheriff that, if I spoke to an employee like that, he would have lost his shit on me in a heartbeat; but I was just shocked that it was this type of call, this type of call that is one of the country's biggest incidents, and here he is going off on me that our dispatch center allowed two traffic stops to have been performed, and we acted upon it, and we didn't send them. I was just in shock.

So Danielle said, "Well, what are you going to do?"

And I said, "What do you mean, what am I going to do?" And I said, "I'm going to" -- I'm like, "I can't believe you guys think it's okay for this man to talk to people like a piece of shit." That's exactly what I said in front of Chad Scott, Danielle Judge, and Bella. And Bella was like -- her eyes were huge.

So I went into Judd's office. She knew I was upset. I was pissed, I was hurt, I was upset, I was shocked, and I had a job to do. I needed to go then send this email and that memo to -- based on their instruction to the staff.

And Judd, at the time she was going to -- she wanted to go with me to the supervisors' meeting that we were supposed to have with the staff to basically tell them not what happened with me and the sheriff, but basically this was not to continue; and that GPD basically put us in a predicament, and that under no certain circumstances are they to be allowed to perform traffic stops.

I went off on my own. I sent that email. I copied Danielle. I copied the undersheriff, I think;

I don't know. I think it says there who I copied. And then we discuss it later.

Danielle checked on me that afternoon. She checked on me again. Bella checked on me. People called me. I guess word went rampant through the sheriff's office how he spoke to me. And for that, I was told I was going to be placed on a performance improvement plan, a year's disciplinary probation, and she was going to write me up.

Q. This was Danielle?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. Is this when you were transferred to the jail?

A. No, I'm not transferred to the jail yet because of that.

Q. Did all that then happen? Were you given a performance improvement plan?

A. No, no. It was weeks later. Actually, I have a summarization because I figured I'd be transferred to the jail.

I wrote this on May 10th. I can read it to you, if you want; but basically, it was a synopsis of the meeting that I had where Danielle -- just three weeks later she comes to me, and she said, "So what are you going to do?"

I said, "What do you mean, what am I going to do?"

She said, "Are you going to resign? Are you going to" -- "do you want to go anywhere else in the agency? What do you want to do?"

And I said, "Well, Danielle, I was really upset and irritated and hurt that this occurred," I said, "but no. I've been doing this for over 26, 27 years." I said, "I'm not quitting." And I said, "I am not resigning. I'm not going to ask to transfer anywhere."

I was also charged with doing accreditation for some reason even though it wasn't what the previous division manager ever did, so I was doing several different tasks for them.

And I said, "So I'm just going to wait for you to give me my discipline."

And she was frustrated. She was like -- she said, "Michelle" -- basically, at that point in time -- which is why I feel like I've been on an emotional roller coaster. She said, you know -- I think someone basically told her that I can be emotional and exaggerate about things; which I am a female, so I can become emotional; I do know that, but I have always tried to do a lot of major self-reflections.

I said, "Danielle," I said -- I think I put in my notes; I can't remember. To be honest, I haven't read those. I just printed them yesterday, in fact.

But she said to me, "Well, Michelle, you know, I'm not really sure why you were so upset. He spoke to you like you and I are speaking right now."

I said, "No, ma'am. No, ma'am, he did not." I said, "In fact, I know he did not," I said, "because the very next day you asked to speak to me again." I said, "So you spoke to me after it occurred. You didn't want me to walk away upset. You spoke to me the night after the supervisors' meeting." I said, "The very next day you come and spoke to me at a conference table, and you put your hand on my hand and said, 'Michelle, it's going to be okay. He knows I'm not comfortable with it.'"

That's what she told me specifically, and I went home and wrote it down.

She goes, "Okay."

And I said, "So no, you can reprimand me."

Basically, they wanted me to write -- he wanted me to write those two supervisors up that took those traffic stops. I said, "Absolutely not. If you're going to write someone up, write me up."

They work for me. They were doing what dispatchers were supposed to. I would be livid if they said no.

We had no direction except for that memo, and that memo does not say the dispatchers will not accept a traffic stop on our channel. I'm sure you've read it by now. It doesn't say it.

So since then, I was directed to tell those dispatchers, "You will tell them they will not perform a traffic stop on ASO channel."

Q. I guess I'm -- because I don't understand this world. What are they then supposed to do? The officers are just supposed to leave the traffic stop?

A. They're not supposed to perform a traffic stop on ASO channel. They are supposed to do a traffic stop on their own channel. And then, if they need backup, protocols were still not in place. I don't know what we were to do. And when I left, I still had not received clarification if GPD is doing an interdiction traffic stop on their own channel -- which by the time I did leave, they were allowed to start performing traffic stops again on ASO channel; but prior, during that time, we still had not received clarification as to what would be done, what type of assistance they would receive, whether it be from FHP, their own agency, ASO, or any of that during that time.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. How long had the task force -- the interdiction been going on?

A. Oh, my gosh. Probably ten years, maybe.

Q. And during all that time they used the same --

A. Always.

Q. When did that change?

A. When he took office during the -- it's in that memo.

Q. So it happened after Clovis Watson Jr. was --

A. Oh, absolutely.

Q. Why did he stop ASO from using your channel?

A. GPD?

Q. GPD. I'm sorry.

A. Just the undersheriff told me that basically -- basically, what he said was that he -- he told me that HIDTA, whoever is in charge of HIDTA -- I don't even know the ins and outs about that -- said that the sheriff did not play well with others, and that he was kicked out, meaning ASO was no longer part of HIDTA.

So they were -- they still ran their interstate responses, the two ASO units. Which Brian Jones, who had a K-9; and his deputy, who also had a K-9, both of them had a K-9, we were told that they would still -- and that GPD would then run their own on their own channel.

And then when the sheriff found out -- after this incident, we had several meetings to try to basically re-template the radio system so GPD could not come on their channel.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Is that possible?

A. Oh, it's possible, yeah. You can lock -- you can basically -- it causes a huge issue. You basically can encrypt your channel; but when you encrypt, you mess up a whole lot of things. So when they, GPD or ASO, needs a joint response on something like a SWAT incident or a shooting incident or something in a school --

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. If you had an MSD in Alachua County, you would have the same problem?

A. Yes. So if you had some sort of mass casualty, like even a shooting at the University of Florida, and they say okay, you know, ASO SWAT team will respond first because GPD's SWAT was still all -- and then you try to patch those channels through. You basically encrypt that channel, and you -- you don't allow -- so you'd have to pull everyone to a different channel, which is just time consuming.

So you think about a shooting downtown or at the school. It would be a nightmare.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Would it be unsafe?

A. Absolutely. It's already unsafe. We still have a couple of units that are encrypted, like our SWAT units that are encrypted. When they come to a channel, when they did, it would be do a (makes descriptive sound).

I could hear it. Because I had an encrypted mobile at my desk, a portable, excuse me, at my desk, so I could hear it; but the dispatchers couldn't hear it because their encryption did not work on that channel.

Q. So the sheriff wanted your team, your people, to encrypt the channel that the drug task force worked on, the sheriff's office channel, which would have caused massive disruption and an unsafe environment for the entire county?

A. For that particular channel. Now, there are a ton of other channels they could use potentially, but the one that -- specifically for ASO Channel 1, which is a primary channel, yes. He wanted discussions to be had, and those discussions were with me; now he's a major, but Josh Crews; radio systems supervisor, Scott Shelpman. And those are the discussions -- and I believe Judd was to be involved in those, and I think Chad Scott at the time.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. So he didn't want to just encrypt a talk-around channel. He wanted to encrypt ASO's main channel so GPD could not get on it.

A. Yeah. He was trying to look at potential ways to -- so that they could not just like they did. I expected, as a sheriff, he would say, "Michelle, I am sorry that GPD put you in this position. I am sorry that a captain lied and told his unit. I am sorry, but thank you for doing the right thing. Thank you. Please go back and extend your appreciation to the dispatchers and tell them we're so sorry that unit put those dispatchers in this situation."

I would have expected him to go chew Acting Chief Tony Scott's -- or Lonnie Scott's behind. I think Tony actually was maybe involved in it too at the time -- but Lonnie Scott's behind, or that captain, but certainly not me or the communications center. I was just shocked.

Q. So from the time he separated, or basically said that GPD cannot play with our toys, cannot be on our channel, until recently when now they're back on your channel, he was -- and also he said that ASO could not ask for GPD backup?

A. Yeah. That's in emails too. I don't know if I have those. I do have them. I just don't know if I printed them.

Q. Did he also say ASO could not back up GPD?

A. It had to be specific call types. It would have to go to like a certain level.

Q. Before you could ever send them a backup, you'd have to check with levels?

A. Yeah. It was very shocking.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Is that unsafe?

A. Absolutely, it's unsafe all day long. I mean, I've been doing this since October of 1995, and it's --

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. To paint the picture here. Now for about two and a half years he's not only made his own officers unsafe by not allowing them not to ask for backup, he's affecting another agency?

A. He's not only affecting that, but you have to understand dispatchers, you know, we have our own little oath too, and we are the first first responders. I left the jail because I knew my job was in jeopardy, and that was their task to get rid of me.

I was way close to retiring. I only had ten months at that time because I had been vested in state prior, and he ruined my opportunity. Because in my mind I had planned on just do my ten months leave, don't go into DROP, and then start another retirement. I had just turned 50. And so he ruined every bit of that for me.

So I feel like I need to be loyal to the University of Florida Police Department, who are gracious to me and very kind, to stay another five or six years. So my total life plan for myself is done because of him; but regardless of that, our entire career is -- I can't tell you the amount of probably mental health issues or challenging situations or the type of recommendations, whether it be AP referrals, professional or personal, where we have pulled people aside because we are told you don't do something or under this administration you are not to do something when it goes beyond the scope of what we have been accustomed to.

All of our training, all of the state's department of health legislative curriculum that's approved at the state level, which you have to be certified for now in the state of Florida to be a public safety dispatcher. I'm sure you're probably aware of that. You have to have a license, and you have to have a test, and you have to be re-certified every two years. You have to be certified. If you are not certified, you will be fined, your agency will be fined, you will lose your job, you can be civilly sued.

Every bit of that training is about public safety, about the first first responder, how to respond, how to react, what you're supposed to be doing, everything we've been accustomed to training and doing, we're basically told no, you're going to do it his way because he is offended, he is -- "disrespected" is the biggest word.

And so he --

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Were you PSAP?

A. Yes, sir, we were the PSAP for Alachua County.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. What is that?

A. The public safety answering point. And so what that means is, every single 911 call for service, everyone, cell phone, landline, office phone, you pick it up, you dial 911, it comes through there.

Now, they provide a service for all of Alachua County Fire Rescue, all of Gainesville Fire Rescue, GPD and High Springs. So if it's something for Santa Fe College, they would assume -- or assure that there was not an ambulance or fire needed, they would transfer it. The same thing with the University of Florida, and the same thing with the Alachua Police Department.

If it was a huge, mass casualty incident, like a shooting, we would process that call, and then we would call them in dispatch; because we would take ownership of it because we wouldn't want to risk the 15 seconds of the 20 seconds transferring it and lose the caller or potentially something happen. And so we would own that call and then take it and then patch those channels through to that Channel 1.

Q. I don't want to do it now because we're running out of time; but if given the opportunity, would you be able to compare what you are being instructed to do through the administration with the sheriff's office with the state standards that you are taught and that you teach other people and show that what they are doing is contrary, or at least what they were doing during this time period is contrary to the state standards?

A. Yeah.

Q. Because I don't want to go through everything. I'm guessing it's technical, but you're being told to violate those standards?

A. Yes. We were told under no circumstances are you allowed to do traffic stops. And then that is the -- did I put -- I put that in that email, right? Basically, they were told -- I sent that out to them, and I copied -- does it show?

INSPECTOR RIDDICK: It says "cc staff."

THE WITNESS: But does it say who I sent it up top to?

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. So I just want to make sure that I understand. Does this -- are you transferred to the jail out of your position into some position for which you are either unqualified or overqualified because of this incident?

A. It's a component of. So prior to -- well, after that -- I was told that day I sent that email, the very next day, Danielle told me -- well, I summarized that email where she said, "Well, what do you plan on doing?"

I said, "I'm not resigning. I'm waiting for my discipline."

She never worked on the discipline. I think she was hoping the sheriff would be like -- forget about it and not deal with it.

And so that's -- I was going to make her work for her money. I was going to make her write me up. And I had told her, "You forget that I've been doing accreditation for the agency since 2011; 2017 on my own, and I know the policies like the back of my hand. So I know Directive 122, which is discipline; and I know Directive 353, which is your matrix in your disciplinary."

I said, "So when you send me the discipline" -- I said, "I've terminated supervisors, and I've demoted them because they were" -- "they did some immoral and unethical things." I said, "I know how to demote. I know how to promote. I know how to remediate."

And I said, "So when you do that, you better hope that you dot every I and you cross every T, and I'm not going to sit here and take it."

I said, "I do not believe in suing anyone ever, ever." I've had multiple incidents as far as being able to -- or even like vehicle crashes. I've let people walk away, and I've paid $2,000 worth of damage because I felt bad for the guy that didn't have a driver's license, and he looked like he needed a job and didn't need to go to jail. And I said, "But I will sue his ass." That's what I told her.

She said, "Well, tomorrow we're going to meet with him; I'm not really sure what time."

I said, "Okay. Do you have any good words of wisdom?"

She said, "Yeah. You need to go in there, and you need to be contrite."

I said, "Contrite?" I said, "Isn't that like fall on your sword and ask for forgiveness and stuff like that?"

She's went (demonstrates).

I said, "Well, that is not me."

She's like, "Michelle."

And I said, "What do you want me to do? Do you want me just to kiss his ass? Did you want me to blow smoke up his butt? Like, what do you want?"

I said, "All right. I'll go in there, and I'll say something."

They said it was the closest thing I'd ever to get to apology. He started to say that perhaps things could have been done a little differently on all of our parts, and then -- it was a very -- actually, it was a very nice conversation. It was very odd.

He shook my hand; and when he did, he did this odd thing where he kept -- I've never seen him do it to anyone else before, but I've also never been in his office long; but he shook my hand hard. He sternly looked at me, and then he would pat my hand several times. And I thought, what in the hell is happening?

Danielle was happy as can be.

I gave the sheriff kudos. I said, "Sheriff, I'm sorry this occurred." Long story short -- boy, I can tell some stories.

Long story short, I said, "You know, communications is my life," which is why he moved me. He knew that that's how he could screw me.

I said, "I hope I can make you proud."

I've never had major conversations with him ever. He's never met with me about any other thing. He never promoted me, all of those things.

But I said to him, "But I'll give it to Danielle." I said, "Danielle is doing a good job." I said, "She's teaching me about the budget, which is something I didn't know."

So I was giving some pointers and just thanking Danielle, and Danielle said, "And you need to thank the sheriff too."

I said, "No, ma'am." I said, "That's not what I'm talking about. I'm talking about you and" -- and so I went on to say a few thank-you things, and I wasn't disrespectful to the sheriff.

He says, "You know what? Hopefully, one day I can be" -- "I can get as close to you, and we can" -- "you can learn more about me, and I can learn more about you and how you do business and" -- "because, you know, you've allowed Danielle that close to you and to learn about her."

I said, "Well, maybe one day," and that was it.

That evening, I have the date and time in my phone where she called me. And I remember distinctly I was sitting there on the back porch just like -- this has been like a roller coaster; because it started in April, and I think this was May. It actually was in May that we had this conversation.

She called me, and she's like, "Hey, I just want you to know the sheriff just left my suite, and you're not getting written up."

I said, "Oh, okay." I said, "So no write-up."

She's like, "No."

I said, "Okay. Well, what about that performance improvement plan?"

"No."

I said, "Okay. So what about the year's disciplinary probation?"

"No."

I said, "So nothing?"

She's like, "No, nothing."

I'm like, "Okay."

She said, "See you tomorrow."

I'm like, "Okay."

We've had a couple command staff meetings; we had very few. I would say we only had two prior to me being moved, and during those two the sheriff never showed up to any of them. We never had a command staff meeting.

During the last one, I want to say it was mid-October -- the fiscal year had closed 9/30. The county's fiscal year in October 1 through September 30th. The staff were exhausted. We're now down about 21 positions.

We had the round table, and it came to me. And Judd is sitting at the end, because I could see her kind of like this. She's sitting at the end. And the undersheriff is there. Chad Scott is there. And then the sheriff's assistant is further over, and Jake Rush is there.

They're like, "All right. Michelle, what do you have to report?"

I said, "I have to report that the staff are exhausted. They're tired. We're 21 positions down."

I continued to battle with the human resources director. She would not allow me access to the application system. She kicked me out of the hiring process as far as that's concerned because I challenged her because they continued to hire cadets. They would push out seven and eight cadets for the sheriff's office side because they were seen. Communications isn't seen, meanwhile we're 21 down.

And I said, "If we continue to do the same hiring practices of what we're doing, we're not going to get anywhere." I said, "The staff worked last fiscal year 29,700 hours of overtime." I was good about bringing statistics.

And Danielle looked proud. She winked at me.

I said, "The staff are exhausted, they're tired. Are we going to do any more hiring?"

I provided a presentation. This is the -- this is after that. That's what I know is part of what moved me.

But basically, I asked for changing in how they hire, or at least for communications and doing polygraphy up front. Can we contract out for polygraphers? Can we look at different things? That's because what we were doing wasn't working.

And the undersheriff's only response to that particular statement of 29,000 -- meanwhile, people gasped. The room like -- they were like (makes descriptive sound). They were shocked. And that's not including the people that would flex.

So me, I was just salary, so I would give them -- I would probably give them close to 80 hours a month, just giving it to them, because I wanted people to be able to have time off. They were burned out. So that was not counting those people that worked overtime and then took some leave and flexed against that overtime. That was just the 02 code for the sheriff's office, which is overtime.

So the undersheriff said, "Well, you know, when I started my career in 1990, communications was always shorthanded." And that was his only statement. And Becky looked at me like don't say anything more. So that was part of it.

Another part of it was that I pissed him off. I was never told why I was transferred. Danielle -- I was super sick. I ended up getting what the doctor finally believed was RSV. I tried to return to work. I returned to work like half a day, went back to the doctor.

He said, "Yeah, I think you have RSV. You need to just stay home."

It was the latter part of -- after Thanksgiving all the way up through like December 3rd, maybe, or something like that.

And so when I finally met with Danielle the first day, I walked over there to do something. She's like, "Hey, I need to see you. Can you come back in a few minutes?"

I said, "Sure."

So she says, "Can you come over in like 20 minutes?"

I said, "Sure."

So I do a few things. I come over there. So she says, "So Monday, January 3rd" -- so she told me Tuesday, January 7th, but it ended up being Monday, January 3rd, or whatever. She told me the 7th; because it was a Saturday, actually, and it was a day after my birthday. It was a Saturday.

She said, "The 7th you're reporting to the jail," and she looked at me.

And I wasn't crying yet. I said, "I figured this would happen."

She said, "Well, you know" -- it was Thanksgiving, prior to Thanksgiving, she met me in the hall after a meeting. She stepped in the copy room, and she's like -- I said, "Well, have a good Thanksgiving."

She's like, "I'm getting ready to leave now. I'm going out of town, but when I get back I need to work with you on how you could best communicate with the sheriff." She said, "He thinks you don't like him."

I said, "Danielle, it's not a matter of whether I like him or not." I said, "He's my sheriff. I respect him." And I said, "I respect the position he holds," I said, "but he has not been true to us. He has said things he would never do that he's done." I said, "He has promised to do things that he has failed to do." I said, "Our staffing is critical. Our staff are exhausted. We're working short-handed."

Right now they're patching channels. They're working below minimum staffing. They don't even have two dispatchers for ASO. They're patching teletype channels, which is against rules, constantly. For three law enforcement agencies, they're running with one channel; that's what they did yesterday.

Someone on the GPD side sent me a text, "Look at this schedule," because they know how I feel about communications. It's always -- I would work 18 and 19 to the detriment of my health and my family and my marriage to make sure that that place was running.

But Danielle said, "I'm going to work with you on how you can best communicate with him."

And I said, "I just need him to change some" -- I said, "Danielle, I don't want him to" -- "I don't care if he likes me." I said, "But, Danielle, he doesn't even respect you."

The HR director kicked Danielle Judd out of of the hiring application system because we were questioning their hiring practices. We had applications sitting there for 50 days untouched because they were dealing with putting those people in the police academy because that's what looked good on paper, where communications continued to falter because, as the undersheriff said, back in 1990 it's always been shorthanded.

So it wasn't a surprise that I was going to be moved. I said, "Can you tell me why, and what am I going to be doing?"

She says, "I have no idea what you're going to be doing." She says, "I really don't. She goes, "I think you're going to be going to work for Dorian Keith," who at the time was the acting director of the jail, and she said, "Because I think she needs some help. She's way in over her head, and she just has a lot of tasks that she's responsible for and she's behind in. You're really good at that stuff."

And I'm like, "Okay. I'm going to be her assistant? She has an assistant."

She goes, "Michelle, I have no idea, but I know January 7th that's where you're going."

I said, "Okay." And I said, "And why?

And she goes, "Well, you know that stuff that happened at the" -- I haven't discussed it, but she said, "The stuff that happened at the county commission meeting where you said something about a puppet."

I said, "Yes, I didn't say what Kaylie Biel said I said."

If you want to know, I'll tell you that. But I pissed him off.

And she said, "And he just thinks you don't like him. And, of course, that snafu about the DTF."

I said, "So that's why I'm being moved."

She goes, "But I just want you to know he's not" -- she touched my hand that day -- "he's not going to reduce your pay."

I started laughing and said, "Because he can't."

And I later found out through some close contacts through different areas within the sheriff's office -- and I'd rather not say who they are because they're afraid of retaliation, which is clear he retaliates -- that he tried to reduce my pay. He tried to get me out there and reduce my pay, but I had no performance-based issues, I had no disciplinary issues.

In fact, he -- based on that, that particular incident with the DTF when she told me she was going to write me up, after I got my bitch session out for a few seconds and cried, and she handed me a bunch of tissues, I said, "Do you realize" -- "I can't wait to see what you write me up for."

She goes, "What does that mean?"

I said, "You just released from probation, from promotional probation on" -- whatever day it was I signed my evaluation. I said, "And the sheriff approved it. I have exceeds expectations in every category but one."

And one was meets standards and cooperation and attitude and cooperation. I don't think I have the evaluation, but I have it in my email.

But, yeah, I said, "You just signed off in March, and this incident was in April. I said, "Less than 30 days ago you just signed off on my evaluation, and he approved it."

I have no doubt in my mind, had I still been on probation, I would have been fired. I would have been fired for it.

So then I get out to the jail then, and, you know, I meet with Dorian Keith. And I had some leave expected that week, and so I was there one day. She met with me the first day. We talked about our goals, her expectations of me.

I was told I was supposed to get this really big -- not big, but a nice office that overlooked the parking lot area. She directed me to a little storage closet area that housed some storage stuff, and it had a window. And the window overlooked the jail where the inmates were, and I could see the concertina wire and all of that; and that was my view. I could see the sky, though. It was very pretty.

Q. When you got there, was it a job that you were trained to do?

A. No, I received no training.

Q. Was it a job that you were qualified to do?

A. Technically, under it? No, but I think I did a good job and cleaned up all their stuff.

Q. One of the jobs they assigned you had nothing to do with communications?

A. No, it was a contract manager. It housed all the contracts for the jail. So it was medical. At some point in time -- I never ended up doing it because I resigned, but I was supposed to go through and actually even inventory some of the narcotics at the jail in the nurses' area, go in there and actually do a checks and balance.

So I was supposed to go and look to see were the doors checked. I was supposed to do door checks too, and then narcotics checks. It was the oddest thing to me because I have been in communications for almost 27 years.

Q. And this is essentially a job that's a finance job?

A. Part of it, yes.

Q. It would be for someone who regularly deals with the finance side of the sheriff's office?

A. Yes, for the contracts.

Q. Which you had zero experience doing?

A. No.

Q. Is this a job where you could have, had you been untrained and done it poorly, caused problems for the functioning and operation of the sheriff's office?

A. Oh, absolutely. So, you know, just an example is, I'm very stats driven. I don't like -- if someone says, "Hey, this is the report. Can you sign off on it? This is what they're going to charge us," I'm like, "No, I don't know what this means."

So for the meals contract, you had to compare it. So my job was looking at -- I started January 3rd, and so I went and looked at December's. And so, I guess, previously there was a November's too, and maybe an October.

So I looked at November and December; and I broke all that down, and I put it into an Excel spreadsheet. Well, I ended up -- what they essentially just wanted me to approve on, basically, is the meal counts. So a meal count for breakfast, lunch, and dinner for the different inmates. And then you tally those up; and if it's over a certain number, you get a better deal. You kind of get a lower price per meal.

So I ended up that they had overcharged us by like just a couple of hundred dollars, but Dorian was -- Major Keith was actually complimentary. But what I had found out is that Major Keith -- excuse me, Karen Keith, who I guess was married to Dorian Keith's current husband, who they terminated, who I took her position, apparently would just -- she was kind of doing her own -- yeah, it took -- I don't know about it. It's just what I've heard.

But anyhow, I was told I was taking her position. Apparently, she was also going to school like on the books and wasn't doing her job, and she was literally just signing off on stuff. So a lot of the paperwork that I found was her approving tons of meals in different contracts that probably weren't up to date and up to speed and --

Q. And so if you put someone in this position who isn't trained properly, doesn't have the proper experience, it would end up causing financial problems?

A. Yes. And the important part about the jail is that it's a contract through the Alachua County. Although it's run by the jail, you have to remember it's a county commission thing. It's a function.

So what the sheriff can do in his budget, when you go to the jail side of it, it really needs to have appropriate checks and balances; and I guess that was my job.

I mean, I will give it to you, Major Keith -- so when I got there, the office was disgusting. It was messy. I'm allergic to everything environmental. I don't mind cleaning; it's not below me. So I got wipes, and I started cleaning everything, dust and everything, getting rid of stuff. I vacuumed the office. I went in there and met with the major.

She had nothing available for me. And she's like, "Well, I think there's a book in Karyn's old office."

So we went in, and it was a large office, maybe half of this, and there was just stuff everywhere. So she would give me a book, and it was -- it had old contracts even from like 2004, 2007. Some of them were renewed every five years.

I said, "Can I redo this book? It looks terrible."

She said, "Absolutely. You make one of your own."

Beyond that, I never received any training whatsoever, just -- she and I talked about what her expectations are, what my work schedule would be. We never talked about sick leave.

So back to, you know, I had been sick. And so I called out one day that week -- I'm sorry, one day the next week. I called out on a Tuesday; but that first week I was with her I saw her one day, and then I only saw her another day that week. I only saw her two out of the -- that week.

The next week, on that Monday, I never saw her. She never came down. In fact, I know it was a shock because the key guy, he came around -- I don't know -- I don't even know his name.

And they're like, "Michelle Klement's office needs to be rekeyed, or she needs to have a key to her office."

I could hear his keys. I could hear him walking, and the major was following him. And he realized because he stopped talking and said, "My goodness. Why is she back here?" That's when he made the statement, and he looked at me.

I said, "It's just perfectly fine." I said, "I can work anywhere."

He gave me the key, and I put it on. Of course, I only had a key for like a month and a half, or whatever.

But beyond that, the Tuesday I was sick. I woke up, and I was feverish again. I wasn't feeling good. I'm like, oh, goodness. I'm not -- even though I had my own office, I was big -- when I ran the communication center in the division, I would tell people, especially since COVID was so back and forth, "Do not come to work sick. If you come to work sick, I'm writing you up because you're exposing people. Do not come to work."

So I contemplated. I sent her an email. I said, "Major Keith, please know I'm not feeling well. I will be at my home all day long," because I figured she'd want to come check on me, so I never left the house. And I copied her assistant. I copied the assistant, and she never called to check on me.

I checked my email throughout the day. I answered a couple emails. I had a work phone, so I respond to an email or two; and that was it.

Well, the next morning -- I always sound really nasally because I'm allergic to everything, but I go to work. I'm no longer feverish. I feel decent, just a little sniffly, and go in. And finally I see her at the copy machine, and she's a little snarky. And she's like, "How are you feeling today?"

"I'm feeling decent."

And then I go back to my office. And so she comes back in there shortly after. She leans against the wall. She said, "So how are you feeling?"

I said, "Like I said, I'm feeling okay." I said, "I'm sorry I called out yesterday."

She goes, "Yeah, about that." She said, "In the future, I need you to call me."

I said, "Okay. Yeah. I'm sorry. We really didn't discuss that." I said, "I take ownership of it. I should have thought about it."

It's very rare that I'm sick. I always have achiness from arthritis and stuff like that, but -- she goes, "All right." And she said, "Because, you know, you should have my number."

So I didn't have any -- even in the phone that I had, it didn't have her phone numbers at all. It had her email address, but it didn't have her phone numbers.

So I go, "Okay."

So she said, "All right. When I go back to my office, I'm going to send you your CC," which means corrective counseling. She goes, "So when you get it, I just want you to sign it and send it back to me."

And I said, "You're giving me a corrective counseling?"

She says, "Yep." She turned around walked away.

I'm like, okay. And then it got super heated that day about that, if you want to know.

Q. I do want to know this. Because I don't understand employee discipline that well, which is, corrective counseling is discipline, so there must be a rule that you violated in order to need discipline. Is there a rule at the sheriff's office that says when you're sick you have to call your supervisor?

A. It says you will -- hold on. I have it. So she sent me -- and, you know, frankly, I was fine. I'm like, fine. If you're going to be a you-know-what and write my ass up, okay; but the fact that she wanted to quote policy at me, I'm like, (makes descriptive sound), and I know policy.

So she sends me the email. "Good morning. Per our discussion this morning, please sign the attached corrective counseling and return to me electronically. If you have any questions that weren't answered during our face-to-face, please don't hesitate to ask. Thank you."

So her corrective counseling is regarding -- it's January 11 of 2022. It says "Improper notification for requesting unplanned sick leave. A counseling session was conducted with the above employee regarding the following incident."

And I can print this for you, if you like.

"On January 10, 2023, I arrived at work" -- oh, that' me. It's the same scan.

"Per" --

Q. You don't have to read the whole thing. You can just tell me, does she --

A. Oh, sorry, this is her. She said she arrived to work and proceeded to my office to conduct a supervisor round and say good morning. That never occurred.

She acts as if she says good morning every day and goes around and speaks to her folks. That never occurred.

"I was informed by my administrative specialist, Gail Fabiano, that you emailed me and cc'd her earlier saying that you were not coming in because you didn't feel well. In the future, please refer to ACSO Directive 329, Leave Policy," and it's the whole numbers, "requesting unplanned sick leave when you were calling in. Section B clearly states all employees will contact their immediate supervisor as soon as possible after beginning of the shift, health concerns permitting, and confirm an adequate explanation of their illness and the projected amount of absence from duty. Any future occurrences of this nature will result in progressive discipline."

So it says they will contact after.

So I didn't just sign it. I provided additional comments as I'm allowed to during my response. And so she -- I don't know if you want me to read it, but she wasn't happy with my response.

Q. Your response is, I did contact per policy.

A. Yeah. And so we clearly -- I quoted that she could have used -- based on the directive, she could have used that opportunity to consider it as a misunderstanding, because there is a misunderstanding directive that says -- basically, in all of it, I just put "I have attended and engaged in a multitude of employee development specialists throughout the course of my 27-year career. It is a little concerning to me that this situation had to be handled in the form of a corrective counseling versus simply a, quote, misunderstanding, end quote, as articulated in ASO Directive 122, Disciplinary Procedures."

I said, "Subsection B clearly states, quote, misunderstandings in reference to directives, policies, procedures, or tactics will not be handled in the same manner as formal complaints. It further goes to indicate that the employee's supervisor will attempt to resolve the misunderstanding. That's what the directive states."

I said, "It should be noted that I do not agree with this corrective counseling; however, I acknowledge receipt of it and sign it in accordance with the directive. I can assure that there will be no further occurrences of this same incident."

Well, when I sent that to her, I think her head must have been spinning. It's lengthy. It talks about what we talked about.

But her response to me was that she'll come to see me, and we will discuss this in person because she doesn't supervise mainly by emails; and that she doesn't agree with everything I put in my response to her.

So she waited till the very end of the day. It was about 12 minutes before it was time for me to go home, and she says, "About that." She said, "I don't agree with what you put in there."

And I said, "Well, Major Keith, respectfully, can I have a witness?" I said, "Because" -- she goes, "Who's going to be a witness?"

I said, "Can we please have a witness to this conversation? Because I don't agree with some of what you're saying." I said, "I was fine with you writing me up, but now you're saying you don't agree with some of what I put in there and you don't mainly discipline via" -- and I said, "So I would just rather someone" -- I said, "Clearly, you and I are disagreeing about the contents of my response now, and so can we have a witness?"

And she said, "No, you just don't like the fact that I counseled you."

I said, "That is not the case. Can we please stop talking about this and just" -- she goes, "Who do you expect me to bring in here?"

And I said, "I don't care. Whoever you want." I said, "It doesn't need to be one that I approve. Just have someone come in here and sit."

She goes, "Well, I am the director, the acting director of the jail."

I said, "Well, can't you like pull one of your captains?"

She goes, "Absolutely not. I will not have someone come in here and be a witness every time you and I have a conversation."

I said, "I'm not asking for every time. I'm asking for this particular time."

She says absolutely not. She said I just have a problem with her being my supervisor.

I said, "No, ma'am."

And as I was trying to talk to her, she turns around, she does something with her head, and she sashays out. She's pissed. She walks out of the office.

So I'm in an office which is in an office. So I'm in a suite, whole suite, by myself and then in a -- what they used as a storage facility. In fact, the one next to me was full of old furniture and old books and cabinets and stuff like that.

So it's now about four minutes before I go home. Before I go home, I lock my computer. I'm going to go to the bathroom before I come back and get all my stuff.

So she meets me in the hall. She's coming back for round two or three. She come out, and she goes, "Can you step in my office?"

I said, "Yes, ma'am, if you could just give me a minute to use the restroom."

She goes, "I will not be spoken to in this manner." And she said, "You just have a problem that I wrote you up."

I said, "I just" -- I find it unbelievable.

I said, "Major Keith, did you and I talk about the expectations? What were your expectations?" I said, "You should own ownership of some of that too when it comes to what I should and shouldn't do at sick leave."

I said, "It says I will contact. It doesn't say how I will contact. It says I will contact." I said, "I chose the method of emailing you because I did not have your phone number," I said, "but from this point forward, I'll be happy to."

And I said, "But I'm asking you can we stop this conversation and have a witness."

And she says, "Well, who do you want?"

I said, "Just" -- and she goes, "I am a direct report to the sheriff."

I said, "Well, how about OPS?" They're on the same floor we were. It was -- I was supposed to work until I think 4:30. I can't remember. 4:00 or 4:30.

I said, "Can't we just stop, and you just grab OPS? They're a direct report to the sheriff."

She said, "Absolutely not." She said, "I am leaving here, and I am going to the undersheriff right now because I will not have someone that I work with that is basically this challenging."

I said, "I'm sorry if you feel that way." I said, "You know what's unfortunate? During our last staff meeting when it was time for your round table, you said we were all like family; that we will have challenges." I said, "And you said we will have challenges; and that you want to educate, essentially, your personnel, and you want to treat them respectfully, and you basically considered everyone family." I said, "What part of what happened with us today was family?"

And she was so pissed. "That is it. I am done." She said, "Get out my office."

She yelled at me, and I told her, "Have a good night." And I went back to my office, retrieved my things and left for the day.

And I was told that she did go to the sheriff's office because she was seen speaking out front to director -- director, excuse me, human resources director Reshawn Flanders, who does not like me. And she was seen speaking to her out in the parking lot for quite some time. And then she went in to speak to the undersheriff.

The very next day I went back to work, and she never said a thing to me about it; nothing. I never heard from the undersheriff. I never heard from her again about it. We never discussed it. I continued to do my work.

There were several days she just never even spoke to me. Even if I saw her in the hall or in the bathroom, she never spoke to me. I said hello or something, sometimes she wouldn't even acknowledge me. She'd just keep walking.

MR. KRAMER: Okay. Thank you so much.

WHEREUPON,

PATTY JUSTICE

acknowledged having been duly sworn to tell the truth and testified upon his or her oath as follows:

THE WITNESS: Yes.

MR. KRAMER: Let me set the record. So it is May 16th 2023. We are in the state attorney's office multi-purpose room, 120 West University Avenue.

This is Brian Kramer, State Attorney. Dave Snowden, special --

INSPECTOR SNOWDEN: Inspector.

MR. KRAMER: -- inspector with the Florida Department of Law Enforcement. The time right now is 1:31 in the afternoon, and the witness right now is Patty Justice.

Correct?

THE WITNESS: Yes, sir.

MR. KRAMER: All right. And -- did I swear you in?

THE WITNESS: You did. You swore me in.

MR. KRAMER: Okay. Good.

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. So state your name.

A. Patricia Justice.
Q. How are you employed?
A. How what?
Q. How are you employed?
A. I am employed at the Alachua County Sheriff's Office as the Chief Financial Officer.
Q. How long have you been the Chief Financial Officer?
A. On November 2nd, it will be 25 years. I have had different titles before, but it's always the same duties.
Q. Okay. Well, help me out with that. What have they called you before they called you --
A. So when I was first hired, I was fiscal bureau chief. And then eventually, under the prior administration, there was some changing of the pay scales and upgrading and just implementing the step plans -- I don't know if you are familiar with that -- and my title was changed to Chief Financial Officer.
Q. Okay.
A. But my duties are the same.
Q. And so explain to me, what are your duties?
A. Well, I make sure that we follow government all-county standards for our financial statements. Our financial statements are audited every year by the auditor general, the state auditor general, so those need to be in compliance with generally accepted accounting principles, GAAP; and government accounting standards know as GASB, G-A-S-B.

I also have -- so I do the financial statements for the agency throughout the fiscal year. I have payroll under me. I have accounts payable under me. I have purchasing under me. I have grants under me. I have the trust funds, the biggest one being the inmate trust fund, the inmate monies at the jail.

Budget. I prepare the budget, and we present it to the county commission. We just presented it on May 4th. So I do most of the work preparing that for certification and submission to the board, so -- plus a lot of other things.

Q. Right. What is your educational background?

A. So I am a certified public accountant. I am a graduate from the University of Florida Fisher School of Accounting.

Q. Okay. And have you held other occupations before you held this job?

A. Yes. So prior to this job, fresh out of UF, I was the -- I was an external auditor with -- then it was called Davis Monk & Company. It's been bought out since.

And so I went fresh from graduating UF as an accountant to the field of government auditing at Davis Monk & Company, and I audited sheriffs for about six years, and county commissions and tax collectors; and this was actually my client, and I applied for the position when it was open.

Q. Okay. So in the course of the 20-plus years that you've worked for the Alachua County Sheriff's Office, prior to the administration of Sheriff Watson, were things sort of done in a particular way, a standard way? And have those changed frequently over the course of the various sheriffs you have worked for before Sheriff Watson?

A. Well, yeah. I mean, there's always things that are standard; but every sheriff has, I guess, their differences in running their offices, but Sheriff Watson has a lot more differences than the prior administrations.

Q. Okay. Are there any differences that have occurred with Sheriff Watson that have caused you to have to violate the general rules of accounting, the GAC that you mentioned?

A. No, sir, I would never violate the rules. And if there ever was a violation, I know to come to this office as a CPA.

Q. All right. And what about the other -- the GAS --

A. It's GASB and GAAP. No, there are no violations of GASB and GAAP.

Q. Okay. So I'm just trying -- you have to understand I don't understand any of this.

A. That's okay.

Q. So there are things that sheriffs can do within certain variations that won't violate these accounting principles, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And there are things that they could ask you to do or they conduct themselves in ways that would violate those principles?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. So when there are variations between the sheriffs, as you have discussed, where do those variations occur normally?

A. I think the biggest variation is maybe lack of documentation that we are used to having. So, for example, with the training and travel, you know, I was told by the undersheriff's executive assistant that the sheriff exempted himself from completing training and travel forms after he had completed a couple at the beginning of his administration, and that was very awkward.

So I sent an email to my staff and let them know what I was told, and I documented it. I kept it, the documentation, because it is unusual. I've never had a sheriff -- and I have worked -- technically, it is my fourth sheriff, because there was an interim between Oelrich and Darnell; I don't know if you are aware of that.

So there are some differences in that respect.

Q. So explain to me what has happened in the past, and like when would they be expected to document training and travel? And then, how does that work for you if you have no documentation to support an expense?

A. We have the documentation to support the expense. What we don't have is the training and travel form; which, per agency policy, everyone has to complete a training and travel form when they go to travel with or without training involved. And I can show you what they look like.

Q. Sure.

A. So this is the policy that says that everyone -- this directly applies to all sheriff's office personnel. Okay. That's the policy that says you complete a training and travel form, and this is what it looks like.

This was back when he started. He did complete -- so this is an estimate of what you think you are going to spend. This is when you come back and you've completed, and is your actuals. At the beginning of the administration, he was completing these. And I have a couple of examples where he completed them, and they do have the supporting documentation.

Another thing that is different about this sheriff than prior sheriffs was, he quit asking for per diem -- or meal allowance. Let me not say "per diem" because per diem is a different thing. Meal allowances. We give, you know, money for breakfast, lunch, and dinner; and he quit asking for that, which is different than something I've seen the two -- the Darnell and the Oelrich administration.

So he completed one side at the beginning, and then I had to send this email out to my staff.

Yeah, you can have it. I didn't make copies of anything.

Q. So, for instance, I have a credit card; I have two of them. I have one that's issued by the county. I have one that's issued by the state. And I have to provide receipts for those, and they're only to be used for certain things. There are rules that apply to what those can be used for.

Is there a similar situation for the sheriff's office for employees who are issued credit cards?

A. Employees that are issued credit cards definitely have to provide receipts for anything that charges against the credit card. Now, our credit card policy is mainly for travel. So either you book the hotel room on it or you at least put your -- you hold the hotel room on it. And sometimes we do cut a check for the hotel in the end, and then sometimes we don't. Some hotels don't accept checks anymore.

The registration for the class is on there, but it all gets recorded on the training and travel form, and summarized. And what you're saying is that -- you are affirming that they're reasonable and necessary expenses. So this is what we're not getting back from him, anything signed on the right-hand side.

Q. So if he were to use the credit card, you would still get a receipt from him for -- "I used the credit card for X purpose"?

A. Yes. So I have -- actually, I brought them.

I think I brought them.

Q. Does someone audit those expenses --

A. Yes.

Q. -- and determine that they were for an agency purpose?

A. Right. Yes. So my staff does that. And I can tell you that for the last over 20 years we've had clean audits, clean financial statements, clean audit opinions with no findings. We -- they don't like us in there very much because we will hassle them, "Hey, we need back-up. We need back-up. We need supporting documentation."

Q. And have you had an audit since this current sheriff has been in office?

A. Oh, yeah, and they've been clean audits.

Q. Okay.

A. Yeah. Now, the auditors do sampling. You know, they don't look at every single expense because we have thousands, but the auditors are looking to make sure the financial statements are, you know, reasonable and in compliance with the standards that I was telling you about.

We've never had an audit finding in the agency. I used to be an auditor, so I know what they are looking for, why they're looking for it; and I take pride in the fact that, you know, we don't have audit findings. So we do hound people to give us the supporting documentation if we don't get it right away.

And I do have credit card statements if you wanted to look at them.

Q. Sure.

A. Okay. That was the travel that I gave you, and you can keep that, I guess. And this was the examples of, you know, the sheriff traveling to mainly his conferences, because in the State of Florida, sheriff's get a $2,000.00 supplement on top of their regular wages that are set by the legislature if they complete a certain number of hours of training. And then he does, he goes and gets his training, and we get the FDLE letters letting us know that he has completed his training for his salary supplement.

But what you will see as you go through this is towards -- you know, in the beginning he is completing a training and travel form, but then he stops. And then all we have is the backup for when we're cutting a check for the hotel or we're cutting a check for the registration.

You can have this. I don't --

Q. Sure. So why is a training and travel form necessary?

A. Well, if you look at the training and travel form, one of the things that I do is -- one of the things we do is see if it complies for -- are you familiar with second dollar forfeiture funds?

Okay. So every ticket that's written, for every speeding ticket, there is two dollars that the clerk collects and sends to the sheriff for training and travel. And so I have to look to make sure that on the left side that it is in compliance, if it can or cannot be -- those monies can or cannot be used.

There's not a lot of money in there, not a lot of traffic tickets being written. There used to be a lot of money in there years ago --

Q. Right.

A. -- not that much any more. So we're really particular to only charge against that fund a lot of the training that the sworn officers attend. We've tried to quit charging the civilians and some of the detention officers too because there's just not a lot of cash in that fund.

So that's what I'm looking for, to see if it qualifies or not for that second dollar -- if it's allowable under the second dollar rules.

And then it also says on the right-hand side -- I think you might have them. This might be when he stopped -- you know, that the travel is reasonable and necessary. It's the taxpayer's money that you're spending. You know, if it's not the second dollar fund, it's the general fund. It's the taxpayer's money that you're spending, so you always want to see that it's proper, you know, that the expenditure is proper for the taxpayers.

Q. Okay.

A. But if you'd let me borrow that just for a minute, I think this was one of the examples. These are training and travel form.

"I hereby certify or affirm that the above expenses were actually incurred by me as necessary traveling expenses in the performance of my official duties," and then it goes on and on. I mean, you can read it right here. So --

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. That is submitted but not signed?

A. So at the beginning, he was submitting them with the left-hand-side completed. I don't see the right-hand side completed on that one or this one. And then it stops when I got that -- when I get the notification from the undersherrif's executive assistant.

So he's just not completing them. He's made himself exempt from completing them, which is unusual from what I'm used to and what my staff is used to.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. But there's nothing that you can do about it, correct? You would prefer --

A. Well, you know, I -- I am scared to go directly to him and say, "Hey, we need this. We need to have this," because it's unusual that you don't provide it; but I don't report directly to him. I report through a chief of staff who -- my chief of staff that I've had since he took -- shortly after he took office left the agency, and now I have a new chief of staff. So yeah.

Q. Gotcha.

A. And then it says -- the employee's supervisor also signs that it's in compliance with Chapter 112, and that the travel was on official business, basically.

And then this goes with that, if you want to put it all together.

Q. Do you have anything to do with public record responses in the office?

A. No, that's the records bureau chief, Chris Whatley.

Q. But much of what you deal with is, in fact, a public record?

A. Everything is public record, yeah, except, I would assume, our health records or any -- if we have any of that.

Q. Absolutely. There are well over a thousand exemptions to the public's records laws.

A. And my office and myself fulfill a lot of public record requests.

Q. Right. And these documents, these travel --

A. Training and travel form.

Q. -- training and travel forms, they're public records, correct?

A. Oh, of course.

Q. Okay. And so other than being told orally that the sheriff has said he's exempting himself from creating these, what I will refer to as, public records, is there anything in your agency that would allow him to not create this record?

A. Nothing that I am aware of.

Q. Okay. Are you aware of any other forms, any other required documentation, in the agency that's not being prepared that should be prepared under the rules of the agency?

A. Well, he changed the rule on salaried employees completing time sheets, and that was something different than anything I have ever been used to.

Now, I have done a little research myself, and I think salaried -- I'm pretty sure -- I'm not an attorney, but I don't think salaried employees have to complete a time sheet.

From my perspective and my audit head, you know, and all of my years of experience, it's the proper thing to do because, again, you're funded by the taxpayer. It's not the sheriff's office money. It's not the sheriff's money. It's the people's money.

Q. I understand. And let me ask it this way. So that's a very similar situation to my office. We have both exempt and non-exempt employees in my office, and I'm sure you are familiar with the concept of exempt and non-exempt employees.

A. Absolutely.

Q. But we grant our exempt employees leave.

A. Yes. We do too.

Q. Okay. So the time -- the purpose of the time sheet in my office for exempt employees is to document the usage, the proper usage, of leave, right? So how -- if there's no time sheet associated with an exempt employee with your office, how do you properly document the use of leave?

A. So you have to understand the ExecuTime time entry system. So that time entry system for the salaried employees -- I'm a salaried employee. So I used to go in and put in -- I mean, I could work ten, twelve hours one day, eight the next. And then if I wanted a leave day, I would use that system as an electronic system where you create a leave request. And then it gets approved or denied by your supervisor. And then it gets populated into that time sheet. And then it comes over to the payroll system. That part is still happening. Okay.

What's not happening is, I don't have a time sheet that says Monday I worked twelve hours, Tuesday I worked five, Wednesday I worked thirteen. I just have, in ExecuTime, a time sheet that I don't sign off on, because it means absolutely nothing, where it shows Monday through Friday, eight hours.

Because it had to have -- we had to call the software company when we were told that salaried employees weren't going to be completing time sheets anymore. Now, let me back up.

The sheriff, elected official, has never completed a time sheet in any administration that I have been under, and I think that's normal practice throughout sheriff's offices.

But back in April 9th, when I was told that we weren't going to be doing time sheets anymore for salaried employees, I sent an email, in my professional opinion, letting him know what the problems could be, you know, because a lot of the time we get public records request for employee's hours worked. Well, if you make a public record request for my time sheet, it means nothing. You are going to see where I do put in for leave, but you're not going to see where -- my hours I've worked, my correct hours I've worked.

Q. Well, correct. You've anticipated my question, which is, if the employee signs off on it, does it show that they worked on a particular day? Or it just simply shows no information?

A. No. It's going to show eight hours a day.

Q. So it's just false?

A. I don't sign off on my ExecuTime time sheet because it's false. It's not correct. It's not the hours that I worked. And I don't know if the other -- I don't know if the other salaried employees are finishing off as the employee on their time sheet or not; I don't because the record is not correct.

I have brought to their attention, you know, some of the things that could potentially happen, some of the errors that could occur if we didn't use the ExecuTime time entry system for salaried employees in the fashion we have always used it, and I basically was called into a meeting by my then chief of staff that told me that I was being condescending and to take my audit cap off my head.

Q. Okay.

A. You can have that.

I did not take my audit cap off my head because I am a licensed professional.

Q. Sure.

A. I'm not going to jeopardize my license for anyone. I've worked very hard for it. I wasn't even born in this country. I came from a communist country where my parents brought us here and taught us English and taught us to work our butts off. And I worked hard for that, and I'm not jeopardizing that for anyone.

So my audit cap is always on, but I thought that was pretty bad that they would do that.

Q. Sure.

A. And that's when I got the -- and my note there on the front will tell you that's when I figured out that they don't want a lot of emails and documentation from us, which that is something different form prior administrations as well.

Q. Okay. But as far as the functions of your office, what are the other differences that you have observed?

A. In my office -- I mean, accounting is accounting. Debits and credits are debits and credits, right? That's not really changed.

We do process payroll in my office, and that has been very, very -- a lot more time consuming, a lot more difficult. We've had a lot of reorganizations in the agency. It seems like they never stop. There's complete inconsistency all the time. There's no sense of stability because there's constant movement of personnel; and we have to process those, so there is a lot more transactions that are occurring that just don't seem to make a lot of sense.

I mean, after two years in office, you would think the elected official would -- you know, is comfortable now, but the re-orgs continuously happen. So we have to process those, and it's created a lot of extra work for us. And there's only eight of us in that office handling over a $100,000,000 budget.

I mean, my duties -- he's never walked in there and said -- asked me to do anything that I am aware of that is illegal or malfeasance. I wouldn't allow it. I would just walk out the door right then or come -- I was taught -- as an auditor, I was taught that if anything like that ever happens, you typically go to the county manager and go straight to the state attorney's office; that's what I was taught as an auditor.

Q. And has that been made clear? I mean, is that a conversation that needs to occur or has occurred or --

A. I've never had that conversation with any elected official. I think they all know it.

Q. Okay. All right. So procedurally, what else has changed within the -- other than the travel and the time keeping?

A. Not putting things in email is a -- procedurally has changed, I guess; but that's more of a general thing, not an accounting thing. And that was hard to get used to because we always put things in email.

I'm trying to think. This is when they made me reverse the pay raises, which I have never seen such a thing.

Q. I don't understand what that means, and that would be what I'm getting at. That's different. You are doing something you have never done before. How does one reverse a pay raise?

A. For the first time -- so we have a union. We have the PBA as a bargaining unit that represents our sworn officers, our deputies, our sergeants, and our lieutenants. That contract clearly states the pay scale. And so, once that contract is signed, it says, hey, you know, come the beginning of the next fiscal year this is our pay.

So I've always processed it. In the prior administration, I've always processed it. In this administration, I wasn't allowed to process it until they told me to process it. Typically, I would process it around November. Sometimes the chief deputy at the time would say, "Patty, have you done it yet? Have you done it yet? We really got to do this." You know, November, maybe, at the latest, December. I'll would have to go back and look.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. Does that take effect January 1?

A. October 1. We're a October 1 through September 30th fiscal year.

So I kept waiting, and they wouldn't let me process the pay raises, basically; which normally I'm used to just -- I do it. I'm the one who physically does it, by the way. And they -- I had to wait for instruction to do it, and it didn't come until February that year. We have October, November, December, January, February. It didn't come until February, and my chief of staff told me to do it.

And then I come in the next morning, I think it was -- I can't -- maybe it was a weekend, and I was told by the sheriff's executive assistant that he didn't approve them, and that we had to reverse them. So that's different. That's something we've never done before, so we were scrambling.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Is that -- I mean, just so I understand, these are pay raises that would have -- if you did them in February, they would take effect in October?

A. And we did. We retroed them to October, but the deputies had to wait.

Q. Oh, I gotcha. Okay. So that's what was not making sense to me. These were retroactive raises?

A. Yes, they're always retroactive because we can't do them right on October 1. You know, we try to do them as close to the beginning of the fiscal year as possible, obviously.

But that was very different where we waited and waited, and we kept waiting for the green light to go and do this where before I didn't really have to wait for a green light. I just knew that they had be done, and it normally got done around, I want to say, end of October, November.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. Do you know the reasoning why the sheriff had to approve these?

A. I have no idea why. That's another thing that's different, is every new hire is being approved by the sheriff. I'm not used to that.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Meaning you're hiring somebody for the combined communication center, the jail, evidence?

A. He approves it. Even my staff. He approves everyone. I had a situation where, you know, my payroll person after many, many years of service was retiring, and payroll is one of those positions that you want someone in there months in advance. We had selected someone, and it took him months to tell me no. And then finally we were able to someone not too long ago.

Q. Was this an inter-agency person or somebody you're are bringing in from the outside?

A. This was an outside person, and the person that we finally hired is an outside person. She's working out great, and she -- you know, she got --

Q. And it takes some time to bring people on board --

A. Of course.

Q. -- with your agency, right?

A. Right.

Q. There's an onboarding process --

A. Yes.

Q. -- that's not quick. It takes weeks.

A. It takes a very long time, anyways, but even longer since --

Q. What was the reason that the person who had been selected originally was not given the position?

A. I don't know. They didn't tell me, so I don't know. They didn't work out. You would have to ask human resources that. They do all the backgrounds, and they do all that. The person didn't work out.

Q. But it made it to point of the sheriff before it got --

A. That was my understanding, yes, sir.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. That was the part in HR that it didn't get past?

A. We selected the person. We interview the person, and I recommended the person. So if we were to do an interview here today, the three of us would be a panel interviewing one person; and we have questions that we ask them, and we all ask and write down our answers. And then when they leave, the three of us would get together and rank them.

This was only one person that even qualified. She wasn't like super-duper qualified, but we were willing to train the person; and it took him months to tell me no. You know, meanwhile, the other person who is sitting there is going to be retiring soon, so we were getting worried that -- oh my goodness, you know, who is going to do payroll every bi-weekly for close to, you know, 700 and something employees?

I know what else is different, in talking about that, is there was an accounts receivable position open in my bureau. We call them bureaus, accounting and budget bureau. And, you know, my staff -- the staff and I interviewed, ranked the top three.

And so I did what I always do. I do my interoffice correspondence letting the sheriff know who our top three were, and we put in our recommendations and our answers. And then when I took it to HR I was asked to put pictures on it, and I've have never been asked to put pictures on any potential employee.

Q. So those weren't individuals who were already at the sheriff's office?

A. They were.

Q. They were?

A. But they were -- these were all internal applicants. So I don't know if that's illegal or not; I don't know, but I've never been asked to put pictures of anyone in any internal or external.

Q. Was the person selected based upon a photo?

A. I have no idea.

Q. Was the person a minority?

A. Oh, the person that we selected was a minority; and we were super happy to rank her number one, and we were praying that the sheriff blessed it. And he blessed it right away, so yeah.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. The person that he didn't approve, did you have to include a photograph of that person?

A. Yeah. They asked us to put photographs, and I didn't do it. I told them -- I told Reshawn Flanders and human resources that I did not feel comfortable doing this; that I've never been asked to do that before, and I thought it was very unusual.

Q. How would you get a photograph from a civilian who's coming in from outside the agency? Are you supposed to take a photograph of them as they are sitting in the interview room?

A. Well, these are internals.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. I think he's asking about the one that applied for the other position.

A. They didn't ask me to put a picture of that one.

Q. Okay.

A. They only asked me to put a picture of the internal candidates. So if they're putting pictures in a packet for the sheriff of external candidates, I don't know.

Q. Okay. No, that's fine. I just --

A. But these are internals.

Q. -- could not understand how you would get that photo; because I'm pretty sure that that's a problem when you're hiring somebody, to request a photograph from them.

A. Yeah. Well, these are internal employees, so we have an internal -- what's it called?

MR. KRAMER: Identification system, I'm sure.
BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:
Q. Maybe a database?
A. It's a database with pictures. I refused to do it. I didn't do it, so I can't remember if my assistant financial officer did it or if the undersheriff's -- I think the undersheriff's executive assistant did it for us and then submitted the packet.
Then I was told to redo my IOC. I did it the way I have always been used to doing it. I was told to put in there -- oh, there were externals that were rejected, but we didn't reject them. HR rejected them, so we don't see that process. But I was told to put that in the IOC, so I had to get information from HR staff to help me to complete the IOC.
Q. Did they interview?
A. The externals never got to the interview process. HR didn't let them proceed, and there's reasons here why. You're welcome to have this. I would like a copy of this if you want this.
So I don't know if that's malfeasance or misfeasance; I have no idea.
BY MR. KRAMER:
Q. Other than the things that you've described, have there been differences in the way that the sheriff's office is operating since?

A. Yes. Back in July -- and I did document this because it was -- back in July -- okay. So let me back up.

We have a directive that said who has access to the accounting and budget bureau. It's a short -- short and sweet, and the hours. So our key cards -- I don't have my key card on me, but our key cards, you know, let people in. Lieutenants and above can come in, you know.

And we process payroll; so as you can imagine, if you have a question about your paycheck -- employees get wages garnished, and they come in and ask us questions about that. We're a customer service bureau.

So in July -- and I don't remember the exact date -- I came to work one day, and my staff was waiting for me at the door. My key card let me in, and they're like, "Oh my God. Nobody can get in. Nobody has access. Not even the sheriff's own executive assistant has access."

Well, I come to learn that someone -- I don't know if it's the sheriff or the undersheriff -- removed access to our bureau to all agency employees, and we are a customer service bureau. So they didn't ask me, so I went to the -- and this is when my chief of staff was out on an illness. She was out for a couple weeks. And --

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Is that Danielle Judd?

A. Yes, sir.

And I went to the undersheriff, and I asked him what happened. And he said something had happened in CID, and that they felt that they -- I don't know who "they" is -- felt that it would be best to make us completely restricted access.

And I made him aware of the directive. I said, "You do know that we have a directive that says who can be in there and when."

And he goes, "Oh, no. I didn't know anything about that."

I mean, decisions are being made without -- my input as a professional is not welcome by them, and that's something different.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Sure. So what's the result? Did they change it back?

A. No. It's still --

Q. So your staff can't enter --

A. No, no, no, our staff can. So accounting and budget staff can come in; but lieutenants and above, their access was removed. It's slowly being given back. I think they are rewriting another directive of building access.

Q. So they don't want anyone putting anything in an email; but if somebody needs to ask you a question about like their child support garnishment, they can't come into your office to ask you a question?

A. They have to knock. So we have to -- they have to let us know, "Hey, we need to" -- they call. They knock. In the beginning, they were knocking because there wasn't -- the key card didn't work at all for them. And we would go over there and open the door for them and let them in.

And then later they gave us a doorbell, and now we have finally -- I had asked for -- I'm not sure what they are called. Like a dutch door, where the top part is open.

Q. Right.

A. So they gave us a door that opens at the top. And I just told my staff to keep the top part open all day long, and so that way people can say, "Hey, we're here" or "Hey, let me in." It's a little more open and a little more friendly.

That was a big change for us, and I did document that because my staff was pretty torn over that.

I'd like a copy of that if you are keeping it.

So a customer service bureau --

Q. Sure. I understand. Yeah.

A. -- and with no input from me whatsoever. I've been there twenty-five years almost. I'm a certified public accountant. I'm a professional. I know what the bureau does for the employees, and they should come in there.

When we call them and say, "Hey, come over. Come pick up your travel check. You can come see payroll now," they would -- they knew when to come, and they'd use their key card to come in; no big deal. But they restricted it, and I don't understand why they did that. And I don't feel they gave me a good answer as to why they restricted it.

Q. So when the new sheriff came in, was there ever an opportunity given to you to sit down with the sheriff and explain your job function and have any kind of orientation with him to say what you do and what he expects of you and those type of things?

A. No.

Q. Okay. All right. Anything else that you brought with you to share?

A. I mean, I'm just letting you know things that are different from prior administrations.

Q. Right.

A. You already know that I fear him because of the precedent that has been set with the other women in the agency that I have been keeping track of, and what has happened with them.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. Tell us what's happened.

A. So the first person I have on here is Bureau Chief Laura Knudson. I don't know if you have heard of her or not, but she was one of the very first people when the administration first took office that they demoted and removed from her office, didn't even help her move her furniture. She got injured while doing that, and I think they denied her worker's comp claim; I don't know. You would have to ask someone else that, but that's what I had heard.

INSPECTOR SNOWDEN: What was her title?

MR. KRAMER: She was victim services director.

THE WITNESS: Bureau Chief of Victim Services.

So they demoted her to victim advocate -- lead victim advocate and reduced her pay, which to me -- so we have a career service protection act, and I'm sure you are familiar with it. And I've always been told we are all protected.

I am a regular risk FRS employee because of that. Typically, this position is special -- oh, what's it called? There is a different category where I get a better multiplier, basically.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Management.

A. Senior management. Okay.

So my entire career I've been regular risk 1.6 multiplier, and I didn't know they could do this. She ended up suing. I don't know what happened in court.

Gayle Fabiano, she is the administrative assistant at the jail, had been for many years. Gayle and I stay in touch. We are friends. She was the employee that the sheriff didn't hear her say hello, and she was requested to write an apology letter to him for not saying hello to him. She has that apology letter to this day.

She doesn't work here anymore. She is with the county now.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. Was there retaliation as a result? Is that why she left?

A. I think in her case and in every discussion we have had, she just couldn't take it anymore, so she moved on. Some of these employees just moved on because they couldn't take it anymore.

I feel like I am holding on tight because I don't want to go anywhere. I want to finish my career. And I feel that the taxpayers need me and my staff, because I do feel that we are prudent and we take care of the taxpayers' money. So I am holding on. There are days that I don't want to be there, but I feel that I owe it to the taxpayers to stay and make sure -- keep my audit cap on.

Administrative Assistant Marie Davis was Linda Brown's assistant. And after Linda Brown retired, there was a re-org all of a sudden, and Marie goes over to the jail to be the administrative assistant. She didn't apply for the position.

People are being moved to positions without people applying for positions, which that's unusual, especially on the civilian side.

Captain Lori Stophel, boy, she got moved so many different times, from a captain over at the jail to captain over administrative services to the captain over accreditation to the captain over CID just for a few days to the PIO captain all in just a short period of time. She ended up leaving a year before -- and I talk to them. These are friends of mine that we lean on each other.

Q. How many times was she transferred?

A. One, two, three, four. Four times in the span of January 21 through July 21. This is unusual for us to see in payroll.

Diana Jacobs couldn't hack it anymore. They made her life miserable, and I'm sure you know that.

Michelle Klement is the one that scares me the most because they took someone who had been there a long, long time just like me and just -- all of a sudden, just demoted her, without touching her pay, to a lower position at the jail.

Q. Who was the person before Michelle?

A. Marie Davis. She was Linda Brown's --

Q. Marie Davis, Lori Stophel.

A. Laura Knudson.

Q. Right.

A. Gayle Fabiano.

Q. Marie Davis.

A. Marie Davis, Lori Stophel, Diana Jacobs.

Q. Diana Jacobs.

A. Michelle Klement, that's who I am with now.
Q. What happened with Diana Jacobs?
A. Diana is a tough cookie, and she just said it like it was and had several -- from what she told me, several arguments with the sheriff. And I guess she just couldn't hack it anymore in the end. Her health wasn't well either, so she retired.
BY MR. KRAMER:
Q. What was her position?
A. She was the bureau chief over what's called support services, so she had fleet, property, facilities under her.
Q. Is that the job that Michelle Klement then takes --
A. No.
Q. -- after -- okay.
A. No. No. So Michelle Klement got promoted at the beginning of this administration to division manager over the combined communications center. And then she just all of a sudden moved to the contract monitor at the jail, which is several pay grades lower, but they didn't touch her pay. So they kept her in the same pay grade, but they changed the title and moved her to the jail. And that's what I'm afraid of, that when -- that's what I'm afraid of.

Becky Butcher, I mean, I think everyone knows what's going on there. A person being a female, for body language and body tone, being recommended for termination by then Major Lance Yaeger.

I know that the undersheriff's secretary, executive assistant, Laura Compton, at one point was demoted -- without removing her pay, but was demoted from being the undersheriff's executive assistant to an accreditation specialist. Actually, they did -- yeah, that's going from a pay grade 50 to a pay grade 26.

Q. What would that mean in dollars?

A. They did not touch her pay, but in dollars it would -- I don't have the pay scale in front of me, I'm sorry, but it could -- if they had touched the pay -- for Laura Knudson, they did touch the pay; but the other ones, they didn't. I want to say it would have been about 25,000 less.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. How can they adjust pay on some and not the others?

A. I don't know. I mean, my understanding of our career service protection act is that they can't touch our pay if they demote us, and they have to demote or remove us for just cause.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. And as far as the pay issues, those would go more to human resources?

A. Yes. Well, the way it works is, the decision is made to reduce the pay or not, remove the person or not, and so those are personnel actions. HR completes a personnel action form, and then they give them to my office, accounting and budget, for payroll to process.

And they do go through an approval level, so I am one of the approval levels on there.

Q. Do you know why?

A. She had a candid conversation with me over the phone, and I did document it. She said she was going to school -- back to school to get her masters in international studies, but she also told me that she couldn't take it anymore; that she felt like she was working for a dictator and couldn't work for him anymore.

Q. Is she the person who had come with him from other agencies?

A. Yes. So he brought her to the sheriff's office a couple months after he started. She used to be his assistant city manager in Alachua when he was the city manager.

And then Sherry French is another example where they just took a lieutenant and just -- we are going to shove her in a civilian slot.

And I did say something to Danielle Judd. I emailed her, and I said, "Look, this is a sworn officer who is special risk category FRS that you are trying to move to a civilian regular risk. Regular risk is going to mess with her multiplier."

I don't know what Danielle did, but next thing I knew they didn't approve her; but still, I mean, there's --

Q. Would that cause a problem for you audit-wise?

A. Not for me. I was just bringing it to their attention.

Q. You would've have changed her? You would've --

A. Well, she would have been placed in that position. And the way that the FRS categories are assigned is to the positions. So, you know, they would've put her in that position, which automatically defaults to regular risk retirement, which is --

Q. Is that a function of HR, or is that a function of you? Who's going to change her --

A. That's a function of HR. That is benefits.

So that is the human resources, is the one who should be determining that.

Q. Okay.

A. But I went ahead and said something because I'd been keeping my list, and I'm like, this is just crazy.

Q. Where it would get to you is if you see -- if you were to see somebody who is in a regular risk position, civilian position, and they're still trying to give her high risk, for instance, like, it just wouldn't work because once they change her position, the government, the state government, is just going to change her regardless?

A. So typically what happens when you take a sworn special risk officer and place them in a more of a civilian-type position that's coded as regular risk, you can actually convert it to what's called special risk administrative.

And so that is what I had said in my email to Ms. Judd. It's like, hey, you know, this is a -- and I have it if you want to see it. Basically, I was telling her -- you know, without telling her what should be done, I was just basically stating facts. Like, "Hey, this is a regular risk position with a 1.6 multiplier. It probably needs to be switched to special risk, which is a 2.0" -- I think it's a 2.0 multiplier. I forget what the multiplier is for the sworn officers.

Q. 3.0, I think.

A. 3.0, where special risk administrative is 2.0. So I was just bringing it to her attention.

Q. Right. Let me ask you this question. It's a little bit of a topical shift here.

So one of the things that is apparently happening is that there is forced overtime occurring at the jail. Okay. That overtime is not protected overtime.

A. No, it's not, not if you tell them in advance. And they were told in advance.

Q. Understood. So it's not protected overtime. My question is, is there a budgetary need by the sheriff's office to not allow that to be protected overtime? Let me explain.

If you are having an extreme shortage of individuals, you don't have enough people to work, you are forcing people to do overtime. And you can make a choice between protected overtime and unprotected overtime, but you need people to work. It would be the better choice to have protected overtime, correct?

A. That would be the administration's decision to make, not mine.

Q. Understood. But if you budgetarily were in a situation where you couldn't afford to offer protected overtime, then it would make sense to say, "Well, I wish I could do that to encourage people to work and create a safe environment at the jail where we don't have enough people," right?

But if the office of management and budget is saying to the sheriff, "You have plenty of money. You can cover all of that overtime" --

A. So I know where you're going with this.

So yes, the budget could have handled it. The only thing I look at is what are our policies. And our policy is, if you give them advanced notice, it doesn't have to be protected overtime.

I know that Major Stafford at the time was making it protected overtime by letting them use what's called "call-out"; but it wasn't really falling under the definition of call-out, which is time and a half no matter if you take leave or not.

That was a decision he made. He's an administrator. I don't know if he discussed it with the sheriff or not. I did bring it to the attention -- because I do budget to actual comparisons, and I do monthly reports. And I did bring it to my chief of staff's attention a while back when that was happening, that, "Hey, you know, they're using call-out code, and it's not in compliance with the directive." That's all I said.

But to answer your question, I think an elected official can make whatever decision they want on that. He could have said, "Make it call-out. We're going to make an exception to the rules because X, Y, Z."

Q. Sure. But if the budget will support it, you can make it protected overtime if you wanted to.

A. Well, it's not that easy because the -- so the overtime rules are -- you know, I'm a civilian. Anything over forty is over -- well, not me; I'm salaried, but -- okay.

If I was not exempt, I was an hourly employee, you know, civilians, anything over forty in a week, you know, is overtime. The sworn officers, anything over eighty in a two-week period is overtime. And the detention officers, anything over eighty-four in a two-week period is overtime. Okay?

Those are the rules that are plugged into the background of the software system. So if those rules are going to change, someone has to let us know. And then we have to get the software developer to come and help us change those rules. So it's not as easy as it sounds.

I can see why Major Stafford was doing what he was doing, because there was no changing of anything in the system. And once you change it -- the way that our software system works is, you can't change it just for a group. Well, you could change for the 84-hour group, the 80-hour group, or the 40-hour group; but once you change it, you're changing it for everybody in that group. See what I'm saying?

Q. Uh-huh.

A. So it's not as easy as it sounds.

Q. Okay. So call-out, though, is a different way to do it?

A. Yes, and that's how Major Stafford was doing it.

Q. If you use the call-out code, then that has the functional equivalent of creating protected overtime?

A. It is to be automatically a time-and-a-half of the employee's regular rate. The problem is, the definition of call-out -- there's a definition for call-out, and I don't have it on the top of my head. It has to be like less than so many hours' notice, you have to come back to work. Okay? That's not what was happening at the jail, but they were being allowed to use the call-out code.

We still had a ton of money left over at the end of the year after that.

Q. Right. I'm sure, but you are missing a lot of employees, right?

So what happened with the money that the county gave to the sheriff's office to give the seven percent raises across the board?

A. So the county -- let me back up a minute. Okay?

They are independent constitutional officers still. The county can say whatever they want. The independent constitutional officer can implement raises how they want. Okay?

And I need you to understand that the way the county funds the positions at the sheriff's office is, they fund every position as if it's filled all year long. That's why we have a lot of money left over at the end of the fiscal year, because every position is not -- plus overtime, plus overtime. Plus, they give us overtime money too.

So that's one of the reasons when you have a lot of vacancies, even if we've had payout -- we had a lot of payouts, and a lot of people have left with payouts. We still have a lot of money left over because of the way the county funds our budget.

The seven percent. Was that the first year? I don't remember what year that was. We ended up doing the pay raises, but we ended up doing them later than normal like I showed you.

That might have been -- that could have been that year, the first year where they told me to reverse them and then -- do them and reverse them. And then we did them eventually, and it might have been the seven percent; I don't remember. I would have to look in the computer.

Q. But from your standpoint, you don't care why the county is giving you the money. Like they're just giving you the money. And then if salaries go up from HR side, you'll just make the proper adjustments on the pay side. Is that --

A. No, no, no. I mean, we have a budget. We can't go over that budget.

Q. Right. Right.

A. So, you know, if the -- the county always says that they're funding us the equivalent of what could turn out to be, you know, a three percent COLA. Well, typically, what we were doing under the prior administration -- who was the administration that implemented the step plans, by the way -- is, if they gave us equivalent of the value of three percent for everyone, we would do our steps first; and our steps are two-and-a-half-percent steps. And then anything that was left over, we'd bump up the base by, say, half a percent or one percent. So we give them the step, and then another one percent, for example. So that's a little more than three percent, right?

Q. I don't understand. Explain to me what a step plan is.

A. Oh, okay. You don't have a copy of the step plan?

So our deputies have twenty-year steps. So when you're hired at the sheriff's office, for example -- as a deputy, for example, you get hired in typically a base. And let's say you're hired in a base, and then you have to wait two years as of October 1 to start stepping. And then every year on October 1 you get a two-and-a-half percent pay raise; next year, two-and-a-half. Now you're step three. Now you're step four. Now you're step five. So you're topped out at step twenty. And the same thing for civilians and CCC employees and detention officers.

Q. Gotcha. Okay. That makes sense. I understand.

A. Kind of like the military. They have step plans.

MR. KRAMER: Right. Understood. Like a GA, or whatever they call it.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. Can different budgets be paid -- can law enforcement budget be paid out of a corrections fund?

A. Okay. So I'm really glad you asked me that question. 30.49, the legislature this past year -- not this year, but the year before made it a lot easier for sheriffs' offices to move monies around what are called functional categories.

Law enforcement is a function, jail is a function, CCC is a function, and court security -- I still call them bailiffs -- is a function. So we have four functions in our general fund. And the legislature actually just made it so that sheriff's can move monies between those functions.

I think I've only ever done it once in my entire career, and we did it with permission from the county commission. That was years ago under Steve Oelrich. So we don't do it, but we can.

Q. Maybe a little more direct question. So if you've got -- I understand that the office of professional standards is made up of a combination of corrections and sheriff's deputies, and there is two and two. And say that one of the corrections vacates and another law enforcement takes their place, could that law enforcement still be funded?

A. So as long as they're performing some kind of function where they're doing investigations -- they might do an investigation on a detention officer, let's say, so it should be fine.

I mean, I have staff in my office that -- we process payroll for all four functions, but she is fully, 100 percent funded out of the law enforcement budget.

I know that there's concerns about that from people who don't really understand the funding and the financials; but as long as they can prove that they've worked on some jail employee investigations, it shouldn't be a problem if a law enforcement officer is sitting in a jail position.

Q. Were you present when James Troiano originally worked at --

A. Way back when under Oelrich, yes.

Q. Okay. And were you aware that he came back?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. How long was he back for?

A. He never got put on the payroll when he came back under Sheriff Watson.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. How would someone work in your agency without being put on the payroll?

A. He was only there for a couple of days. I don't know. We even had a requisition to order him a bullet-proof vest, I think it was, his body armor, and we were told to delete the requisition; but he never got -- this is the way that I think it happened.

I saw him physically there. I don't know what he was doing, but, you know, remember payroll is in arrears too. So, you know, this week that I'm working, I'm not going to get paid maybe until next week, right?

So there's a timing issue. We never got the order in payroll to hire him in, so I guess it must have happened really quick where he was only there for a few days. And he should have been paid for those few days, but he didn't.

I don't know what he was doing. I don't know if he was there all day. I have no clue.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. Do you know if he was issued any equipment?

A. He was about to, and they told us to cancel it. The body armor, I think, is what that is. I don't know if he was issued a vehicle; I don't think so. I don't think he was -- I really don't know. You would have to ask fleet. Steve King would know.

Q. What's his name?

A. Steve King. He is the fleet bureau chief.

You can have it. Well, let me keep it.

Q. Talk a little bit about this some more.

A. So on June 14th, 2021, I had taken Susan Wally to lunch. And my chief financial officer, Amanda, told me that Danielle Judd, our chief of staff at the time, called to tell us not to place Jim Troiano on payroll. That's all I know.

Q. That was after you had seen him there?

A. I just seen him coming and going. He never came in my bureau that I can remember.

The next day I told the sheriff's executive assistant that there was a purchase order in the system for Mr. Troiano's vest. And I asked her if I should cancel it because we were told he wasn't going to be in the payroll, and I was told yes, to cancel it.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. So is there something different between canceling something and deleting something?

A. It's the same thing.
Q. I mean, is it --
A. We could delete a -- I mean, you put in a requisition first. It goes through -- we have a really nice system. We have good internal controls for that.
Q. Right.
A. You put in a requisition. I don't know. Let's say you need a new recorder. You put in a requisition. It actually goes through three levels of approval, sometimes four if it's over $5,000. And then my purchasing agent will make sure that she's got the quotes, you know. We have different dollar thresholds for how many quotes something needs. And then she converts it to a purchase order. And then the purchases order gets mailed to the vendor to fulfill. In this case, we were told to cancel it and not send it.

Actually, I don't know if it had been sent or not. We were told to cancel it, so I would have to ask my purchasing agent if she remembers -- that was a long time ago -- if she had to call the vendor and cancel the order or not.

It's not unusual to cancel -- it's probably more unusual to cancel a requisition than -- when it's already been converted to a purchase order, but purchase orders do get cancelled every now and then.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. Do you know what he was hired to do?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Are you aware of any retaliatory conduct that has taken place at ACSO?

MR. KRAMER: Other than what you have already discussed with the women that you went through.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. Any men that that's happened to?

A. Well, I mean, I don't know what happened. I don't know the details of what happened with Major David Clark. I don't know what happened with Darrell Bessinger, but they both got sent to that position. Oh, it was a body-worn camera position, and I don't know if there was any retaliatory practices against them or not. I'm trying to think. I mean, in the process of --

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Let me ask you this question. When George Corwine resigned from the agency, how was it decided whether or not to pay him for the leave that he had on the books?

A. So we have a policy that says that once you get leave and you get paid out, if you come back, you don't get paid out again. So he wasn't paid out again in accordance with policy.

MR. KRAMER: Gotcha.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. Are you familiar with -- didn't Deputy Annie Waller having an issue with her payout?

A. Is she the detention officer? Is she a detention --

Q. It's my understanding that she was involved in a shooting, and she was placed on administrative leave.

A. There was someone, and it was a female, that payroll said, "Are we paying her out? This is her last" -- because normally you get your last paycheck for your work hours, and then two weeks later you get your payout check if you qualify.

There's rules to be paid out. If you've been there ten years or more, you get half of your sick leave. If you're off probation a year, and you leave -- your first year you leave, you don't get nothing. If you are off probation after your first year and you leave, if you have any leave, any vacation on the books, you get paid up to 280.

So payroll asked me, "Are we paying her out?"

And I don't have that documented; but I do remember being told not to pay her out, and then eventually they did. So she wasn't paid out as timely as is normal.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. So that determination to pay or not pay, whose job is that?

A. The elected official. The sheriff, I guess, and OPS, maybe.

Q. Well, let's assume for a moment that it's not somebody anybody cares about, it's just some seven-, eight-, nine-year employee who's just leaving for something else. Does that have to go to the sheriff, or is it --

A. No.

Q. -- just by policy?

A. Not by policy. We just process it.

Q. Okay. Okay. So Annie Waller, my understanding is she is essentially a deputy. She's not somebody of any special concern to the agency. Why would a particular deputy who is essentially of no concern to the agency -- I think -- I don't think she's like a sergeant. Why would someone higher up in the chain comment on whether or not she should be paid out for policy?

A. I don't know. I mean, we were -- you mean why did the payroll ask me to pay her out?

Q. No, no, no. I just don't understand.

A. I don't know the decision -- I don't know who makes the decision of paying or not. It's very rare to see that. In my career, I've -- maybe a handful of times I've -- and I know a couple of times it was criminal. The employee had committed a criminal act, and so they didn't pay the employee out; and that's policy. And that's actually, I think, also in the PBA contract, but the sheriff, I guess, makes the final decision. I don't know.

Q. Okay. I understand.

A. I don't know. And there is a separation clearance form, you know, that I have to fill out saying, you know, yes or no if the person qualifies for their payout. And if I say no, it's probably because they've been there less than a year.

I would never say no for anything like that because that's not my decision to make.

MR. KRAMER: I understand. All right.

Anything else, Dave?

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. I just want to get something real quick.

She was there for two and a half years.

A. So she would have been eligible for her vacation only, and I think she did get paid out her vacation eventually.

Q. That was after this mystical --

A. I can check.

MR. KRAMER: I think I understand that situation.

INSPECTOR SNOWDEN: I think that's all I've got.

MR. KRAMER: All right. Anything else you need to -- from you?

THE WITNESS: Well, I mean, I brought stuff that's different.

INSPECTOR SNOWDEN: Well, if you've got stuff, I mean, talk to us about it if you think that it may be relevant. If you don't think it may be relevant, well, then don't.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. If it's responsive to any question that I've already asked, then yes, please share it with us.

A. So you already know that I do fear retaliation.

Q. Of course.

A. I don't know what's happening with all this. I don't know if this is something that is a case that's going to trial. I don't know. I don't know if it's trial. I don't know what it is; but after I'm done with my witness protection, I'm scared.

Q. Well, I understand.

A. I do have a documentation from November 2nd, 2021, where my employee -- one of my employees who's married to an employee in the property bureau told me that her husband was ordered by the sheriff to go to his house on agency time, with agency property, to pick up his belongings to bring back to his new office that he -- so I have that documented, if you want it. I'd like a copy of it.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. I'll take that.

If you have other stuff --

A. Oh, I'm sorry. I thought you were -- you already know about the -- they made me wait to process the step plan raises for the deputies back in 2022. And then eventually -- and then when I processed them because I was told to, then I was told not to and reverse them. That was a big deal.

They did recently -- this is something that affected me personally that I did document because I was pissed off. I told you that we have a career service protection, and I was told from the day I was hired under the Steven Oelrich administration that I cannot be senior management category because of the career service protection.

Well, one day, all of a sudden, you know, I get an email saying that the sheriff is about to do step one to convert a few positions to senior management, which means I lose my career service protection. So I did bitch to the attorney about this. And the ad was going to go out, which is step one of converting positions from regular risk to senior management category. And the ad never went out, eventually, after I bitched.

So I don't know if they figured out that I was pissed, because I said, "If you guys are doing this, I want it retro to the day I was hired. I don't know who the next sheriff is going to be. What if you do this, and they get rid of me?"

Because at that point you're just serving at the will of the elected official. My understanding is we have protection because of the career --

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Right.

A. So they wanted to take away my protection, and I was one of the people in it. Chief financial officer, general counsel, HR director, IT director, chief of staff, colonel. And now, these are people, chief of staff, general counsel, and colonel -- chief of staff and colonel are already fully retired from the FRS. They can't --

Q. They can't incur a second retirement.

A. -- re-establish into the FRS. General counsel is regular risk.

So I was upset about this; I really was. And it was, I guess, one of the times that I had the strength to complain about something. Next thing I know, it never happened. So that's what that is.

And that happened right after they moved -- just right around the time they moved Michelle Klement to her position where they couldn't touch her pay. When they downgraded her to the position at --

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. When they downgraded her position, was that a probationary position that she went to that she would have to complete a year of probation?

A. That is a good question. I don't see here where I printed the one that would say that. Here it just says she went from one permanent slot to another permanent slot; if not, it would say permanent to probationary.

Q. Okay.

A. I would have to go back in the computer and see -- these are called status histories -- to see if there is one that says probationary.

Here is something I told you already about. Captain -- Lieutenant Sherry French. We already talked about that.

This is an example. This is unusual to see. This is an example. When Linda Brown was getting ready to retire, they had selected the sheriff's executive assistant to replace her. And it's customary -- they went ahead and promoted the executive assistant early into Linda Brown's position while Linda was there to help train and all that.

Well, they ended up not putting this young lady in that position. Instead, they put Mr. Chris Whatley in there. And so when they moved Ms. Courtney back to being the sheriff's executive assistant, a personnel action form was done to -- bureau chief is higher than executive assistant -- to bring her back down to that position. And we got an email saying don't change her pay. They had increased her pay. A bureau chief pay, they got five percent, maybe. Well, then she goes back, so she should have lost that five percent.

And I got an email saying that there's an IOC forthcoming detailing new tasks and assignments that have and will become permanent increased duties for Ms. Courtney, so don't change her pay. Leave it at the higher rate.

Well, I'm still waiting for the IOC, and she's still making the pay of a bureau chief. That's unusual.

I'm assuming you guys know what happened after Linda Brown's retirement.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Yes.

A. That's when Danielle Judd spoke to me on the phone. She came in that next -- I think Danielle -- I think Linda Brown's party was a Friday. And Danielle came in that Monday morning, and she was just not looking well.

I asked her if she was okay, and she told me the sheriff had royally reamed her about that party and blamed it all on her. And that's when she told me that -- that's when she called the sheriff a dictator, said she would never work for him again.

Oh, and she told me that he treated several women in the agency, to include Michelle Klement, very poorly, and that she had had enough. And she stated to me that Lance Yaeger and Jacob Rush spend their time looking at employees' social media posts. I have it documented.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. Is that for me to keep?

A. No. I need copies of all that, please, if you want to keep it. I mean, obviously, keep it, but I need copies.

MR. KRAMER: Are you going to need copies? You have a pile of the stuff you need copies of?

INSPECTOR SNOWDEN: Most of it I don't need copies of, I don't think.

THE WITNESS: I didn't see anything here, but this is the sheriff's credit card usage.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. That's something that's audited?

A. Yeah, we review all the credit card statements when they come in, and we make sure there is supporting documentation for everything. So these are just copies if you want them. I mean, I don't need them.

MR. KRAMER: That's fine.

INSPECTOR SNOWDEN: That's it. Nothing further, just a copy of that.

MR. KRAMER: All right. We will get a copy of this.

The time right now is 2:47, and we are going to stop the recording.

WHEREUPON,

BELLA BLIZZARD

acknowledged having been duly sworn to tell the truth, and testified upon his or her oath as follows:

THE WITNESS: I do.

EXAMINATION

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Good morning again.

A. Good morning.

Q. I think when we left off last time I had asked you the question whether there was any other illegal, unethical, or immoral activity that you had observed on the part of any of the command staff at the sheriff's office, and you had answered yes. And we were out of time at that time, and I cut you off and didn't permit you to answer.

So today is our opportunity to answer that question; and there may be others to come, but could we can start with that question. Tell me what your response -- you said yes. What would be the further response?

A. I have several things I just wanted to go over, try to do them in an organized manner.

Q. Sure.

A. The first thing that I felt was very unethical was the transferring of employees. We talked a little bit about this the last time I was here, with the pictures and them having to go see him to introduce themselves.

We had several employees that were transferred to positions that they put in for at one point, but they were on a waiting list for quite some time. So as you know, people's circumstances change. So if you're on the day shift, and you have three kids; and you put in for detective, and a year goes by and you don't hear anything, your circumstances -- your wife may have a different shift or you may have different bills to pay, whatever it is.

Well, there was a deputy named Louie Ferrero who was transferred to CID. And when he was transferred there, nobody ever asked him, "Hey, it's been a while. Are you still interested?" They just transferred him the way they did a lot of people.

Well, Louie's circumstances changed. So the day he got over there, he was trying to get out. He had issues with child care, mostly child care, but he had some other things going on at home. And the kid came to see me every month like clockwork with a folder with all the things that he -- all the IOCs that he had put in, in an attempt to get out of there and go back to the road.

Now, it should be noted that the road had so many vacancies. We had so many people on the road who wanted to go to detectives, so all we would have had to do was just swap them. Louie was fluent in Spanish, so we went as far as to find another deputy who was fluent in Spanish; I worked with Becky Butcher on this, Captain Butcher, and that person was willing to go.

So you're still getting someone else fluent in Spanish, so that couldn't have been why; no one says it was, but we want to make sure we covered all our bases. He was told repeatedly no.

I have several conversations that I had with Decoursey, the undersheriff. He was like, "You know, they signed up for this. He never should have put in for it. If he didn't want to go there, he's just going to have to be there. Sheriff Watson says that he just has to stay there."

I'm thinking, why are you making this man's life miserable? So he came to see me. He cried several times in my office. I promised him I'd get him out of there. It was very stressful for me. Finally, I stopped putting the IO -- I told him to stop putting IOCs in because you're pissing them off more. Stop it. Let me handle this.

Finally, right before I retired, he was allowed to go back to the road, but they kept telling me he's going to have to stay another six months, he's going to have to stay another three months. And I never could understand what the point was of making a person stay somewhere.

So to me, that was unethical. I feel like we were causing this man emotional pain in his marriage and personally because we were proving a point that he needed to stay somewhere just because he'd put in for it.

Q. Do you have any reason to believe it was an effort to get him to quit?

A. I don't think so. I think they were just letting him know who was in charge. I don't think they wanted him to quit. I don't even think they knew what he looked like. I mean, it was that kind of thing. I mean, I don't even think he was important to them at all.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. How long --

A. This went on for at least a year.

Q. My question is, how long ago had he put in for it prior to the transfer being made?

A. I never verified it, but I think it had been a year. It had been quite some time. So he was on road patrol. He was the motor unit. He was also a day unit, which is good for family life. And detectives is good, too, for family life; but they also have evening shifts they have to work, and they get called out a lot.

So things changed to where he had several small children and just wasn't -- the stress from it was just -- it was hard to meet with him. I met with him. He met with Lance Yaeger several times, but Lance was just kind of like didn't -- I listened to him, if that makes sense. I met with him. I listened to him. I tried to give him hope and finally got him transferred.

To me, I couldn't stand that, so I wanted to bring it up because to me it was unethical. There's absolutely no reason to do that to that guy.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Certainly in this environment where you're having trouble keeping people and attracting new people, it doesn't make a lot of sense to torment someone who's willing to do a job that needs to be done anyway.

A. He told me in one of his visits that he was going to put in for UPD because he just couldn't take it anymore. I said, "Uh-uh. Don't, man. You're such a good cop. Give me some more time."

Q. Do you know if he's still there?

A. I believe he is. He's on the road, because I went to see him personally to give him the news that he was leaving. It was right before I retired. I was like, "Dude, you're leaving."

I still don't know how I got that done, but he got to get out of there. We called it the escape from Alcatraz because it was ridiculous.

Q. Was there another one?

A. Yeah. I don't know if Steve Maynard brought this up. I cannot remember the guy's name, which I know is no help to you guys, but you can get it easily.

There was a guy that worked at GPD for like 30 years. And he got with George Corwine, and we all assumed that the sheriff and the undersheriff okayed it. And there's a little gray area whether the undersheriff and sheriff knew, although George Corwine says yes, they did.

This guy was a major at the time, and I had the courthouse. This guy was hired explicitly to go to the courthouse after field training. So he's hired with the understanding that he's done his time on the road for 30 years with GPD. He just wants to go to the courthouse. Will you hire him? We're desperately understaffed at the courthouse, so we're all excited about having him.

He goes through an entire field-training cycle, which is months and months and months. He passes. They buy him uniforms, equipment, all this time in the academy, the mini-academy. And he gets out. He's supposed to start in the courthouse, and an IOC was written by George Corwine, I believe, that he was going to the courthouse. Then Maynard -- George Corwine was gone when he finally did get out of training.

So he goes to go to the courthouse, and the undersheriff calls me down there and says, "The sheriff didn't approve this. He has to go to the road. He has to go to the road for at least six months to a year."

I'm like, "Then he's going to quit. It's not what he signed up for."

"Well, nobody ever had the sheriff sign it. The sheriff's got to sign it. The sheriff didn't sign it."

And so the guy -- Captain Butcher was involved in this too because he worked in patrol for her at the time. She was really upset about it. I was upset about it. I felt like we'd lied to the guy, and I felt like it reflected on all of us.

I went down there several times pleading with my boss, like, "Listen, it's not a good look. It's just a signature. We need someone in the courthouse. It's fine. I don't know where the ball was dropped, but this guy is clearly an asset," yadda, yadda, yadda.

Long story short, I got this guy a meeting with the undersheriff while he's walking out the door. I literally grabbed him and said, "Go talk to the undersheriff."

In my mind I was thinking, surely, once he sees the quality this guy has to offer, that he will go back on that, but they let him walk. So we wasted I don't know how much money on this guy just because there wasn't a signature. The sheriff didn't have the knowledge of it, so --

Q. Can you figure out what his name is, or is there any way --

A. You know who I'm talking about. I can text Steve Maynard and ask him what his name was.

MR. KRAMER: I'm just trying to understand, maybe, if she knows.

THE WITNESS: You remember it.

MS. FRANKS: (Nods head.)

THE WITNESS: Yeah. Everybody remembers that.

It affected everything from patrol -- the morale from it was just -- the deputies hearing that, because to them it's a broken promise. To me it was a broken promise. I felt like it was very unethical. And once again, I had to be the messenger of something that I did not agree with, and I was pretty upset about that; and like I said, so was Steve, big-time. So was Becky Butcher.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Let me just make sure I understand. So you're in a critical staffing shortage.

A. Oh, yes.

Q. You're telling the supervisors that we have a critical staffing shortage. And there aren't a lot of people above you, so you're telling the undersheriff and the sheriff that we have a critical staffing shortage.

A. Yes.

Q. They know we have a critical staffing shortage at the sheriff's office. And they are aware of the surrounding circumstances that this individual, whatever his name may be, was hired for a particular purpose with a particular idea in mind of what he's going to do, and that that fills a shortage need.

A. Correct.

Q. That individual has made it clear to anyone who he needs to that if you don't meet your obligations of what our discussion was, I'm not going to continue to work here.

A. Correct.

Q. And their choice was for him to leave?

A. Uh-huh. Even though he had already done everything we'd told him to do.

Q. Your intervention in this situation was that, as he is very close to his either date of departure or last day of work, or something of that nature, you arrange a meeting between him and Joel Decoursey so you can try and --

A. Try to save it.

Q. -- orchestrate some kind of conversation so that Decoursey can understand that he's a valued asset who can stay in the organization -- who's willing to stay in the organization, who can help alleviate a staffing shortage. And his response, and therefore the sheriff's response, to that was that we would like him to leave?

A. Uh-huh. I think Decoursey told him, "Well, you can go to the road for six months to a year. It's not fair to other people."

But what other people? I went down there to talk to him. I said, "What other people is it not fair to?"

Because one of the people that we had waiting for the courthouse got frustrated and quit. He was in detectives, Tommy Steele. You probably know him. Great detective. He got really frustrated that he couldn't go to the courthouse, and he quit.

We had one other guy in detectives, Chuck Beveridge. I know you know him. He's legendary. He was trying to go there; and they wanted to keep him in detectives, so they wouldn't let him go.

So I'm like, "What people are we being unfair to?"

There's no people that we're being unfair to. We have enough places for Chuck Beveridge and for him.

Q. Okay.

A. And Kenny Brown was another one. Kenny Brown was a deputy here forever, did a great job. He was over in the courthouse at the end of his career. He retired. He decided he wanted to come back here. They wouldn't let him come back, but they made him a green coat at one point.

Q. I remember that.

A. Yeah. It was ridiculous. So Steve -- you've met him. Steve was just beside himself. Steve is like, "I can't get any staffing."

Like, we couldn't even get the jury to lunch. There was one day when they called me. They were like, "We have no one to take the jury to lunch."

The last time I was here -- I don't want to rehash it, but I already talked to you about how we gave him the options of the chief judge, telling the chief judge, "Hey, can we just have a few less court hearings?"

Which we believed he would have worked with us on it, due to staffing. And they told us we were not to speak to the chief judge about it.

And of course -- and the leakage, you can't hide it after a while. You can't staunch the blood after a while. And it's very obvious when you can't walk the jury to lunch, you don't even have one person to walk the jury to lunch, then you have a problem.

And your captain, who's Maynard, is working shifts at the courthouse; but yet, we had two bodies already trained, ready to go, and on principle of whatever we decide we weren't taking them. It's ridiculous.

Q. Right.

A. I feel like that's unethical. Everybody has their opinions. Somebody else might not feel it's unethical, but I do.

Q. And it also may fall into the category of what we would refer to as misfeasance or malfeasance. It's a decision-making process that is done so poorly as it violates the duty of care that the sheriff owes to the population.

A. And I told you a gun got in. We had a knife, remember. We talked about this the last time. It becomes an officer safety issue.

And Becky Butcher actually did an email. I believe it went to Chad Scott, and it went up to my boss. And they were pissed at her because she said it was an officer safety issue. I literally overheard them saying, "She doesn't need to be putting that in email. She doesn't need to be sending us that."

That's why I told Steve, "When you do these papers don't put officer safety issue. Just put it to where, you know, there's the facts."

Because when she did that -- which I don't have a problem with her doing that because she's communicating to them -- because she was frustrated because nothing was being done, she was communicating to them; but they took it as disrespectful and as an insult.

Q. So if they are saying to you and to other staff members not to put something in writing, is there any assurance that the information that is necessary to be communicated to them, is being communicated to them?

A. I did that anyway.

Q. I understand, but if you're telling Captain Butcher not to place an officer safety issue that should be brought to the attention of the administration in writing, what is the methodology to assure that the people who need to be aware of it are aware of it?

A. Well, there wouldn't be, which is why I don't think anyone ever told her not to do it anymore; and if anyone did, it would have been Chad. I know I didn't tell her not to do it anymore.

She didn't work for me at the time, but I can tell you that's dangerous ground when somebody has knowledge of a safety issue and you're telling them not to talk about it because, you're correct, it's not going to make it where it needs to go. And if does make it where it needs to go, there's no proof that it made it there; and that's the point of it. So if something happens, somebody can say, "Well, I didn't know.

Q. Was there other instances where you either were told or where you were -- overheard people being told to fail -- to intentionally fail to document critical issues that under normal practices and procedures of a law enforcement agency would be documented?

A. Danielle Judd, who was the chief of staff, continually told us to stop making so much paper, stop sending this stuff up. Come see her personally if you had a problem. Don't send her an email.

Q. In the prior administrations that you had worked for was there any discouragement of putting things in writing if there was an issue?

A. No. I've worked for four sheriffs.

Q. In fact, was it either required or encouraged --

A. It was encouraged.

Q. Is it something that's an important issue to the agency that it be documented properly and sent to the proper chain of command?

A. Yes. That way you know that it's being taken care of and somebody has it.

Q. Can you cite specific instances, if you know of any, where something was not put in writing that should have been communicated to the administration because it was an issue of significant concern to the agency?

A. Yeah. I'm going to give you another example of transfer.

So warrants fell under me. We had a tryout for warrants. Warrants is a very coveted position. Of course, when I left we were down an entire arrest team, so I don't know if warrants still exists.

We had a trial, and we had a guy named Chris Drake. He's a military guy. I don't know if you know him. He's a K-9 handler, just like unbelievable, one of the greats, like I was saying about Chuck Beveridge. And he put in for it, and so did Dwight Christy, who's also great.

Dwight Christy's great. He's obviously African American. He did not do as well as Chris. And there were a couple other people that tried out; I don't remember who they were, but we had to give photographs of everybody.

Chris didn't get the job. They picked Dwight even though we all recommended Chris. To be fair, he did better on the -- we liked Dwight; but Chris did better on the thing, but they picked Dwight.

But what they did was, they got with me. And I said, "Listen, I can't spare him from patrol."

This is when I had all the areas. I said, "Please, let's not transfer him. I can run short in warrants. I'm literally running short on these zones."

And Decoursey said, "Okay."

This comes into play later, because about six months later they made -- he called me up, and he said, "Hey, we need to transfer the other guy to warrants."

I said, "Well, you do realize we still haven't transferred Dwight."

And he acted like he didn't know anything about the whole conversation, and he basically told me, "The sheriff is going to be very unhappy when I tell him that you failed to do something he ordered you to do."

I said, "Wait a minute. You never told me to transfer Dwight Christy."

So my -- I got really upset about it, because I was like, "Now I'm going to get insubordination for something you said it was okay."

So I went in to my secretary at the time, Shannon Gillis. I always left my door open on purpose. She doesn't work there anymore, but she's a wealth of knowledge because she could hear everything. Every conversation Lance Yaeger and I ever had, every conversation I had on the phone, I wanted her to hear it.

I came out, I said, "Did you just hear that?"

She said, "Yeah, that's bullshit." She said, "You absolutely told him that you didn't want to transfer him, and he said that that was okay."

He denied it. That was something that was not put in writing because he said we didn't need to put it in writing because he would remember it. Well, he didn't remember it, and then he put it on me.

Q. So did he give that --

A. To the sheriff?

Q. -- false information to the sheriff?

A. Yes.

Q. What was the result?

A. And I asked him the next day, I said, "Well, Sheriff" -- whenever Sheriff gets mad at me, he won't look at me. And if you're me, this is him (demonstrates). And if I go to shake your hand, he's going to give me like a wet noodle handshake. Like, I can always tell.

So for probably about a month after that he really didn't talk to me. I asked him about it, and he said, "Yeah, the sheriff is extremely disappointed."

That burned me up for so long because I didn't do anything wrong, and it was put -- because really what happened was, Decoursey remembered damn well that I told him, but he didn't want to admit to him that he never told him he wasn't transferring Dwight Christy. That's the bottom line.

Q. I guess my clarifying question would be this. I'm at least aware that when someone is going to be transferred, that there would be significant internal documentation --

A. There was. It said "to be announced."

Q. But when someone is not going to be transferred -- there's a tryout here. So there is a tryout, and there should be a result of the tryout. But when someone is not going to be transferred, is that something that should be announced? Or should there be internal documentation with regard to that?

A. There should and shouldn't be. So when you try out for a team, the lieutenant and the captain submit something to me that has an IOC, and it ranks them all. And then now that this new sheriff is here, we have all the pictures of them; which we had never done that before. So we have all the pictures of them, and it gets submitted.

They put their choice of who they think -- this is the expert. These are subject matter experts. These are people who work with these people every day. As a major or a captain, unless I know the guy is just unbelievably awful, I'm going to support my commanders because they have to work with these people, and they know that person is going to be producing.

So never since I can remember -- I don't even think my other sheriffs ever did this; and if they did, it's slipping my mind, but they frequently would pick someone else that was not picked, which is what happened in Dwight Christy's case.

So when somebody isn't transferred, they don't get notified by paper. They just sit -- it's a list, so it just sits. So if they come to you -- or in a lot of cases, the commanders come to me and say, "What gives? I didn't want that guy."

All I can say is, "Well, that's who the sheriff says you're going to get."

Q. And your position -- or your testimony is that after and perhaps before the requirement came out that all individuals who are being moved or applying, or whatever, have a picture of them is that it was repeatedly and noticeably African American candidates who were underqualified or not qualified for the position?

A. Sometimes. I don't want to say all the time because I'd have to see all the different ones that came through. I had so many come through, but I know that did happen.

Q. It's my understanding that during the course of his administration, certainly during the time that you were there, there were repeated, frequent personnel moves that were --

A. That didn't make sense.

Q. -- many, and there were many of them.

A. Yeah.

Q. So to say that always happened may not be reasonable just due to volume, but that it happened with some frequency?

A. Greater frequency, yes.

I'm going to give you another example while we're talking about that. Cleveland Cox. I don't know if you've heard about this one, the SWAT team.

Q. Yes, the SWAT team.

A. When Josh Crews went down there and told them that he did not agree with the sheriff's decision respectfully, he ended up losing the SWAT team, going to the courthouse, sitting in a dark room for probably about a year, eight months.

And then all of a sudden -- kind of like the way it works at this place, you rise from the ashes. Just like Matt Yates. So one day I'm taking your honor guard, I'm taking everything from you, I'm putting you on midnight shift, and then it's almost like what's old is new again. So then that person is promoted. They're given their team back.

That's what happened to Josh. He got promoted again. He got given his team back. Then he got captain just like that. Then he got major just like that. Now he's doing my old job. But as quickly as you're put in those positions is as quickly that you're not in those positions.

Q. Right.

A. Oh, yeah, the name of the civil guy, or the courthouse guy, was Don G-E-E-L-H-O-E-D.

Q. Geelhoed?

A. Yeah.

Q. I know him.

A. Nice guy.

Q. Absolutely.

A. And then back to what I was saying. Dwight Christy, he's totally a good guy, great cop, great deputy, totally can do the job. That wasn't the issue, and Dwight even knows that. It's just that Chris had waited.

He had tried out another time. I think they had given it to somebody else. It was the kind of thing where he was the one that should have gone next, and that was the issue. It wasn't that Dwight couldn't do the job.

Now, in Cleveland Cox's case, Cleveland Cox had no business being on the SWAT team. He had all kind of crashes, all kinds of problems. He just wasn't fit to hold a position of that stature. He'd be cleaning the truck the rest of his career. That's where they put the new guys, they clean the truck. They're never in the stack. They're not trusted with the stack. They're not trusted to make life-or-death situation decisions.

Q. Other than Lance Yaeger, was it your observation that the individuals who were being promoted through the agency had insufficient time in their positions for being -- for promotion?

A. Towards the end, it wasn't hard to shine there because everyone quit. All your seasoned people are gone. So you have -- at one point it was me with twenty-eight years; Chad, who worked there before, was let go and then came back and been there like zero days, and he was a major. And then you had Lance as a captain, and he was a deputy the week before.

So it's not hard to shine because the people who were getting promoted, he was running out of people who had, you know, that time and grade. And Captain Butcher was a prime example. She had the time and grade, but she wasn't going to put up with the crap. So now she's kind of, you know --

Q. Right. And that's one of things I want to talk to you about, is that with Captain Butcher, she, it's my understanding, has 30 years or more.

A. Well, some of it's dispatch time. Yes, some of it's time over in the com center, but she has at least 25 years as law enforcement at least.

Q. And she has significant time in every grade that she's held, right?

A. Yeah.

Q. So, in your opinion, would she have been ready, proper, sufficiently trained and have full enough understanding of the activities of the agency to competently take over the position of major?

A. Oh, yeah.

Q. The person that was given your job when you left was Lance Yaeger?

A. Uh-huh. Yes.

Q. And what was his training -- and I don't know if we have enough time for you to describe the --

A. Yeah, because I got some other really important stuff.

Q. Well, then we'll just finish this question. He didn't have any time in any grade?

A. He had absolutely no training in 112, as we saw. He didn't know how to talk to people. He didn't even know basic stuff to deal with employees. He had no leadership skills. He acted like a deputy on a power trip.

Q. Let's move on to your next thing.

A. Okay. So we did the transfer issues. I want to talk about -- I have two bigger things and two very small things, so I'll start on one of the bigger things.

I want to talk about mental health. I'll try to move this along. One of the biggest issues I had and I thought was so unethical was the treatment of people with mental health problems.

I've been very open with my mental health. I have PTSD. I was on the job twenty-eight years. I'm not afraid to admit that. It helped a lot of people when I was working.

I used to teach all the PTSD classes for the new hires, and I also did for it for our com center. I did it for our patrol. We were one of the only agencies in the state of Florida to even have that program. So I had contacts at Blue H.E.L.P. I had guest speakers come in. I had Grant McDougall, who's our psychologist, come in.

I actually had deputies who also had -- this kind of thing is very prevalent in our patrol division, like more than you would believe. At least probably 70 percent of deputies in our patrol division have some kind of issue. Anyway, they all said it helped them, and that's all that mattered.

I would give a book out to all the new hires. It's called "Emotional Survival for Law Enforcement." And we also gave them out to DOJ employees, our corrections. So basically I'm telling you all this to tell you I kind of know what PTSD is and what it isn't.

So Mike Moore, let's talk about him real quick. Mike Moore was a detective in our digital forensics. Now, I was a lieutenant in that unit for two years, and I know what kind of work that is. You got to watch children be molested pretty much all day long in order to get screenshots and videos for the state attorney's office to prosecute cases. That's what you do, and you do it all day. You watch kids be molested. This guy did this for five years.

One day he came in -- this was when I was a major, Darrell Bessinger was his captain, and Lieutenant Andersen was his lieutenant. He came in and said, "I can't do this anymore. This is killing me." He says, "I've been going to EAP" -- which is our employee assistance program -- "and I've been trying to get help, and I'm done with my EAP." It's a limit of seven appointments, I think. He's like, "I just need a couple more appointments, and I can't afford it."

So the captain came to me and said, "What do you think"?

I said, "Well, we did this to him. We're certainly going to help him. Let me go to the undersheriff and the chief of staff," who was Danielle Judd, "and we'll certainly get him the help he needs."

I met with them, and at first they seemed like they were okay with it. We had moved him to financial crimes because it was -- under old sheriffs, that's your division. You can move people within your own division, but not with this sheriff. You have to get formal -- for everything. But we had moved him because I didn't understand that.

So he was in financial crimes. Great detective. He deserved that. He deserved to go to financial crimes. So he's doing his thing. He's happier. He's waiting on his appointment. Another two weeks go by, no word.

So I go back in there, I say, "Hey, my captain is getting with me. What's going on with this appointment?"

And then it was a little bit of a weird conversation, a little pushback. "Well, why is he in financial crimes? You shouldn't have just transferred him without permission."

And I'm like, "Well, he earned it, and it's a good place for him to be because he's a very knowledgeable detective."

"Well, he can still see child porn in financial crimes."

I'm like, "No, he can't. What's he looking at child porn in financial crimes?"

He says, "Yes, he can."

You know, they got kind of mad at me. And I said, "Well, what's going on with his appointment?"

"Oh, we'll back with you."

I said, "What's going on with his appointment?"

And they're like, "We'll get back with you," got kind of mad at me. "We're going to take care of it. We're going to take care of it."

I said, "How are you going to take care of it? Tell me." Because I was having like a bad feeling, I'm like, "How are you going to take care of it? "

And they still wouldn't answer me. And my boss got a little mad at me at that point, so I left.

About a week later I came back again, and the chief of staff is like, "I've been told not to help you with this anymore."

And she was in charge of our HR, which is why I had pulled her into the conversation. So the next thing you know, my captain calls me, and they had transferred Mike Moore to road patrol.

So I went in there, and I said, "Why on earth did we transfer him to road patrol? He just needed some appointments."

I was extremely upset about it, and they said, "Well, he can go there to relax and not have to worry about it anymore."

I said, "But you realize what he's going to see now? Road patrol is not relaxing. He did his time in road patrol."

So anyway, that guy haunts me. Every time I see him at a restaurant, I always ask him how he's doing. He talks to me. He knows I did the best I could for him. He still didn't get the help he needs.

He's on the PBA board, actually, and I saw him at the PBA party. I said, "Mike, can I use your name? Because I'm going to talk about what happened to you."

He said, "Yeah, absolutely you can use my name."

I said, "Did you ever get the help you needed?"

He said, "No, never got it."

Q. Is he still employed with the sheriff's office?

A. Yep.

Q. He's still on the road?

A. Yep. That is so unethical. Whenever I think about that -- that's one of the things that I look back on and just get really angry about. So anyway -- and there's more.

Jody Branaman. He's the president of the PBA, as you know. I put in my letter in the beginning of June. I gave them a month. I wanted to help them out, and I wanted to make sure that before I left I put any loose ends -- I didn't want Chad to have to shoulder my responsibilities while they were looking for somebody to replace me.

Well, after two days, they put all my stuff on Chad. I was cut out of meetings. I was cut out of emails. I was basically just sitting around packing my boxes for a month. I had literally nothing to do. And sort of towards the end of that month I started packing my stuff up, and I packed my truck full of the stuff.

I wasn't in charge of Jody Branaman anymore -- he was the FBI guy -- because I didn't have detectives or anything. So Jody calls me, and I can immediately tell -- and I'm in there with Brenda Butler, who's our tech lady. She was trying to download my hard drive.

He was crying. I said, "Jody, are you all right?"

And he was just crying. I said, "Where are you at?"

He goes, "I'm on the side of the road."

I said, "What's going on?"

Because it wasn't unusual for deputies to call me when they were upset. I got calls all the time.

He says, "I'm trying to make it to Dr. McDougall."

I said, "What's going on?"

He goes, "My daughter" -- his daughter, he's having serious issues with his daughter. I guess she tried to take her life at one point. I talked to him. He said I could talk about this.

He was distraught. I said, "You sound really not okay."

He said, "Yeah, I'm calling you because Lance Yaeger said that I had" -- "he ordered me to come to the station right now to have a meeting about my lack of timeliness in answering his emails." He said, "And I have to go right now. He's ordering me."

I said, "Oh, no. You go to your appointment. I'm overriding that. I'm still a major. You go to your appointment. You can't be deprived of medical assistance. Go to your appointment." It was for him, basically, at this point.

So I talked to him on the phone until he made it to his appointment. I said, "When you get done with your appointment, give me a call. Everything is fine. You're not going to get in trouble."

Then I text Chad and Yaeger in a group text. I said "Hey, Jody called me. He really needs help. He's a mile from his psychologist. I've overridden your decision about the email meeting. You can't deprive somebody of mental health assistance. He's going to there. This is the way it's going to be. If you have any questions, let me know."

No response times two. Nothing.

So you got to remember the sheriff had a very volatile relationship with Jody Branaman. In my mind, I'm not helping Jody Branaman. I'm helping a deputy sheriff who needs help, which is what I frequently did. I'm not doing it for who he is. I'm doing it for what it is.

So I should have known the repercussions. I didn't hear anything back. Boy, were there. So Jody went to his appointment. I see Lance in the hallway. Lance was just ranting and raving. I could tell that he was just ranting and raving probably most likely about me. I saw him go down to the sheriff's suite.

I see Chad in the parking lot. I'm like, "Hey, Chad. Did you get my text?" It was kind of noticeable.

He's like, "Well, what text?"

I'm like, "The text I sent you about Jody."

He's like, "Oh, yeah," kind of like he didn't want to touch it or be involved in it.

So he goes to lunch or wherever he's going, so I'm minding my business. And about an hour after that I get called into Chad's office, and Decoursey is in there. And I was like, here we go. Like, I knew what time it was.

Decoursey goes, "The sheriff wants your truck back now."

Now, keep in mind, I was still going to be employed there for two more months until September, actually, three months until September as a deputy sheriff. And I had to testify at -- the PBA was suing the sheriff at the time, and I was supposed to testify in that.

So he looks at me, and he says, "He wants it now."

I said, "He can't have it now. All my stuff is in it. You told me I could turn it in in two weeks when I came back."

He said, "No, he wants it now."

And he goes, "We also want to know what was the significance of July 7th when you resigned?"

Now, you got to remember it's been a month since I turned the damn letter in. I said, "Is there a problem?"

Because I was getting really -- like, at the end, really paranoid because I felt like I was kind of being targeted at the end. And I kind of wasn't wrong, because he looks at me, and he goes, "Well, we're just wondering if you can change the date on that."

They wanted me to resubmit it, and I said, "No, I'm not going to do that. July 7th is when I told the division of retirement I was retiring. I've already got everything set up with my pay periods. No, I'm not doing that."

"Well, when can you have your truck back?"

I said, "Well, my fiance goes to school in Orlando. I guess we'll stay up all night and bring it at 1:00 in the morning."

He said, "Yeah, I need you to come in and bring all your stuff back tomorrow."

So all of a sudden we want all your stuff back; and make no mistake, it was because of Jody Branaman.

So I'm like, okay. So I go home that night. I'm up all night long, 1:00 in the morning. The truck sits there for six months after I dropped it off. I have very good friends in fleet, and all the deputies said it never moved from that place. So he needed it back so badly -- he really basically was just giving me a hard time.

So we left the truck there, and then the next day I had to come in. My very first day of being a retiree where I was supposed to have two weeks to bring my stuff back, I had to bring everything back, 28 years' worth of stuff back.

So I bring all this stuff back, and I'm piling it everywhere, every which way. And Becky Butcher sees me, and she says, "What's wrong? What the heck is going on?"

And I told her, and she goes, "They're just trying to humiliate you."

I said, "Well, they can't do that to me because I won't let them."

So then I go up to -- I'm almost done at this point. I go up to the HR department. And I sit down in the chair, and I said, "Hey, I need" -- they're like, "We need your key."

And earlier in the day I had texted my boss four, five times; didn't answer me. Kept ignoring me. Kept ignoring me. And finally he says, "You need to turn your key in today."

Like wouldn't even answer the phone for me the whole day. This is still my boss. This is Decoursey.

So I didn't want to give my key back because I was an employee for two more months. They're like, "We need your bond card and your key."

And I'm thinking what if I get into an altercation? I'm still a sworn deputy sheriff here. Well, they took my bond card, and they took my key.

So Rashawn goes, "What you need in the building for?" just like that.

And I said, "I need to come in to testify. What if I want to use the gym? I'm still an employee here."

She goes, "Let me go ask the sheriff."

So they leave me sitting there in a plastic chair, after I've been working there twenty-eight years, go down the hallway, talk to the sheriff. The sheriff comes -- or she comes back. The sheriff never talks to me.

Rashawn comes back and says, "Here," and gives me this.

And I said, "Is that a key to the building?"

She says, "No. The sheriff doesn't want you to have a key to the building. You can be like any other retiree."

I'm not a retiree now. You got to understand, I'm not a retiree. And I open it, and it says "Honorably Retired."

I say, "Isn't he supposed to give me this at my shadow box ceremony? And you're just giving it to me while I'm in a plastic chair?"

"That's what he's going to give you."

So I take my credentials back. So you got to understand I'm leaving the building. I'm a deputy sheriff for almost three more months. I have no credentials to say I'm active, which to me is ethically wrong, wrong. Okay? Just to show me who was boss. Just to tell me I'm not welcome there anymore because I helped Jody Branaman. That's how I feel. Whether that's correct or not, it's how I feel; and every single thing that happened points to that. I do not regret helping him. I'd do it again.

So I got stopped in Ocala about two weeks before I was officially retired. He asked for my identification. I said, "Hey, I have weapons in the car. I want you to try to get it. I don't want to" --

He says, "Are you on the job?"

I said, "Technically for another two weeks I'm on the job. The badge says I'm retired, but I'm not retired yet."

It was awkward. I had to explain to this other cop why I was carrying a retired badge when in fact I was not retired, and I felt like that was dangerous too. But anyway, that was very important. I wanted to talk about that.

And last but not least, Nick Tillman. Nick Tillman was another one that called me. I had a lot of deputies call me over the time. Nick Tillman called me, and he texted me, and we talked. And you're aware that he failed his psych evaluation when he got back from Afghanistan. Pretty much everyone fails their psych evaluation after being in combat.

So he gotten taken off the road, and he was taking temperatures during COVID over in our com center. So I'd go see him every day. Nobody would give him any information, and he got frustrated. I wasn't his captain or his major at the time; George was.

He got very upset, frustrated. He went to HR to get information. They tried to say he was being combative; he wasn't. He just needed some information. So basically, they kept him in the dark.

And I have text messages with him where he basically says, "This is why no one asks for help."

So Nick was cleared finally on October 4th after months of being on light duty. He went to his VA, who cleared him October 4th. They cleared him. Dr. McDougall cleared him. Everyone cleared him; but yet they didn't put him back to work, and he just rotted over there. Then he went to over the jail and did all kinds of other stuff. He was very upset about it.

He didn't get to come back to work for a while. And then when he finally did, he told me he came back -- because I told him, "Just play the game, dude."

Because we had a meeting where we do the -- it's not fit for duty, but the Tuesday meetings. We would come and talk about all the people on medical, whether they should have a job, whether they should work light duty. I'm sure you've heard about it. Those meetings were famous.

But Danielle Judd, she was like -- we're talking about Nick Tillman. We had his thing up, and we're trying to discuss letting him go back on the road again. And Danielle says, "My dad had PTSD. He's going to have a psychotic break. He's going to go crazy."

She was like yelling. I looked at her, and I said, "That is not a one-size-fits-all."

I was getting pissed. I'm like, "You should know more than anybody else that's not what PTSD is. Some people don't do any of that stuff. Some people do all of that stuff. They've said he can come back to work. What's the problem?"

They said he couldn't come back to work. I was overruled, and he sat out for that whole month.

October 28th he went back to work. He texted me. I told him congratulations. I was genuinely happy for him. I told him, "Hey, just keep doing what you're doing. If you need something, let me know." It's not your fault type of thing. There's nothing wrong with you.

Obviously, Nick committed suicide right after I retired.

Q. When was that exactly?

A. He shot himself in the chest. This bracelet is him, actually. He shot himself in the chest on February 15th, 2023.

Q. So three or four months later?

A. And the message -- yeah, because October 28 is when he came back. And the message to be looked at from this -- but October was 2020, now. That was when COVID was going on, and he just killed himself in '23.

But the message that I got from this personally from dealing with Nick is, when he told me "this is why people don't ask for help," that's probably why he didn't ask for help again; and I stand by that. I'm sure that makes me a pariah, but, you know -- and a lot of people feel real bad about Nick.

Nick is another one I think about that was let down by our agency. It's not an environment where people that had mental health issues could not be judged when they came forward as defective or a liability. And God knows I hid mine; because if they would have found out I had a problem, I would have been gone just like that.

All right. So now I'm going to move on because I know you got to hurry. This is important stuff.

Protective sweep issue. I know you know about this, probably, because we got it --

Q. Protective sweep?

A. Protective sweep. We actually asked for an opinion from the State Attorney's Office and from Judge Wright. This was back when Lance Yaeger was my acting captain.

When a SWAT team or patrol goes to a house -- you guys already know this -- and let's say there's a domestic violence issue in the house; and there's a lot of chaos, and the wife comes out of the house. All right. Patrol will do a protective sweep of the house before we set up in front of it with a crime scene because somebody could shoot us from within the house.

You're not doing a sweep to search anything. You're looking for a person inside. It's completely legal. If you do see something while in that procedure, you can lock it down for a search warrant. You don't search anything. You don't touch anything. That's legal. All right?

So one day the SWAT team was doing a search warrant, and I was on the phone with Lance. And Lance was like, "Oh, God, what are they doing? They're getting together. They're getting together."

I said, "Yeah, they're about to do a protective sweep. Let them."

This patrol had gone to a house, failed to clear it. We had our crime scene out there, so it's a pretty dire situation. You need to go in and clear it. We can't wait for that; otherwise, we have to go a mile out and we'll be there for three, four days before somebody comes in and clears it.

I told him, "Leave them alone. Let them do what they're doing. They're doing something that needs to be done."

So they go and they do the protective sweep. He calls me back and tells me. I said, "Not a problem." To me, it was normal.

So the undersheriff calls me, and me and him start talking about what happened with patrol not securing the house. And I said, "Yeah, we did a protective sweep on it so that we could continue our investigation."

He goes, "Wait a minute. You did a protective sweep?"

He got really upset with me, and he talked about Brianna Taylor, which has nothing to do with a protective sweep. That was a no-knock search warrant. You get where I'm going with this?

So I'm like, "No, that's not what we did."

So he got with Jake Rush. Jake Rush said, "Yeah, it's legal," which for once he actually did give a correct answer.

So we had to get with the State Attorney's Office and with Judge Wright, and they all provided documentation to us that it was in fact legal under the ways that I just talked about.

They said, "We're not doing protective sweeps." They told me it was not legal. It's not in writing anywhere. So you know what I told my SWAT team, my SWAT commander? I said, "Just do them. I don't want to hear about it. Don't die on" -- this is not legit.

Q. Because if I understand you correctly, their position would be that the SWAT team should not do a protective sweep, and then --

A. No, or patrol.

Q. -- forensics or some unarmed, unprotected individual should be the first person into a house to determine whether or not --

A. Somebody is still in there?

Q. -- somebody is still in there?

A. Yeah. They didn't say that in so many words, but they said they didn't like the protective sweep. It was illegal. We didn't need to be doing that. We needed to have a large perimeter.

Q. Is there any discussion in this conversation with Undersheriff Decoursey that the first person who would then go into the house would likely be someone who is not wearing body armor, who is not armed, who would be -- because I think, if I know my procedures correctly, we're going to photo document the house for whatever it is before --

A. After the protective sweep is done.

Q. But now we're not doing one.

A. Yeah.

Q. So now the first person in the door is going to be with a camera and no body armor under this procedure that they're suggesting?

A. Not technically on that conversation we had about it being a camera person; but I explained to him, if the house is not given a protective sweep, whoever is at the house, whoever is there, even a civilian -- let's say the morgue comes. Let's say the ME comes. Anybody can come. They could get hurt or killed, we don't know. So that was explained.

Q. While you were explaining that it might be a sheriff's department employee who was unprotected and unarmed who could be in jeopardy, you were suggesting that it could be the medical examiner's office who was similarly situated.

A. Yeah, it could be anybody. I was told basically -- even after I gave the actual -- now, if you look through my emails -- I can't remember the date. I may have had -- I think I sent those attachments. I either sent them in an email or I gave them to them personally, but I think I sent them in an email because Lance sent them to me.

Q. The issues about proving to the administration that a protective sweep is permitted under the law?

A. Yes. I was trying to say, listen, this is legal. This is law enforcement practice. This is an officer safety issue.

Q. I just want to make sure that I understand. This to me again falls in the category of malfeasance where they have so little understanding of the operation of law enforcement that they are suggesting that an unarmed, unprotected person should be the first person to enter a home that may contain people who are engaged in nefarious activity that could result in violence?

A. And more than that, not ensuring before those people come that the home is indeed safe. That -- to me, the home has to be made safe. And when he compared it to Brianna Taylor, I was like, this isn't even close to that.

Q. If there was an injured person in the home or for any reason a need for EMS or fire to go in the home, my understanding is that their policy is that they won't enter a home unless they have assurance from --

A. The scene secured.

Q. -- whoever in control of the scene that their safety is assured?

A. Yeah, it has to be -- they call it scene secured.

Q. How would that be accomplished if there was some need for someone else to enter?

A. It wouldn't.

Q. It would just be at a stalemate?

A. Yeah.

Q. That they would be saying we can't go in until there's a protective -- or they wouldn't know the term, but they would say the scene is secure. And you're saying, "I'm sorry, but the sheriff doesn't allow us to secure the scene."

A. Yeah, but I never told them that. I just let them keep doing it.

Q. You didn't carry out the order?

A. Yeah, I didn't carry out the order, exactly, because I felt as if the order was not ethical. I tried to make an argument for it. I wasn't listened to. I produced documentation. The documentation was obviously not -- I know it was probably read, but it was not studied.

So after that, I just said, "We're going to do what we got to do. I'm not going to a funeral."

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. And that was sent to Decoursey and to the sheriff?

A. I am pretty sure that that was sent to Decoursey. I'm pretty sure I made two attachments: One from the state attorney, and one from Judge Wright. And I know that Lance Yaeger sent those to me, if that makes sense. So you should be able to find those.

I'm not sure of the exact timing of it, though. I'm sorry about that. But that was a big deal to me.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. I understand.

A. It's another thing that was a big deal to me.

Q. It certainly falls into the category of malfeasance or misfeasance, that that is just a fundamental misunderstanding of how law enforcement functions.

A. Uh-huh. And I'm almost done, and this next thing is just like that.

So my entire career under three of my sheriffs before him we always did protective sweeps because it's in case law.

Q. Sure. It's been taught in law school since --

A. Exactly. Exactly. I've never seen it questioned, and I've never seen anyone have a problem with that. It was so ludicrous to me that, again, I didn't pass the order on.

I talked to the SWAT commander, which at the time I think was Josh. I can't be 100 percent sure, but I think it was Josh. And I told him, "Just go do the protective sweeps, just don't talk to Lance about it. Don't tell Lance nothing. I'm assuming you're doing them. Don't die."

So the other thing that was weird. Like, when I was working under Sadie Darnell, I was the special teams commander, the captain, for years, and the lieutenant before that. So I have a lot of relationships with other sheriffs, and they would call me. They would call me in the grocery store and other places to ask me for a helicopter, ask me for a boat, or ask me for something. I had a good relationship with all of them.

And then what I would do -- most of the time they would tell me they couldn't get ahold of the sheriff, and could I help them. So I would say, sure, and I would get stuff in motion.

I'd call my major and say, "Hey, just so you know, Sheriff So-and-So called me."

And they would say, "Okay. No problem," and they'd call the sheriff. And she would text me and say, "Thank you for taking care of that for me."

So I never thought there was anything wrong with it. When Watson came into office, the sheriffs continued to call me on some stuff. So the Columbia County sheriff, whose name is --

Q. Mark Hunter?

A. Yep, Hunter. He called me for years. He called me about a fight at the hospital one time. He called me about a missing boat. He called me about a couple missing people. I'd be like, "Hey, I'll take care of it for you," or whatever.

We had a big manhunt on the interstate where one of the cops had been shot at. It wasn't the trooper in Micanopy. It was the one all the way in the northwest by the Alligator rest stop/food stand. We set up a big command post, and Sheriff Hunter was out there. He came out there. Our sheriff didn't come out. Whatever. That's his business, you know. We don't really need it. We could handle it.

So I was the commander of the scene, and he called me later on to thank me for it. And he called Bobby Stafford. He called him to thank him for it, and he called somebody else; I don't remember who. And it came up in conversation, and they got so mad.

They said I am never to answer the phone for another sheriff again. And they called to complain, I think, to the sheriff's association that the sheriff called me. And they called the sheriff to tell him not to call me. It was crazy. They said it's so disrespectful that they would call you and not me. I'm sure you've heard the whole disrespect thing.

I felt like less than nothing after that. I was like, "What did I do wrong?" This is the stuff I've been doing my entire career. I help people. I don't care what your rank is.

But anyway, I wanted to bring that up.

Q. Okay.

A. I felt like that was unethical. I told him, "This is my personal phone, so I can't answer a personal phone?"

He's like, "Not if a sheriff is calling."

Last thing I wanted to talk about, which, again, is one more example of unethical. There was a plane crash in Levy County, I don't know if you remember it, with a family. They were all broke up about it. A lot of the deputies really broke up about it. I was over the CISM team as the major, so I had responsibility of all special teams. This was when George was gone.

They requested our CISM. So it took a couple days. They asked a bunch of questions, but they finally said they could have CISM.

Q. What is that?

A. Critical Incident Stress Management. What it is, is basically you have a circle, and you debrief people when they've seen something really bad so that they don't develop PTSD or other kinds of problems, traumatic stress.

So they're in a new circle. They had already scheduled it. People had taken time off. They had arranged day care. We had our team coming and everything.

So like four days goes by. I'm sitting at my house. I can't even make this up. It's a Saturday. I get called by Decoursey, and he says, "We're going to put a hold on that assistance."

And I said, "What's the problem?"

He was like, "They didn't call the sheriff and ask him directly. So if they want our assistance, they're going to have to call the sheriff and ask him directly, otherwise we're not going to send our resources over there."

He goes, "You need to call the undersheriff of that county."

Now, he's an undersheriff, and he wants me to call their undersheriff and tell him that on a Saturday.

So I'm like, "So you want me to call the undersheriff that's the same rank as you?"

He's like, "Yeah, just do it."

I'm like, okay.

So I called, and Brad Beauchamp answered the phone. I told him, I said, "Our sheriff said that your sheriff didn't call our sheriff. So your sheriff has to call our sheriff or we can't bring the CISM team to you."

He was just like real quiet on the phone. He was kind of like, "Are you kidding me?"

And I said -- I didn't say anything, and he goes, "Oh, I know you're just the messenger," because I couldn't say anything to him.

He goes, "Well, I'll see what I can do. It's a Saturday. Why is this happening one day before?"

They were supposed to do it Monday. And I couldn't say anything to him.

So their sheriff ended up calling our sheriff, but that was so unethical to me. You know what I mean?

There's four sheriff's associations as long as I've been associated with it, and you all know there's a brotherhood. So if I have something you need, I will give it to you for free. That's the way the sheriffs are. If somebody gets shot, God forbid, everybody with a pulse goes. No one sends a bill. No one has to ask anybody for nothing. That's just how it works, and that's so far from what I'm used to.

And the phone call thing, it's so far from what I'm used to with working with the Florida Sheriff's Association that it was very odd for me, and it really was yucky. And it involved mental health again. To me, that's like, come on, man, that's -- anyway --

MR. KRAMER: Understood. You guys have any more questions?

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. Can you just tell me a little bit about these Tuesday meetings?

A. Oh, yeah. Our Tuesday meetings. They were meetings that we had every Tuesday to look through all the people on light duty. So if we had like six active cases on light duty, we would pass out the six cases of information. And then we would decide whether that person can come back on light duty or they had to stay home and burn their leave, and they looked at things like had the person used it before.

And then a lot of times I'd be sitting in there, and somebody would say, well, that person is this. Well, we're not here for that. We're here to look at the facts. Does this person have the leave? Does this person have the time for light duty? Because the sheriff's discretion decides light duty; and it's always been that way, but we've never had a meeting for that. We've never had six people talking about somebody's medical stuff, never.

And I dreaded those because a lot of times in those there would be back-and-forth on things like whether somebody -- this thing with Nick, you know, the outburst with Nick, it made me really mad because I was just like, you know, it's people like you are the reason that nobody gets help because what you're saying is incorrect.

I don't know if that answers your question, but that's what we did. We sat in there and did that. And then when we got done, we would have a meeting with Decoursey. It would be me, Bobby, George, and Decoursey; and we'd just have a meeting, and pretty much that's it. We just met once a week.

Q. Okay.

A. And sometimes we told people, hey, you know, they're out of leave, they're not coming back. You have to retire. You're not coming back. We're not going to let you work here light duty. And some of those decisions that were made, I mean, they're made based on what the sheriff wants to do.

MR. KRAMER: Okay. That's it.

EXAMINATION

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Captain, I think the last thing we ended with was the staffing issues that have been at the courthouse and perhaps some discussions with the courthouse administrators or the judges about the effect that might have on their operation, and I had to cut you off.

If you remember where we were and can continue with what information you were providing, that would be excellent.

A. Yes, sir. So we -- we have a security meeting. I don't want to say it's regularly because it's not necessarily every month, but we have a security meeting. And I'm part of that group, and that group -- there's a security judge, which is Judge Colaw, and court administrator. You know, there's quite a few folks that are actually in the room.

And I have indicated for several years now, several years, that we are dangerously low on staffing at the courthouse, at both courthouses. And, actually, to give you an idea where we're at, I think we're down 11 sworn positions at both courthouses right now. And we're also down two civilian positions, which are very instrumental at the sheriff's office as well, or at the courthouses.

So I have -- I started very gingerly when this administration came in indicating that, you know, we have to do something with the staffing at the courthouse, and it only got worse.

And I was -- I was very candid with Judge Colaw and also with others that were in the room that I felt like our staffing could adversely affect the court's ability to function at the courthouses because, as you know, it requires a bailiff for your trials, for your hearings. Obviously, there needs to be security at the front door and the back door, et cetera, et cetera.

So there are duty positions at the courthouse. And the sheriff is full well -- as all of us, that there are requirements, Florida Statutes require security at the courthouses and what our responsibilities are.

Now, the sheriff does allow me the latitude of making the decision of where I'm going to place those people within the courthouse; but there is a requirement for security, and we're to the point now where I cannot fulfill that mission.

So what I've had to do is, I have fixed my own problem. I made six mitigated suggestions to the undersheriff and the sheriff in the room with -- it was also Major Blizzard at the time; now retired. Five of those six mitigation strategies are in this email today; and five of the six were denied within minutes of my recommendations, leaving me no other choice but to pull staff from other areas of the sheriff's office to fulfill the mission of the courthouse.

I pull -- weekly I pull a deputy sheriff from the civil bureau. We are already short staffed in the civil bureau. It's a small bureau, anyway, which again, is a requirement of Florida State Statute for the civil papers. I pull one person for that week off of that bureau, and I pull people from other bureaus that are also short staffed to fulfill those duty positions at the courthouse.

We also send an email out to the entire agency asking for help. When I say "help," it is nonprotected overtime, so these deputies don't have to do it. It's not required of them. They're doing it because they don't have any leave, and they have the opportunity to make overtime; albeit, not protected overtime. And the difference between the two would be if, for example, I had used eight hours of annual leave during that pay period, that would be straight time. It would not be protected overtime.

That was one of the six suggestions, mitigating strategies, that I gave to the sheriff and the undersheriff pretty quickly in my tenure -- in their tenure here at the sheriff's office. Again, five of the six were denied very quickly. In fact, before I even got out of the parking lot they were denied.

So I've been very frustrated because I have to fix my own problems, and I understand that. I certainly understand the staffing issues that we have; this is nationwide, but I also understand that we've caused a lot of our own problems here at the Alachua County Sheriff's Office. And we have a lot of human capital and a lot of good people that have left that could and should have been used and staffed here at the sheriff's office, and we've lost those people and can't -- many of them, we can't get them back.

So, you know, I have -- I can go over the mitigation strategies if you'd like.

Q. What was the one that was accepted?

A. So the only one that was accepted was cross-train the folks at the courthouse from other bureaus.

So what I did, is -- I have the civil bureau, which is separate, separate from the courthouse. I took all of the employees in the warrants bureau and the training -- I'm sorry, the training bureau and the civil bureau, and I cross-trained them to do certain basic functions at the courthouse so that, from a moment's notice, knowing that I can't facilitate staffing, you know, carefully, or, I mean -- I can't find the right word, but I can't find and fulfill the staffing at the courthouse, at a moment's notice I can call the training bureau and say, "I need one of your folks to dress out and put your Class A on, and you got to be there within an hour."

So they have been told to keep their uniform ready to go, squared away, so that I can -- they're cross-trained to do certain basic functions at the courthouse, but they can't do all of it.

Judges like to have a friendly face that they understand and they communicate with well, so we -- I use those bailiffs in those positions to where that they have that relationship with the judge so the judge doesn't have to ask for certain things. They can look over and nod, and my bailiffs know what they're supposed to do because of the relationship they have with the judges.

So there are certain areas that I cannot use in the training bureau. They're not trained as bailiffs, but I can train them on certain basic duties like, for example, the front door, the back door. Within 30 or 40 minutes, I can take any sworn law enforcement officer with a gun, and I could train you and teach you to work in the front door or the back door. And that's what I did with one of the mitigation strategies, and that was the only one I was able to get out -- to get done.

Q. What is full staffing at the courthouse, for both courthouses, for sworn and unsworn?

A. For sworn and civilian, it would be, I believe, 36 FTEs, full-time equivalents. That's 36 positions between -- cumulative between the two courthouses.

Q. And what is the minimum safe number?

A. We're below that.

Q. I understand, but like -- maybe it's not said, but what is -- in your mind, what is the minimum safe number that you can operate with?

A. I have those duty positions that I mentioned, which would be when there is a docket, and the docket says there's a trial, the expectation is that I would have a trained bailiff in that courtroom, in the judge's courtroom or the hearing, and I would have a minimum -- minimum of two sworn deputy sheriffs on that front door.

We have -- as you know, if you're coming in the criminal courthouse -- and I've done the count. I've sat down. I've looked at the number. We have up to 600 people that are coming through, especially on a Monday, coming into the criminal courthouse.

Screening people in a timely fashion, you have to have at least two there. Three is ideal. Two is not -- two is not -- it's something that we are -- struggle to get. We struggle to get that.

Q. So if you put that in terms of the number of FTEs that you need to maintain minimum staffing, would it be 20?

A. I would have to count every duty position, and I'd have to look at my staffing report; which I don't have it right now with me, but I can tell you that we're down --

Q. Eleven, from what you said earlier?

A. Eleven plus the noncivilian positions that are vital in the courthouse as well.

Q. You said nine sworn, two unsworn, which means --

A. No, eleven sworn.

Q. Eleven sworn?

A. Yes. And two, possibly three civilian.

Q. So you're down as many as 14 FTEs, so clearly the number of FTEs that is minimally safe is somewhere greater than 22?

A. It is. And we also have to recognize, and I think you gentlemen do, people have to have time off. They're going to have COVID. They're going to have FMLA. We have in-service training that is required by FDLE. So that number -- please recognize that that number is -- that is what I have to have, and that is accounting for life happens, and, you know, life happens everywhere.

Right now I've got a lieutenant who's on baby leave. I've got folks that are sick. I have folks that have injuries. I have in-service training that's coming up that we have to send two per day there. So when you start bringing that tally, which is what we just talked about, that number, and then you bring it down from those, that's what I'm dealing with daily.

Q. Restating that would be that the 14 that you're down right now doesn't include any of the sicknesses, illnesses, injuries, training, regular duty absences that can occur. And you're already at -- 22 is below your minimal staffing levels, and so it's just beyond that?

A. And I'm not even giving people time off.

Q. Right.

A. It used to be that we could have two -- I could allow two people per building per day with fully staffing. That's how the rosters are built so that you understand that we can have leave, we can have -- you know, people can have babies, those sort of things. It's built that way for a reason, and I don't have that now.

MR. KRAMER: Okay. Any questions?

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Captain, two questions, actually. We know with staffing, after a time of never getting a day off, sick days all of a sudden start rising. Have you seen that?

A. Yes, we absolutely have. And I've had to discipline people over it because they can't get time off, which has a result of misuse of our leave; and I've disciplined people of that.

And it's hard, it's a balance, you know.

You -- in a perfect world, you know, people can hang in there for a period of time, but they're to the point now where they're very frustrated. We are all frustrated. And we're losing additional staff because of that, because I am not allowing the leave that we used to.

I can't get people to voluntarily come into the criminal courthouse or the civil courthouse right now because they won't -- they recognize that they won't get time off.

Right now I have -- in a perfect world, when there's no sickness and there's no training, et cetera, et cetera, I can allow one per building off; but in a perfect world -- we're not -- we don't live in a perfect world.

Q. So now, because they're not getting their "I need next Tuesday off to go to my daughter's doctor's appointment," they're calling in sick?

A. That's correct. And I denied recently a deputy sheriff, a good deputy sheriff, the ability and opportunity to go to his son's elementary graduation; that only happens once. And I had to work cumulatively with two other captains to juggle some staff around in the courthouse to make sure that that function took place and he had the opportunity to go to that, and I could only give him a portion of the day.

So he had to go leave in uniform, change, because he would have been off duty at that point, and then go to his son's graduation at elementary -- this elementary school. I don't know what grade he's in, but it was his graduation.

And then he had to come back in uniform because I just didn't have the staff to be able to give him the whole day. And we'll lose people because of that. We're going to continue to lose people.

Q. Second part of my question: You talked about robbing Peter to pay Paul, pulling from the other bureaus. People hear the word "bureau," they think 40, 50 people. How many are actually in warrants? So when you pull one from warrants, or in civil, when you pull people from civil, and you're already down there, are they being affected also as far as their jobs?

A. They absolutely are. We have -- every bureau I have at the sheriff's office is depleted to the point now where it's difficult to give them time off and to function the way we should and need to.

So yes, absolutely, every bureau has a minimum staffing. Every bureau is different as far as, you know, some of the bureaus are smaller than others, and some are larger, you know. And I have task forces that are through MOUs and contracts and those sort of things that are for -- we have to fulfill those contracts.

And yes, when I pull someone from warrants, and I pull them -- that is a task force member, that has a direct effect on their ability to function in their MOU and their daily warrants tasks.

And please also recognize that those folks deserve to have time off, and they certainly, you know, will have FMLA. And when you're already short staffed, it affects everybody.

Q. That was the next point I was going to ask. The courthouse being as short as it is has affected everybody under you, all your particular AORs, areas of responsibility. Is that correct?

A. Yes, sir. That's correct.

INSPECTOR RIDDICK: That's it, sir.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. All right. We have gone through some of the stuff you brought with you, but I don't think we had gotten to everything. Is there another matter that we need to discuss?

A. I will mention it; and then if you'd like to pass on it, I will let you pass. If you have a question, I can answer the question, if you'd like, if that's all right.

Q. Sure.

A. So some of the notes I took -- and again, I don't know if we've already talked about it or not -- is probationary employees demoted without cause.

Q. I don't recall that. Now, my understanding is you can demote or fire a probationary employee for any reason. My question, I guess, would be, you can't do that for unlawful reasons. Even if somebody were a probationary employee, you couldn't fire them because they became pregnant or fire them because they are of a particular race or ethnicity. Is that the type of thing that's occurring?

A. So my concern is, is that we've used informal punishment here at the sheriff's office. And I think it's pretty common knowledge at the sheriff's office that we've used that as an ability to informally and not document punishment, and I'll give you an example.

Q. Is that a violation of the bargaining agreement? And I know you're not a member; you're too high ranking to be a part of it.

A. Yeah, I'm not, so I'd have to review and refer to it.

But for an example, you know, we did have a lieutenant that was approved -- I mean, promoted. And he was demoted after a period of time, after several months, because he "liked" an unflattering Facebook post for no -- again, no one would ever say that that's why he was demoted. It would never be written down on a piece of paper anywhere, but I think it's common knowledge that that's what happened.

This person was demoted because they "liked" accidentally, you know, on -- because it was -- you know, they were trying to -- I don't know why; it doesn't really matter. I don't even have social media. But I think it was common knowledge that that's what happened, and that's problematic for me.

It's for -- even though I believe people can be removed for any reason during that 24-month period, I still believe that we have to be just and we have to be -- we have to -- our ethics have to rise above that. And if there was -- something that was in the Facebook was pornographic or whatever, but simply because a deputy chose to, you know, make a comment about our leadership, and a lieutenant "likes" it, whether it's stupid or not, is -- that's -- you know, that's something -- we shouldn't demote. Probably he shouldn't have done it, but it's still problematic for me.

Q. Understood. And I think we may have heard more detail on that issue particularly before.

A. So we have documentation -- because of distrust at the administration, we've led to increased documentation because employees felt they had to protect themselves.

We have been told -- I've been told to my face by some of our leadership that they don't like all the formal documents, the emails; and we've been told to do that verbally so that there is no documentation that's out there, and that's problematic for me as well. An agency can't function that way. It's not safe, and it also -- it causes employees to protect themselves. And that's likely what I've done and what other people have done.

Q. And when you've been told not to document things, has it been for a specific reason? Have you been told why not to document things?

A. I'll give you an example. I have it here with me. So here's an example, which is with Lieutenant French. And this is one of those examples where I have forced the issue.

It could have been -- with this direction that they provided us, was me to go with them and bring information to them verbally. I chose not to do that. I documented because I felt like I needed to protect myself, and I also needed to protect my employee.

So Lieutenant French was -- and I'll try to summarize this as best I can. She was -- she was about to be and was transferred from the civil bureau to a position that is a -- through position control at the sheriff's office is a civilian position. She is a sworn lieutenant at the sheriff's office.

By Florida State Statute it requires that certain criteria has to be met to be able to fulfill a risk -- be in compliance with the government's -- the State of Florida's risk --

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. High-risk retirement?

A. High-risk retirement. Thank you very much.

So she brought -- did this correctly. And she brought it to my attention, and she said, "Hey, listen. This is going to affect my retirement, and I don't think it's proper."

She brought me some documentation. I read the Florida State Statute. I looked at the contract. I looked at position control. I did what I felt like was necessary to protect her and protect me. I documented it in an email that I went to -- I first went to our human resources director and bureau, and I asked her, "Is this going to affect Lieutenant French's high-risk retirement?" and I was told no, that that would not affect her high-risk.

Even though she was not going to supervise a single position that was high risk or a sworn position, she was going to be effectively a sworn person in an island where they are in a sworn position, control position, which is contrary to what Florida State Statute says; I knew that that is the case, and that was wrong.

So I, in turn, after leaving the human resources, I went to our AMB, which is our CFO, and that is Patty Justice. I met with her, and I said, "Patty, this transfer of Lieutenant French, will this affect her high-risk retirement?"

Her answer to me was, "It absolutely will cause a problem with her retirement."

I said, "Really? Okay."

So now I have a conflict between our human resources and also our AMB, and I have a lieutenant who has complained that this is going to affect her high-risk retirement.

So I documented this, and I sent it to my major, Major Yaeger at that time, and I sent it to him. And I could have done what I've been directed to do, and that's not document anything and just come and have a conversation with you; but I didn't trust that this would be taken care of and that this would not protect my employee, and it would not protect me. So I documented it at my own risk. I documented it, and I sent it to my major. And that is on April 4th at 4:27 p.m.

Here, I'll just read the last portion of it. It says "I recommend the further discussions take place prior to Lieutenant French's transfer so as to ensure the employee's benefits do not negatively affect the employee's retirement contributions and we are in compliance with Florida State Statute," blah, blah, blah. "Thank you for your consideration."

So I sent that on April 4th, and Lieutenant French was -- I received no response whatsoever on this, and she was transferred into a civilian position, I think, four days later, despite my objections. No discussion, no nothing, she was transferred.

She was there about three hours, and then she was transferred back from position control at the jail and put right back into the -- in a sworn position. It's almost like -- part of what my job is, and my idea of what a good supervisor is supposed to do is, I'm supposed to take care of not only my boss but also those below me.

So I have the ability to protect my employees below me, but I have no opportunity to provide guidance to the supervisors beyond me, and that would be the majors and up. And, you know, this was all preventable. It was something -- we didn't have to do this. This was no rush, no timeline to do this, this transfer. Let's discuss it, let's have a conversation, let's read Florida State Statute, but we don't do that. What we do is, is we jump and then we try to fix the problems after they've already happened, and that's what happened.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Were you chastised in any way for putting all this in writing?

A. I was not. I was never chastised, but I was never provided any type of -- which they don't owe that to me; but what they do owe to the employees, potentially affecting a person's retirement, Lieutenant French, is an explanation of her transfer. I don't know that she ever gotten that. I certainly didn't get anything back for her.

I told her, I said, "I'm sorry. I documented everything for you. I can't do anything beyond that."

And she was transferred for several hours and then transferred back in position control, and we looked like -- it was embarrassing for the sheriff's office.

Q. Has there ever been an incident that you can recall where you did document something and you were chastised for doing so?

A. Other than sending texts and -- for the task force, I think, at the warrants bureau. I don't think I was chastised. I was just reminded. And I didn't know that this direction that they were going to provide me was going to go so far where I can't even communicate with my boss and send him a text and saying that my warrants folks are out of county, but I was told don't do that anymore, call me via telephone and tell me that your task force is going to be out of county. So there's no opportunity for me to have that text.

That has been corrected, by the way, since then because new leadership was moved into that position where my boss now expects me to communicate and document properly; but for a period of time, I didn't have that opportunity.

Q. And when did that change, and who's the new person?

A. That was when -- at that time Major Yaeger was in that position, and he was my direct supervisor. He has since been transferred on to the chief of staff; and I now have a new major, and that is Josh Crews. And I've been -- since that point in time I have had good leadership and a good relationship with my supervisor, and I've been able to communicate the way I'm supposed to.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. Lieutenant French didn't ask for the transfer to go into the civilian position; correct?

A. She did not.

Q. Do you know why she was transferred there?

A. I do not. We don't get explanations on that. And with the previous administration I had an opportunity to sit down, and we would think things through. And they would ask for feedback as to whether or not it was a good idea to transfer that person or for -- or we would at least have provided, you know, a recommendation. That doesn't happen.

I get called at 5:00 in the evening while I'm trying to eat with my family, and I'm told to transfer people and, you know, call me back in 20 minutes. So I call people like Lieutenant French and J.P. Hood and other people, and I tell them, "I'm sorry I don't have an explanation. I have no idea why you're being transferred. I'm sorry. I apologize it's thrown your family situation dynamic."

"What's the explanation? Why? Did I do something wrong?"

"I have no idea why you're transferred."

"Can you find that out?"

"Yes, I can. I'll try, but" --

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. Who do these phone calls come from?

A. They come from -- generally, from my direct supervisor, which was at that time Major Yaeger; and it's done via -- typically from cell phone, and it typically happens with very short notice.

When I say "very short notice," I mean I'm going to tell you to make these notifications. You got 20 minutes to make these notifications. Feedback -- or provide back, you know, and let me know that it's done and it's completed because we're -- there's an email. HR is waiting to send out the transfers.

And I sometimes would object, you know, and say -- object as best I could and say, "I don't think that's a good idea. You may want to relook at this" like, for example, the situation with Lieutenant French, and then here we go. They're transferred anyway, and we deal with the consequences.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Are you aware of any circumstance where someone has been transferred as a punishment, that is as what I would call -- refer to as extrajudicial, meaning outside of the bounds of the normal and accepted punishment system within the sheriff's office or discipline system within the sheriff's office?

A. I'm sorry. Tell me the question again. You're basically looking if we --

Q. Let me break it down a little bit for you. So there have been a lot of transfers within the time that the sheriff --

A. Hundreds.

Q. There's also been a lot of issues with discipline being properly administered, right? One of the ways that those two things could intersect is that transferring someone to a position that they don't want, they're untrained for, or perhaps is going to interfere with their normal functioning of their life, like moving someone to midnights when their whole family life is built on them working days, that could be punishment that's outside of the disciplinary system. Do you see what I'm saying?

A. Yes.

Q. I think that that's an example of somebody who has some kind of dustup with the administration and then suddenly you're on nights at the jail, right? Are you aware of those types of things ever happening?

A. Yes, I'm aware of those, some of which that I directly, you know, am aware of; and others I've just heard, and I've seen the transfers. You know, gosh, what happened with that?

Well, you know, this person obviously disagreed with something, you know, in CID or detectives. And this husband and wife now, all of a sudden, one is on the opposite team; and one is at nights and one is at days, where obviously, when you do a 12-hour shift, you will never see each other ever, literally, unless you take a day off.

So yes, we've seen those things at the sheriff's office.

Q. Let me ask you specifically, what have you personally been involved with and how are you aware that it was discipline outside of the disciplinary system?

A. So I was never told why Sherry French -- well, I take that back. I was told by my boss, which at the time was Major Yaeger, that Sherry French has been causing problems in social media and also very vocal -- that was the exact word, "very vocal" -- against the sheriff, and as a result she's been transferred.

She was transferred out of the civil bureau, and there was a lieutenant there. And there's a direct reflect -- or directly -- when you move someone, you're going to move someone else, and you're going to displace someone.

So I've got someone like J.P. Hood, Lieutenant Hood, who is trained. I've spent thousands of dollars on him in the civil bureau through Avalon, which is a training program for folks that are in the civil world. And it's the only one of those per year, and it costs thousands of dollars; and it's legal protection for the sheriff's office.

I sent him through that. I get him spun up, he's ready to go, trained properly. And then, because Lieutenant French is in OPS and she's been vocal against the sheriff, she's been moved out of our office of professional standards, transferred into the lieutenant -- I'm sorry, the civil bureau and then directly affected Lieutenant Hood. And he was transferred to move to patrol even though he wasn't -- he didn't do anything wrong and we spent thousands of dollars on him.

Now we're going to move Lieutenant French -- this is one of hundreds of transfers, by the way. She's moved into a position where she's not trained. And now I have to spend thousands of dollars, which again, this training is only available once per year. And that's one example.

Q. Are there others that you've been directly involved in?

A. I'd have to refer and sit down and really think about all the transfers that have affected me.

Q. That's okay. There's nothing right at the tip of your mind?

A. Not right this second; but yes, I'm sure, because every bureau has had this happen multiple times where they've been transferred and moved around.

Q. My interest is really where that transfer is being done to circumvent the discipline system. My concern is that officers have a fundamental right to the disciplinary system that is in place in the agency; and that when they're disciplined outside of that system, it violates state statute because officers have rights, right? There's an Officers' Bill of Rights.

So, you know, that is my concern is, is there -- are there times when those personnel transfers, which have been incredibly numerous, far beyond what anyone has ever experienced in the agency in that period of time, they're being done for that purpose, to discipline people?

A. Yes, I'm -- you know, those situations have happened, and there were people that were transferred out of -- that were trained and out of the courthouse. You know, people like Lieutenant Anderson, highly trained, highly skilled lieutenant of the court security bureau and then transferred.

But again, no one is ever going to give me an explanation of why that happened. I can only speculate that they were transferred because of their disagreement and vocal, you know, disagreement with the administration. I can't provide a document and give it to you saying that is what happened.

Q. Understood. But sometimes you're aware because -- for instance, the example you gave is perfect because you're talking to then Major Yaeger, and he's telling you the reason the transfer is occurring is because she's too vocal and she's too critical of the sheriff on social media, right? Which, if that were true, she could be subject to discipline. Would you agree that that's true?

A. I agree, yes.

Q. There's two possible tracks for discipline there. If she was your employee, you could have done the discipline yourself, right, or you could refer her to the professional standards?

A. Correct.

Q. But neither of those things happened with Lieutenant French?

A. That's right.

Q. So whatever rights she may have had to contest or to address this allegation, she never gets to address that?

A. Correct. And there is another example of this, and this is with a deputy, Deputy Travis Devinny.

Q. I think we've talked about that the last time you were here, but that -- just to clarify. When you were here we talked about the fact that he was being stopped from being allowed to perform overtime hours and was an asset to your bureau, and that that was because --

A. The exact comment, you know, from my supervisor was -- is that because he -- Travis is a cancer to the agency.

Q. And that cancer was -- it's my understanding, is that he had made a hostile work environment complaint --

A. Correct.

Q. -- against Major Yaeger?

A. Correct. And I corrected or challenged my boss, again, at my -- you know, and when I say "challenge," again, very gingerly. I mean, you got to be careful about these things.

I said, "Hold on a second. Is there a disciplinary concern with him at the courthouse?" and the answer was no.

And I said, "Okay. Did he do something at the courthouse while working at overtime there?"

Because I don't supervise Travis Devinny. He's one of those that volunteered to work an overtime position that I need in the courthouse; and he does this anywhere from three to four times per month, and I need him there. He's an asset for me. And he's always professional when he's there in the courthouse, and I'm not aware of anything.

So I asked, "Is there something I need to be aware of? Did something happen at the courthouse?"

"No, no. There's other things that you're not aware of."

I said, "Okay. I understand. I understand. But he's still entitled to due process. If he's" -- like you said, you know, "Is there a disciplinary issue that I'm going to go to him and tell him, 'You cannot work overtime because of this investigation or whatever?"

"No, no, nothing like that."

And I said, "Well, the right thing to do" -- and this is exactly the words that I said, "The right thing for me to do is to go to Travis Devinny, Deputy Devinny, and tell him that he's not being able to" -- "he's not afforded the opportunity to work overtime there."

And that was, "No, I don't want you to do that."

"Well, he's going to discover this. You know what I mean? He's going to call and say, 'Why am I not being scheduled? Why not?'"

I said, "What would you like me to do? If I can't tell him that he can't; and then when he does call, and he calls through his chain of command, what would you like me to do?"

He said, "Well, I will" -- and I'm trying to remember the exact word and comment. It was like, "I'll take that one on the chin. I'll take that one on the chin when and if it comes up."

Well, within a week -- and I had already kind of protected myself some on that. I went to my lieutenant at that time, who still is, Marvin Gunn, who's my lieutenant in the courthouse. And I said, "Listen, this is what" -- "the comment that the major said."

I told him. That was before we even, you know, told Travis that he couldn't -- or he learned that he couldn't provide overtime there. I said, "Listen, this is what the major said. It's not right. It's not correct. I don't like it. This is what the major said to me, so here's what I want you to do."

And that's what I told Marvin, I said, "This is what I want you to do. I want you to just not schedule him. Don't put him in there. He's going to figure it out. He's going to question it. When that happens, Marvin, I want you to say, 'Captain Maynard said that you're not able to schedule in the courthouse, and he would like you to call him and talk with him.'"

So I did that intentionally knowing that Travis would -- he's going to question it, and he's going to come to me. And I already told Major Yaeger that this is what's going to happen, and then he says, okay, I'll take one on the chin.

So I was going to go to him and say, "Listen, Major. There it is. Now you're going to have to address it one way or the other."

Before that even happened, the colonel came to me. I was in the middle of a Zoom meeting. He said, "Captain, do you have a moment?"

I said, "No, sir. I'm sorry. I'm in a Zoom meeting. Can I get back with you in just a minute?"

He said, "Yes, absolutely."

So I watched the colonel, Colonel Chad Scott, pull the legal -- our general counsel, Robert Rush -- Jacob Rush and Yaeger walk into the colonel's office and close the door. About 20 to 30 minutes after that, I finished my Zoom meeting; and I went back to the door, and the door was closed. And I asked the administrative assistant, "Does the colonel want me now?"

And about that time here comes Jacob Rush and -- our general counsel and Yaeger walk out of the colonel's office. They gave me a look, like, you know, a not-good look. So I'm thinking, I wonder what just happened.

The colonel looked at me and said, "Captain Maynard, can you come into my office?"

I said, "Yes, sir."

So I walked in his office. And then Yaeger, Major Yaeger, said -- turned around and walked to walk back into the colonel's office. And the colonel looked at him and said, "I just want to talk to the captain. I want you to close the door, please."

Yaeger looked like he had been scolded, or whatever.

So I walked in, and I -- the colonel looked at me and said -- and his exact words were, "Captain, did you tell Travis Devinny that he could not be scheduled for overtime?"

And I said, "Absolutely, I did not." I said, "I had this conversation with my major and told him that this was not" -- "he was not afforded due process," et cetera, et cetera.

That was the exact conversation that I had with him, and he -- the colonel looked at me and said, "Is he stupid, or what?" That was literally what the colonel said to me, "Is he stupid?" again, referring about Major Yaeger.

And I said, "Apparently, yes, sir, he is. I had this conversation with him. I told him that we" -- "you can't do that. You can't, you know, just" -- I said, "I need to be able to tell the guy why he's not being scheduled for overtime."

It's going to affect money, and anything in my mind -- I've always been told that if -- and I'm certainly not an attorney, but if it's going to affect an employee's money, you better be careful; and you better have good cause and ready to defend that while you're affecting their employment and the money.

So I went to Major Yaeger even before -- I'm retracking now my steps and telling you that I also had this conversation with Major Yaeger and said, "Listen. I read the contract. Have you read the contract, sir? Because the contract looks like to me that we can't do that. We got to be careful about this because it's going to affect his money."

He goes, "I've already read the contract."

I said, "Okay. Then there's nothing more to have to discuss about it. That's what your decision is, is that he can't be scheduled in the court."

"Yes, and I'll take one for the chin."

I said, "Okay. All right, sir."

Here we are.

Q. But it's my understanding that very shortly thereafter Travis Devinny is then suspended by the agency?

A. He was.

Q. And to this day remains in that status?

A. I think he may be back now. In fact, I know he is because he's back in the courthouse, and they transferred him into the courthouse.

Q. So he's now one of your --

A. He works for me in the courthouse now.

But yes, he was suspended, and I don't know what for. I heard speculation that it had something to do with patrol and a call for service. It didn't have anything to do with -- I think it was something completely separate.

Q. Is there any other retaliatory conduct that you're aware of?

A. Not at this time. I think it's, you know, where it's expected, but I think it's -- you know, employees are trying to protect themselves as best they can in what is going to be a very difficult and what is a difficult situation right now.

I don't know if I told you or not. Major Yaeger came to me and -- as soon as we learned of these subpoenas, the first dozen or so, ten to twelve, the major came to me and closed the door and asked me if -- because I run the civil bureau; so when subpoenas come out, I'm aware of them.

And I have a standing order -- and this is, I think -- I think you understand why this is important, because we have a lot of lawsuits. We have a lot of, you know, subpoenas, I mean, thousands. And anytime a member of the command staff is being sued or whatever, obviously, I make notifications; and that's kind of a normal thing. "Hey, Sheriff, I've got a subpoena for you." It's pretty common stuff.

But this one didn't have a case report number on it, so it was unusual. Normally we understand, we were expecting this defendant to sue the sheriff because of whatever. This one was very -- no one really knew what was going on with this.

And the major came to me and closed the door and said, "Do you know anything about these subpoenas? Why didn't you tell me about them?"

I said, "What are you talking about? I don't even know what you're talking about."

He said, "There are ten or twelve of our command staff and folks at the sheriff's office that are being subpoenaed."

And I said, "I'm sorry. I don't even know what you're taking about."

He said, "Well, see if you can look into it and find out what's going on with these subpoenas."

So, again, I had no idea. I'm looking at the subpoena. I still have it here, no case report, blah, blah, blah. I said, "I don't know what it is."

I went back to the major and said, "I'm not sure what's going on. I don't know what this subpoena is. I can't say anything about it. "

And then in short order we got a couple more, and then it was kind of like a trickle-effect-type thing. I told him I did not feel comfortable calling the state attorney's office and asking what these subpoenas were about.

And then in short order, after that, he said, "Just never mind. Don't worry about it."

So there was nothing else that went. And at some point Major Yaeger transferred, and then I stopped even tabulating how many subpoenas we were getting, you know, because at that time it was only like 12 or 10 to 12 or whatever. Now I don't know how many; and I don't even count them, and I don't even see them.

Q. Just to clarify. So we have not utilized the services of the sheriff's office in order to serve these subpoenas. We've actually served them through our investigators on the sheriff's office itself, but those -- when your staff at the front gets it -- I'm assuming my investigators walk in the front door and hand them to the person who is seated at the front desk; I'm assuming that's records. They then will transmit them to you because they are subpoenas upon the sheriff's office. Is that correct?

A. It depends. I mean, so I would normally see the court liaison. I would see -- and that's part of the reason why I didn't know, I had no idea why the subpoenas -- because it went through somewhat of a normal -- I don't want to say unnormal, but it just -- no case report number and no -- and I called the court liaison and said, "Hey, have you heard about these subpoenas? Can you tell me anything?"

"No, I don't know anything about it" type thing. "I don't know what it is."

I had been subpoenaed by the investigator in the normal process. And I was in the drug unit for a period of time, so I'm very familiar -- at lunch they'd hand you a subpoena type thing. No big deal.

But it was kind of strange. We were a little weirded out about it because the administration was trying to find out what's going on with these. And then in short order, after some of the subpoenas were issued, then the word kind of got out what was going on with this. And I think the administration shied out of -- you know, kind of cut me out of that loop on the civil portion of it, which was good for me.

MR. KRAMER: Understood. Anything else? Anything else from you?

THE WITNESS: (Shakes head.)

MR. KRAMER: Captain, thank you. Again, I apologize that we have caused you so much delay. And if and when we need your testimony further, I'll let you know.

WHEREUPON,

TARA LEE MALONE

acknowledged having been duly sworn to tell the truth, and testified upon his or her oath as follows:

THE WITNESS: I do.

EXAMINATION

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. State your name for the record, please.

A. Tara Lee Malone.

Q. How are you currently employed?

A. Human resources director for the City of Alachua.

Q. How long have you held that position?

A. Just over a year.

Q. And prior to that, did you work at the Alachua County Sheriff's Office?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. In what capacity?

A. I was the sheriff's executive assistant.

Q. For how long?

A. About a year and a half.

Q. I want to come back to what your job duties and responsibilities were; but I want to ask you, prior to holding that position, what was your job?

A. I was administrative services manager for the Alachua Police Department.

Q. How long did you hold that position?

A. That position? Well, I've been with the city since '97 in varying roles, so maybe since '16-ish.

Q. Do you -- other than working for the sheriff here in Alachua County for the past -- for that period of time, did you ever work directly for Sheriff Clovis Watson?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. And when was that?

A. City of Alachua. Like I said, I started in '97 at the police department, and he was the deputy chief, or major, I think it was, back then, and I was the staff assistant -- or crime analyst. I was hired under a grant first, worked with him there. And then when he was appointed interim city manager in 2002, I went over as his assistant.

Q. And how long were you his assistant?

A. Until 2009, I believe it was, when he retired from the city.

Q. From 2009 until you were hired at the sheriff's office, did you have any professional relationship with Clovis Watson?

A. Not professionally, no.

Q. Did you have a personal relationship with him?

A. Yes.

Q. Can you describe that?

A. It's just -- he and I have been close over the years. You know, you talk and get to know people you're working with. And one time he was, you know, "Tell me about your parents," just regular conversation. And it came up my father was killed in a motorcycle accident in Alachua, and he was actually -- he recalled it; and I believe he was actually on scene, and it's just kind of been a bond since then.

Q. Is that relationship the same now as it was then?

A. Yes.

Q. And you're still good friends with him?

A. Yes.

Q. Why did you leave the Alachua County Sheriff's Office?

A. I just -- that was a tough beast. It wasn't -- I enjoyed working with him. I know him. You know, we work well together. He knows me. I just didn't -- it just wasn't a comfortable environment.

Q. In what way? When you say "comfortable," I'm assuming you mean you were not comfortable.

A. Yes. Yeah.

Q. What was it about that position that made you uncomfortable?

A. I wouldn't even necessarily say it was the position. Quite frankly, it was, in my perception, a house divided. You had the folks that were part of the previous administration, then there were folks that I guess, for lack of a better term, just frankly didn't like him. And I was guilty by association, is how I perceived it. And I won't say that about everyone. There's almost a thousand employees, so there were good folks there; but I just -- it was a constant upstream swim.

An opportunity came up in Alachua; and they reached out, and I went back. It was a tough decision for me. It was an emotional time because I felt like I was abandoning him.

Q. Okay. So let's go back, then, and let me ask you to address -- when you started at the sheriff's office under Sheriff Watson, were you in the same position that you were in when you left?

A. Yes.

Q. And what was that? What was the title of that position?

A. Executive assistant to the sheriff.

Q. And what were your duties and responsibilities?

A. General. I mean, office, clerical, maintained his calendar, messages, you know, fielded calls if we had to coordinate any type of efforts or there were special requests that came through the sheriff's office.

A bulk of it was just learning my way around too. I mean, their policies and procedures are very different than what I was accustomed to at a larger agency. I can't imagine anybody going into that position without law enforcement experience, quite frankly, because I was struggling, and I felt fairly confident in my abilities and knowledge --

Q. And you had worked in a law enforcement agency for quite some time?

A. Yes.

Q. It just didn't translate?

A. No, I wouldn't say that. It's just different. I don't necessarily look at it as, you know, someone else's way is right or wrong. It was different, and it just took me a while to get used to it.

Like in Alachua, for example, I've been there so long I know what goes where. I know how the departments work together. A lot of folks just see where they're at and don't realize how it connects and the impacts that it has on an organization overall.

And that part of it didn't really bother me. It's just I'm a bubbly person. I say hello. I smile. I shake hands. I give somebody a hug. There were times it was just -- you'd get a, you know, grimace or a snuff.

And I can even remember some of the folks that I did talk to that I had befriended, they were like, "Well, they don't know you."

I'm like, "They don't even give you a chance."

Q. So let me ask you, who else was on the command staff while you were there?

A. Initially, it was Mr. Clark and Simmons, I believe. I really didn't work with them. They would come in periodically and say hello. For the most part, they went in and, you know, spoke with the undersheriff.

Afterwards, Mr. Corwine came in. He was one of the majors, and then Blizzard was promoted. Stafford was promoted, so he would have been part of command staff at that point.

Q. Were there other non-law enforcement personnel who held administrative positions other than you?

A. Yes.

Q. Like, I mean, that would have been -- I don't know how else to describe it, but in the sheriff's suite? Like, was there an executive director or --

A. Mr. Rush was there. And then later on Ms. Judd, who's my mother, came in as the chief of staff.

Q. Is she still there?

A. No, she's not. She's retired.

Q. Okay. And when did she leave?

A. I think it's only been a month or two ago. Just recent.

Q. What's her full name?

A. Danielle Judd.

Q. She's your mom?

A. Yes.

MR. KRAMER: Go off the record for a second.

(An off-the-record discussion was had.)

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Do you know who Michelle Klement is?

A. I do.

Q. And were you involved with any incident with her and the sheriff that resulted in her transfer?

A. No, I was not.
Q. Did that happen while you were at the sheriff's office?
A. No, actually, I don't believe it did. She reported to Ms. Judd.
Q. Okay.
A. I'm almost positive only because I did run into her outside of the office; and I'm pretty sure I was at the city, because she told me that she was transferred.
Q. Who took your position when you left? Do you remember?
A. Yes, Courtney Barecca, at my recommendation. Well, actually, I apologize. I think they put her into the undersheriff's executive assistant, and then she transitioned over after I left.
BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:
Q. Were you present during a time when Michelle Klement had issues, she was called up to the sheriff's office to speak with him?
A. I want to say there may have been more than one. I did hear about one that she was pretty upset about, but I wasn't present.
Q. Do you know if your mom was?
A. I think she may have been for one of them.

Q. Was the sheriff always the same person at his last job where you worked together as he was here at Alachua Sheriff's Office?

A. Honestly, if anything, he was a little bit more lax. He was -- I don't mean this in a bad way, but his presence sometimes can be intimidating by others; it took me a while to navigate, you know, as you get to know someone, so I get it.

But there were things that before, I was like, "Oh, that's not going to go well."

He was like, "Well, you know."

I was like, "Huh."

So I don't know if that was just with time, but ultimately still, yes, the same.

For the most part, I could -- if someone asked me -- because there were times people would say, "Hey, what do you think about this?"

I'd say, "Look, not to speak for him, but I can tell you historically it's going to play out like this or this is how he would approach that."

So I wouldn't say there was a difference. Like I said, if anything, he was a little bit more lax, lax in response, maybe.

Q. When it came to promotions within the sheriff's office, how was that process worked out?

A. He would take his time. He'd have me pull up the individual's photographs; because the sheet that they used to produce from HR was a spreadsheet that the picture was about that big, so he wanted to, you know, have something he could look at. And then they had typically bios that went with them or where they ranked on the list.

Now, granted, the ones that went to command staff that were outside of the process, the promotional process, were different, but he would review them. He'd change things around or -- sometimes I would type the personnel orders, so that's the only reason why I would know he was looking at something or talked to someone, and it would change.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Why would he need a photograph?

A. He just liked to -- so he can see it on the -- like I said, it was about that big. I think he was trying to learn people too. Like, I would see a name, and I would look up their picture and like, okay, yeah, I remember that; but that was just trying to get to know people, for me.

Q. Is there some job-related function that is tied to someone's appearance?

A. No, I don't believe so.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. You said sometimes he would change the order around. Did you mean if somebody was at the top of the list, and there was a candidate that would end up being promoted that was lower down?

A. No. It would just be -- sometimes it would be like where their assignment would be, if someone was coming in; because then if he promoted somebody else, then that would change. Because sometimes we would have massive "go." So if they pulled from one person initially, they would put them in another spot, and they would have to move them to fill a vacancy for another promotion.

Q. So the promotions that were made, say, for a nontested position, do you know how they were arranged?

A. No. Those I sometimes found out after the fact.

Q. The order would just come down to you?

A. I didn't always do the order. That was just if it was something that he was working on. It wasn't all the time, I guess, is what I'm trying to say.

Like when Bella was promoted to major, Stafford was promoted to major, I didn't know about those until they happened.

Q. Did you type the order and send those out with the sheriff's signature, or would that come from HR?

A. One of two ways. If it was one he wanted me to do, I would pull a number, assign a personnel order number and type it. And then he would sign it, and I would send it out.

Q. Did you have anyone who reported to you?

A. No.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. The information flow between the sheriff, the suite, I guess you'd say, not just the sheriff, and the rest of the sheriff's office, how would you describe it?

A. Just within the suite? I mean, I guess it depended on who was involved in whatever was going on. I would say the majority of the time the undersheriff would be involved. If it was something, you know, they needed to let me know or needed me to document, they would let me know.

Q. Were they memo writers? Were they heavy about sending a memo to the patrol, we need this or, you know --

A. I don't know that there's a specific answer to catch all of that. For example, you know, we would get a request for assistance from the UPD for football games. You know, I got the email. The sheriff signed off on it, and I would walk it down to patrol.

Q. Speaking of the sheriff's signature. Stuff that came from below, you know, anything that -- say I'm chief of detectives, and I need -- or I want to recognize half a dozen of my guys for a good job. How did that work?

A. My understanding, it would go up through their chain of command and then come in. We had a log. As soon as anything came into the suite, myself or the other assistant, whoever received it first, would, you know, document it. I'm pretty sure, actually, we had a time and date stamp.

Q. What was the turnaround on it?

A. It depended on what it was, quite frankly. We would always have a folder. Laura would have stuff she would go over daily with the undersheriff. I would have my folder with the sheriff. Sometimes there were things he wanted to hold off on for whatever reason. And then if it was something he was either anticipating or knew about, you know, he would sign it. And then we would make sure it went back to whoever it needed to go to.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Did you handle requests for secondary employment?

A. They did come through our office. I honestly don't -- I'm trying to remember if he signed off on those, or the undersheriff; but yes, they did come to the suite. But again, they were logged with our regular routine, the correspondence file.

Q. I don't know how it works over there. I know how my office runs, which is when we have a new employee, I swear them in, raise your hand, take an oath. Did the sheriff do that with his employees?

A. I don't recall that, no.

Q. So how was the swearing process done?

A. I don't know. I wasn't involved in it.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. If CID had a major case that they needed to discuss up the chain of command, would that go -- what's that process? Say the captain of CID --

A. As I recall, they would go to their major. And the major would come into the suite and either get with undersheriff or sheriff; and if it was something, the undersheriff probably would get with the sheriff.

Q. What about patrol?

A. Same concept as far as I know, yeah.

Q. What about professional standards?

A. I think those were a direct report to the suite, so I don't know if they went always directly to the undersheriff or the sheriff. That wasn't always the case. Actually, I'm trying to remember when I first started, because I wasn't familiar with that as far as the forms and whatnot.

I think Captain Kelly was over OPS at the time, but I don't know -- I can't remember who they reported to. That was new to me. I hadn't been involved in that.

Q. How about as you stayed there a little bit longer, who did they end up reporting to?

A. It was a direct report to the sheriff, but I feel like there was a change in the org chart because I -- again, that was another thing as far as accreditation, anything that went had to go through there first.

And that was just something I wasn't, you know, accustomed to, so we were -- Captain Biel was over that, very much involved with her. Then if something did change, she had to go through the whole -- you know, wherever it was mentioned in the policy and update it.

Q. So would the chief inspector of OPS, would they go directly to the sheriff to talk? Or would they go to the undersheriff? Or would they go to the colonel?

A. Well, the colonel wasn't always the colonel. So he was the major initially, but I want to say it went to -- they had a fast-track process and then the formal.

I know the sheriff was the last one, but I believe it still did go through the chain. I think there was a recommendation from first supervisor, captain, major, undersheriff, and then sheriff. It's been a bit, but I think that's how it went.

Q. I think, more direct, my question is, if the chief inspector came to the suite and had to talk to somebody, who would that be?

A. The sheriff or the undersheriff. I've seen it both times.

Q. Did Sheriff Watson reach out to you for the position that you had as his executive assistant, or how did that come to be?

A. That was actually something we both kind of talked about. I had kind of reached as high as I could go at APD, and it was something kind of just jokingly, you know -- because even when he went to state house, he was, you know, "You can always come up here," just bantering with one another.

Like I said, when he did get into office and I talked to -- Chad was my chief at that time at APD. And at the time I didn't think I was going to go, but, you know, after just reflection, I thought it would be something new, a new opportunity.

Like I said, I'd kind of reached my cap. Without the position that I'm in now, there really wasn't anywhere else for me to go.

Q. And Chad Scott followed you. How long was that?

A. That was probably -- I believe it may have been less than a year, but it was a bit. Or maybe right at -- Jessie, I think, became chief February of last year, so it may have been just over a year.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Did you keep the sheriff's calendar --

A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. -- for him?

Speaking of the swearing-ins and just general HR stuff, was he deeply involved in HR and stuff and have to go to meetings? Or did he leave that up to your mother, I guess, once she took over?

A. Actually, at one point I was going to provide that. I had a history in HR, and at one point he had asked me to kind of do an audit and overview of the processes there. It just seemed like there was a little bit of a disconnect with that department.

I wouldn't say that he was intricately involved. Quite frankly, there had been some complaints from within about how that department was running; and he had talked to me about it, and I had gotten direction to do that. We had a temporary office, and I just never made it in there. We just never really had the time, quite frankly.

But I would be involved, you know, if something did come up only because I know how he is, and he would want certain information. So if anything did come to my attention, I would reach out and ask questions.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. It's been said that he's very direct when it came to respect of the office. Can you elaborate on that a little bit, or his position?

A. I just think that's a matter of the position. I mean, it's -- and again, this is in my view; I know it's not shared, but it's reciprocated. And I also would even go so far as to say, you know, you may not respect the person, but you will show the person respect, if that makes sense. You can not respect but treat someone with respect, I think, is maybe more the mantra. I don't know that it's anything detrimental. I don't look at it that way.

Q. Conversely, were there issues if he perceived that he was being disrespected?

A. Again, that was kind of one of the things that I would say he was a little bit more lax on. You know, he'd just kind of -- one of his sayings is don't accept the invitation to hate.

So if someone's, you know, intentionally or a perception of intentional, he would just give them their space. If they would come around, they'd come around; if they didn't, they wouldn't.

A lot of what happened there, to me, was just on a much larger scale than how it was in Alachua when he became city manager.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. I was going to ask a follow-up with that. How was he at Alachua, and at APD for that matter, when it came to -- if he was more lax now, what would the old Clovis Watson have done?

A. Maybe been a bit more firm. Again, I just -- I need to give you a historic perspective.

When he became city manager, there was a mass exodus of city employees and department-level -- department director positions; not that there were that many back then. I mean, it was just -- there was a climate in the community.

We had a death of a child, and the city was, you know, blamed for it and ultimately responsible; so when he came in, there was a lot going on. There were several community sects that were trying to drive the force. They were very anti-development. It was Dollar General. Adam Webb was deceased; that was the child, and it was right there at city hall with a transformer.

So there was lot going on in the community, and again, it was kind of a community divided. And when he was appointed by the commission at that time, I think the perception was that he was a pawn of those who appointed him because the commission wasn't really a cohesive group at that time either. So that's when it turned in -- like I said, it was just what we went through back then in a much larger scale; but again, it ended up -- we had a rough couple of years, but it came together. People that had left came back. I mean, it really made a big difference.

Q. Did they leave on their own volition, or did he ask them to leave?

A. The majority did leave, and then there were two that -- I'm trying to think if -- maybe one was terminated or may have quit; I don't remember, but again, even those came back.

I'm sorry. I don't know if that addresses your question. That just -- I felt like I had to give you some perspective.

Q. Well, I'm just -- there again, did they leave because they wanted to leave, or did he ask them to leave?

A. The majority left because they wanted to, but again, it was because of the way the commission was running. I think they believed that he was just going to be their -- you know, their pawn, quite frankly.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. There's been a lot of promotions, a lot of transfers, especially at the beginning of the tenure of the sheriff. Do you know how those transfers were put into place? Were individuals asked where they wanted to go? Were they told where they wanted to go? Were they resumed positions?

A. I was not involved in that in the beginning. I did -- I know -- I believe -- because I didn't even know who Corwine was when he came and sat at my desk one time, and I was, in my mind, "Who's this guy?"

He was talking to me like I knew who he was, and I had no clue who he was.

So I know he was helping with some of the moves with the undersheriff beforehand, but I really wasn't involved in those. I couldn't tell you. Other than when they came to the suite, and we'd take a picture and they'd get their new badge and stripes or whatever it may be.

MR. KRAMER: All right. Well, that's it, then. Thank you so much. I apologize if we've inconvenienced you. I appreciate you coming in and talking to us.

WHEREUPON

DANIELLE JUDD

acknowledged having been duly sworn to tell the truth, and testified upon his or her oath as follows:

THE WITNESS: I do.

EXAMINATION

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Ms. Judd, could you tell us your full name, please?

A. Daniel Joanne Judd.

Q. Are you currently employed?

A. No, I am not.

Q. Are you retired?

A. Somewhat.

Q. Okay. Would it be more fair to classify you currently as unemployed?

A. Yes, but I am going to American University under their masters program right now.

Q. What are you seeking a masters in?

A. International relations. I've got a really solid background in local, state, municipal government. I've been in the business for 35-plus years and just wanted to kind of take a different step.

Q. Okay.

A. So hopefully, in two years, I'll be done.

Q. That sounds wonderful; challenging, but wonderful.

A. Yes.

Q. So I do want to review with you your work history. I understand that you worked with the sheriff most recently. Can you tell me just a review of what your work history is?

A. So I've got 35-plus years of experience in the public sector. I'm a graduate of the University of Florida Political Science Public Administration Program. I started out as -- I was the young lady you would see at the front, the receptionist. I had good mentors over the years that encouraged me to educate myself; I did. So I finished at UF.

In my history, I've worked for the City of Gainesville. I've worked for the Florida Parks Service, obviously, the City of Alachua. The City of Miami Beach, I was their budget officer when I left there. I didn't bring a resume. Obviously, City of Alachua, but it's all public sector experience. And a city manager, obviously.

Q. Where were you the city manager?

A. I was the city manager in Green Cove Springs, and I was down in Fort Meade for a couple of years.

Q. As a city manager there as well?
A. Yes.
Q. That is an extensive history.
Let me ask you, then, during your work history, other than when you worked at the Alachua County Sheriff's Office, did you ever work with Clovis Watson Jr.?
A. I did at the City of Alachua. I think I was there for nearly seven years. I began there as a grant administrator. I have a solid background in that as well.
And then I kind of progressed from there to over planning. And then the final position I had there was the assistant city manager, had several direct report departments.
And I left there in, I think, December of 2010 and became city manager in Green Cove in January of '11 and stayed there for seven and a half years, and then Fort Meade, and then ultimately up here at the sheriff's office.
Q. So let me go back to your time at the City of Alachua. During the time you were at the City of Alachua, was Clovis Watson Jr. the city manager?
A. Yes, he was. At the time I was hired he was the city manager, had just recently been placed in that position.

Q. And so for the entirety of your time there was he the city manager?

A. Except for maybe the last six months or so, because at that point he was -- they were transitioning to the other assistant city manager, who was going to become city manager; and that was Ms. Tracy Kane.

So there was a brief period of time when that transition was going on, but I think technically he was still city manager. And then, like I said, I went on to Green Cove to become city manager there.

Q. So you last -- before you started working at the sheriff's office here most recently, the last time you worked with Clovis Watson would have been 2010?

A. Correct. Before the sheriff's office, yes.

Q. Okay. And during the interim between -- well, let me go back.

When you were working at the City of Alachua with Clovis Watson Jr., what was the nature of your relationship with him?

A. The last position I held was assistant city manager. I worked on a lot of capital projects, like I said, had some direct report departments, ran the planning, zoning, building, functions, code enforcement.

I have a very strong background in finance and budget, so I worked on the budget there.

Q. Did you work directly with Clovis Watson Jr.?

A. Yes. He was my direct supervisor. He was my boss.

Q. How would you describe your relationship with him when you worked with him in Alachua?

A. Professional, cordial.

Q. And was there any form of personal relationship with him? Did you associate with him outside the office?

A. I didn't socialize with him outside the office, but he has a personal relationship with my daughter. They're very close, but that's not -- that has nothing to do with my employment or anything.

But yeah, I would characterize as that I knew him in context outside the office. We didn't socialize. We didn't run in the same circles, but I did know him. You know, like, I'd been to his home once or twice for events, but that's it. You know what I'm saying? We did not socialize.

Q. In the interim, between 2010 and when you became an employee of the sheriff's office, did you maintain a relationship with Clovis Watson Jr.?

A. No, I don't recall. When I went to Green Cove and then went from Green Cove to Fort Meade, I don't recall seeing him during that time period.

Q. Now, your daughter, did she maintain a close relationship with him during that time period?

A. I would say so. She's been local, you know. And she initially, I think, worked for him as his executive assistant, and so, yeah, I'm assuming they maintained a relationship during that time.

Q. How would you -- back in 2010 and before when you worked with him, with Clovis Watson Jr., how would you describe his management style?

A. He's very -- I would characterize it as direct, lets you know what his expectations are; you know, doesn't micromanage folks, just gives you some general parameters of what he's looking for and gives you the leeway to kind of figure out the best ways and means to get the project done.

I didn't have any trouble working with him, but, you know, I'm a very independent person. You just give me some general parameters, tell me where you want to end. And my work has always been very solid. So whenever, you know, I worked for either city manager or when I became a city manager, you know, my mayor and commission always knew that whatever information I was giving was solid, I did all my background work, that type of thing, and I took pride in what I did.

So I'd say that's a characterization.

Q. Okay. So let's move forward, then, to around the beginning of 2021. How did you ultimately become employed by the Alachua County Sheriff's Office?

A. I had a conversation with -- at that point he was the sheriff. He'd been in office for a couple of months, and he was looking to, you know, kind of build his team.

I was in the final year of my contract down in Fort Meade. And, you know, a conversation struck over the phone, and he indicated to me that, you know, there might be a position available. And so we had a dialogue and one thing led to another. And then I gave notice to Fort Meade sometime in March, I think, somewhere thereabouts.

Q. March of 2021?

A. Yes.

Q. And when you are initially hired by the Alachua County Sheriff's Office, what is your position?

A. It was chief of staff, and the duties under that were basically the civilian side of the house.

Q. Okay. And so at that point reporting to you would have been finance?

A. Yes.

Q. And personnel?

A. HR, initially, and then at some point in time it was moved directly under him. I had the combined communications center, which also included radio communications. I had the whole information technology grouping, which was huge for the sheriff's office. I had property, facilities, evidence. I think that's it. Property, facilities, evidence. I'm just trying to go through the list. I think that's all of it.

Q. So you mentioned that initially you had HR, but then eventually, or at some point, it's moved from you to the sheriff?

A. Correct.

Q. And what happened there? Why would that occur?

A. I don't know. That was a decision that he made.

Q. Was there a problem that foresaw that, you know, that occurred?

A. Not that I'm aware of. I think he just wanted to have that particular department as a direct report, which is not unusual sometimes. At time, even based on my experience, the city manager, sometimes areas like finance and/or HR will be direct reports. Unlike police and fire, sometimes they can be high profile areas.

I don't recall the reason being, but -- other than at one point in time it was moved over to report to him.

Q. While you had HR under your administration, was there a requirement that applications for employment or applications for transfer within the agency be accompanied by a photograph?

A. No. I don't recall anything about applications, not that I have -- in other words, if you wanted to apply for the job, you had to submit a photograph. I don't recall anything like that.

I know that with regards to HR processes, when -- they would call them personnel orders, like this particular individual was moving from one area to the other, or particularly if there was a new hire or a transfer, when the hiring manager would make a recommendation, you know, you would outline all the candidates that applied for the position, internal or external, which is not unusual.

And then I do recall with those cover memos, that there would be a photo if it was a current employee off of the -- I forget the name of the program that you could, you know, go in and have a photo attached to it.

Q. And was that something that was implemented while you were in charge of HR?

A. No, I don't recall that then; but I do know that, I guess, in the last year or so, that he had asked to have photographs attached to what I call the hiring memos, you know, who interviewed internal, external. He wanted to have what I call a package, which is not unusual, of -- you know, if someone turned in a resume or whatever. But if they were current employees, then you would have a photo off of whatever that software system was internally.

Q. And do you have any understanding of what the rationale was to why a photo of a current employee would have to be included?

A. My interpretation was that he was new to the agency, wanted to learn the different employees, and that that helped him match a name with a face. I mean, that was my interpretation of that.

Q. Is that because of a conversation that you had with him or had with someone else or --

A. No. That's my interpretation, knowing that he wanted those things attached. That was my assumption.

Q. When someone is hired as an employee who is nonsworn, that would have most often fallen under you, correct, initially?

A. Well, not necessarily. So let me back up a little bit.

So if there was a new hire for a civilian position -- like, during the time I was there, we had an IT director retire. We went through recruitment. Do you know what I'm saying? We had a panel review and made recommendations; but ultimately, in a constitutional office like that, the hiring authority is always the sheriff, not -- unlike in a city, the final hiring authority is the city manager. So you would make a recommendation to the sheriff on your top selection.

Q. Correct. And my question was bad in the sense that what I was really asking is that the person would ultimately fall under your input once they were hired because you had the vast majority of nonsworn employees.

A. Yeah, that would be a good characterization.

Q. So were those individuals required to take an oath of office?

A. The only thing I can tell you is I'm assuming as such. I know when I was hired I had to sign what I thought was an oath of office, and there was another statement about -- I don't know. It's the old statement -- I hate to use the word Americanism versus communism, I don't know, something along that line.

But whatever that statement was, I signed it. It basically pledged -- you know what I'm saying -- that you understood that you were taking a position.

I never was asked to do an oath of office. You know, I never did like what I did here today, but I do recall signing some kind of form.

Q. When a deputy sheriff is hired, when during that process would that person take the oath of the deputy sheriff, the oath of office with the deputy sheriff?

A. I don't know. You'd have to ask HR about that.

Q. And my understanding, from looking through some records that we've received, is that it shows that you do a final checklist of a hiring packet.

A. Okay. So I think what you're referring to is when -- regardless of the position, they would put together an entire application packet. It would have the individual's background, the application that they filled out, the results of the psych eval, and also the results from the lie detector test, whatever that technical term is. And I think those were the major components.

And so there -- it would start with the hiring -- I think it started with HR. That went through the hiring manager, then came to me. It was the undersheriff, and I think at the time when the colonel was brought on board, and the sheriff; but like I said, the final signature on that form would be the sheriff.

I would look at the packet. I would weigh in on my recommendation. And I can tell you that I did not always necessarily recommend a hire. If I had concerns, I would write at the bottom, you know, "See page whatever," you know, that type of thing. Ultimately, like I said, it went to the sheriff. And at the end of the day, I did not know what the final decision was. You know what I'm saying? It didn't come back to me.

But I was very forthright. If I saw something that I thought flagged in the file, I would mention it, and I'd write it down.

Q. Okay. But part of that was not to ensure that there was a proper -- that all of the documentation that was necessary for the hiring of an employee was present?

A. I wouldn't characterize it as that. What I would share with you is, I always made sure when those files came to me that they were a full packet. If I thought that there was a part of the puzzle that was missing, I would say something. I would ask. You know what I'm saying?

So I just want to clarify that.

Q. Okay.

A. But I guess I would call it a completeness review. That would be the correct characterization. So yes, I did do that.

Q. So I want to ask you about a couple of the specific situations that you may have knowledge of, the first of which is Michelle Klement.

A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall Michelle Klement?

A. Yes, I do. She was a direct report to me.

Q. And prior to her being transferred to the jail, how would you have described her job performance?

A. I would describe her as very confident, professional. I know she's a leader in her field. At one point I think she was telecommunicator of the year, or something along that line.

That operation, as it is anywhere, is a pressure cooker, so it does take a certain toll on an individual. We were down a lot of positions, which I know was hard; but I thought that she was a professional, and I enjoyed working with her.

Q. So at some point there is some incident that occurs where, for lack of a better way to describe it, something happens where she is, I guess, blamed for something that has gone wrong. Do you know what I'm talking about?

A. That's kind of an open-ended question. I'll do my best.

Q. I mean, it has to do with -- and I can give you more specifics to make sure we're dialed in on the same incident because, ultimately, my question is very simple: Can you tell me in your perception what occurred?

It is the situation that has something to do with the combined communication center dispatching for the GPD task force on the interstate.

A. So that would have been my response.

So that's the interdiction team. There was a point in time, as you know, where, for whatever reasons, we, meaning the sheriff's agency, stepped back and took a pause from that.

So I do recall that there was a -- not a scheduled meeting, but a meeting called by the sheriff in his conference room. I was there. Michelle was there. I think at that time Major Blizzard was there, who was over like the support services area. I don't know if Chad Scott was there or not. I mean, I'm trying to remember the point in time he came on board in that capacity. Josh Crews was there. At that time I think he was a captain, because that was an area he was over. I don't know if Jake Rush was there, general counsel. I'm trying to kind of go around the room. I don't know. There were at least six, seven people, and I do recall the topic came up.

At one point Michelle got very emotional; I remember that. And she asked to be excused and basically left, went to the lady's room or whatever, came back a few minutes later and we, you know, finished the meeting, you know, whatever, whatever.

And I believe at that point that played a role in his decisions; that's my opinion.

Q. So what was the nature of the concern with Michelle in that meeting? Like why is she -- why is she becoming upset? Why is the meeting occurring with regard to this incident?

A. Probably questions you need to ask Ms. Klement; but my observation as a manager is, as I indicated to you, she was under a lot of stress. And I was -- I guess, as a manager, I think my job is to mold people. And I was hoping that there would be some way that I could work with her to get her to step back, take some time off, you know, do whatever she needed to do. And it wasn't her fault. Do you know what I'm saying? It wasn't her fault.

And I think that the sheriff felt that the behavior exhibited in that meeting was unprofessional and -- you know, and I understand that. And it wasn't meant to be disrespectful at all.

I just think that as a result of that, there may have been some other things that I don't know about. I think that he made that decision, that he didn't feel or think that she would be the right fit for that job. And, you know, any manager can do that. Any manager can place people where they think is the right spot; but for me, as a manager, I always prefer to sit down and talk with people and say, "Look, this may not be working out. Let's figure out another path here."

To the best of my knowledge, that didn't happen. And sometime after that, I don't recall the time frame, he told me, you know, that he was going to take her out of that position. And he ended up bringing on Patricia Ford Thomas from UF, who I understand at one time had worked in combined communications center and, I think, actually had trained Ms. Klement at one point in her career. So obviously, she's qualified for the job.

So I had to sit down and have that dialogue with her. And then the sheriff transferred her to the jail, no decrease in salary. And then a few months after that I remember she ended up getting Ms. Thomas' position -- you know what I'm saying -- and went over and worked at UF.

Q. So you mentioned that the circumstances -- I think this is what you're saying, so I'm really asking you if this is correct, what I'm saying.

The circumstances that caused her to be present in that meeting where that -- where whatever happened that was not her fault, whatever those circumstances were. Is that what you were saying?

A. From my perspective, no. I mean, she -- she flagged it, I remember, either earlier on that day or another time. You know, she called me and said, you know, "I'm concerned, you know. We're doing these breaks."

You know -- and I understand what an interdiction force is, and you've got to be able to have the right communications. And from my observation, what was happening is that GPD was not doing what they needed to do. There was clearly a miscommunication from the command at GPD to their folks as to what channel they should be on, how we should -- you know what I'm saying -- flow through.

It's a combined communications center. We still have to do their dispatch, and we're certainly not going to dispatch for someone just because, you know, we're doing a different policy switch. So that was my observation.

Q. So I guess what I'm wondering is, we have an employee who's present in a meeting who is not involved for whatever this problem is, and from there we end up with that employee having some kind of what you've described as an emotional time --

A. Yes.

Q. -- in the meeting.

A. Yes.

Q. And then, following that, we have that employee being transferred to a position that's essentially -- has nothing to do with what she has ever done in her career.

So what is it that -- how do we get from her not being at fault to her to having this emotional moment that is so devastating to the sheriff's perception of her that he transfers her with no salary reduction to something she has no training in doing, if you know?

A. I do not, no. No. He did not discuss it with me.

Q. I understand. But you are an extraordinarily experienced manager in these type of situations, and you can understand that that series of events, going from someone who is not at fault to has some -- I don't know what would happen to a non-at-fault employee having some kind of emotional situation in a meeting, and that that leads to her being essentially put in a position where she is -- you could hire somebody off the street to do it.

Like, I just don't understand how we could have that sort of sequence of events just based upon someone having an emotional day. Do you understand what I -- does that make a lot of sense?

A. I understand your characterization.

Q. Am I missing something?

A. I've shared with you everything that I have direct knowledge of.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. Do you know what made Ms. Klement so upset?

A. I think it was stress, quite frankly; I really do. When I met Michelle initially, I think she wasn't quite sure how to take my management style, quite frankly. And so, like anyone else, you kind of merge. And then she, you know, figured out where we were headed, what we needed to do, my management style.

I work with people. They don't work for me. I want people to succeed. And we ended up working together very well. I pushed hard on getting positions filled, and Michelle and I were on the same page. I even wanted to do things differently but didn't get support for it, quite frankly. I mean, that's common knowledge. I wrote a white paper on the topic.

I just think that he, as his purview, you know, as a constitution officer, wanted someone else in that position. And I don't know the relationship between him and Ms. Thomas from UF, but Michelle, I will say, to her credit, behaved or carried herself extremely professionally, was respectful.

We had, I don't know, Thanksgiving or one of the employee banquet things, you know, and were serving people; and the sheriff came by, and she was very professional to him. She --

Q. Was that after the fact?

A. Yes, it was.

And so I will share with you that she carried herself with class, the same way I would have done it if I had been in a similar position. It just goes with the nature of the job.

Q. Anybody else that was in that meeting that wasn't at fault but were still over that? I think you said Major Blizzard and Captain Crews. Were they emotional, or was there any issue with them? Or was there anything --

A. No, not that I can recall. Like I said, as I indicated -- I'm saying more than I need to or should.

You have to understand when an employee is under stress -- and that is my professional observation of Michelle, and she worked -- she is one that really wants to have perfection, you know. And so I think that she just felt like she was being blamed for something.

And I'm using the words "felt" and "feel." You know what I'm saying? And so I think that she just got emotional. She almost like was crying a little bit, holding back tears, and she excused herself.

BY MR. KRAMER:
Q. What was the sheriff's demeanor during the meeting?
A. He was very direct, you know, not -- not unprofessional or anything, but he, you know, indicated and asked some questions and -- now I'm just trying to remember. It's been like a year or so ago.
I'll be honest with you, I don't really know why she got so upset like she did. I'm just sharing with you kind of my, you know, looking back, hindsight recollection of it.
I know I checked on her before I left that day, went over and talked to her a little bit, you know, told her, you know, kind of like, you know, step back, take it easy.
You know, you have to be empathetic and know when an employee has reached their max, and I think that was it. So --
Q. It seems like the answer here might be that she was being blamed for something that she was not at fault for. That seems like it would upset an employee, at least that's the common sense of what I'm reading into this situation. Am I accurate in that? Is that why she's upset?

A. I think there may have been other things. You know what I'm saying? And I don't know what those other things would be. I just know that she got very emotional in the meeting, and the -- like I indicated to you, she is -- she's very meticulous, very -- takes her job -- I don't know -- to heart.

You have to understand the call load that we have over there. You know we had, you know, all kinds of stuff, and it just -- I think it was too much; I really do.

Q. Sure. I just -- I guess it would -- if you're telling me you don't recall, that would be -- I just have a -- I don't know that the why of it would be a mystery in that situation. Like it seems like it would be you've got a sheriff who's not happy about something. You've got an employee who is not at fault and very upset about what's happening at the meeting. The why in it doesn't seem like it would be a mystery in that situation. The why of why she's reacting the way she is, that she's under stress, fair; but what's causing the stress doesn't seem like it would be in that situation.

A. I've shared with you my observation. We were severely under staffed. People were having to pull a lot of hours. She and I, as well as her assistant, I think her name was Kim Kutner, were concerned about the staffing, and it just seemed like we -- you know what I'm saying? We couldn't get where we needed to go. And I think that, you know, it's one of those things where it kinds of builds.

And, you know, you have to understand that you're dealing with an individual that's very professional. And if an individual feels that they've somehow failed, right, you know, that person gets very emotional.

Her thing always was officer safety. You know what I'm saying? Make sure everything is done correctly. And, I mean, I don't know if there was something else that happened earlier in the day -- you know what I'm saying -- where the sheriff was dismayed about something; I don't know.

All I know is that we got called into this meeting, and she got very emotional.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Ms. Judd, you've made a very good description of your observations, and it sounds to me like you're blaming Ms. Klement for getting upset; but at the same time you've told us that y'all had worked through everything, y'all were -- how long had she been in this job?

A. She got promoted as the director of that area not long after Mr. Watson was put in office.

Q. How long had she been in communications?

A. Oh, God. Probably 20 -- I'm guessing her entire career was probably communications.

Q. So she probably worked her way up the ranks?

A. Yes. Yes, absolutely.

Q. So she's probably been short staffed for 20-plus years. Communications are notoriously short staffed.

A. Right.

Q. So, like I said, it sounds like you're blaming her for being upset, but there has to be some sort of stimuli that caused her to have this breakdown in this meeting. What was that?

A. I'm sharing with you that I don't know.

Q. What did the sheriff say? What did Captain Butcher say? What did anybody say to her, ask her, accuse her of that caused this? I'm sure she just didn't sit -- wasn't just sitting there listening to this meeting and started crying?

A. All I can tell you is that I don't recall everything that was said. I know that she felt somehow that she was blamed. You know what I'm saying?

Q. What would make you think that? What was said to make you think that?

A. I think there may have been some comments by the sheriff that made her feel uncomfortable. I mean, I'm not trying to dodge the question. I don't remember much. All I know is that it was a very tense meeting. You know what I'm saying? He felt somehow that whatever he wanted done hadn't been done or something, and --

Q. Did he raise his voice?

A. Not that I --

Q. Did he slam his fist on the table? Did he shout at her?

A. No, I don't recall any of that behavior.

Q. So what would make her get so upset? If nobody else is speaking -- and we'll move past that because you can't recall.

She'd been in that -- not that job, but communications for decades. As a manager, you'd have -- put you on the other side of the desk. You had this happen. She gets upset. You talk to her, you calm her down, and then you move her into some place that she has no knowledge of. How is that beneficial to the agency?

A. So, from my perspective, I don't think it is.

Again, that's my perspective.

Q. And that's all I'm asking, ma'am.

A. And that's it.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. You're free to expand if you want. I don't want you to feel like you were cut off.

A. No. I just think that part of it felt like it was retaliatory in some fashion, in my opinion. And as I -- again, my opinion. And as I shared with you, I have a different management style. And as I said, I think that at times, I think, perhaps during the meeting, you know, she may have felt a little bit intimidated, you know, and so that may, you know, in some way -- you know what I'm saying -- cause an individual to get that way.

I mean, yes, I know communications is a churn. You know what I'm saying? And communications, with all the dispatchers, there's what I call the drama constantly, constant drama, okay, if you've ever had a police department; and I've had one of those.

But the staffing level was different then. You know what I'm saying? We had gone through COVID-19. You know what I'm saying? There were a lot of factors, I think, external to the organization. And for whatever reason -- you know what I'm saying -- she had a breakdown. She got extremely emotional.

BY MR. KRAMER:
Q. And I just want to follow up on one other thing with that. At any point did you or anyone that you're aware of ask her to apologize to the sheriff for her conduct?
A. I never asked her to apologize.
Q. Did you ever ask her if she was going to apologize to the sheriff?
A. No, I don't recall that.
Q. Do you know if she ever did apologize to the sheriff?
A. Not that I know of.
Q. Are you aware of anybody else who may have asked her to do that?
A. I don't have direct knowledge of anyone asking her to apologize.
Q. To your knowledge, did she apologize to the sheriff?
A. Not that I am aware of.
Q. Are you aware of the sheriff having an expectation that she should apologize to him for her conduct during that meeting?
A. He may have had an expectation of that, but I think he had -- he had made a personnel decision, and, you know, that was it.

Q. After her transfer to the jail, was there any discussion about her -- about further disciplining her while she was at the jail?

A. No.

Q. So was -- do you ever become aware of Dorian Keith attempting to discipline her while she was at the jail?

A. No, not that I can recall anything.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. Who held the position that Ms. Klement took prior to her taking it?

A. I think his name was Jim Lanier, and he left right after -- he left right after Mr. Watson took office. He made some personal changes, which is not atypical of a constitutional officer after he came on board, and that particular individual was let go. And then Miss Michelle moved up a slot, and then the person that was up under her moved up a spot. And Ms. Klement was in that position when I came on board.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. So are you familiar with an employee by the name -- former employee by the name of Annie Waller?

A. No.

Q. So Annie Waller was a deputy sheriff. She was involved in an officer-involved shooting. She was placed on standard, you know, desk duty following the shooting.

A. Okay.

Q. Then there was a disciplinary incident with her where she was alleged to have broken a monitor --

A. Oh, okay. Now I --

Q. -- at the sheriff's office.

A. -- recognize the name.

Q. I thought that maybe if I give you some --

A. Okay. Got it.

Q. -- background, it would ring a bell for you.

A. Right.

Q. Ultimately she ends up being disciplined, and she ends up either quitting or leaving the agency; I don't remember which one it is, but my question really relates to when she left the agency. It's my understanding that for some period of time the agency refused to pay her the balance of her leave or monies that was owed to her.

Does that ring any bells with you?

A. No. I mean, when someone leaves, if they've left in good standing -- you know what I'm saying? And a deputy sheriff would be covered by the PBA agreement. There's a process you go through -- you know what I'm saying -- to discharge and insurance, whatever the case may be.

So I know that -- on that one, I think Jake Rush may have been involved in the final, you know, process that went out on that one.

Q. My question ultimately for you, and it doesn't like you're going to be able to answer it, so I understand, was, do you know why -- what the rationale would have been to withhold paying Annie Waller monies that may or may not have been owed to her?

A. The only thing I can tell you is that at times -- and it depends on the organization -- if an individual doesn't leave in good standing -- you know what I'm saying -- you can ratchet back some things. And so I'm not sure, you know, what the final resolution on that is or how it concluded at the end of the day.

Q. Is that something that would be under your purview at the sheriff's office at all, or do you just hear about it?

A. It wouldn't be under my purview in the sense that, you know, I'm not going to pay this person, but it would be in the purview of me being told -- you know what I'm saying -- to pause on this or to wait or something along that line in terms of the checks. I mean, I would have known.

And it's been a while, but when you mentioned the name about the throwing of the monitor or whatever, I think that one was the one that was performance enhancing drugs or something.

Q. I never heard that one.

A. I'm trying to remember. I think -- I could have it confused with someone else, but I think that was the one where she may have been, at the end of the day, found to, you know, be using something that was inappropriate.

Q. Okay. Interesting. Well, that one will require more research on my part because that is news if that's correct.

A. Hopefully, I haven't led you down the wrong path.

Q. I didn't really know if that would fall within your -- the purview of your responsibilities at the sheriff's office, but I wanted to ask.

One of the things that I'm interested in is whether or not there were policies or standard operating procedures that were being implemented by the sheriff about decreasing the amount of things that would be placed in writings, IOCs or emails, to document the activities of the sheriff's office.

Does that ring any bell for you?

A. Can you rephrase the question, make sure I understand?

Q. I'll make it more simple for you.

A. Okay.

Q. We have heard on multiple occasions from multiple witnesses that multiple individuals were told, "You're putting too many things in writing. You're putting too many" -- "we're getting too many IOCs," which is interoffice communications. I'm assuming that's a standard form at the sheriff's office.

A. Right.

Q. "You're putting too many things in emails. It's creating too many public records," is that something that was --

A. I do recall hearing about that in the office, but I would share with you my perspective on that.

Q. My question, really, is, is what is the rationale behind that? Why is that being told to employees?

A. So I'll be very direct on that. So Lord knows that agency needs an overhaul; that's all I can tell you. It's antiquated.

So you would have people in general write an IOC on something that you could just pick up the phone and talk to somebody about. And that would be my characterization of it, quite frankly, not that -- at least from my standpoint, not that we don't want you to write something down so it won't be a public record, but, you know, just pick up the phone and talk to somebody and ask a question on what you need. And that's my observation on that.

I don't think that it was done to not have a public record. I can say that, from my own perspective, if I want something documented, I'm going to put it in a public record, and it's either going to be in a memo or an email, period.

Q. I'm sure with your experience that you fully understand the public records laws and the governing of the sunshine laws and those kinds of things.

A. Yes.

Q. So let me ask you this. Are you aware at the sheriff's office there was a system in place so that text messaging using agency phones would be captured?

A. Yeah, I mean, that's under IT. So as far as I know, that standard is in place, yes. Now, I don't think it was when I first began there, but it is in place as I recall.

Q. Correct. And as a professional in this area, you and I both probably have this same issue, which is employees are required to retain public records when they create them on behalf of the agency.

A. Yes.

Q. And communications may or may not, depending upon the nature of the communication, become a public record, correct?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. If it's a case for us, if it's case related, it's public record. If it's "When are you going to meet me for lunch?" it's not public record, right?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. So my question really relates to, are you aware that the sheriff did not implement this capture procedure on his agency-issued telephone?

A. No. I mean, the only thing -- the only thing I know of is when we got the new radios which can show where you're at any point in time, the P25s, I do recall that his radio didn't show his location for obvious security reasons; but I'm not aware that any text messages on his phone were not captured. I'm not aware of that.

Q. You would -- would you agree that if that's what the agency is using to ensure the capture of public records for the agency, that it would have been appropriate for that to be on the sheriff's phone because he is primarily one who could create public records?

A. I would say you need to follow the public records law.

Q. Sure. Don't we all.

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. But you personally are unaware whether or not he implemented that procedure on the phone that was issued to him from the sheriff's office?

A. I don't recall that.

Q. Are you aware of any other person with the agency that you -- that you do have knowledge of whether or not they implemented that on their agency-issued telephone?

A. Not that I know of. I know on my agency phone, you know, when I turned it in, everything was there.

Q. Understood. When you received an agency-issued phone, or at least when this system went live, there was probably some text message that you received that said you have to log into this system, this is what's going to happen, and you have to complete the some action to cause the phone to start recording those messages.

A. All I can tell you is when I got my phone, it was ready to go. I didn't undo anything. Everything was captured, to the best of my knowledge.

Q. And IT might have instituted that on your phone before they gave it to you.

A. Well, actually, in the sheriff's office, the radio shop gets involved in the cell phones.

Q. Oh, so it's not IT. It's radio.

A. Yes, which is under the CCC umbrella. The radio shop is under that, although ultimately I think it was supposed to move over to IT, which is a better fit; but at the time that I was there, that was the hierarchy.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. What's CCC umbrella?

A. Combined communications center, and I think they called it the technical services division or department; and that had the whole CCC, and it had the radio shop under it. And then IT was kind of everything else.

Q. Do you know anybody else at ASO that did not enable their GPS location for safety reasons?

A. Maybe the undersheriff.

Q. But nobody you know for a fact?

A. Uh-uh. The only one I know for sure was the sheriff for security.

Q. Let me ask you this. When you were in your position, did you have anything to do with the office of professional standards?

A. No. You mean internal affairs?

Q. Yeah.

A. No.

Q. So would you be party to communications, like hearing things with the sheriff and undersheriff regarding the IA, internal affairs?

A. No, but, I mean, to be truthful, I was involved in internal investigations during my tenure there, but nothing to do with, you know, what -- what might open cases be. You know what I'm saying? All those meetings were held directly with the undersheriff, to the best of my knowledge.

Q. Speaking of the undersheriff, how would you describe your relationship with the undersheriff?

A. I thought it was positive. I saw him daily, and I worked well with him. I've known Joel for several years. At one point -- I think he was the chief in Alachua at one point, and was in High Springs as well, so I know him. I mean, I wouldn't say that we're close friends, but I had a good relationship with him.

Q. When you were hired to do the job, did you feel that you either had the requisite knowledge to do the job or that you could easily and readily obtain the necessary training to perform the functions of your duties?

A. From my perspective, I hit the ground running, and it's because of my background, you know. And so I -- you know, from my standpoint, I was qualified for the job.

Q. Would you make that same description of the undersheriff?

A. Yes.

Q. You feel that when he got there, he was prepared to perform the functions of running 1000-person office?

A. I do. I do recall that he, I guess, had a long tenure with the sheriff's office at some point, long-term career law enforcement professional. So yes, I would characterize him as qualified.

Q. Ultimately, when you left the sheriff's office, what was the reason why you left?

A. I told the sheriff in December of '22 that I had made a personal decision to step down, so I gave him five, six months' notice. In the letter that I gave him I also indicated to him that I wanted to move in another direction, and that I was contemplating continuing my education.

Q. So you would have come on there around -- you were there for approximately 18 months?

A. Oh, no, I was there for two years and three or four months. I started in like March of '21 and left in May of '23.

Q. So two years and a month or so. And was there any difference in the sheriff's management style between the way he managed when you worked for him the first time and the way that he would manage the sheriff's office when you worked for him the second time?

A. Yes. In my estimation, I -- I've known him for a very long time, and I think that -- again, my observations, my opinions, that I do know that the transition between the former sheriff and the current sheriff did not go well. I know that, you know, when you have a transition of power, you're supposed to let the new team come in. For whatever reason, Sheriff Darnell did not permit that, so I think that was difficult. And, of course, all that occurred before I came there. So I think any new sheriff coming on board would find that difficult, to have a change in leadership as a result of that.

The first year I didn't really notice anything different. You know what I'm saying? The last year, maybe not the last full year, but I felt like we were not going in -- please understand I'm not a law enforcement officer, and I have a tremendous amount of respect for him. I felt like we were not going in the direction that I thought we should be, quite frankly.

I'm a very driven professional. I want to get things done, and I felt like we were just starting and pausing and starting and pausing. And for me, from my standpoint, I, you know, felt like we could have done more, and I didn't understand why; I really didn't.

Q. I'm sorry you said that, because my question was about to be, why? Why are we starting and pausing? What was the reason why you feel like you weren't accomplishing things?

A. I just feel like there would be a project, and you'd do all the information; and it would say okay, and then it would just kind of linger for months. And then when you would ask about it again -- you know what I'm saying? And so -- and that characteristic is nothing I've seen in all the years

I've known him, so I didn't understand that.

Q. I don't know the nature of your relationship with him. There are many people here would feel very comfortable coming to me and saying, "Hey, I don't understand what you're doing here. Can you explain it to me?" but not every constitutional officer is approachable that way.

Were you able to have that conversation with him, or did you try?

A. So from my perspective, I think -- again, this is my opinion. I think I gave up at one point, quite frankly. I felt like the agency was undergoing what I call group think, which I'm sure you know what that is. And towards the end of my tenure there I felt like I was the person that, you know, would be the one that, gee, should we really do this? Is this a good idea? But everyone else was like, let's go do this, or whatever. And I got tired of it, quite frankly.

Q. So it seems like it's two-fold. There's things that need to get done that are not getting done, or they get started and never completed; and you have things that you think should not be done, and you're saying, "Hey I don't think we should do this," but you're not being heard. Is that fair?

A. To a certain extent, but please understand I didn't see the sheriff that much. My daily thing was with the undersheriff, who I know kept the sheriff apprised of everything. You know what I'm saying? And so it just --

Q. Can I ask you a question?

A. Yes.

Q. Was that different than when you were in Alachua with him?

A. Oh, yes, absolutely.

Q. Because it seems like you would have seen him frequently in Alachua.

A. Yeah.

Q. Daily.

A. Yeah.

Q. And then when you're working with him at the sheriff's office -- and I don't know how the sheriff's office is laid out, but I would assume that -- I've herad it called "the suite."

A. Yes.

Q. That you would have been in the suite where he is located.

A. Yes.

Q. But yet you were not having a lot of contact with him?

A. Not so much. You know what I'm saying? Like I said, the undersheriff was there daily. And certainly, if I needed to talk with him, I would go in the back and set up a meeting.

But I think, like I shared with you, from my perspective, I was somewhat frustrated and felt like I couldn't really articulate and have the conversations that I wanted to have. It was different somehow for me.

Q. Let me ask you this. If I understand, and you tell me if I'm wrong, the sheriff is obviously the head of the organization; but then it seems like the way it was divided is that Undersheriff Decoursey would have the law enforcement side, but you're sitting on the same level as Undersheriff Decoursey because you've got all the civilian side, right?

So you should have two people who are sitting directly under the sheriff, who are running -- you have a larger side of the agency. If I understand it correctly, there's far more civilian employees than there are sworn employees.

A. Oh, no, it's the opposite.

Q. Is it?

A. Yes. Yes.

Q. Well, I guess I'm not counting correctional officers.

A. You have to look at it that way, yeah.

Q. How many employees did you have?

A. Oh, gosh.

Q. Rough. You don't have to give me exact.

A. I think agency-wide was probably between eight and nine, so I was probably 200, maybe.

Q. Okay.

A. Yeah, it's the other way around, actually.

Q. Okay.

A. So, you know, while I was there, I -- from my perspective, I made changes that needed to be made; the sheriff allowed me to do them.

I will share with you that a real problem with that agency is that the sworn folks basically ride herd over the civilian side, and it didn't take folks long to see that I wasn't going to tolerate that; so I didn't.

And I had a good relationship with all the civilian areas that I worked with. And I think what people don't understand, probably more than you're interested in hearing, is typically when you have people running around with badges and guns, they're not in the same building with you. They are in a sheriff's office, and I think that's a certain factor when you have those folks like a major or someone that's higher on the chain coming into a department and -- you know, they would constantly -- and the undersheriff and sheriff worked diligently on this -- explain to people, no, you just can't go over there and start, you know, directing these civilian agencies. We have a chief of staff over there.

So, you know, I didn't take it personally, but I can tell you that there was definitely some resistance there to someone who's not, quote, unquote -- you know, the employees used to say the analogy over there was if you weren't sworn, you weren't born, or something like that. You know what I'm saying?

Q. Was the person who preceded you a sworn officer?

A. Yes.

Q. And the person who's now in your position is a sworn officer?

A. Yes. From my perspective, it should be a civilian running that side of the office, quite frankly; it really should be.

Q. Understood. So I just do want to circle back to my question about you leaving. This frustration and your sort of desire to see the agency move in a good direction, the group think, you know, all the those things you've talk about, those are things that weighed into your leaving?

A. Yes, it did.

Q. And do you feel like the experience that you had coming into the job was appropriate and necessary to handle a job of that size?

A. I do, yeah. I mean, I don't think that someone who had just worked in a few cities or a county -- you know what I'm saying? A good part of my job was the interface with the county, which was huge not just on the money side, but getting things done. And, I mean, I had a very good relationship with the county, did the lead on that.

At one point in time I was actually over the jail, very early on when I got there, I think, and had a really good working relationship with the major over there. There was some major, major contracts we did, 21 million-plus contract on health care. I worked that through. That took -- that was very time intensive.

So yeah, big contracts like that, I was always involved in those in a variety of topics.

Q. And you have the history to do that because you've done -- Green Cove Springs is large.

A. Yes.
Q. It's a fairly large city. It's not Williston.
A. Right. It's the county seat of Clay County.
Q. Okay. But the person he had replace you a year and a half ago was a deputy sheriff?
A. Correct.
Q. Is that an appropriate person to serve in a role that supervises 200-plus people and is responsible for a budget of 50-plus million dollars?
A. Again, you're asking me an opinion question.
Q. Okay.
A. I have absolutely no respect for Mr. Yaeger, period. I think he's unqualified, I think he is unprofessional, and I'll just leave it at that.
MR. KRAMER: Right. Okay.
BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:
Q. Did you ever see him do anything that you thought might be unethical?
A. I think the treatment that he gave Captain Butcher is unethical in my book, yes, I do.
Q. Anything else that you --
A. He -- I know that, you know, before I left -- I mean, this is petty stuff, but to me it's unprofessional, quite frankly.

We made room for an office in the suite for him so that he could transition with me. And not long after I was there he had folks in facilities -- or he did this before he came, and I know that the sheriff and undersheriff were appalled by his behavior, quite frankly.

He, for whatever reason, decided that I didn't need a phone at my desk. Because when you move positions around, you take my phone, you do this -- I don't know. I have no idea what his thought process was. And somehow I found out that they were going to take my phone and give it to, I don't know, one of the captains or the majors or somebody, you know, when you do this musical chairs.

Now, remember I've still got several weeks with the county. It's just before our budget is due statutorily, and for whatever reason, I guess they assumed that I would do all my work on a cell phone. And I know he was involved in that process, so I chalk that up to immaturity.

And then the other thing he did, at one point he had the folks from facilities send me an email saying that they wanted to know when they could paint the office. And I responded with a very curt email, and I said, "Look, I'm here whatever it takes me through Friday. You want to paint, you come over the weekend." Do you know what I'm saying?

It just -- like I said, it's immaturity. It's unprofessional. And what he -- you know, the debacle that ensued with him and Captain Butcher, you know, was unnecessary. She was not in his chain of command. And I know for a fact that his whole thing with her was that her demeanor was unprofessional. He didn't like the -- I don't know, something or other.

He has a real power complex, and I do think he has an issue with women in positions of authority, quite frankly. And Captain Butcher is not a mild and meek individual. She's a professional like I am, and you just don't operate that way. I mean, it is petty, but, you know, I mean, come on.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. It's not petty. It's important. I do want to follow up with this.

Were there other individuals who were either available in the community or available in the sheriff's office who would have been properly trained or better -- had better experience to assume the role as you were leaving than someone who by all accounts essentially has zero experience in doing any of the functions that you've described here?

A. Not that I know of; I really don't. I mean, we -- you know, we were running high vacancies, but everybody is. You know what I'm saying? And I can't think of anyone that I know of that would have that kind of civilian background.

I did not get involved in operations at all. That was pretty much Colonel Scott, the majors or whatever. So honestly, there was no one there.

I made the assumption, you know -- and I'm still bound by a code of ethics, so you can tell that it's hard for me to talk about some things.

I gave five months' notice. I thought there might be people, you know, outside, Tallahassee, other contacts that he might want to bring in, and it didn't happen.

Q. Was there any effort to recruit anyone to properly replace you?

A. I don't know. I really don't know. I know I told the sheriff and undersheriff, "Look, I'm here if you need me."

An extra copy of the budget book was made -- you know what I'm saying -- along with the sets left at the agency so that I can, you know, guide them over the summer or whenever the hearings take place in September. I told them I'm more than happy to do that.

So I don't know, but, you know, again, I don't have any respect for the man; I truly don't.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Your number two wasn't up to the strength to take your job?

A. Well, who would you say would be the number two?

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. You've got a bunch of number twos.

A. Not really, because I've got the IT director, I've got Mike Roberson. Remember, I shared with you there was a retirement there. So he was still on his one-year probation doing a jam-up job. Michelle was new to her area.

Now, Patty Justice was the CFO, but her area of -- she had a lot of institutional knowledge, very sharp, very bright, also a CPA, but her knowledge was that budget.

Q. So nobody with HR experience.

A. No, and there really wasn't. There truly wasn't, quite frankly. And it's not that -- you know, I always tell folks you can be replaced; so it's not like I can't be replaced, but I don't -- I didn't see anyone inside the agency that could.

Q. So it would have been logical to reach out to --

A. And I don't know what kind of call or contacts were made.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. If there was advertising for the position done, would it have come through you?

A. Not necessarily, but I don't recall seeing it posted. You know, when you go to the sheriff's website for positions, I don't recall seeing it posted there. So in any event --

Q. Well, what would the -- I'm not asking what you got paid. What would the position have paid?

A. It needed to start at at least about 120.

Q. So it's a good job?

A. Yeah, absolutely.

Q. I'm sure that there -- if it was unadvertised, then local people who might have had similar backgrounds -- because there are going to be people in government that have similar backgrounds to you who may have been qualified. They wouldn't be aware of it. Fair?

A. That is a fair assessment; but I would also say on the opposite side, is that when you have a position at that level, you want someone that's tried and tested and that you know.

Q. Do you want someone who has been essentially a disaster in every position that that person has been in prior to taking your position?

A. No; but what I'm saying is that I think when you get to that level -- do you know what I'm saying?

Q. I do.

A. You want someone that it's a good comfortable level. You know what I'm saying? And so -- but did I know or have any knowledge that he was going to be placed in that position? No. That happened, I think, like a few months -- or a few weeks, rather, before I left, so I don't know.

Q. How long would it take you to properly train someone to do that job?

A. Really just a few months if they had the background like someone like myself, or my caliber. I mean, it's not a difficult job, but you got to know what you're doing. And a good part of the job is managing people and knowing when to push the envelope and when to step back a little bit, and you don't get that by a degree. You have to have years of experience and --

Q. Sure. And being a repeated failure at managing people would be not a good qualification?

A. That's your statement.

MR. KRAMER: Understood. I don't know if she put a question mark after that or not.

Okay. Any other questions?

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Have they reached out to you since you left to help with the budget?

A. I got one call from Major Crews. They are starting some PBA negotiations and was asking me about a potential pay plan that I had worked on before I left, and I responded to him. I didn't hear back, but I did, you know, answer his question.

Other than that -- other than him, I don't think anyone else has reached out work-related. I mean, I've heard some employees, "Hello, how you doing?" How's school?" but I think that was the only directly related question with regards to work as I recall.

Q. So, I mean, it's what? June the 28th. Your budget is due to the county commission.

MR. KRAMER: Oh, no, it's already passed.

A. It's already done. It's gone May 1st.

Q. Are you in July?

A. No, we're --

MR. KRAMER: It's October 1, but they require the budget submitted, and then there will be hearings about the budget; which is what she's referencing, is that the sheriff's budget has at times been contentious at the county. And that's what she's talking preparing for, is those hearings that are coming up.

INSPECTOR RIDDICK: Okay.

THE WITNESS: So, you know, that played into, you know, me staying through that first week in May.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. To get it ready?

A. Yeah. My classes started on the 4th, and then I think it was on May 4th in the morning I gave the presentation to the county commission. So I got them everywhere they needed to go statutorily, made recommendations, had met with the sheriff, knew we got proposed what we wanted to propose, so it's a good budget, a good request.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. You said earlier on in the interview that the candidates that were recommended or that were not recommended, you made notes that were given to the sheriff. Are you familiar with him ever promoting or hiring or transferring a person that wasn't recommended?

A. I didn't always necessarily know the outcome of them. You know what I'm saying? I suspect there may have been people that -- you know what I'm saying? I wrote, you know, "Look, this is not a good idea."

On some of them, you know, I just put "defer to sheriff." You know what I'm saying? That's a polite way of telling him I think you really need to think this one through.

In any event, at the end of the day I didn't know, you know, for sure what the final thing was unless -- until they ended up being put on the payroll -- you know what I'm saying -- that type of thing.

Q. What about internal transfers?

A. Internal transfers were usually done in those personnel orders. Like, you know, I'm moving this person there, taking that person there, that type of thing. I wasn't involved in that. Those meetings were held with the sheriff and Chad Scott, the undersheriff, and they would, you know, figure out, you know, what folks are wanting to go there, that type of thing.

Q. So just those three, Chad Scott, Decoursey, and Sheriff Watson?

A. And I think Jake Rush was in those at times, and at that point Chad Scott would have been on board. And they would -- you know what I'm saying -- go through, list the names of the candidates or who had -- if it was a sergeant or lieutenant who had taken their exams or whatever, but I was not brought into that process.

Q. Last question I've got. Do you know why Captain Crews was taken off as commander of the SWAT team?

A. I do not.

Q. Do you have an opinion?

A. He's now a major. Perhaps it had something to do with that, because he became the major over -- I'm trying to get all switches. I think when I left he was the major over support services, which is detectives, you know, that whole wing. And, you know, perhaps the thought was that too much -- you know what I'm saying? I don't know; I really don't, and I don't know at what time that change took place.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. You made a comment, and I meant to ask right after that, I apologize, that you met with Joel Decoursey because he was there on a daily basis.

A. Uh-huh.

Q. The sheriff wasn't?

A. He was not physically in the office every single day, but, I mean, that's not -- that's not unusual.

Q. So you weren't saying that he was AWOL. He was just off doing sheriff stuff?

A. No, he was just, you know, performing the duties in another capacity. He checked in all the time -- you know what I'm saying -- that type of thing.

Physically, you know, he wasn't necessarily in the office each and every day but was in constant contact with the undersheriff and his command team. And if there were assignments for me, I would either get them from his assistant -- and quite frankly, if I needed him, I could call him. You know what I'm saying? That was always an option.

Q. Did you text with him? You know, would he text you stuff?

A. I'm trying to remember. There probably were some times when he texted me some things.

INSPECTOR RIDDICK: That's good.

MR. KRAMER: Thank you very much. I know you were very much respected and appreciated at the sheriff's office, and I'm sorry that you're not there anymore. Thank you for the service that you did give.

THE WITNESS: Okay. Thank you.

WHEREUPON,

JAMES MATTHEW BECK

acknowledged having been duly sworn to tell the truth, and testified upon his or her oath as follows:

THE WITNESS: I do.

EXAMINATION

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Could you tell me your whole name, please?

A. James Matthew Beck.

Q. And how are you currently employed?

A. I'm a lieutenant for Alachua County Sheriff's Office at the department of jail.

Q. And what are your responsibilities?

A. I'm a shift commander on Team 2, nights.

Q. How long have you been an employee of the Alachua County Sheriff's Office?

A. A little over 15 years.

Q. Are you both corrections and law enforcement certified?

A. No, I'm strictly corrections.

Q. Has that -- I think I should know the answer to this question, but has all your time been at the jail?

A. Yes, sir. I had some time at training, but it was for the jail; and then OPS, but it was on the jail side. I did some road cases, but it was primarily as a subject matter expert for the jail.

Q. Do you have other law enforcement experience or correctional experience?

A. No, sir, just the sheriff's office is it.

Q. Okay. Was there a time in your career at the jail when you were assigned to the office of professional standards?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And while you were at the office of professional standards, what time frame is that? Not necessarily the days, but like who's the sheriff? Who's the commander?

A. Clovis Watson, Jr.

Q. And who are you responding to?

A. The first one was the John Richmond, was the first captain I had when I first got into OPS, and then Brandon Kutner, and that was it. I got promoted out of there.

Q. At the time when you were a sergeant?

A. No, I was a lieutenant at the time. I got promoted to captain out of OPS, and then ultimately -- that's different story, but was told that I would not make my probation ten months into it. And I was demoted back to lieutenant and sent back to night shift.

Q. Well, we'll get to that story.

A. I hope so.

Q. So let me ask you this. When you went into OPS, did you have any experience that would have made you appropriate for that position?

A. No, sir. I mean, I'd never done any officer discipline or anything like that. I got that after I was appointed at that spot.

Q. And when you arrived there, were you assigned to another officer who had extensive experience doing those kind of operations?

A. The senior person at that time was Lieutenant Kyle Simon. He was the most experienced prior to us, because there was three of us. I think Sherry French had some previous experience, but at the time Kyle was the one that had been there longer than anybody currently that was assigned there.

Q. For lack of a more artful way to say it, did he know what he was doing?

A. Yes and no. It was kind of the blind leading the blind. He's one of the smartest guys I know; but I mean, as for what do you know in six months? So it's kind of one of those deals.

Q. How long are you in OPS before you received actual training to do the job of OPS?

A. It was probably maybe a month or so. Brett Rhodenizer and I went down to officer discipline class, down in Jupiter, Florida, that FDLE put on. So we went down there, and that was the first formal training that we had gotten.

Q. How long were you with John Richmond before Brandon Kutner comes in?

A. Maybe a couple months. It wasn't that long.

Q. Do things change, operations change, because Brandon Kutner comes in?

A. No, he was a little more detail oriented on certain things, but for the most part it was -- it was the same. There was -- I mean, it's not real, you know, fast-paced. It's kind of feast or famine. Sometimes you've got a lot of stuff; and other times, you don't.

Q. So when he comes in, does he do -- and I'm going to use the word "audit," but I don't now that that's really the right way to describe it. Sort of an inspection of what's pending and what needs to be done when he gets there?

A. Yes.

Q. And does he discover, like, for instance, things that should have been sent to FDLE have not been sent to FDLE?

A. There was -- because Brett -- when we came back from that class there was things that were brought to our attention that, you know, things need to be sent to FDLE; so we had some questions on some things. So when we questioned him, he started looking into that. And I don't know, you know, what happened after that, but he definitely did start looking into certain things.

Q. Specifically were there cases where the findings were such that the matter should have gone to FDLE because there are certain offenses that require a report to FDLE?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did you alert him that those things had not gone to FDLE?

A. There was one in particular that I was actually shift lieutenant, before I got into OPS, when we had a female individual that had done -- basically, falsified a check sheet; and truthfulness is one of the things that's got to go. At that time they were trying to, for lack of a better term, sweep it under the rug.

Q. Do you remember the subject of the investigating officer's name?

A. Camiel Rowe.
Q. Was the allegation for truthfulness founded?
A. They ended up -- I don't know how they -- it's like they downplayed it. I don't remember what they ended up -- she ended up getting a written reprimand for it, and I don't know if it ever went or not.
Q. But your understanding is that you were aware of it, you brought it to your commander's attention --
A. Yes.
Q. -- or your direct report's --
A. Yes.
Q. -- attention, "Hey, this is something that should go to FDLE." And from there, it's up to them to do that?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. It's not your responsibility to send something to FDLE?
A. No, I let my supervisor know, and that was -- at that point, I was done with it.
Q. In no circumstance would you be the person who's physically like putting it in the mail?
A. No.
Q. Okay. Understood. Were there any other similar circumstances to Camiel Rowe, like other cases where nothing had been sent to FDLE?

A. Most recently I was a captain, and we had two officers in a similar situation where, for a 12-hour period, they were in our mental health housing unit where everybody is on 15-minute checks. And we weren't -- we were looking at something not related to them when we came across them basically not doing their checks, not doing their jobs. And they were falsifying the documents saying they did all their checks when you can clearly see on video that they don't get out of the seat.

I brought that to my major at the time, Dorian Keith, trying to go formal on this because it's something that needs to be addressed. It's a mental health hazard unit. People are in there for a reason. You don't want people to hang themselves or hurt themselves; and if you're not doing your 15-minute checks, it's a big check you're fixing to sign. So we were trying to hold them accountable for that.

And one of the emails I sent to Major Keith at the time was, regardless of our findings, this is something that needs to go to FDLE because of the issue that it arises.

And that was promptly swept under the rug. I was told all they would get is a CC, and then me and the lieutenant of that shift that were trying to get discipline put on them were demoted probably a week to two weeks after that.

Q. And that goes into what you mentioned earlier, that you're now lieutenant.

A. Yes.

Q. You'd been promoted to captain. And then you bring this matter to the administration's attention, and you're then demoted back to lieutenant?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And are you told it's because you've brought this matter to their attention?

A. I wasn't given a reason at all. I was just told that I wasn't going to make probation, but it's -- I mean, that was the week before, so it's kind of, you know, hard not to say that's why.

Q. You had no other incident, no discipline?

A. Informal stuff, but nothing that warranted demotion.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. During the time of your probation, you had informal discipline?

A. Yes, sir. There was one -- I have copies of all that stuff. The first one was -- it was a misunderstanding. And I tried to explain it to Major Keith, and basically she wasn't hearing it.

It was a situation between one of my lieutenants was -- basically told the major that I approved somebody to have some time off when I never even had a conversation with them. And just to squash it all, I took the informal write-up just so it would be done. And then I had a conversation with my lieutenant about that.

The next one was, we had one of our officers go to in-service training. They took their, I don't know, five- or six-year-old kid with them because they didn't have child care.

Training, which is a separate division than I was in at the time, made the determination that the training that they were doing, they were okay with the kid staying just this one time. So they made the determination that he could stay as long as he, you know, watched the kid.

I ended up getting a CC for that because she said I should have overrode training's decision to allow him to stay and just sent him home.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Were you there when that was going on?

A. No, sir.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. I got to make sure I understand. You were given corrective counseling for not overriding a decision that you weren't aware was being made?

A. I knew that it -- I knew about it once they had already made the decision and he was allowed to stay there, but then the next day or two I ended up getting a CC because I was told that I should have overridden training.

Q. So you would have had the opportunity to override it?

A. It was already done when I found out about it.

Q. They are done for the day?

A. He was still there, but he was allowed to stay. So he had already -- it was, I don't know, 8:30. They started at 8:00, but the decision had been made that he could stay for the day.

Q. What time of day do you find out he's there?

A. It was 8:30, 8:45 when I found out about it.

Q. And he was there for the day?

A. He was there for the day, yes.

Q. So I want to go back, then, to when you're in OPS. You're under Brandon Kutner. You're familiar that, in OPS, there's something called the iRecord system?

A. Uh-huh.
Q. Do you know how it works?
A. Vaguely. I'm not very savvy with IT, but I can stumble through it.
Q. You can turn it on, and you can turn it off?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. You know that you can use it to observe conversations occurring and record conversations in the room?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And that also can occur at another work station if the person just walks into it?
A. Yes, sir, I believe so.
Q. And were you aware that it could be observed in the captain's office?
A. Yes.
Q. Were you aware of anybody using that system to observe conversations that were occurring in the room?
A. Outside of OPS?
Q. Well, no, I mean --
A. Just OPS in general?
Q. Uh-huh.
A. You hear that they would. I mean, as for seeing somebody use it, I never saw somebody use it; but you would hear that people may be listening while an interview is going on.

Q. You're familiar with the -- with officers have to review the evidence against them?

A. Yes.

Q. The room where officers would do that, was that the iRecord room?

A. Yes.

Q. And is that system always on?

A. I believe in one way or another it's always on, yes.

Q. So if somebody chose to, could they listen to the officer and their counsel --

A. Yes.

Q. -- or their representative --

A. Yes.

Q. -- reviewing the evidence?

A. Yes.

Q. Are you aware of people doing that?

A. I believe Captain Kutner would occasionally do that; but again, that's just -- I don't -- I never saw him physically doing that, but, you know, you hear --

Q. You'd be aware --

A. Yes.

Q. -- that that's a violation of --
A. Yes.
Q. -- something?
A. Yeah.
Q. And if you had seen that, would you have been obliged to do or say something?
A. I would have to, yeah.
Q. So give me an idea of why you believe that occurred.
A. Just office chatter. The three or four of us that were in there, just conversations we would have.
Q. Was there ever an instance where perhaps, you know, Brandon Kutner was aware of things that he might only have been aware of if he had been privy to those conversations?
A. Do you have a specific? Just in general, it's hard. I mean, I'm sure if he was listening, yes, he would be privy to any conversation that was going on in there.
Q. Yeah. I mean, I don't have a specific that I know of. You know, it's just my understanding, like it is yours, that that is something that was occurring while he was the captain there. And what you're saying is, you didn't see it, but you understand that's also correct?

A. Correct.
Q. Do you know of anybody who did see it?
A. No, sir, not offhand. I think Brett was the lead at that point, so he may have had more knowledge about that than me.
Q. Brett?
A. Rhodenizer.
Q. Rhodenizer.
A. Yes, sir.
BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:
Q. Would Captain Kutner have knowledge about possible -- if the attorney was in there, having possible violations of 112 being brought forth? Or are you aware of that ever happening?
A. Not offhand that I can think of. Like I said, I know any interview we were doing in there, he was watching us do our interviews; and if something was coming up, he was kind of our overwatcher, for lack of a better word. If something was going a certain way, he could -- if we were potentially stepping on somebody's 112, he could intervene. Or if something was up that we need to either go talk to another witness or something like that, he would watch those interviews; but as for the attorney-client stuff going on in there, I assume, but I have no idea.

Q. But there was never a time that he voiced a concern to you about 112 coming up prior to an interview?

A. Not that I recall.

Q. So at any time, but most specifically while you were in OPS, were you ever directed to reach a particular result in a case?

A. There were certain things, yes, that when Captain Kutner would go talk to the undersheriff, he would come back and basically be like, oh, we got a case. And then we start discussing it, and it was implied that this is what we have, this is where we're going to go.

So it was not -- the four of us that were in there were all of the mindset of we go where the facts take us. We're not head hunting; that's not what we're doing. And it was always implied this is where we're going to go with it, this is what they're wanting us to find.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Were there ever circumstances where instead of doing that, you went where the facts led you; and then that investigation was taken back to the administration and then returned with potentially saying that's not the result we wanted?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Can you describe when and how that occurred?

A. I'm trying to think specifically like a name of a person. There was -- I mean, we had one, just offhand, that was -- and I think this was right about the time I was leaving, so I don't even know if -- we had -- a guy had done -- a deputy had done something; I don't even remember what it was. He dispatched a CAD or something. The sheriff, they wanted a certain result. Well, what they had, we didn't have. So when it came back, they ended up trying to find a lesser included on it. I don't know whatever happened with that.

Q. But it was clear to you that whatever you had found was unsatisfactory to whatever discipline it was that the agency heads were seeking to impose?

A. Yes.

Q. If I understand correctly, it matters what you find because there's a scale or a rank of an offense number?

A. Depending what it is, yes. The level carries a certain weight depending what it is.

Q. And was it sometimes the matter of you haven't found the right level because we want to impose this discipline, and now we leave this level to impose it?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. And so you were told basically you need to find something that meets this level?

A. Yeah. I firmly believe that that's why they've had so much turnover in OPS, because they're trying to find the group that is okay with doing that.

Q. Because your group --

A. We were not.

Q. -- were not going to do that?

A. I wasn't. Whatever the facts showed, that's what we did.

Q. Okay. Were you ever party to something where you considered the result of the discipline to be unfair to the individual who got disciplined?

A. We had one with Lieutenant Howard Adams, who had made a comment on a Facebook post and liked it. He ended up getting terminated, and he never even had an interview or anything.

Q. Was it a terminable offense?

A. I think they ended up -- I think he was ultimately charged with insubordination, or however, because one of the comments, he was basically questioning his direct supervisor. So they found a way to fire him without even doing an interview.

Q. Meaning he was never given an opportunity to address the issue?
A. Yes.
Q. And you consider that to be unfair?
A. I mean, everybody gets their day in court, right?
Q. I'm learning that maybe that isn't true when it comes to --
A. Do I think it was a stupid thing to do? Absolutely. Do I think it was something that he should have been terminated for? (Shrugs shoulders.)
Q. Have you ever been asked by anyone to describe the content of what we're talking about today after you got done with this interview?
A. No, sir.
Q. So no one has asked you, "Hey, come back and tell me what" --
A. No, sir.
Q. Other than what we've already discussed, are you aware of anything that has occurred that you think was unlawful, that the administration has done something that violates the law?
A. I mean, there's currently an investigation going on with Lieutenant Glen Stanley. He had an investigation for an allegation of truthfulness, that he had lied in an official investigation.

So I was still captain when that investigation came across my desk. I looked at all the evidence. There was nothing there to even substantiate even remotely that he lied, so I unfounded. And I sent it up, you know, like how we do. Then it goes to the next person, and so on and so forth.

Q. And it's unfounded when it gets to you?

A. Yes. The major, who's right over me, she said it was founded. And then whatever she stated didn't make a whole lot of sense. Then it goes above her to the colonel. He's unfounded. And it gets to the undersheriff, and the undersheriffs says it's founded. So they're trying to give him two days for lying on a special investigation.

He has in Loudermill with him, explains his side to it, and they changed it. They said, "Okay. Well, this isn't truthfulness, but this is going to be neglect of duty."

Well, if it's not truthfulness, it can't be neglect of duty. So you can't have one without the other, so I don't know how they're going to try to still give him days off for that. If it's not founded for untruthfulness, there's nothing else. You just can't just pick -- find something that fits.

Q. Anything else that is unethical or immoral?

A. I mean, my current captain was fired for lying as a sergeant with the sheriff's office. He got terminated. He got brought back by Clovis Watson, Jr., and now he's my direct supervisor, from an officer to captain.

Q. So he's fired as a sergeant, and he's hired as a detention deputy?

A. A detention officer, yes. He was a detention sergeant. He got fired for lying in an investigation. He gets brought back after a couple years with the new administration, and then he's now a captain.

Q. Promoted from detention officer to --

A. Captain.

Q. Detention captain?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And does he -- did he otherwise meet the criteria to be a captain?

A. I mean, it's an appointed position, but he's never been shift commander. He's never been lieutenant. He was a sergeant for a couple three years before he got terminated.

So for an experience to run a division where you have five lieutenants, you know, looking to you for guidance, I would say no.

Q. Is that normally a position for one who would have to compete for it?

A. It's generally an appointed position. I mean, technically, you can do that, but it's never been past practice.

Q. Has it been past practice that a person would have experience as a lieutenant and a sergeant and an officer?

A. Yeah, generally, your captains, unless it's somebody brought from outside of the agency, it's a lieutenant. Generally the senior lieutenant gets it, or one of the senior lieutenants get it.

Q. Is it a good idea to bring in somebody from another agency?

A. I would say no.

Q. Has that ever happened?

A. Yes. Not necessarily of the jail since we're kind of, you know, self-contained; but generally, if you come up through the ranks there, you kind of stay there because you know the routine.

They did it on -- he brought quite a few with him on the road side when he came in.

BY INSPECTOR SNOWDEN:

Q. Did you say why you were re-assigned from

OPS?

A. I was promoted out. I went from inspector to captain over security operations.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. And then back to shift lieutenant?

A. And then back to night shift lieutenant, yes, sir.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Is that uncommon, to go -- would you still be the senior lieutenant?

A. I am the senior lieutenant, yes, sir.

Q. To go to night shift?

A. I would say it's common, but that seems to be par for the course for them. They're going to demote me and then punish me by sending me to nights.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Is that something which you can make a request and say, "I would prefer to be on days"?

A. I have not requested it because I go wherever I'm needed. I know others that were moved around in this last shake-up that were requesting certain shifts, not necessarily days or nights, just certain teams for child care issues, and the majority were denied.

Q. Does that seem like a good idea when the agency is missing more than 100 positions?

A. It's -- the sad thing is, the amount of people that we're down and the things -- even when I was captain, the things that we were trying to do. You know, we're mandating people to work overtime. And then if somebody has pre-approved leave in the pay period, they're to flex out that mandated overtime pay. I don't even know if that's legal because you're forcing somebody to come in on your day off, and then you're not paying them for that day. I mean, technically they're getting paid, but they're not getting that overtime rate.

Q. Correct. It's not protected overtime.

A. I know when Major Stafford was there, he had us using the call-out pay for those days so that it was protected time because the administration did not want to give us a special code to protect that overtime. So we were using the call-out pay, the call-out code, which protected that overtime.

And then as soon as he was gone, one of the first meetings I had with Dorian Keith was -- the first thing she said was we're not doing that anymore.

Anything that they have done since she's become the major has made it harder to get people to work. They're not doing anything to benefit the employees.

Q. And people continue to leave and resign.

A. Absolutely. I had a guy resign last night.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. The two COs that got corrective counseling, do you remember their names?

A. Shankevius Carr. And then -- I have copies of the CCs. I can get you all that stuff. I have the email chain between me and the major where I say, hey, this is going to need to go here, and then ultimately -- the conversation her and I said when she said it's going to basically go away to CC, that was a face-to-face conversation; but then I do have email correspondence where she's asking me where those CCs are. So, I mean, I can provide you with all that stuff.

INSPECTOR RIDDICK: We probably should subpoena it.

THE WITNESS: Kurtsey is the last name of the second guy. I'm sorry. It took me a minute to think of that.

MR. KRAMER: If you think you have information to write a subpoena that would get that conversation.

INSPECTOR RIDDICK: Well, we could subpoena his email.

MR. KRAMER: Why don't you give us the email, and then we'll get the subpoena.

THE WITNESS: You want that whole chain or --

INSPECTOR RIDDICK: Yeah. Give us everything.

THE WITNESS: Another instance we had was with Pam James, Sergeant Pam James.

BY MR. KRAMER:

Q. Correct. I'm aware of Sergeant James.

A. That was in my office in front of me where she was insubordinate. And then they went all the way through the investigation to interview her, and then I was told by Major Keith that that investigation is just going away. And when I asked why, she couldn't give me a reason. She just said it's going away.

Q. And as a lieutenant and captain, does it create management problems in the jail when you have --

A. Absolutely.

Q. -- a person who's a sergeant who's openly defiant --

A. Yes.

Q. -- of a lieutenant?

A. She's untouchable. There's nothing you can do to her. You can't do anything to her. She is untouchable.

I tried to -- at one point, due to staffing issues, they were wanting the command staff at the jail, me, Captain Warren, Captain Keith, they were wanting all of us to work -- instead of four tens we were working, they wanted us to work five eights. So they want us there every day of the week.

So I asked my admin staff -- I had an admin lieutenant and sergeant -- if they wanted us on that same schedule. They said yes.

So I went to my sergeant, Pam James, and lieutenant at the time, who was Virgil Calhoun, and I said, "Look, they want us working four or five eights, so this is what we're going to do."

And she promptly -- I think she did a week of it and then went to the undersheriff complaining that we were picking on her because she had some lawsuits against the sheriff's office, and I was counseled with picking on her and moving people around. And I was told then that I can't even move officers from shift to shift for staffing needs in my division.

BY INSPECTOR RIDDICK:

Q. Are there any other COs that had done the same thing that were sent over for an IA?

A. As far as I know, anytime we've had them -- I was not the one that sent them, obviously, but there were -- anytime that they went up, if you were, you know, lying on an official document, you know, falsifying checks, all that stuff is supposed to go. Now, whether it did or not, I don't know.

Q. But past practice was that it should have gone?

A. Should have, yes, sir. I mean, we've had people get multiple days off for doing that stuff.

And then for one of the reasons she said that Kurtsey and Carr didn't warrant an investigation, she put it on one other female officer, that she had an incident where she had not done some checks, and nothing happened to her.

I was a captain that entire time, so I didn't know of that incident. When I asked her more details about it, the major, she said that it happened on a specific date. So I go looking at rosters and time sheets to see if that person was actually working, and that person was in the middle of a two-week vacation.

I don't know what information she had, but that incident and that date she gave me was not correct. And I could see the writing on the wall that they weren't going to do anything to these guys, and the more I pushed -- ultimately, I believe that was one of the reasons I was demoted.

As soon as Major Stafford left, the first meeting I had with Major Keith, out of her mouth was, "Are you going to stay?"

I asked her, I said, "Stay? What do you mean, stay?"

And that's all she could say, "Are you going to stay?"

I'm like, I got ten years left. I'm not going anywhere."

And then here come the frivolous CCs, and I'm promptly demoted.

MR. KRAMER: Understood.

Anything else?

All right. Thank you.

Captain Kelvin Jenkins	#0334

PREDICATION

On January 11, 2023, Human Resources Director Reshone Flanders e-mailed Personnel Order 23-005 as approved by Sheriff Clovis Watson, Jr. On January 12, 2023, the Alachua County Sheriff's Facebook page released a statement related to the personnel changes. On January 23, 2023, Chief Inspector Kelvin Jenkins informed the Inspectors of the Office of Professional Standards, that Sergeant Kevin Davis authored comments on Facebook that may be a violation of ACSO Directives. On March 30, 2023, this Inspector began an investigation into any potential policy violations.

COMPLAINT

On January 12, 2023, Alachua County Sheriff's Office used social media platform, Facebook, to inform the general public of recent promotions that "...provide growth, opportunity and represent the future of ASO as Sheriff Watson continues to fulfill his vision and promise to the community that will strengthen and improve the agency, the services we offer and the bond we share with the citizens of Alachua County."

On January 12, 2023, Sergeant Kevin Davis authored a Facebook post that may be a violation of ACSO directives. ACSO 945 – Social Media policy states, "All employees must strive to maintain public trust and confidence, not only in our professional actions, but also in our personal and online actions. Any online activity that has the effect of diminishing the public's trust and/or confidence in the ACSO will hinder the efforts of this agency to fulfill our mission."

This complaint, involving possible violations of ACSO Directive 353 V.A.7.b – Insubordination was initiated.

Directive 353 V.A.7.b – "Insubordination – Insubordination will be defined as 'failure to submit to authority' and will include, but not be limited to, any failure or deliberate refusal to obey a lawful order given by a superior or relayed by an employee of the same or lesser rank or any disrespectful, insolent or abusive language or action toward a superior whether in or out of the presence of the superior."

Directive 945 VIII.B.2 - "Employee Use of Social Media – Employees who utilize the Internet and social networking sites whether from an agency or personal device, are prohibited from posting any of the following on any social networking platform, either on their own sites, the sites of others known to them, the sites of others unknown to them, news media pages, or other information exchange forums:

> a. Any statements or material about the ACSO, its operations, or its current or former employees that are obscene, defamatory, false, deceptive, misleading, profane, libelous, threatening, harassing, abusive, hateful, etc."

INSPECTOR'S INVESTIGATION

On January 11, 2023, Human Resources Director Reshone Flanders e-mailed #ACSO Agency Wide, Personnel Order 23-005. On January 12, 2023, Alachua County Sheriff's Office posted the promotions on the Alachua County Sheriff Facebook page.

Alachua County Sheriff's Facebook Post

On January 12, 2023, Alachua County Sheriff's Facebook page posted about new promotions and assignments. The following Facebook comment has been reformatted, italicized, and copied in its entirety into this Administrative Investigation.

"Sheriff Clovis Watson Jr. is pleased to announce some changes at the Alachua County Sheriff's Office for 2023. Captain Kelvin Jenkins #0334

On March 30, 2023, at 1513 hours, a digitally recorded interview was conducted with Captain Kelvin Jenkins #0334. Captain Kelvin Jenkins provided a Complaint Intake Form dated March 30, 2023. The interview was conducted by Inspectors Virgil Calhoun and Scott Anderson at Alachua County Sheriff's Office, Office of Professional Standards.

This Inspector interviewed Captain Kelvin Jenkins in reference to his Complaint Intake Form. Captain Jenkins stated in writing he was, "...informed by the office of the Sheriff that Sergeant Kevin Davis provided commentary and/or authored social media posts, on FACEBOOK, which openly criticized personnel moves decided by Sheriff Watson, along with perceived claims of mismanagement, racism, cronyism etc." This Inspector asked Captain Jenkins if he had any further details and simply referred to his written statement.

Sergeant Kevin Davis' Facebook Posts

Sergeant Kevin Davis' initial (Facebook Post #1) social media posts on Facebook. The following Facebook comments were reformatted, italicized and copied in its entirety into this Administrative Investigation.

Facebook Post #1 – "Weiner Dog" meme with caption, "Captain Weiner Dog promoted to Major."

Inspector's Notes

On January 11, 2023, Sergeant Kevin Davis was included in Human Resources Bureau Chief Reshone Flanders' #ACSO Agency Wide e-mail group receiving Personnel Order 23-005. Sergeant Davis was identified as "Kevin Davis" on Facebook. Sergeant Davis did not identify working for Alachua County Sheriff's Office on his Facebook page. Sergeant Davis' profile photograph did not use identifiers associated with Alachua County Sheriff's Office.

Sergeant Davis had been employed with the Alachua County Sheriff's Office since 2004, according to the Employee Master Index (MNI). On April 13, 2013, Deputy Davis was promoted to the rank of Sergeant. At the time of the social media allegation, Sergeant Davis was assigned to the Patrol Division on Team Two Day Shift - District Three.

On January 23, 2023, Chief Inspector Kelvin Jenkins informed the Office of Professional Standards, that Sergeant Kevin Davis made comments on Facebook that may be a violation of ACSO Directives. Sergeant

Kevin Davis singled out the promotion of a certain Alachua County Sheriff's Office employee. According to the Facebook post by Alachua County Sheriff's Office, only two employees were promoted to the rank of major, one being Dorian Keith and the second being Jack "Lance" Yaeger.

On March 30, 2023, this Inspector submitted an extension to Sheriff Clovis Watson Jr., requesting thirty (30) days added to this Administrative Investigation beginning on April 19, 2023.

Major Dorian Keith #0368

On April 3, 2023, at 1340 hours, a digitally recorded interview was conducted with Major Dorian Keith #0368. The interview was conducted by Inspector Virgil Calhoun and Chief Inspector Kelvin Jenkins at Alachua County Sheriff's Office, Department of the Jail.

On January 11, 2023, Human Resources Bureau Chief Reshone Flanders e-mailed personnel Order 23-005. Two employees were promoted to the rank of major.

> "Effective January 15, 2023:
>
> Interim Jail Director Dorian Keith promoted to the rank of Major with assignment of Jail Director in the Department of the Jail*, reporting to* Undersheriff Joel DeCoursey, Jr.
> Chief Detective Jack "Lance" Yaeger promoted to the rank of Major in the Department of Support Services*, reporting to* Colonel Chad D. Scott."

Major Keith was informed about a Facebook post made by Sergeant Kevin Davis on January 12, 2023. This Inspector described the Facebook post to Major Keith. This Inspector informed Major Keith the purpose of this interview was trying to understand who Sergeant Davis was referencing in the Facebook post. This Inspector ask Major Keith, "First, could you explain the chain of command structure." Major Keith replied, "So it be, officer slash deputy, because they're the same rank. Then it would be sergeant. Then it would be lieutenant. Captain, major, colonel if this agency has them and then undersheriff and sheriff." Major Keith informed this Inspector her prior rank before she was promoted to major was captain. This Inspector asked were both majors, who were promoted, of the rank of captain. Major Keith said, "Yes, but..." (Inspector Note: Major Yaeger's title as Chief Detective is understood to be similar in pay and rank as a captain. The position of Chief Detective is occupied by an employee of the rank of captain.) Major Keith confirmed she was currently assigned to the Department of the Jail as Jail Director. This Inspector asked Major Keith if it was correct to conclude that the only other major in the agency would be Jack "Lance" Yaeger. Major Keith said, "Correct."

This Inspector asked Major Keith, "Have you ever supervised Sergeant Kevin Davis?" Major Keith testified, "I have not." This Inspector informed Major Keith that Kevin Davis did work in the Department of the Jail back in 2004. Major Keith continued, "In 2004, I had just got promoted to sergeant and so I would have went to a night shift here in security but prior to that I came from transport. So, I'm not sure if I supervised him on night shift or not if I was first a sergeant but, um, I don't remember it if I did."

This Inspector referred to the Facebook post as being an "inside joke." Major Keith was asked if she knew of this "inside joke." Major Keith responded, "So I have never saw this post prior to today but looking at it I don't think he is talking about me. Because I am a female, this is clearly in my eyes a male dog and it's a white male and the caption as well and so I wouldn't think he was talk'n about me. I would think that he was talk'n about Major Yaeger because of the date that was posted and the day of the personnel order that came out. So that's how I view it. But outside of that I have never seen it before."

Major Jack "Lance" Yaeger #0386

On April 6, 2023, at 0851 hours, a digitally recorded interview was conducted with Major Lance Yaeger #0386. The interview was conducted by Inspector Virgil Calhoun and Chief Inspector Kelvin Jenkins at Alachua County Sheriff's Office, Alachua County Sheriff's Office.

On January 11, 2023, Human Resources Bureau Chief Reshone Flanders e-mailed personnel Order 23-005. Major Jack "Lance" Yaeger was shown the personnel order along with a Facebook post authored by Sergeant Kevin Davis. This Inspector asked Major Yaeger if he could explain the chain of command. Major Yaeger testified, "I served as the Chief Detective in the Criminal Investigations and the rank inherent in that position is that of captain. Um, effective pursuant to this personnel order effective January 15th, I was promoted from the rank of captain, um to the rank of major." Major Yaeger was ask by this Inspector how many majors were currently at the Alachua County Sheriff's Office. Major Yaeger replied, "Currently we have two, myself and Major Dorian Keith."

Major Yaeger was asked if the Facebook post meme was an "inside joke" to which he replied, "It is." This Inspector asked if the Facebook post was referencing Major Dorian Keith or himself. Major Yaeger replied, "I believe it's a reference to myself for several reasons. Including, but not limited to, he... had some angst with me when I left the unit under him several years ago. He wasn't very happy about that. I'm fairly confident in saying that I'm sure this was designed to insult or embarrass me in some way, shape or form. And uh, the agency."

This Inspector asked Major Yaeger how the Facebook post, in question, may have an effect on the chain of command. Major Yaeger said he did not have social media but testified he found out several ways of the existence of the post, "from that of my family, um, as well as um, subordinates and colleagues alike. Um, again it is my belief that this was done with the sole purpose of insulting, embarrassing, not just me but the Sheriff, the agency and law enforcement in general quite frankly. Because um, I know when initially it first came out there was a lot of talk about it. Um, there was no secret, it was pretty far reaching. Um, I believe, if I remember correctly, that having been told, perhaps public, um, I can't confirm that myself but that was my understanding at the time."

This Inspector asked Major Yaeger what is the importance of command structure. Major Yaeger stated:

> "So, um, we are a paramilitary organization here at the Alachua County Sheriff's Office, as is all other law enforcement agencies, and uh, with that, we have a rank structure. Um, all the way from sheriff down to deputy sheriff. It's important for several reasons. On attentiveness to order, uh, good order in discipline, um, in our line of work... it's important that when an order is given, especially in a tactical situation they gotta be followed unless its illegal, immoral, unethical, because um, the consequences in our line of work could be death; serious bodily injury not just to us but citizens. So, in order to promote that into, uh, to promote that good order and discipline in the spirit of cooperation, attentiveness to orders, and respect for command or the position of command at a bare minimum, um, it is important that we follow the rules, policies and procedures that are set forth, and by this agency. You know, there is policy and procedures that go through a process called, work flow, that you know, um, command staff and others including the PBA, uh, get to have an opportunity to view them and weigh in on them and at the end of the day the Sheriff's decision is ultimate when those policies and procedure are published. Um, they are the rules by which we go by. Um there is reasons why we have rules against this, because once again it erodes the fabric of trust. Uh, in the public for us as law enforcement and not just our agency, all agencies in my opinion."

Chief Inspector Kelvin Jenkins asked Major Yaeger if there were any issues in the past with Major Yaeger being a subordinate to Sergeant Davis. Major Yaeger testified:

"He was my sergeant in uniform patrol and he um, left uniform patrol to start a new street squad or street crimes unit called CHIPS, and um, he worked very diligently trying to recruit me to that unit because of my history with SWAT, other street level crimes in special operations bureau... and my military background, with 20 years of impeccable service. Um, initially I turned him down, um, because I kind of sort of like my gig on dayshift. I'm sure as you can imagine. And I have worked the majority of my career, I wanna say at that point 16 or 17 or 18 years here at the Sheriff's Office at that time, so I was kind of enjoying the dayshift that my previous career was evening or night shift. Well they did interviews for that position and they were getting ready to publish the final results and they came to me one final time. They said, 'hey we're getting ready to pull the trigger on this unit and I just wanna come to you and ask you one more time to come join this unit.'" After speaking with my wife, I somewhat reluctantly, but ya know, also motivated, uh, opted to do it. So, they reopened the position. I interviewed and I was subsequently chosen. I spent ten months on that unit, and um, after a couple deputies told me that, um, he instructed them not to back me up on traffic stops. I immediately uh, opted, immediately opted to remove myself from the unit. Um, when I made that, um, I asked to speak with Sergeant Davis, there was another lieutenant in the room, Sergeant Davis ask me why I was leaving. I said would you rather speak in private. Cause I kind of did not want, for a lack of better terms, throw him under the bus, if you will. I was, ya know, still trying to be professional. He did not want to talk privately, so I didn't kind of say why I was leaving, all though that was the decision. I simply, uh, told him that it was just time for me to go. And kind of bowed out gracefully, if you will. So, to say, I was not trying to stir waters at the time. And uh, he immediately after that had a different attitude towards me. Um, I could tell it was one of disgust and anger and I had to talk to him a few times since then, um very cordially, very polite with him, and uh, I could tell he was upset. If I was a guessing man, I have a feeling that this probably may have something to do with that. I might also add that, preceding that he actually selected me to be a member of the career service board where he was the subject employee. He selected me as one of his picks. So, there was no rift, there was no problems with us until I left that unit, if you will."

Major Yaeger finished the interview by adding:

"Regardless of my personal feelings about a post and a personal attack, if you will. Um, a senseless personal attack, I might add. Is again, I just... this isn't helpful to the agency, to take my name, to take it out of the equation, this ain't healthy to the agency, cause really who, who's affected is those deputy sheriffs who are out there on the road and all of us, even you, that, that have to interact with public on a daily basis because what this does is, it just um, it feeds to the propaganda and rhetoric that we're a bunch of cowboys doing what we want and we're a bunch of idiots and for me personally as arrogant as it may sound, you know um, I been in OPS, once, since I been at this agency as a victim employee, as you will, um, I have an impeccable career here at the Alachua County Sheriff's Office. Um, I don't mind saying it on the record, I don't mind showing it, but I think I have had two counseling statements in the whole 23 or 24 years I been here. Um, I keep my nose clean, I do a good job. I work hard. I have great work ethic. I think those around me will attest to the same. So, but again this is not about me personally. This is about all the folks who have to deal with the public on a daily basis because I do kind of sit in the office and generally speaking I don't have those interactions. But again, all this does is uh, erode their faith and confidence in us and law enforcement as an agency and as a profession as an industry and that's why we have policies and procedures in place like this or for this thing so we don't have this rhetoric and these kinds of things happen and unfortunately, it's kind of sad."

Inspector's Notes

On April 24, 2023, this Inspector called Sergeant Kevin Davis to inform him to report to the Office of Professional Standards on April 26, 2023, to review evidence pertaining to this Administrative Investigation. Sergeant Davis said he would inform his representative Bobi Frank. A certified letter was sent to Sergeant Davis on April 25, 2023, notifying him of the opportunity provided to him to include a written or verbal statement in this administrative investigation.

On May 3, 2023, this Inspector had not received communication from Sergeant Davis expressing the desire to review evidence pertaining to this Inspector's Administrative Investigation.

FINDINGS OF FACT

- Sergeant Kevin Davis had been employed as a deputy sheriff with the Alachua County Sheriff's Office since 2004, according to the Employee Master Index (MNI). On April 13, 2013, Deputy Davis was promoted to the rank of Sergeant.

- Facebook is a social media and networking site where users could interact with other users by posting, reacting to, and sharing content with other users.

- Sergeant Kevin Davis was identified as "Kevin Davis" on his Facebook page with his face clearly and visibly identifiable. Kevin Davis during the period of this Administrative Investigation did not have any identifiers associated with employment for the Alachua County Sheriff's Office.

- On January 11, 2023, Human Resources Bureau Chief Reshone Flanders e-mailed, #ACSO Agency Wide, Personnel Order #23-005. Sergeant Kevin Davis was included in the recipient list with the e-mail Davis, Kevin, (kdavis@alachuasheriff.org).

- On January 12, 2023, Alachua County Sheriff's Facebook page posted an announcement of the promotions and assignments. Sergeant Davis posted a meme of a white male next to a dog wearing a hotdog outfit. The Facebook text stated, "Captain Weiner Dog promoted to Major." A second caption below the meme stated, "Weiner Dog." Based on an interview with Major Dorian Keith and her testimony, "So I have never saw this post prior to today but looking at it I don't think he is talking about me. Because I am a female, this is clearly in my eyes a male dog and it's a white male and the caption as well and so I wouldn't think he was talk'n about me. I would think that he was talk'n about Major Yaeger because of the date that was posted and the day of the personnel order that came out."

- Major Jack "Lance" Yaeger testified Sergeant Kevin Davis' Facebook post was his "... belief that this was done with the sole purpose of insulting, embarrassing, not just me but the Sheriff, the agency and law enforcement in general quite frankly."

INSPECTOR'S FINDINGS

Sergeant Kevin Davis' Facebook Post #1 was a direct personal attack at Major Jack "Lance" Yaeger. Sergeant Kevin Davis' Facebook post undermined the chain of command and the promotion set forth by the Sheriff of Alachua County.

As specifically enumerated in Directive 353 V.A.7.b – "Insubordination – Insubordination will be defined as, "...any disrespectful, insolent or abusive language or action toward a superior whether in or out of the presence of the superior."

Based on official documents and interviews related to this investigation, this Inspector was able to establish a preponderance of evidence that a violation of ACSO Directive 353 V.A.7.b – Insubordination – is SUSTAINED

On January 11, 2023, Human Resource Director Reshone Flanders e-mailed all current agency employees Personnel Order 23-005 as approved by Sheriff Clovis Watson, Jr. On January 12, 2023, the Alachua County Sheriff's Facebook page released a statement related to the personnel changes. On January 20, 2023, Chief Inspector Kelvin Jenkins was informed, by the Office of the Sheriff, General Counsel Jacob Rush, of several Facebook posts by Sergeant Kevin Davis. The posts were made via the Facebook social media platform and were posted around the same time the personnel order was distributed to agency employees, and later to the public. The scope of the investigation was to determine if the posts had a negative influence on current employees, had an adverse impact on this agency (and its mission), and violated ACSO Directives. On January 24, 2023, Inspector Marzouk was directed to investigate those possible policy violations.

COMPLAINT

On February 1, 2023, a complaint was received that stated Sergeant Kevin Davis authored social media posts, which violated agency policy, utilizing the Facebook platform. The posts were made on or around January 11, 2023, and the days thereafter. Sergeant Davis openly criticized Sheriff Clovis Watson, Jr.'s orders of promotions and assignment changes, of ACSO Personnel, and he accused Sheriff Watson of mismanagement, racism, and cronyism. Sergeant Davis' posts were insolent in tone and appeared libelous in nature, for Complainant Chief Inspector Kelvin Jenkins, which gave reasonable cause to commence an investigation of all possible policy violations committed by Sergeant Davis.

An Administrative Investigation was initiated to determine if there was a violation of ACSO Directives. At the onset of the investigation, as well as during the investigation, the following ACSO Directives were referenced and considered and during the course of the investigation: 353 V.A.2 – Conduct Unbecoming an Employee, 353 V.A.7b – Insubordination, and 353 V.E.1 – Knowledge of Ordinances, Statutes, and ACSO Directives (reference ACSO Directive 945 VIII.B.2a – Employee use of Social Media).

> Directive 353 V.A.2 - "Conduct Unbecoming an Employee – Employees will not engage in any conduct, on duty or off duty and under the color of their authority, so egregious that it has an adverse impact on the ACSO and destroys public respect and confidence in the Office of the Sheriff and its employees. Such conduct will include, but is not limited to, participation in any immoral, indecent or disorderly conduct, or conduct which causes substantial doubts concerning a person's honesty, fairness, or respect for the rights of others or the laws of the state or nation; regardless of whether such act or conduct constitutes a crime."
>
> Directive 353 V.A.7b - "Insubordination – will be defined as 'failure to submit to authority' and will include, but not be limited to, any failure or deliberate refusal to obey a lawful order given by a superior or relayed by an employee of the same or lesser rank or any disrespectful, insolent or abusive language or action toward a superior whether in or out of the presence of the superior."
>
> Directive 353 V.E.1 - "Knowledge of Ordinances, Statutes, and ACSO Directives – All deputies, including reserve deputies, are required to establish and maintain a working knowledge of criminal and parking laws for cities within the confines of Alachua County, county ordinances and state laws. All employees will maintain a working knowledge of the policies and procedures of the ACSO."

Directive 945 VIII.B.1 - "Employee Use of Social Media – Employees who choose to maintain or participate in social media or social networking platforms shall conduct themselves with professionalism and in such a manner that will not reflect negatively upon the ACSO or its mission."

Directive 945 VIII.B.2 - "Employee Use of Social Media – Employees who utilize the Internet and social networking sites whether from an agency or personal device, are prohibited from posting any of the following on any social networking platform, either on their own sites, the sites of others known to them, the sites of others unknown to them, news media pages, or other information exchange forums:

a. Any statements or material about the ACSO, its operations, or its current or former employees that are obscene, defamatory, false, deceptive, misleading, profane, libelous, threatening, harassing, abusive, hateful, etc."

INSPECTOR'S INVESTIGATION

Inspector's Notes

Sergeant Kevin Davis has been employed as a deputy sheriff with the Alachua County Sheriff's Office since March 4, 2004. On January 12, 2023, and for a period of time after that date, Sergeant Davis made several social media posts and/or comments utilizing the Facebook platform. When the posts/comments were made, Sergeant Davis was assigned to the Patrol Division and worked as a sergeant on Team Two Day Shift - District Three. Within the aforementioned timeframe the posts/comments were made, Sergeant Davis worked for two different lieutenants: Lieutenant Heather Phillips and Lieutenant Joe Hood.

Sergeant Kevin Davis' Facebook Posts

In January 2023, Sergeant Kevin Davis made the following social media posts via Facebook. The posts were adopted into this Administrative Investigation and are attached to this report.

Facebook Post #1 – "Weiner Dog" meme with caption, "Captain Weiner Dog promoted to Major."

Facebook Post #2 – Arabella Blizzard's Facebook post where she stated, "Keep the faith my friends. Remember your worth and that you are the most important commodities and that you keep it all running. Your people depend on you." Sergeant Davis responded with, "The place has been decimated due to racism, cronyism and personal vengeance. The greedy cronies feel comfortable playing the game. They know who they are; so does everyone who works around them. They forgot or took for granted, they are severely outnumbered. Their reputations will haunt them for years to come. 30% of 233 employees are supervisors and 100% of employees of a particular race have been promoted with disregard for their test scores, experience, and skills; as long as they participated in the promotional process."

Facebook Post #3 – Kevin Davis and Brandon Alston exchange comments on Arabella Blizzard's Facebook page. Mr. Alston replied to Sergeant Davis' post listed in Facebook Post #2 and said, "Kevin Davis if you wanna say black just say black [ended with a crying laughing emoji]." Sergeant Davis responded, "Brandon Alston I assure you the facts are being addressed in a more productive arena." Mr. Alston replied, "Kevin Davis well good luck with that. If I call hasn't been made to Tallahassee yet idk who's waiting to make it [ended with an unknown emoji]."

General Council Jacob Rush #889

During the course of this investigation, Inspector Marzouk was informed, via Chain of Command, General Council Jacob Rush would complete and submit a signed Complaint Intake Form in lieu of an interview; said form was received on February 27, 2023, and stands as his official statement.

Lieutenant Joe P. Hood #459

On February 9, 2023, at 1405 hours, a digitally recorded interview was conducted with Lieutenant Joe Paul Hood. The interview was conducted by Inspectors Nancy Marzouk and Virgil Calhoun at 3333 NE 39th AV, Department of the Jail, Office of Professional Standards interview room.

At the time the referenced social media posts in this investigation were made, Lieutenant Hood did not supervise Sergeant Davis. Lieutenant Hood transferred to the Patrol Division on January 15, 2023, and was assigned as the Watch Commander for Team Two Day Shift. It was at that time Lieutenant Hood began to supervise Sergeant Davis. On January 23, 2023, Sergeant Davis was served with Notice of Administrative Investigation and placed on Administrative Suspension with pay. Therefore, Lieutenant Hood was only Sergeant Davis' direct supervisor for a period of eight days, excluding the day of Sergeant Davis' suspension, and included only five actual working days.

Inspector Marzouk confirmed Lieutenant Hood had an active Facebook account and at the time of the interview, his account was linked to Sergeant Davis' Facebook account (the two were "friends" on the Facebook platform). Lieutenant Hood denied witnessing, firsthand, any posts made by Sergeant Davis referencing the Alachua County Sheriff's Office or directed at Sheriff Watson; Lieutenant Hood answered and stated,

> "The Sheriff's Office or the Sheriff? No. About an individual person? There's a... a difference there... There was a... post that was made...did not mention anybody by name that I recall, but because of the content of the post, I knew exactly who it was."

Inspector Marzouk asked if the post was negative, neutral, or positive in nature and Lieutenant Hood responded, "I mean, if you perceive it as negative, it's because of the what the person did...it's common knowledge. It's a picture of a hotdog in a hotdog bun. Is that what you're referring to?"

Inspector Marzouk confirmed Lieutenant Hood was referencing Facebook Post #1, as labeled in this investigation, by providing him a printed copy of it to review. Lieutenant Hood offered to explain the meaning behind the meme and stated,

> "I mean, it's pretty common knowledge what that means. I mean...there's a lot of people that know what that means. And it's from years ago."
>
> "Lance Yaeger was at a party and he put his penis in a hotdog bun and was going around the party with his penis in a hotdog bun. I was not there, but there were a lot of people that were there, I guess, and it's just been a, if you will, a joke that's been around the Sheriff's Office since I began here in 2003. So, I don't think anybody that has been here for a considerable amount of time questioned where that came from."

Inspector Marzouk inquired if Lieutenant Hood had seen any other posts, made by Sergeant Davis, that were of a similar nature and directed at the Alachua County Sheriff's Office or its employees. Lieutenant Hood answered,

> "Not that I can recall specifically. I mean, I know he makes post, but I don't spend a lot of time on Facebook. So, you know, I don't, I don't read a lot of stuff on there, so I don't know specifically. Especially if somebody typed something that's got any content to it, I don't...have time to sit there and read everybody's posts of what's on their mind today. So I don't read that stuff. I mean, I'll look at some pictures and stuff, and I think that's why that caught my eye, because it was a picture of a meme or whatever."

Inspector Marzouk then asked Lieutenant Hood if he ever witnessed, or had concerns about, Sergeant Davis making negative, demoralizing, or demotivating statements in front of subordinate employees, other sergeants on shift, or the general public. Lieutenant Hood denied witnessing anything to that effect. He also denied receiving any complaints against Sergeant Davis, whether from another employee or member of the public. He stated,

> "Nobody has. I haven't had a complaint about him from anyone. I never had an issue. I mean, he's...always operated with extreme honesty and integrity. And he's one of the most honest people that I have worked with, so I've never had an issue with [him]. He's a very ethical person, [he has] a great work ethic... Again, I've worked with him for...probably a week and a half..."

Deputy Sheriff Casey Kumar #2150

On February 9, 2023, at 1429 hours, a digitally recorded interview was conducted with Deputy Sheriff Casey Kumar. The interview was conducted by Inspectors Nancy Marzouk and Virgil Calhoun at 3333 NE 39th AV, Department of the Jail, Office of Professional Standards interview room.

At the time of the posts, and this interview, Deputy Kumar was assigned to Team Two Day Shift – District Three; he directly reported to Sergeant Davis. During the interview, Inspector Marzouk learned Deputy Kumar deactivated his Facebook account two years prior. Inspector Marzouk presented Deputy Kumar with Facebook Post #1 (as labeled in this investigation). Deputy Kumar denied seeing the post prior to the interview, but admitted he heard about the post via word-of-mouth. Deputy Kumar stated his understanding of the meme was,

> "From a social activity. I guess a social party from a while back. I don't know who the captain is, or if they are a captain, or if they were a captain. I just know that it was, I guess, an employee that did something involving a hotdog bun."

Inspector Marzouk asked Deputy Kumar if he experienced any conversation with Sergeant Davis that Deputy Kumar felt the topic was negative, or demoralizing, about the Alachua County Sheriff's Office. Deputy Kumar stated, "I think he was critical of what the Sheriff's Office was doing involving reorganizations."

Inspector Marzouk asked Deputy Kumar if he understood Sergeant Davis' criticisms to be specifically about Sheriff Watson. Deputy Kumar responded, "I mean, yes... I think it was inferred... But, yes, because the decisions that were made based on a command staff position." Deputy Kumar denied experiencing any negative affects due to Sergeant Davis' social media activity.

Deputy Sheriff Nicholas Aldous #1791

On February 9, 2023, at 1519 hours, a digitally recorded interview was conducted with Deputy Sheriff Nicholas Aldous. The interview was conducted by Inspectors Nancy Marzouk and Virgil Calhoun at 3333 NE 39th AV, Department of the Jail, Office of Professional Standards interview room.

At the time of the posts, and this interview, Deputy Aldous was assigned to Team Two Day Shift – District Three; he directly reported to Sergeant Davis. During the interview, Inspector Marzouk learned Deputy Aldous did not have a Facebook account, yet he was made aware of Facebook Post #1 by someone; Deputy Aldous was not able to recall who that person was. Deputy Aldous did not know what the meme meant when he first saw it; he was later told what the meme referenced.

Inspector Marzouk asked Deputy Aldous if he ever witnessed Sergeant Davis make negative statements he perceived as demoralizing, insubordinate, or disrespectful. Deputy Aldous adamantly denied witnessing anything like that and stated, "No...only stuff that if you looked at it, it's quantitatively measurable and 100% a fact." When asked about Sergeant Davis' influence on his assigned shift, Deputy Aldous stated, "Everyone...loves him. He's a good leader. He keeps us out of trouble...he steers us in the proper direction."

Deputy Sheriff Michael Moore #381

On February 9, 2023, at 1607 hours, a digitally recorded interview was conducted with Deputy Sheriff Michael Moore. The interview was conducted by Inspectors Nancy Marzouk and Scott Anderson at 3333 NE 39th AV, Department of the Jail, Office of Professional Standards interview room.

At the time of the posts, and this interview, Deputy Moore was assigned to Team Two Day Shift – District Three; he directly reported to Sergeant Davis. During this interview, Inspector Marzouk learned Deputy Moore created a Facebook account approximately two weeks ago; he did not have an account over the last few years. Inspector Marzouk presented Facebook post #1 to Deputy Moore and asked him what he understood the meme to mean. Deputy Moore stated,

> "...it's referring to Captain Lance Yaeger being promoted to Major. About 20 years ago...there was a party of which I attended and witnessed Major Lance Yaeger pull out his penis, put it in a hotdog bun, cover it with ketchup and mustard, um, and show it to everyone."

It was later clarified with Deputy Moore if Major Lance Yaeger was employed with the ACSO at the time of the incident and Deputy Moore confirmed he (Lance Yaeger) was employed. When asked what made Deputy Moore, having never seen the meme before, correlate the meme to the incident he described, Deputy Moore answered, "Because Captain to Major. Weiner dog."

Deputy Moore was asked if he found the post to be offensive and he denied that being true. Deputy Moore was asked if he considered the meme to be an inside joke or common knowledge to the general public. Deputy Moore stated, "I would not say that if a member of the public saw this that they would make any connection as to who the captain is, who was promoted to major, and what it has to do with a Weiner dog."

Deputy Moore was asked if he thought any person within the general public would look at the meme and recognize it having anything to do with the ACSO. Deputy Moore denied that would be possible. Inspector Marzouk asked Deputy Moore if seeing the post caused him to lose respect for Major Yaeger, and Deputy Moore denied that to be true. When asked if witnessing the incident itself caused, or now causes, Deputy Moore to have less respect for Major Yaeger, Deputy Moore stated,

> "This is what I'll say about the incident. It was 20 years ago. We were young. There was drinking involved... That incident, if, if, had anybody done that, knowing now, Major Yeager, um, I, I would not hold it against him. He's performed, as far as I know, well in whatever capacity he's been in and I would not hold something that someone did 20 years ago against them. Not a, that specific incident."

Inspector Marzouk asked Deputy Moore if he ever witnessed Sergeant Davis make statements he (Deputy Moore) perceived as demoralizing, insubordinate, or disrespectful. Deputy Moore denied witnessing anything like that. The same questions were posed to Deputy Moore, but in regards to statements made to the general public, which Deputy Moore, once again, denied ever witnessing that. Deputy Moore also denied ever feeling uncomfortable by any of Sergeant Davis' comments and has not experienced any negative affect as a result of Sergeant Davis' actions on social media.

Deputy Sheriff Daniel Hart #1815

On February 14, 2023, at 0920 hours, a digitally recorded interview was conducted with Deputy Sheriff Daniel Hart. The interview was conducted by Inspectors Nancy Marzouk and Scott Anderson at 3333 NE 39th AV, Department of the Jail, Office of Professional Standards interview room.

At the time of the posts, and this interview, Deputy Hart was assigned to Team Two Day Shift – District Three; he directly reported to Sergeant Davis. Inspector Marzouk learned Deputy Hart did have a Facebook account, but he is not friends on Facebook with Sergeant Davis or Arabella Blizzard. Inspector Marzouk presented Deputy Hart with Facebook post #1. Deputy Hart believed he had seen it before. When asked what or who the meme was a reference to, Deputy Hart stated,

> "I honestly have no idea... Being completely honest with you, I saw it and it really doesn't, it's not bringing anything up for me. I know there's been a lot of promotions and moving around. As far as who specifically it's referring to...I, being completely honest, I have no idea."

Deputy Hart did not know the meaning behind the meme nor whom the meme was referencing. Inspector Marzouk then presented the post labeled as Facebook Post #2. Deputy Hart did not think he had seen the post before, but if he did, it was not via his Facebook account because he is not friends with either Arabella Blizzard or Sergeant Davis on Facebook.

Deputy Hart also denied ever witnessing Sergeant Davis make ill statements about ACSO. Deputy Hart stated,

"I know that the only thing that I specifically heard him say, that I recall right now, is just the normal things that we've been hearing since we started here. Officer safety stuff. You know, staffing concerns, which I've heard from lots of people from all different levels... I've had several supervisors since being here, and...I've never changed the way that I operate. I don't think that I've done anything differently, so I don't feel that I've been influenced.

Lieutenant Heather Phillips #409

On February 14, 2023, at 1046 hours, a digitally recorded interview was conducted with Lieutenant Heather Phillips. The interview was conducted by Inspectors Nancy Marzouk and Scott Anderson at 3333 NE 39th AV, Department of the Jail, Office of Professional Standards interview room.

At the time the social media posts were made, Lieutenant Phillips directly supervised Sergeant Davis. However, at the time of this interview, she was assigned as the Watch Commander for Team Two Evening Shift. Inspector Marzouk presented Lieutenant Phillips with the post labeled Facebook Post #1. Lieutenant Phillips acknowledged she had seen sit before, or something like it, that referenced a hotdog thing. Lieutenant Phillips denied actually witnessing the incident, but she did hear about it via word-of-mouth over the years. When asked to explain her understanding of what the meme meant, Lieutenant Phillips stated,

"It's my understanding, several years ago, that I believe it was a SWAT party, uh, Lance Yeager was on the SWAT team, and was drunk, and was running around with his penis in a hotdog bun, at the party."

Inspector Marzouk then presented Facebook Post #2 to Lieutenant Phillips and asked her if she had seen it before. Lieutenant Phillips stated she is not on Facebook much anymore, but she thought someone sent it to her and that is how she saw it before. Inspector Marzouk asked Lieutenant Phillips to read the post to refresh her memory. Inspector Marzouk asked if Lieutenant Phillips felt negatively influenced by Sergeant Davis social media posts and she denied being influenced by him.

Inspector Marzouk asked Lieutenant Phillips if she ever witnessed Sergeant Davis make negative comments about the agency or its administration, in front of subordinates, or members of the public, and she stated, "Hmm...not off the top of my head... I mean, we would door up all the time, but, I don't know that others were present." When asked if Sergeant Davis made negative remarks, criticisms, or observations, against the agency and directly to her, Lieutenant Phillips stated, "Observations or maybe venting."

Lieutenant Phillips denied having knowledge of Sergeant Davis experiencing issues, in terms of supervising his subordinates, since he made the posts. Additionally, Lieutenant Phillips never had one of Sergeant Davis' subordinates report any issues with Sergeant Davis.

Deputy Sheriff Zachary Means #1624

On February 27, 2023, at 0905 hours, a digitally recorded interview was conducted with Deputy Sheriff Zachary Means. The interview was conducted by Inspectors Nancy Marzouk and Virgil Calhoun at 3333 NE 39th AV, Department of the Jail, Office of Professional Standards interview room.

At the time of the posts, and this interview, Deputy Means was assigned to Team Two Day Shift – District Three; he directly reported to Sergeant Davis. Inspector Marzouk learned Deputy Means does not have a Facebook account. Deputy Means denied ever seeing Facebook post #1, and he was not able to surmise what the meme meant. Deputy Means was also presented with what was labeled as Facebook Post #2 in this investigation, but Deputy Means had never seen that post either.

Inspector Marzouk asked Deputy Means if he ever witnessed Sergeant Davis speak ill of, or denounce, the agency or the administration in his presence. Deputy Means could not recall witnessing any such incident, and he also denied ever feeling negatively affected by Sergeant Davis.

Sergeant Kevin Davis #0437

On March 2, 2023, at 1300 hours, a digital recorded interview was scheduled to be conducted with Sergeant Davis #437 at the Alachua County Sheriff's Office, Office of Professional Standards. Sergeant Davis arrived with representative, Bobi J. Frank. Inspectors Virgil Calhoun and Scott Anderson were present.

On the day of the interview, Sergeant Davis appeared with his representative, Bobi J. Frank. Sergeant Davis and Ms. Frank were afforded the opportunity to review all evidence and witness statements collected during this investigation. At the conclusion of their review, Ms. Frank claimed Florida Statue 112 violations and the scheduled interview with Sergeant Davis was not conducted.

Inspector's Notes

On March 3, 2023, Inspector Marzouk confirmed that Facebook Posts #1 and #2 were still posted. It was at that time, Inspector Marzouk discovered the exchange of comments between Sergeant Davis and former ACSO Deputy Sheriff Brandon Alston; therefore, a witness interview was conducted with Mr. Alston on March 6, 2023, at 0850 hours, and it was added to this Administrative Investigation Summary portion of this report.

Brandon E. Alston

On March 6, 2023, at 0850 hours, a digitally recorded interview was conducted with Brandon Alston. The interview was conducted by Inspectors Nancy Marzouk and Virgil Calhoun who were located at 3333 NE 39th AV, Department of the Jail, Office of Professional Standards – in an empty office; the interview was conducted via speakerphone.

Brandon Alston is a former ACSO Deputy Sheriff (#2090) who was employed by the Alachua County Sheriff's Office from August 10, 2020, to October 8, 2021. During his employment, Brandon worked on the same Patrol Team and shift as Sergeant Kevin Davis for a brief period of time.

Inspector Marzouk asked Mr. Alston if he recalled a Facebook post made by Sergeant Davis, on Arabella Blizzard's Facebook page, where he and Sergeant Davis had a short exchange of comments about Sergeant Davis' post. Mr. Alston stated he "vividly" recalled the post and exchange of comments. When asked what agency he understood Sergeant Davis was writing about, Mr. Alston answered, "The agency he [Sergeant Davis] works for." After prompted to name the agency, Mr. Alston stated, "The Alachua County Sheriff's Office."

Inspector Marzouk asked Mr. Alston after reading Sergeant Davis' post, as a citizen, would he still have confidence in the Sheriff's Office and in the ability, or capability, of the Sheriff. Mr. Alston stated, "Absolutely not." Inspector Marzouk asked Mr. Alston to explain why. Mr. Alston explained,

> "Because this is a thing, like, when you have...somebody that's been there 20 plus years,...if you look at the attrition rate of the sheriff's office,...then you start to add all these things up,...if you really vividly look at what he's [Sergeant Davis] talking about, if you're not just some joe blow citizen that don't care, then you'll notice that there's, um, encryptions in what he's [Sergeant Davis] saying."
> "...if I wasn't a citizen that cared, you know, it would be easy to just look over what goes on. But when you, you look at the, the multiple different people that have worked at the sheriff's office in, um, an official capacity that have left, and the things that they say, and then you start reading the things that he [Sergeant Davis] posts, you kind of like, I mean, you put two and two together. It don't take a rocket scientist to see that there's trouble in the water, you know what I mean?"

Inspector Marzouk asked Mr. Alston if he felt the content of the post was factual or Sergeant Davis' opinion. Mr. Alston explained Sergeant Davis is an analytical person, so the numbers he provided may not be exactly correct due to personnel leaving or being hired each week. Mr. Alston went on to say, "So the numbers may be factual, and they may not be factual, but I think it's from his opinion, this is how he's feeling. It's not totally based off of fact."

When asked if the exchange of comments between him and Sergeant Davis was taken as playful or sarcasm, Mr. Alston said,

> "I took it as KD [Sergeant Davis' nickname] being KD. Um, you know he, he's kind of a person that, I mean, I've worked where he was my sergeant when I was at the sheriff's office, so, um, I've worked for him and I know how he is. He knows how to tread softly, so to speak, um, he'll say things that, you know, they're not offensive, but they may not be the right thing to say...he's one of those...guys...that you...need a sergeant like him, but everybody's not going to like the way he does business and that's okay."

Inspector's Notes

This administrative investigation has been ordered by the chain of command to be submitted without an interview of the subject employee, Sergeant Kevin Davis #0437.

On March 9, 2023, Inspector Marzouk made a final review of this report – specifically the witness interviews. Inspector Marzouk discovered during the interview with Deputy Sheriff Michael Moore, Facebook Post #2 was not discussed with him. Therefore, on March 9, 2023, Inspector Marzouk called Deputy Moore and asked follow-up questions.

Deputy Sheriff Michael Moore #381

On March 9, 2023, at 1026 hours, a digitally recorded interview was conducted with Deputy Sheriff Michael Moore. The interview was conducted by Inspectors Nancy Marzouk and Scott Anderson who were located at 3333 NE 39th AV, Department of the Jail, Office of Professional Standards – in an empty office; the interview was conducted via speakerphone.

Inspector Marzouk read out loud the entire Facebook post #2 (Arabella Blizzard's original post and Sergeant Davis' response) to Deputy Moore. Deputy Moore stated he did not read or see that post before. Inspector Marzouk asked Deputy Moore what agency he believed Sergeant Davis was referencing in the post and Deputy Moore answered, "My guess would be our agency, the Alachua County Sheriff's Office." Deputy Moore was asked, after hearing the contents of the post, if it took away Deputy Moore's confidence in the ability for the Sheriff's Office to conduct its mission. Deputy Moore stated, "No because I, I, I don't know if what was said was true." He was asked given the fact it was his supervisor who wrote the post, did Deputy Moore feel the content had more weight or value to it versus if a stranger or non-employee wrote it. Deputy Moore responded, "I would have to say no."

Deputy Moore then was asked if he thought it was appropriate for a sergeant of the Alachua County Sheriff's Office to write that on a public page. Deputy Moore stated, "What, what he wrote? If, if he didn't identify the agency, or didn't name any names, I don't think there's anything inappropriate with expressing what his beliefs are." It was repeated back to Deputy Moore he did not think it was inappropriate and Deputy Moore confirmed, "No, I don't think it's inappropriate. He, he didn't name the Sheriff's Office, if that's in fact who he's talking about. Um, so he's, he's expressing his beliefs."

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. On or around, January 11, 2023, and for a short period of time thereafter, Sergeant Kevin Davis made several Facebook posts utilizing his personal account that negatively referenced the Alachua County Sheriff's Office and Sheriff Clovis Watson, Jr. (see Facebook Posts #1 - #3).

2. Facebook is a social media and networking site where users can interact with other users by posting, reacting to, and sharing content with other users. These interactions can occur on the individual user's personal account, or the user can post, react to, or share content on another user's personal account.

3. Sergeant Kevin Davis' Facebook account had a picture of him and his name appeared next to every post or comment he made on the social media platform.

4. A Directive Management System audit was conducted of Sergeant Kevin Davis' policy review. Directive 945 – Social Media was signed by him on June 3, 2017, at 1300 hours.

5. Facebook Post #1 was captioned, "Captain Weiner Dog promoted to Major." This investigation revealed, that even without naming the employee it was referencing, some witnesses knew it was about the recent promotion of Major Lance Yaeger. It referenced something he committed when he was a young Deputy Sheriff and it occurred approximately 20 years ago. This post was based on an actual event; therefore, no further evaluation of this post was considered.

6. Facebook Post #2 was posted on someone else's Facebook page and Sergeant Davis alleged, "This place has been decimated due to racism... 30% of 233 employees are supervisors and 100% of employees of a particular race have been promoted with disregard for their test scores, experience, and skills; as long as they participated in the promotional process."

    a. Several witnesses stated they knew Sergeant Davis was referring to the ACSO even though he did not name the agency.

b. The ACSO, and its employees, require the trust of the general public in order to fulfill its mission and maintain public safety.
c. Reference the portion of Facebook Post #2 that stated, "30% of 233 employees..." the ACSO's Data Systems Unit provided the actual number of full-time, sworn employees was 239 sworn employees, which is greater than 233, and does not include non-sworn employees.
d. No information was included in the post that proved racism existed within the ACSO and it is reasonable to believe that alleging someone, or an entity, is a racist, can have a damaging/tarnishing effect to that person's, or that entity's, reputation.

This portion of the statement could be considered libelous in nature; however, the scope of this investigation did not include the collection of evidence to prove this statement as false and libelous, so no further evaluation of this portion of the post was considered.

7. This investigation did reveal evidence that the posts had an adverse impact on the Alachua County Sheriff's Office and its mission. During the witness interview with Mr. Brandon Alston, he stated he knew Sergeant Davis was referencing the Alachua County Sheriff's Office in Facebook Post #2. Mr. Alston was asked, if after reading the post, did he still have confidence in the Sheriff's Office and in the ability, or capability, of the Sheriff. Mr. Alston stated, "Absolutely not."

8. This investigation did not reveal evidence of negative influence to current employees due to the content of Sergeant Kevin Davis' Facebook posts. Witness Deputy Sheriff Nicholas Aldous stated, "Everyone...loves him. He's a good leader. He keeps us out of trouble...he steers us in the proper direction." Witness Lieutenant Joe Hood stated, "I haven't had a complaint about him from anyone. I never had an issue. I mean, he's...always operated with extreme honesty and integrity. And he's one of the most honest people that I have worked with, so I've never had an issue with [him]. He's a very ethical person, [he has] a great work ethic..." Witness Mr. Brandon Alston stated, "...he's one of those...guys...that you...need a sergeant like him, but everybody's not going to like the way he does business and that's okay."

INSPECTOR'S FINDINGS

Inspector's Notes

On March 13, 2023, Chief Inspector Captain Kelvin Jenkins informed Inspector Virgil Calhoun was assigned this Administrative Investigation. This Inspector has reviewed Inspector Nancy Marzouk's provided witness statements and evidence. This Inspector concurs with the writings of Inspector Marzouk's Predication, Complaint, Inspector's Investigation and Finding of Facts of this document.

In order to assess if a violation of ACSO Directive 353 V.A.2 – Conduct Unbecoming an Employee, 353 V.A.7b – Insubordination, 353 V.E.1 - Knowledge of Ordinances, Statutes, and ACSO Directives occurred, this Inspector referred to ACSO Directive 945 – Social Media and ACSO Directive 353 – Standards of Conduct and Violation Levels. Those directives were applied to the following findings as derived from the facts discovered during Inspector Marzouk's investigation:

Sergeant Kevin Davis is identified on Facebook as Kevin Davis and does not release information on his public Facebook page as being employed for the Alachua County Sheriff's Office. Sergeant Davis' Facebook posts, as part of this Administrative Investigation, does not identify the Alachua County Sheriff's Office.

Sergeant Davis did not make his comments under the color of his authority as an employee of the Alachua County Sheriff's Office (ACSO) or take claim to any entity of ACSO as specifically enumerated in Directive 353 V.A.2 - "Conduct Unbecoming an Employee – Employees will not engage in any conduct, on duty or off duty and under the color of their authority..." Sergeant Davis' Facebook post is in communication with a known former Major of ACSO employee Arabella Blizzard. Ms. Blizzard is known to the public as formerly employed with ACSO by public photographs in an ACSO uniform on Facebook.

Ms. Blizzard stated in Facebook Post #2, "Keep the faith my friends. Remember your worth and that you are the most important commodities and that you keep it all running…" Sergeant Davis' response, "The place has been decimated due to racism, cronyism and personal vengeance…" could only be referring to the Alachua County Sheriff's Office.

During a witness interview with former ACSO employee Brandon Alston, he said he knew Sergeant Davis was referencing the Alachua County Sheriff's Office in Facebook Post #2. Mr. Alston was asked if he had confidence in the Sheriff's Office and in the ability, or capability, of the Sheriff, he stated "Absolutely not." Sergeant Davis' post clearly had, per Directive 353 V.A.2 - "Conduct Unbecoming an Employee" an "…adverse impact on the ACSO and destroys public respect and confidence in the Office of the Sheriff and its employees…"

Based on official documents and interviews related to this investigation, this Inspector was not able to establish a preponderance of evidence that a violation of Alachua County Sheriff's Office Directive 353 V.A.2 – Conduct Unbecoming an Employee - is NOT SUSTAINED.

Sergeant Kevin Davis made public accusations of "…racism, cronyism and personal vengeance" that take away from the mission of the Alachua County Sheriff's Office, per ACSO 006 - "Service to the community first. Commitment to the employees always. Through our partnerships, we are the Alachua County Sheriff's Office." Sergeant Davis' actions with his Facebook posts undermined the direction of an elected official and as an ambassador of an elective official leads the public into a false narrative.

Sergeant Kevin Davis' Facebook Post #1, exploited an event from approximately 20 years ago that was known to have occurred based on witness statements provided in this Administrative Investigation. Facebook Post #1 was directed at Major Lance Yeager.

As specifically enumerated in Directive 353 V.A.7.b – "Insubordination – Insubordination will be defined as, "...any disrespectful, insolent or abusive language or action toward a superior whether in or out of the presence of the superior."

Based on the documents and the witness interviews related to this investigation, this Inspector was able to establish a preponderance of evidence that a violation of Alachua County Sheriff's Office Directive 353 V.A.7b – Insubordination - is SUSTAINED.

Sergeant Kevin Davis used the social media networking site Facebook to make accusatory statements. The statements of "…racism, cronyism and personal vengeance…" and challenging the promotional process, "30% of 233 employees are supervisors and 100% of employees of a particular race have been promoted with disregard for their test scores, experience, and skills; as long as they participated in the promotional process" was a reply posted in response to a formerly known Major of ACSO, Arabella Blizzard.

As specifically enumerated in Directive 353 V.E.1 - "Knowledge of Ordinances, Statutes, and ACSO Directives states, "...All employees will maintain a working knowledge of the policies and procedures of the ACSO."

Directive 945 IV – Social Media states, "Policy - Employees using any form of social media or social networking...shall not use them in any way, which detracts from the mission of the ACSO, tarnishes the reputation of the ACSO, reflects negatively on your position as an employee of the ACSO, or in a manner that violates any ACSO directive. Any such online actions will be viewed as a direct violation of this policy, as well as any other applicable directive."

ACSO Directive 945 VIII.B.2a – Social Media further states, "Employees who utilize the Internet and social networking sites whether from an agency or personal device, are prohibited from posting any of the following on any social networking platform, either on their own sites, the sites of others known to them, the sites of others unknown to them, news media pages, or other information exchange forums:

> "Any statements or material about the ACSO, its operations, or its current or former employees that are obscene, defamatory, false, deceptive, misleading, profane, libelous, threatening, harassing, abusive, hateful, etc.

Based on the documents and the witness interviews related to this investigation, this Inspector was able to establish a preponderance of evidence that a violation of Alachua County Sheriff's Office Directive 353 V.E.1 - Knowledge of Ordinances, Statutes, and ACSO Directives - is SUSTAINED.

PREDICATION

On January 11, 2023, Human Resource Director Reshone Flanders e-mailed all current agency employees Personnel Order 23-005 as approved by Sheriff Clovis Watson, Jr. On January 12, 2023, the Alachua County Sheriff's Facebook page released a statement related to the personnel changes. On January 20, 2023, Chief Inspector Kelvin Jenkins was informed, by the Office of the Sheriff, General Counsel Jacob Rush, of several Facebook posts by Sergeant Kevin Davis. The posts were made via the Facebook social media platform and were posted around the same time the personnel order was distributed to agency employees, and later to the public. The scope of the investigation was to determine if the posts had a negative influence on current employees, had an adverse impact on this agency (and its mission), and violated ACSO Directives. On January 24, 2023, Inspector Marzouk was directed to investigate those possible policy violations.

COMPLAINT

On February 1, 2023, a complaint was received that stated Sergeant Kevin Davis authored social media posts, which violated agency policy, utilizing the Facebook platform. The posts were made on or around January 11, 2023, and the days thereafter. Sergeant Davis openly criticized Sheriff Clovis Watson, Jr.'s orders of promotions and assignment changes, of ACSO Personnel, and he accused Sheriff Watson of mismanagement, racism, and cronyism. Sergeant Davis' posts were insolent in tone and appeared libelous in nature, for Complainant Chief Inspector Kelvin Jenkins, which gave reasonable cause to commence an investigation of all possible policy violations committed by Sergeant Davis.

An Administrative Investigation was initiated to determine if there was a violation of ACSO Directives. At the onset of the investigation, as well as during the investigation, the following ACSO Directives were referenced and considered and during the course of the investigation: 353 V.A.2 – Conduct Unbecoming an Employee, 353 V.A.7b – Insubordination, and 353 V.E.1 – Knowledge of Ordinances, Statutes, and ACSO Directives (reference ACSO Directive 945 VIII.B.2a – Employee use of Social Media).

> Directive 353 V.A.2 - "Conduct Unbecoming an Employee – Employees will not engage in any conduct, on duty or off duty and under the color of their authority, so egregious that it has an adverse impact on the ACSO and destroys public respect and confidence in the Office of the Sheriff and its employees. Such conduct will include, but is not limited to, participation in any immoral, indecent or disorderly conduct, or conduct which causes substantial doubts concerning a person's honesty, fairness, or respect for the rights of others or the laws of the state or nation; regardless of whether such act or conduct constitutes a crime."
>
> Directive 353 V.A.7b - "Insubordination – will be defined as 'failure to submit to authority' and will include, but not be limited to, any failure or deliberate refusal to obey a lawful order given by a superior or relayed by an employee of the same or lesser rank or any disrespectful, insolent or abusive language or action toward a superior whether in or out of the presence of the superior."
>
> Directive 353 V.E.1 - "Knowledge of Ordinances, Statutes, and ACSO Directives – All deputies, including reserve deputies, are required to establish and maintain a working knowledge of criminal and parking laws for cities within the confines of Alachua County, county ordinances and state laws. All employees will maintain a working knowledge of the policies and procedures of the ACSO."

Directive 945 VIII.B.1 - "Employee Use of Social Media – Employees who choose to maintain or participate in social media or social networking platforms shall conduct themselves with professionalism and in such a manner that will not reflect negatively upon the ACSO or its mission."

Directive 945 VIII.B.2 - "Employee Use of Social Media – Employees who utilize the Internet and social networking sites whether from an agency or personal device, are prohibited from posting any of the following on any social networking platform, either on their own sites, the sites of others known to them, the sites of others unknown to them, news media pages, or other information exchange forums:

a. Any statements or material about the ACSO, its operations, or its current or former employees that are obscene, defamatory, false, deceptive, misleading, profane, libelous, threatening, harassing, abusive, hateful, etc."

INSPECTOR'S INVESTIGATION

Inspector's Notes

Sergeant Kevin Davis has been employed as a deputy sheriff with the Alachua County Sheriff's Office since March 4, 2004. On January 12, 2023, and for a period of time after that date, Sergeant Davis made several social media posts and/or comments utilizing the Facebook platform. When the posts/comments were made, Sergeant Davis was assigned to the Patrol Division and worked as a sergeant on Team Two Day Shift - District Three. Within the aforementioned timeframe the posts/comments were made, Sergeant Davis worked for two different lieutenants: Lieutenant Heather Phillips and Lieutenant Joe Hood.

Sergeant Kevin Davis' Facebook Posts

In January 2023, Sergeant Kevin Davis made the following social media posts via Facebook. The posts were adopted into this Administrative Investigation and are attached to this report.

Facebook Post #1 – "Weiner Dog" meme with caption, "Captain Weiner Dog promoted to Major."

Former Major

How many post interactions? / views?

Facebook Post #2 – Arabella Blizzard's Facebook post where she stated, "Keep the faith my friends. Remember your worth and that you are the most important commodities and that you keep it all running. Your people depend on you." Sergeant Davis responded with, "The place has been decimated due to racism, cronyism and personal vengeance. The greedy cronies feel comfortable playing the game. They know who they are; so does everyone who works around them. They forgot or took for granted, they are severely outnumbered. Their reputations will haunt them for years to come. 30% of 233 employees are supervisors and 100% of employees of a particular race have been promoted with disregard for their test scores, experience, and skills; as long as they participated in the promotional process."

How many post interactions / views?

Facebook Post #3 – Kevin Davis and Brandon Alston exchange comments on Arabella Blizzard's Facebook page. Mr. Alston replied to Sergeant Davis' post listed in Facebook Post #2 and said, "Kevin Davis if you wanna say black just say black fended with a crying laughing emoji[.]" Sergeant Davis responded, "Brandon Alston I assure you the facts are being addressed in a more productive arena." Mr. Alston replied, "Kevin Davis well good luck with that. If I call hasn't been made to Tallahassee yet idk who's waiting to make it fended with an unknown emoji[.]"

General Council Jacob Rush #889

During the course of this investigation, Inspector Marzouk was informed, via Chain of Command, General Council Jacob Rush would complete and submit a signed Complaint Intake Form in lieu of an interview; said form was received on February 27, 2023, and stands as his official statement.

Lieutenant Joe P. Hood #459

On February 9, 2023, at 1405 hours, a digitally recorded interview was conducted with Lieutenant Joe Paul Hood. The interview was conducted by Inspectors Nancy Marzouk and Virgil Calhoun at 3333 NE 39th AV, Department of the Jail, Office of Professional Standards interview room.

At the time the referenced social media posts in this investigation were made, Lieutenant Hood did not supervise Sergeant Davis. Lieutenant Hood transferred to the Patrol Division on January 15, 2023, and was assigned as the Watch Commander for Team Two Day Shift. It was at that time Lieutenant Hood began to supervise Sergeant Davis. On January 23, 2023, Sergeant Davis was served with Notice of Administrative Investigation and placed on Administrative Suspension with pay. Therefore, Lieutenant Hood was only Sergeant Davis' direct supervisor for a period of eight days, excluding the day of Sergeant Davis' suspension, and included only five actual working days.

Inspector Marzouk confirmed Lieutenant Hood had an active Facebook account and at the time of the interview, his account was linked to Sergeant Davis' Facebook account (the two were "friends" on the Facebook platform). Lieutenant Hood denied witnessing, firsthand, any posts made by Sergeant Davis referencing the Alachua County Sheriff's Office or directed at Sheriff Watson; Lieutenant Hood answered and stated,

> "The Sheriff's Office or the Sheriff? No. About an individual person? There's a... a difference there... There was a... post that was made...did not mention anybody by name that I recall, but because of the content of the post, I knew exactly who it was."

Inspector Marzouk asked if the post was negative, neutral, or positive in nature and Lieutenant Hood responded, "I mean, if you perceive it as negative, it's because of the what the person did...it's common knowledge. It's a picture of a hotdog in a hotdog bun. Is that what you're referring to?"

Inspector Marzouk confirmed Lieutenant Hood was referencing Facebook Post #1, as labeled in this investigation, by providing him a printed copy of it to review. Lieutenant Hood offered to explain the meaning behind the meme and stated,

> "I mean, it's pretty common knowledge what that means. I mean...there's a lot of people that know what that means. And it's from years ago."
>
> "Lance Yaeger was at a party and he put his penis in a hotdog bun and was going around the party with his penis in a hotdog bun. I was not there, but there were a lot of people that were there, I guess, and it's just been a, if you will, a joke that's been around the Sheriff's Office since I began here in 2003. So, I don't think anybody that has been here for a considerable amount of time questioned where that came from."

Inspector Marzouk inquired if Lieutenant Hood had seen any other posts, made by Sergeant Davis, that were of a similar nature and directed at the Alachua County Sheriff's Office or its employees. Lieutenant Hood answered,

> "Not that I can recall specifically. I mean, I know he makes post, but I don't spend a lot of time on Facebook. So, you know, I don't, I don't read a lot of stuff on there, so I don't know specifically. Especially if somebody typed something that's got any content to it, I don't...have time to sit there and read everybody's posts of what's on their mind today. So I don't read that stuff. I mean, I'll look at some pictures and stuff, and I think that's why that caught my eye, because it was a picture of a meme or whatever."

Inspector Marzouk then asked Lieutenant Hood if he ever witnessed, or had concerns about, Sergeant Davis making negative, demoralizing, or demotivating statements in front of subordinate employees, other sergeants on shift, or the general public. Lieutenant Hood denied witnessing anything to that effect. He also denied receiving any complaints against Sergeant Davis, whether from another employee or member of the public. He stated,

> "Nobody has. I haven't had a complaint about him from anyone. I never had an issue. I mean, he's...always operated with extreme honesty and integrity. And he's one of the most honest people that I have worked with, so I've never had an issue with [him]. He's a very ethical person, [he has] a great work ethic... Again, I've worked with him for...probably a week and a half..."

Deputy Sheriff Casey Kumar #2150

On February 9, 2023, at 1429 hours, a digitally recorded interview was conducted with Deputy Sheriff Casey Kumar. The interview was conducted by Inspectors Nancy Marzouk and Virgil Calhoun at 3333 NE 39th AV, Department of the Jail, Office of Professional Standards interview room.

At the time of the posts, and this interview, Deputy Kumar was assigned to Team Two Day Shift – District Three; he directly reported to Sergeant Davis. During the interview, Inspector Marzouk learned Deputy Kumar deactivated his Facebook account two years prior. Inspector Marzouk presented Deputy Kumar with Facebook Post #1 (as labeled in this investigation). Deputy Kumar denied seeing the post prior to the interview, but admitted he heard about the post via word-of-mouth. Deputy Kumar stated his understanding of the meme was,

> "From a social activity. I guess a social party from a while back. I don't know who the captain is, or if they are a captain, or if they were a captain. I just know that it was, I guess, an employee that did something involving a hotdog bun."

Inspector Marzouk asked Deputy Kumar if he experienced any conversation with Sergeant Davis that Deputy Kumar felt the topic was negative, or demoralizing, about the Alachua County Sheriff's Office. Deputy Kumar stated, "I think he was critical of what the Sheriff's Office was doing involving reorganizations."

Inspector Marzouk asked Deputy Kumar if he understood Sergeant Davis' criticisms to be specifically about Sheriff Watson. Deputy Kumar responded, "I mean, yes... I think it was inferred... But, yes, because the decisions that were made based on a command staff position." Deputy Kumar denied experiencing any negative affects due to Sergeant Davis' social media activity.

Deputy Sheriff Nicholas Aldous #1791

On February 9, 2023, at 1519 hours, a digitally recorded interview was conducted with Deputy Sheriff Nicholas Aldous. The interview was conducted by Inspectors Nancy Marzouk and Virgil Calhoun at 3333 NE 39th AV, Department of the Jail, Office of Professional Standards interview room.

At the time of the posts, and this interview, Deputy Aldous was assigned to Team Two Day Shift – District Three; he directly reported to Sergeant Davis. During the interview, Inspector Marzouk learned Deputy Aldous did not have a Facebook account, yet he was made aware of Facebook Post #1 by someone; Deputy Aldous was not able to recall who that person was. Deputy Aldous did not know what the meme meant when he first saw it; he was later told what the meme referenced.

Inspector Marzouk asked Deputy Aldous if he ever witnessed Sergeant Davis make negative statements he perceived as demoralizing, insubordinate, or disrespectful. Deputy Aldous adamantly denied witnessing anything like that and stated, "No...only stuff that if you looked at it, it's quantitatively measurable and 100% a fact." When asked about Sergeant Davis' influence on his assigned shift, Deputy Aldous stated, "Everyone...loves him. He's a good leader. He keeps us out of trouble...he steers us in the proper direction."

Deputy Sheriff Michael Moore #381

On February 9, 2023, at 1607 hours, a digitally recorded interview was conducted with Deputy Sheriff Michael Moore. The interview was conducted by Inspectors Nancy Marzouk and Scott Anderson at 3333 NE 39th AV, Department of the Jail, Office of Professional Standards interview room.

At the time of the posts, and this interview, Deputy Moore was assigned to Team Two Day Shift – District Three; he directly reported to Sergeant Davis. During this interview, Inspector Marzouk learned Deputy Moore created a Facebook account approximately two weeks ago; he did not have an account over the last few years. Inspector Marzouk presented Facebook post #1 to Deputy Moore and asked him what he understood the meme to mean. Deputy Moore stated,

> "...it's referring to Captain Lance Yaeger being promoted to Major. About 20 years ago...there was a party of which I attended and witnessed Major Lance Yaeger pull out his penis, put it in a hotdog bun, cover it with ketchup and mustard, um, and show it to everyone."

It was later clarified with Deputy Moore if Major Lance Yaeger was employed with the ACSO at the time of the incident and Deputy Moore confirmed he (Lance Yaeger) was employed. When asked what made Deputy Moore, having never seen the meme before, correlate the meme to the incident he described, Deputy Moore answered, "Because Captain to Major. Weiner dog."

Deputy Moore was asked if he found the post to be offensive and he denied that being true. Deputy Moore was asked if he considered the meme to be an inside joke or common knowledge to the general public. Deputy Moore stated, "I would not say that if a member of the public saw this that they would make any connection as to who the captain is, who was promoted to major, and what it has to do with a Weiner dog."

Deputy Moore was asked if he thought any person within the general public would look at the meme and recognize it having anything to do with the ACSO. Deputy Moore denied that would be possible. Inspector Marzouk asked Deputy Moore if seeing the post caused him to lose respect for Major Yaeger, and Deputy Moore denied that to be true. When asked if witnessing the incident itself caused, or now causes, Deputy Moore to have less respect for Major Yaeger, Deputy Moore stated,

> "This is what I'll say about the incident. It was 20 years ago. We were young. There was drinking involved... That incident, if, if, had anybody done that, knowing now, Major Yeager, um, I, I would not hold it against him. He's performed, as far as I know, well in whatever capacity he's been in and I would not hold something that someone did 20 years ago against them. Not a, that specific incident."

Inspector Marzouk asked Deputy Moore if he ever witnessed Sergeant Davis make statements he (Deputy Moore) perceived as demoralizing, insubordinate, or disrespectful. Deputy Moore denied witnessing anything like that. The same questions were posed to Deputy Moore, but in regards to statements made to the general public, which Deputy Moore, once again, denied ever witnessing that. Deputy Moore also denied ever feeling uncomfortable by any of Sergeant Davis' comments and has not experienced any negative affect as a result of Sergeant Davis' actions on social media.

Deputy Sheriff Daniel Hart #1815

On February 14, 2023, at 0920 hours, a digitally recorded interview was conducted with Deputy Sheriff Daniel Hart. The interview was conducted by Inspectors Nancy Marzouk and Scott Anderson at 3333 NE 39th AV, Department of the Jail, Office of Professional Standards interview room.

At the time of the posts, and this interview, Deputy Hart was assigned to Team Two Day Shift – District Three; he directly reported to Sergeant Davis. Inspector Marzouk learned Deputy Hart did have a Facebook account, but he is not friends on Facebook with Sergeant Davis or Arabella Blizzard. Inspector Marzouk presented Deputy Hart with Facebook post #1. Deputy Hart believed he had seen it before. When asked what or who the meme was a reference to, Deputy Hart stated,

> "I honestly have no idea... Being completely honest with you, I saw it and it really doesn't, it's not bringing anything up for me. I know there's been a lot of promotions and moving around. As far as who specifically it's referring to...I, being completely honest, I have no idea."

Deputy Hart did not know the meaning behind the meme nor whom the meme was referencing. Inspector Marzouk then presented the post labeled as Facebook Post #2. Deputy Hart did not think he had seen the post before, but if he did, it was not via his Facebook account because he is not friends with either Arabella Blizzard or Sergeant Davis on Facebook.

Deputy Hart also denied ever witnessing Sergeant Davis make ill statements about ACSO. Deputy Hart stated,

"I know that the only thing that I specifically heard him say, that I recall right now, is just the normal things that we've been hearing since we started here. Officer safety stuff. You know, staffing concerns, which I've heard from lots of people from all different levels... I've had several supervisors since being here, and...I've never changed the way that I operate. I don't think that I've done anything differently, so I don't feel that I've been influenced.

Lieutenant Heather Phillips #409

On February 14, 2023, at 1046 hours, a digitally recorded interview was conducted with Lieutenant Heather Phillips. The interview was conducted by Inspectors Nancy Marzouk and Scott Anderson at 3333 NE 39th AV, Department of the Jail, Office of Professional Standards interview room.

At the time the social media posts were made, Lieutenant Phillips directly supervised Sergeant Davis. However, at the time of this interview, she was assigned as the Watch Commander for Team Two Evening Shift. Inspector Marzouk presented Lieutenant Phillips with the post labeled Facebook Post #1. Lieutenant Phillips acknowledged she had seen sit before, or something like it, that referenced a hotdog thing. Lieutenant Phillips denied actually witnessing the incident, but she did hear about it via word-of-mouth over the years. When asked to explain her understanding of what the meme meant, Lieutenant Phillips stated,

"It's my understanding, several years ago, that I believe it was a SWAT party, uh, Lance Yeager was on the SWAT team, and was drunk, and was running around with his penis in a hotdog bun, at the party."

Inspector Marzouk then presented Facebook Post #2 to Lieutenant Phillips and asked her if she had seen it before. Lieutenant Phillips stated she is not on Facebook much anymore, but she thought someone sent it to her and that is how she saw it before. Inspector Marzouk asked Lieutenant Phillips to read the post to refresh her memory. Inspector Marzouk asked if Lieutenant Phillips felt negatively influenced by Sergeant Davis social media posts and she denied being influenced by him. She was promoted – Davis complaint on her?

Inspector Marzouk asked Lieutenant Phillips if she ever witnessed Sergeant Davis make negative comments about the agency or its administration, in front of subordinates, or members of the public, and she stated, "Hmm...not off the top of my head... I mean, we would door up all the time, but, I don't know that others were present." When asked if Sergeant Davis made negative remarks, criticisms, or observations, against the agency and directly to her, Lieutenant Phillips stated, "Observations or maybe venting." What did he say?

Prior Discipline?

Lieutenant Phillips denied having knowledge of Sergeant Davis experiencing issues, in terms of supervising his subordinates, since he made the posts. Additionally, Lieutenant Phillips never had one of Sergeant Davis' subordinates report any issues with Sergeant Davis.

Deputy Sheriff Zachary Means #1624

On February 27, 2023, at 0905 hours, a digitally recorded interview was conducted with Deputy Sheriff Zachary Means. The interview was conducted by Inspectors Nancy Marzouk and Virgil Calhoun at 3333 NE 39th AV, Department of the Jail, Office of Professional Standards interview room.

At the time of the posts, and this interview, Deputy Means was assigned to Team Two Day Shift – District Three; he directly reported to Sergeant Davis. Inspector Marzouk learned Deputy Means does not have a Facebook account. Deputy Means denied ever seeing Facebook post #1, and he was not able to surmise what the meme meant. Deputy Means was also presented with what was labeled as Facebook Post #2 in this investigation, but Deputy Means had never seen that post either.

Inspector Marzouk asked Deputy Means if he ever witnessed Sergeant Davis speak ill of, or denounce, the agency or the administration in his presence. Deputy Means could not recall witnessing any such incident, and he also denied ever feeling negatively affected by Sergeant Davis.

Sergeant Kevin Davis #0437

On March 2, 2023, at 1300 hours, a digital recorded interview was scheduled to be conducted with Sergeant Davis #437 at the Alachua County Sheriff's Office, Office of Professional Standards. Sergeant Davis arrived with representative, Bobi J. Frank. Inspectors Virgil Calhoun and Scott Anderson were present.

On the day of the interview, Sergeant Davis appeared with his representative, Bobi J. Frank. Sergeant Davis and Ms. Frank were afforded the opportunity to review all evidence and witness statements collected during this investigation. At the conclusion of their review, Ms. Frank claimed Florida Statue 112 violations and the scheduled interview with Sergeant Davis was not conducted.

Inspector's Notes

On March 3, 2023, Inspector Marzouk confirmed that Facebook Posts #1 and #2 were still posted. It was at that time, Inspector Marzouk discovered the exchange of comments between Sergeant Davis and former ACSO Deputy Sheriff Brandon Alston; therefore, a witness interview was conducted with Mr. Alston on March 6, 2023, at 0850 hours, and it was added to this Administrative Investigation Summary portion of this report.

Brandon E. Alston

On March 6, 2023, at 0850 hours, a digitally recorded interview was conducted with Brandon Alston. The interview was conducted by Inspectors Nancy Marzouk and Virgil Calhoun who were located at 3333 NE 39th AV, Department of the Jail, Office of Professional Standards – in an empty office; the interview was conducted via speakerphone.

Brandon Alston is a former ACSO Deputy Sheriff (#2090) who was employed by the Alachua County Sheriff's Office from August 10, 2020, to October 8, 2021. During his employment, Brandon worked on the same Patrol Team and shift as Sergeant Kevin Davis for a brief period of time.

Inspector Marzouk asked Mr. Alston if he recalled a Facebook post made by Sergeant Davis, on Arabella Blizzard's Facebook page, where he and Sergeant Davis had a short exchange of comments about Sergeant Davis' post. Mr. Alston stated he "vividly" recalled the post and exchange of comments. When asked what agency he understood Sergeant Davis was writing about, Mr. Alston answered, "The agency he [Sergeant Davis] works for." After prompted to name the agency, Mr. Alston stated, "The Alachua County Sheriff's Office."

Inspector Marzouk asked Mr. Alston after reading Sergeant Davis' post, as a citizen, would he still have confidence in the Sheriff's Office and in the ability, or capability, of the Sheriff. Mr. Alston stated, "Absolutely not." Inspector Marzouk asked Mr. Alston to explain why. Mr. Alston explained,

> "Because this is a thing, like, when you have...somebody that's been there 20 plus years,...if you look at the attrition rate of the sheriff's office,...then you start to add all these things up,...if you really vividly look at what he's [Sergeant Davis] talking about, if you're not just some joe blow citizen that don't care, then you'll notice that there's, um, encryptions in what he's [Sergeant Davis] saying."

> "...if I wasn't a citizen that cared, you know, it would be easy to just look over what goes on. But when you, you look at the, the multiple different people that have worked at the sheriff's office in, um, an official capacity that have left, and the things that they say, and then you start reading the things that he [Sergeant Davis] posts, you kind of like, I mean, you put two and two together. It don't take a rocket scientist to see that there's trouble in the water, you know what I mean?"

Inspector Marzouk asked Mr. Alston if he felt the content of the post was factual or Sergeant Davis' opinion. Mr. Alston explained Sergeant Davis is an analytical person, so the numbers he provided may not be exactly correct due to personnel leaving or being hired each week. Mr. Alston went on to say, "So the numbers may be factual, and they may not be factual, but I think it's from his opinion, this is how he's feeling. It's not totally based off of fact."

When asked if the exchange of comments between him and Sergeant Davis was taken as playful or sarcasm, Mr. Alston said,

> "I took it as KD [Sergeant Davis' nickname] being KD. Um, you know he, he's kind of a person that, I mean, I've worked where he was my sergeant when I was at the sheriff's office, so, um, I've worked for him and I know how he is. He knows how to tread softly, so to speak, um, he'll say things that, you know, they're not offensive, but they may not be the right thing to say...he's one of those...guys...that you...need a sergeant like him, but everybody's not going to like the way he does business and that's okay."

Inspector's Notes

This administrative investigation has been ordered by the chain of command to be submitted without an interview of the subject employee, Sergeant Kevin Davis #0437.

On March 9, 2023, Inspector Marzouk made a final review of this report – specifically the witness interviews. Inspector Marzouk discovered during the interview with Deputy Sheriff Michael Moore, Facebook Post #2 was not discussed with him. Therefore, on March 9, 2023, Inspector Marzouk called Deputy Moore and asked follow-up questions.

Deputy Sheriff Michael Moore #381

On March 9, 2023, at 1026 hours, a digitally recorded interview was conducted with Deputy Sheriff Michael Moore. The interview was conducted by Inspectors Nancy Marzouk and Scott Anderson who were located at 3333 NE 39th AV, Department of the Jail, Office of Professional Standards – in an empty office; the interview was conducted via speakerphone.

Inspector Marzouk read out loud the entire Facebook post #2 (Arabella Blizzard's original post and Sergeant Davis' response) to Deputy Moore. Deputy Moore stated he did not read or see that post before. Inspector Marzouk asked Deputy Moore what agency he believed Sergeant Davis was referencing in the post and Deputy Moore answered, "My guess would be our agency, the Alachua County Sheriff's Office." Deputy Moore was asked, after hearing the contents of the post, if it took away Deputy Moore's confidence in the ability for the Sheriff's Office to conduct its mission. Deputy Moore stated, "No because I, I, I don't know if what was said was true." He was asked given the fact it was his supervisor who wrote the post, did Deputy Moore feel the content had more weight or value to it versus if a stranger or non-employee wrote it. Deputy Moore responded, "I would have to say no."

Deputy Moore then was asked if he thought it was appropriate for a sergeant of the Alachua County Sheriff's Office to write that on a public page. Deputy Moore stated, "What, what he wrote? If, if he didn't identify the agency, or didn't name any names, I don't think there's anything inappropriate with expressing what his beliefs are." It was repeated back to Deputy Moore he did not think it was inappropriate and Deputy Moore confirmed, "No, I don't think it's inappropriate. He, he didn't name the Sheriff's Office, if that's in fact who he's talking about. Um, so he's, he's expressing his beliefs."

+ Subject employee history

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. On or around, January 11, 2023, and for a short period of time thereafter, Sergeant Kevin Davis made several Facebook posts utilizing his personal account that negatively referenced the Alachua County Sheriff's Office and Sheriff Clovis Watson, Jr. (see Facebook Posts #1 - #3).

2. Facebook is a social media and networking site where users can interact with other users by posting, reacting to, and sharing content with other users. These interactions can occur on the individual user's personal account, or the user can post, react to, or share content on another user's personal account.

3. Sergeant Kevin Davis' Facebook account had a picture of him and his name appeared next to every post or comment he made on the social media platform.

4. A Directive Management System audit was conducted of Sergeant Kevin Davis' policy review. Directive 945 – Social Media was signed by him on June 3, 2017, at 1300 hours.

5. Facebook Post #1 was captioned, "Captain Weiner Dog promoted to Major." This investigation revealed, that even without naming the employee it was referencing, some witnesses knew it was about the recent promotion of Major Lance Yaeger. It referenced something he committed when he was a young Deputy Sheriff and it occurred approximately 20 years ago. This post was based on an actual event; therefore, no further evaluation of this post was considered.

6. Facebook Post #2 was posted on someone else's Facebook page and Sergeant Davis alleged, "This place has been decimated due to racism... 30% of 233 employees are supervisors and 100% of employees of a particular race have been promoted with disregard for their test scores, experience, and skills; as long as they participated in the promotional process."

    a. Several witnesses stated they knew Sergeant Davis was referring to the ACSO even though he did not name the agency.

b. The ACSO, and its employees, require the trust of the general public in order to fulfill its mission and maintain public safety.
c. Reference the portion of Facebook Post #2 that stated, "30% of 233 employees..." the ACSO's Data Systems Unit provided the actual number of full-time, sworn employees was 239 sworn employees, which is greater than 233, and does not include non-sworn employees.
d. No information was included in the post that proved racism existed within the ACSO and it is reasonable to believe that alleging someone, or an entity, is a racist, can have a damaging/tarnishing effect to that person's, or that entity's, reputation.

This portion of the statement could be considered libelous in nature; however, the scope of this investigation did not include the collection of evidence to prove this statement as false and libelous, so no further evaluation of this portion of the post was considered.

7. This investigation did reveal evidence that the posts had an adverse impact on the Alachua County Sheriff's Office and its mission. During the witness interview with Mr. Brandon Alston, he stated he knew Sergeant Davis was referencing the Alachua County Sheriff's Office in Facebook Post #2. Mr. Alston was asked, if after reading the post, did he still have confidence in the Sheriff's Office and in the ability, or capability, of the Sheriff. Mr. Alston stated, "Absolutely not."

8. This investigation did not reveal evidence of negative influence to current employees due to the content of Sergeant Kevin Davis' Facebook posts. Witness Deputy Sheriff Nicholas Aldous stated, "Everyone...loves him. He's a good leader. He keeps us out of trouble...he steers us in the proper direction." Witness Lieutenant Joe Hood stated, "I haven't had a complaint about him from anyone. I never had an issue. I mean, he's...always operated with extreme honesty and integrity. And he's one of the most honest people that I have worked with, so I've never had an issue with [him]. He's a very ethical person, [he has] a great work ethic..." Witness Mr. Brandon Alston stated, "...he's one of those...guys...that you...need a sergeant like him, but everybody's not going to like the way he does business and that's okay."

INSPECTOR'S FINDINGS

Inspector's Notes

On March 13, 2023, Chief Inspector Captain Kelvin Jenkins informed Inspector Virgil Calhoun was assigned this Administrative Investigation. This Inspector has reviewed Inspector Nancy Marzouk's provided witness statements and evidence. This Inspector concurs with the writings of Inspector Marzouk's Predication, Complaint, Inspector's Investigation and Finding of Facts of this document.

In order to assess if a violation of ACSO Directive 353 V.A.2 – Conduct Unbecoming an Employee, 353 V.A.7b – Insubordination, 353 V.E.1 - Knowledge of Ordinances, Statutes, and ACSO Directives occurred, this Inspector referred to ACSO Directive 945 – Social Media and ACSO Directive 353 – Standards of Conduct and Violation Levels. Those directives were applied to the following findings as derived from the facts discovered during Inspector Marzouk's investigation:

Sergeant Kevin Davis is identified on Facebook as Kevin Davis and does not release information on his public Facebook page as being employed for the Alachua County Sheriff's Office. Sergeant Davis' Facebook posts, as part of this Administrative Investigation, does not identify the Alachua County Sheriff's Office.

Sergeant Davis did not make his comments under the color of his authority as an employee of the Alachua County Sheriff's Office (ACSO) or take claim to any entity of ACSO as specifically enumerated in Directive 353 V.A.2 - "Conduct Unbecoming an Employee – Employees will not engage in any conduct, on duty or off duty and under the color of their authority..." Sergeant Davis' Facebook post is in communication with a known former Major of ACSO employee Arabella Blizzard. Ms. Blizzard is known to the public as formerly employed with ACSO by public photographs in an ACSO uniform on Facebook.

Ms. Blizzard stated in Facebook Post #2, "Keep the faith my friends. Remember your worth and that you are the most important commodities and that you keep it all running..." Sergeant Davis' response, "The place has been decimated due to racism, cronyism and personal vengeance..." could only be referring to the Alachua County Sheriff's Office.

During a witness interview with former ACSO employee Brandon Alston, he said he knew Sergeant Davis was referencing the Alachua County Sheriff's Office in Facebook Post #2. Mr. Alston was asked if he had confidence in the Sheriff's Office and in the ability, or capability, of the Sheriff. he stated "Absolutely not." Sergeant Davis' post clearly had, per Directive 353 V.A.2 - "Conduct Unbecoming an Employee" an "...adverse impact on the ACSO and destroys public respect and confidence in the Office of the Sheriff and its employees..."

Based on official documents and interviews related to this investigation, this Inspector was not able to establish a preponderance of evidence that a violation of Alachua County Sheriff's Office Directive 353 V.A.2 – Conduct Unbecoming an Employee - is NOT SUSTAINED.

Sergeant Kevin Davis made public accusations of "...racism, cronyism and personal vengeance" that take away from the mission of the Alachua County Sheriff's Office, per ACSO 006 - "Service to the community first. Commitment to the employees always. Through our partnerships, we are the Alachua County Sheriff's Office." Sergeant Davis' actions with his Facebook posts undermined the direction of an elected official and as an ambassador of an elective official leads the public into a false narrative. #1

Sergeant Kevin Davis' Facebook Post #1, exploited an event from approximately 20 years ago that was known to have occurred based on witness statements provided in this Administrative Investigation. Facebook Post #1 was directed at Major Lance Yeager. #2

As specifically enumerated in Directive 353 V.A.7.b – "Insubordination – Insubordination will be defined as, "...any disrespectful, insolent or abusive language or action toward a superior whether in or out of the presence of the superior."

Based on the documents and the witness interviews related to this investigation, this Inspector was able to establish a preponderance of evidence that a violation of Alachua County Sheriff's Office Directive 353 V.A.7b – Insubordination - is SUSTAINED. X2

Sergeant Kevin Davis used the social media networking site Facebook to make accusatory statements. The statements of "...racism, cronyism and personal vengeance..." and challenging the promotional process, "30% of 233 employees are supervisors and 100% of employees of a particular race have been promoted with disregard for their test scores, experience, and skills; as long as they participated in the promotional process" was a reply posted in response to a formerly known Major of ACSO, Arabella Blizzard.

As specifically enumerated in Directive 353 V.E.1 - "Knowledge of Ordinances, Statutes, and ACSO Directives states, "...All employees will maintain a working knowledge of the policies and procedures of the ACSO."

Directive 945 IV – Social Media states, "Policy - Employees using any form of social media or social networking...shall not use them in any way, which detracts from the mission of the ACSO, tarnishes the reputation of the ACSO, reflects negatively on your position as an employee of the ACSO, or in a manner that violates any ACSO directive. Any such online actions will be viewed as a direct violation of this policy, as well as any other applicable directive."

ACSO Directive 945 VIII.B.2a – Social Media further states, "Employees who utilize the Internet and social networking sites whether from an agency or personal device, are prohibited from posting any of the following on any social networking platform, either on their own sites, the sites of others known to them, the sites of others unknown to them, news media pages, or other information exchange forums:

> "Any statements or material about the ACSO, its operations, or its current or former employees that are obscene, defamatory, false, deceptive, misleading, profane, libelous, threatening, harassing, abusive, hateful, etc.

Based on the documents and the witness interviews related to this investigation, this Inspector was able to establish a preponderance of evidence that a violation of Alachua County Sheriff's Office Directive 353 V.E.1 - Knowledge of Ordinances, Statutes, and ACSO Directives - is SUSTAINED.

RE: Interactions with Ms. Bobi Frank in March 2023

This IOC is in response to your email directing me to provide a written account of the attempts to conduct subject interviews with Sgt. Frank Williams and Sgt. Kevin Davis on March 1, 2023, and March 2, 2023.

On March 1, 2023, Sgt. Frank Williams came into the Office of Professional Standards with his legal representative, Ms. Bobi Frank. They were provided all evidence gathered in the case and given an opportunity to privately review it. After they were finished, Inspector Calhoun and I entered the interview room, and Ms. Frank announced that there were multiple "112 violations" in the case, some of which would not be repairable. Ms. Frank was given an uninterrupted opportunity to list all of the alleged violations.

At the end of her presentation, I attempted to discuss the things she brought up individually. There were some issues she raised, particularly the inadequate statement provided by Jacob Rush, that I agreed were a concern. Unfortunately, I was rarely able to say more than a few words before she would cut me off and talk over me in a very rude and derogatory manner. It became clear fairly quickly that she had an agenda and was not serious about attempting to resolve any of her alleged violations in order for an interview to take place. Because Ms. Frank was not interested in having a productive dialogue, we allowed her to articulate her allegations and ended the attempted interrogation.

On March 2, 2023, Sgt. Kevin Davis came into the Office of Professional Standards with his legal representative. He was also being represented by Ms. Frank. They were given the opportunity to review all evidence privately, and then Sgt. Marzouk-Brainerd and I went into the interview room to attempt an interrogation. Ms. Frank again provided a list of alleged "112 violations." However, this time she was much more subdued as she outlined them, appearing almost exhausted as she listed them. Sgt. Marzouk-Brainerd took notes as Ms. Frank spoke and asked clarifying questions a few times.

After Ms. Frank was finished listing her grievances, but before any discussion or negotiation regarding them could take place, she closed her notebook and said she wanted to ask Sgt. Marzouk-Brainerd a question. Ms. Frank then became very loud and visibly angry when confronting Sgt. Marzouk-Brainerd about a recorded phone conversation that was part of the evidence they had been presented to review. As Ms. Frank was yelling at Sgt. Marzouk-Brainerd over the recording, I noticed Sgt. Davis was smiling as he watched it take place. As she was still speaking, Ms. Frank stood up and grabbed her notebook. Sgt. Davis stood up with Ms. Frank as she did. Ms. Frank then stormed out of the interview room, yelling loudly how she could not believe the level of "shit" coming out this office. Sgt. Davis followed her out as she talked.

Neither Sgt. Marzouk-Brainerd nor I were ever given an opportunity to discuss any of the alleged violations with her prior to her outburst and storming out of the office. I noted that again Ms. Frank clearly had an agenda prior to sitting down with us and had no intention of actually allowing an interrogation to occur. Unlike the day before, however, she did not even afford us an opportunity to discuss any of the issues she raised.

On Thursday, March 23, 2023, I viewed a portion of a court document that had been filed regarding the March 2, 2023, incident by Ms. Frank. The court document read:

"21. After a brief discussion regarding the violations of Sgt. Davis' Officers' Bill of Rights, Investigator Marzouk and Investigator Anderson ultimately refused to cure the violations, or even acknowledge most of them. They were informed to make the Agency head aware of the violations."

This description appearing in an official court document was very concerning as it was clearly untrue. Contrary to her statement, we had no discussion because Ms. Frank and Sgt. Davis stormed out of the office unescorted before one could take place. We were also given no opportunity "to cure any potential violations, or even acknowledge most of them."

ALACHUA COUNTY SHERIFF'S OFFICE

March 30, 2023

INTER-OFFICE CORRESPONDENCE:

TO: Sheriff Clovis Watson Jr.
Office of the Sheriff

FROM: Inspector Virgil Calhoun
Office of Professional Standards

VIA: Chain of Command

RE: 2023-00010 Administrative Investigation Sergeant Kevin Davis

On March 17, 2023, General Counsel Jacob Rush informed Sergeant Kevin Davis' representative, Ms. Bobi Frank, esq., of the removal of Inspector Nancy Marzouk from Administrative Investigation 2023-00010.

Administrative Investigation 2023-00010 was opened on January 20, 2023 with an Inspector assigned on January 23, 2023. According to the Office of Professional Standards Manual (OPS), "All investigations should be completed as timely as possible and, in any case, must be completed within ninety (90) days of the initial receipt, unless an extension is granted by the Sheriff." This Administrative Investigation's ninety (90) day mark is set for April 19, 2023. This Inspector was verbally made aware of the Inspector changes on March 13, 2023. On March 20, 2023, this Inspector was advised of the official e-mail notification to Ms. Frank and was directed to investigate this administrative investigation.

Administrative Investigation 2023-00010 will be investigated under good faith as directed by the Code of Ethics. All evidence obtained under my own investigative findings will be in compliance with F.S. 112; Officer's Bill of Rights, applicable policies and legal counsel. Per the OPS Manual, this Inspector is requesting the first thirty (30) day extension to begin on April 19, 2023.

PREDICATION

On January 11, 2023, Human Resource Director Reshone Flanders e-mailed Personnel Order 23-005 as approved by Sheriff Clovis Watson, Jr. On January 12, 2023, the Alachua County Sheriff's Facebook page released a statement related to the personnel changes. On January 23, 2023, Chief Inspector Kelvin Jenkins informed the Inspectors of the Office of Professional Standards, that Sergeant Kevin Davis authored comments on Facebook that may be a violation of ACSO Directives. On March 30, 2023, this Inspector began an investigation into any potential policy violations.

COMPLAINT

On January 12, 2023, Alachua County Sheriff's Office used social media platform, Facebook, to inform the general public of recent promotions that "...provide growth, opportunity and represent the future of ASO as Sheriff Watson continues to fulfill his vision and promise to the community that will strengthen and improve the agency, the services we offer and the bond we share with the citizens of Alachua County."

On January 12, 2023, and thereafter, Sergeant Kevin Davis authored several Facebook posts and comments that may be a violation of ACSO directives. ACSO 945 – Social Media policy states, "All employees must strive to maintain public trust and confidence, not only in our professional actions, but also in our personal and online actions. Any online activity that has the effect of diminishing the public's trust and/or confidence in the ACSO will hinder the efforts of this agency to fulfill our mission."

This complaint, involving possible violations of ACSO Directive 353 V.A.2 – Conduct Unbecoming an Employee, 353 V.A.7.b – Insubordination was initiated.

Directive 353 V.A.2 - "Conduct Unbecoming an Employee – Employees will not engage in any conduct, on duty or off duty and under the color of their authority, so egregious that it has an adverse impact on the ACSO and destroys public respect and confidence in the Office of the Sheriff and its employees. Such conduct will include, but is not limited to, participation in any immoral, indecent or disorderly conduct, or conduct which causes substantial doubts concerning a person's honesty, fairness, or respect for the rights of others or the laws of the state or nation; regardless of whether such act or conduct constitutes a crime."

Directive 353 V.A.7.b – "Insubordination – Insubordination will be defined as 'failure to submit to authority' and will include, but not be limited to, any failure or deliberate refusal to obey a lawful order given by a superior or relayed by an employee of the same or lesser rank or any disrespectful, insolent or abusive language or action toward a superior whether in or out of the presence of the superior."

> Directive 945 VIII.B.1 - "Employee Use of Social Media – Employees who choose to maintain or participate in social media or social networking platforms shall conduct themselves with professionalism and in such a manner that will not reflect negatively upon the ACSO or its mission."
>
> Directive 945 VIII.B.2 - "Employee Use of Social Media – Employees who utilize the Internet and social networking sites whether from an agency or personal device, are prohibited from posting any of the following on any social networking platform, either on their own sites, the sites of others known to them, the sites of others unknown to them, news media pages, or other information exchange forums:
>
> a. Any statements or material about the ACSO, its operations, or its current or former employees that are obscene, defamatory, false, deceptive, misleading, profane, libelous, threatening, harassing, abusive, hateful, etc."

INSPECTOR'S INVESTIGATION

On January 11, 2023, Human Resources Director Reshone Flanders e-mailed #ACSO Agency Wide, Personnel Order 23-005. On January 12, 2023, Alachua County Sheriff's Office posted the promotions on the Alachua County Sheriff Facebook page.

Alachua County Sheriff's Facebook Post

On January 12, 2023, Alachua County Sheriff's Facebook page posted about new promotions and assignments. The following Facebook comment has been reformatted, italicized, and copied in its entirety into this Administrative Investigation.

"Sheriff Clovis Watson Jr. is pleased to announce some changes at the Alachua County Sheriff's Office for 2023. These new promotions and assignments provide growth, opportunity and represent the future of ASO as Sheriff Watson continues to fulfill his vision and promise to the community that will strengthen and improve the agency, the services we offer and the bond we share with the citizens of Alachua County.

Interim Jail Director Dorian Keith is promoted to the rank of Major with assignment of Jail Director in the Department of the Jail.

Chief Detective Jack "Lance" Yaeger is promoted to the rank of Major in the Department of Support Services.

Lieutenant Christopher Sims is promoted to the rank of Captain in the Patrol Operations Division – Team 2.
Lieutenant Jayson Levy is promoted to the rank of Captain in the Patrol Operations Division – Team 1.

Sergeant John Harris is promoted to the rank of Lieutenant in the Criminal Investigations Division – ACTION Unit.

Sergeant Matthew Yakubsin is promoted to the rank of Lieutenant in the Special Operations Division – Juvenile Relations Bureau.

Deputy Taylor Redding is promoted to the rank of Sergeant in the Patrol Operations Division – Team 2 Nights.

Deputy Jered Smith is promoted to the rank of Sergeant in the Patrol Operations Division – Team 1 Nights."

Captain Kelvin Jenkins #0334

On March 30, 2023, at 1513 hours, a digitally recorded interview was conducted with Captain Kelvin Jenkins #0334. Captain Kelvin Jenkins provided a Complaint Intake Form dated March 30, 2023. The interview was conducted by Inspectors Virgil Calhoun and Scott Anderson at Alachua County Sheriff's Office, Office of Professional Standards.

This Inspector interviewed Captain Kelvin Jenkins in reference to his Complaint Intake Form. Captain Jenkins stated in writing he was, "…informed by the office of the Sheriff that Sergeant Kevin Davis provided commentary and/or authored social media posts, on FACEBOOK, which openly criticized personnel moves decided by Sheriff Watson, along with perceived claims of mismanagement, racism, cronyism etc." This Inspector asked Captain Jenkins if he had any further details and simply referred to his written statement.

Sergeant Kevin Davis' Facebook Posts

Sergeant Kevin Davis' initial social media posts on Facebook. The following Facebook comments were reformatted, italicized and copied in its entirety into this Administrative Investigation.

Document #2 – "Weiner Dog" meme with caption, "Captain Weiner Dog promoted to Major."

Document #3 – Arabella Blizzard's Facebook post stated, "Keep the faith my friends. Remember your worth and that you are the most important commodities and that you keep it all running. Your people depend on you." Sergeant Davis responded with, "The place has been decimated due to racism, cronyism and personal vengeance. The greedy cronies feel comfortable playing the game. They know who they are; so does everyone who works around them. They forgot or took for granted, they are severely outnumbered. Their reputations will haunt them for years to come. 30% of 233 employees are supervisors and 100% of employees of a particular race have been promoted with disregard for their test scores, experience, and skills; as long as they participated in the promotional process."

Document #4 – Kevin Davis and Brandon Alston exchanged comments on Arabella Blizzard's Facebook post. Mr. Alston replied to Sergeant Davis' post and said, "Kevin Davis if you wanna say black just say black {ended with a crying laughing emoji}." Sergeant Davis responded, "Brandon Alston I assure you the facts are being addressed in a more productive arena." Mr. Alston replied, "Kevin Davis well good luck with that. If I call hasn't been made to Tallahassee yet idk who's waiting to make it {ended with an unknown emoji}."

Inspector's Notes

On January 11, 2023, Sergeant Kevin Davis was included in Human Resources Bureau Chief Reshone Flanders' #ACSO Agency Wide e-mail group receiving Personnel Order 23-005. Sergeant Davis was identified as "Kevin Davis" on Facebook. Sergeant Davis did not identify working for Alachua County Sheriff's Office on his Facebook page. Sergeant Davis' profile photograph did not use identifiers associated with Alachua County Sheriff's Office.

Sergeant Davis had been employed with the Alachua County Sheriff's Office since 2004, according to the Employee Master Index (MNI). On April 13, 2013, Deputy Davis was promoted to the rank of Sergeant. At the time of the social media allegation, Sergeant Davis was assigned to the Patrol Division on Team Two Day Shift - District Three.

On January 23, 2023, Chief Inspector Kelvin Jenkins informed the Office of Professional Standards, that Sergeant Kevin Davis made comments on Facebook that may be a violation of ACSO Directives. Sergeant Kevin Davis singled out the promotion of a certain Alachua County Sheriff's Office employee. According to the Facebook post by Alachua County Sheriff's Office, only two employees were promoted to the rank of major, one being Dorian Keith and the second being Jack "Lance" Yaeger.

Former major of the Alachua County Sheriff's Office, Ms. Arabella Blizzard, authored a post which started a string of replies. Sergeant Davis and other former Alachua County Sheriff employees made comments. Notably, Sergeant Davis replied to Ms. Blizzard and engaged in further dialog with a former deputy of Alachua County Sheriff's Office, Brandon Alston.

On March 30, 2023, this Inspector submitted an extension to Sheriff Clovis Watson Jr., requesting thirty (30) days added to this Administrative Investigation beginning on April 19, 2023.

Major Dorian Keith #0368

On April 3, 2023, at 1340 hours, a digitally recorded interview was conducted with Major Dorian Keith #0368. The interview was conducted by Inspector Virgil Calhoun and Chief Inspector Kelvin Jenkins at Alachua County Sheriff's Office, Department of the Jail.

On January 11, 2023, Human Resources Bureau Chief Reshone Flanders e-mailed personnel Order 23-005. Two employees were promoted to the rank of major.

"Effective January 15, 2023:

Interim Jail Director Dorian Keith promoted to the rank of Major with assignment of Jail Director in the Department of the Jail*, reporting to* Undersheriff Joel DeCoursey, Jr.

Chief Detective Jack "Lance" Yaeger promoted to the rank of Major in the Department of Support Services*, reporting to* Colonel Chad D. Scott."

Major Keith was informed about a Facebook post made by Sergeant Kevin Davis on January 12, 2023. This Inspector described the Facebook post to Major Keith. This Inspector informed Major Keith the purpose of this interview was trying to understand who Sergeant Davis was referencing in the Facebook post. This Inspector ask Major Keith, "First, could you explain the chain of command structure." Major Keith replied, "So it be, officer slash deputy, because they're the same rank. Then it would be sergeant. Then it would be lieutenant. Captain, major, colonel if this agency has them and then undersheriff and sheriff." Major Keith informed this Inspector her prior rank before she was promoted to major was captain. This Inspector asked were both majors, who were promoted, of the rank of captain. Major Keith said, "Yes, but..." (Inspector Note: Major Yaeger's title as Chief Detective is understood to be similar in pay and rank as a captain. The position of Chief Detective is occupied by an employee of the rank of captain.) Major Keith confirmed she was currently assigned to the Department of the Jail as Jail Director. This Inspector asked Major Keith if it was correct to conclude that the only other major in the agency would be Jack "Lance" Yaeger. Major Keith said, "Correct."

This Inspector asked Major Keith, "Have you ever supervised Sergeant Kevin Davis?" Major Keith testified, "I have not." This Inspector informed Major Keith that Kevin Davis did work in the Department of the Jail back in 2004. Major Keith continued, "In 2004, I had just got promoted to sergeant and so I would have went to a night shift here in security but prior to that I came from transport. So, I'm not sure if I supervised him on night shift or not if I was first a sergeant but, um, I don't remember it if I did."

This Inspector referred to the Facebook post as being an "inside joke." Major Keith was asked if she knew of this "inside joke." Major Keith responded, "So I have never saw this post prior to today but looking at it I don't think he is talking about me. Because I am a female, this is clearly in my eyes a male dog and it's a white male and the caption as well and so I wouldn't think he was talk'n about me. I would think that he was talk'n about Major Yaeger because of the date that was posted and the day of the personnel order that came out. So that's how I view it. But outside of that I have never seen it before."

Major Jack "Lance" Yaeger #0386

On April 6, 2023, at 0851 hours, a digitally recorded interview was conducted with Major Lance Yaeger #0386. The interview was conducted by Inspector Virgil Calhoun and Chief Inspector Kelvin Jenkins at Alachua County Sheriff's Office, Alachua County Sheriff's Office.

On January 11, 2023, Human Resources Bureau Chief Reshone Flanders e-mailed personnel Order 23-005. Major Jack "Lance" Yaeger was shown the personnel order along with a Facebook post authored by Sergeant Kevin Davis. This Inspector asked Major Yaeger if he could explain the chain of command. Major Yaeger testified, "I served as the Chief Detective in the Criminal Investigations and the rank inherent in that position is that of captain. Um, effective pursuant to this personnel order effective January 15th, I was promoted from the rank of captain, um to the rank of major." Major Yaeger was ask by this Inspector how many majors were currently at the Alachua County Sheriff's Office. Major Yaeger replied, "Currently we have two, myself and Major Dorian Keith."

Major Yaeger was asked if the Facebook post meme was an "inside joke" to which he replied, "It is." This Inspector asked if the Facebook post was referencing Major Dorian Keith or himself. Major Yaeger replied, "I believe it's a reference to myself for several reasons. Including, but not limited to, he... had some angst with me when I left the unit under him several years ago. He wasn't very happy about that. I'm fairly confident in saying that I'm sure this was designed to insult or embarrass me in some way, shape or form. And uh, the agency."

This Inspector asked Major Yaeger how the Facebook post, in question, may have an effect on the chain of command. Major Yaeger said he did not have social media but testified he found out several ways of the existence of the post, "from that of my family, um, as well as um, subordinates and colleagues alike. Um, again it is my belief that this was done with the sole purpose of insulting, embarrassing, not just me but the Sheriff, the agency and law enforcement in general quite frankly. Because um, I know when initially it first came out there was a lot of talk about it. Um, there was no secret, it was pretty far reaching. Um, I believe, if I remember correctly, that having been told, perhaps public, um, I can't confirm that myself but that was my understanding at the time."

This Inspector asked Major Yaeger what is the importance of command structure. Major Yaeger stated:

> "So, um, we are a paramilitary organization here at the Alachua County Sheriff's Office, as is all other law enforcement agencies, and uh, with that, we have a rank structure. Um, all the way from sheriff down to deputy sheriff. It's important for several reasons. On attentiveness to order, uh, good order in discipline, um, in our line of work... it's important that when an order is given, especially in a tactical situation they gotta be followed unless its illegal, immoral, unethical, because um, the consequences in our line of work could be death; serious bodily injury not just to us but citizens. So, in order to promote that into, uh, to promote that good order and discipline in the spirit of cooperation, attentiveness to orders, and respect for command or the position of command at a bare minimum, um, it is important that we follow the rules, policies and procedures that are set forth, and by this agency. You know, there is policy and procedures that go through a process called, work flow, that you know, um, command staff and others including the PBA, uh, get to have an opportunity to view them and weigh in on them and at the end of the day the Sheriff's decision is ultimate when those policies and procedure are published. Um, they are the rules by which we go by. Um there is reasons why we have rules against this, because once again it erodes the fabric of trust. Uh, in the public for us as law enforcement and not just our agency, all agencies in my opinion."

Chief Inspector Kelvin Jenkins asked Major Yaeger if there were any issues in the past with Major Yaeger being a subordinate to Sergeant Davis. Major Yaeger testified:

> "He was my sergeant in uniform patrol and he um, left uniform patrol to start a new street squad or street crimes unit called CHIPS, and um, he worked very diligently trying to recruit me to that unit because of my history with SWAT, other street level crimes in special operations bureau... and my military background, with 20 years of impeccable service. Um, initially I turned him down, um, because I kind of sort of like my gig on dayshift. I'm sure as you can imagine. And I have worked the majority of my career, I wanna say at that point 16 or 17 or 18 years here at the Sheriff's Office at that time, so I was kind of enjoying the dayshift that my previous career was evening or night shift. Well they did interviews for that position and they were getting ready to publish the final results and they came to me one final time. They said, 'hey we're getting ready to pull the trigger on this unit and I just wanna come to you and ask you one more time to come join this unit.'" After speaking with my wife, I somewhat reluctantly, but ya know, also motivated, uh, opted to do it. So, they reopened the position. I interviewed and I was subsequently chosen. I spent ten months on that unit, and um, after a couple deputies told me that, um, he instructed them not to back me up on traffic stops. I immediately uh, opted, immediately opted to remove myself from the unit. Um, when I made that, um, I asked to speak with Sergeant Davis, there was another lieutenant in the room, Sergeant Davis ask me why I was leaving. I said would you rather speak in private. Cause I kind of did not want, for a lack of better terms, throw him under the bus, if you will. I was, ya know, still trying to be professional. He did not want to talk privately, so I didn't kind of say why I was leaving, all though that was the decision. I simply, uh, told him that it was just time for me to go. And kind of bowed out gracefully, if you will. So, to say, I was not trying to stir waters at the time. And uh, he immediately after that had a different attitude towards me. Um, I could tell it was one of disgust and anger and I had to talk to him a few times since then, um very cordially, very polite with him, and uh, I could tell he was upset. If I was a guessing man, I have a feeling that this probably may have something to do with that. I might also add that, preceding that he actually selected me to be a member of the career service board where he was the subject employee. He selected me as one of his picks. So, there was no rift, there was no problems with us until I left that unit, if you will."

Major Yaeger finished the interview by adding:

"Regardless of my personal feelings about a post and a personal attack, if you will. Um, a senseless personal attack, I might add. Is again, I just... this isn't helpful to the agency, to take my name, to take it out of the equation, this ain't healthy to the agency, cause really who, who's affected is those deputy sheriffs who are out there on the road and all of us, even you, that, that have to interact with public on a daily basis because what this does is, it just um, it feeds to the propaganda and rhetoric that we're a bunch of cowboys doing what we want and we're a bunch of idiots and for me personally as arrogant as it may sound, you know um, I been in OPS, once, since I been at this agency as a victim employee, as you will, um, I have an impeccable career here at the Alachua County Sheriff's Office. Um, I don't mind saying it on the record, I don't mind showing it, but I think I have had two counseling statements in the whole 23 or 24 years I been here. Um, I keep my nose clean, I do a good job. I work hard. I have great work ethic. I think those around me will attest to the same. So, but again this is not about me personally. This is about all the folks who have to deal with the public on a daily basis because I do kind of sit in the office and generally speaking I don't have those interactions. But again, all this does is uh, erode their faith and confidence in us and law enforcement as an agency and as a profession as an industry and that's why we have policies and procedures in place like this or for this thing so we don't have this rhetoric and these kinds of things happen and unfortunately, it's kind of sad."

Inspector's Notes

On March 14, 2023, Sergeant Kevin Davis authored a Facebook post by identifying Command Staff personnel employed by Alachua County Sheriff's Office. The post was still active and posted while under Administrative Investigation. The following Facebook comments were reformatted, italicized and copied in its entirety into this Administrative Investigation.

Document #21 – Kevin Davis authored Facebook post, "From the ACSO website." Agency Photographs are shown of Sheriff Clovis Watson, Jr., Colonel Chad Scott, Undersheriff Joel DeCoursey, Jr., Major Dorian Keith, and Communications Director Patricia Ford-Thomas.

Document #22 - Human Resources Director Reshone Flanders and Chief Inspector Captain Kelvin Jenkins.

Document #23 – General Counsel Jacob Rush, Major Jack "Lance" Yaeger

Document #24 - Chief of Staff Danielle Judd

Document #25 - Bureau Chief Michelle Sherfield

Sergeant Kevin Davis Facebook post elicited the following responses:

Document #26 – "Joni Craig" replied, "I would like to see data on qualification on each individual in that current position compared to the person that got transferred out of the position."

Former ACSO deputy, Shon McGuigan "McGuigan Shon D" replied to "Joni Craig," "{Joni Craig} has nothing to do with qualifications. You can tell that by half those pictures. All you have to do is worship the one that put you there, screw everyone below you so it doesn't come back to the one that put you there, tell the one that put you there everything that is said about the person who put you there even if it's lies, you must do what you are told to do even if it's wrong, bias, illegal, immoral, against policy, against the right thing to do, and if you sell your soul to the devil for a few extra dollars and a title. Hopefully they all have back up planes because he is a one and done and all of them will be unemployed soon."

Document #27 – Former ACSO sergeant, William Frank Williams IV "Frank Williams" replied, "They have Generals?!!! Wow that's impressive. A Four Star General and a Lieutenant General. I only met one general during my time in the Marine Corps and that was General "Mad Dog" Mattis, who then later went on to service as SECDEF. We shared some beers together and shot the shit. Wow I'm just impressed. Those guys get to be in the presence of two generals. What an exciting time to be alive."

"Joni Craig" replied, "Why is Clovis' face airbrushed in all his pics? Or does he truly have amazing skin? I want to know his secret. {Laughing Emoji}

Frank Williams replied, "{Joni Craig} is it like anime?"

Document #28 – "Phil Jackson" replied, "Can't comment done took all my access away to courthouses jail ect after 26 years."

"McGuigan Shon D" replied with a circus meme.

Former ACSO deputy Michael Lampp "Michael Lampp" replied, "Best decision I ever made was to get out of there"

On March 22, 2023, Andrew Caplan of The Gainesville Sun released an article titled, 3 ACSO officers file lawsuits against Sheriff Watson. Judge orders answers. The article stated, "Sgt. Kevin Davis, who filed suit against Watson on Monday, was also suspended for his social media use and likewise argues his due process was skipped over. But Davis, a white male with 23 years of experience, has taken his issues further by filing a discrimination lawsuit against Watson where he accuses the county's first Black sheriff of letting race play a pivotal role in his employment decision."

On February 2, 2023, Sergeant Kevin Davis authored a Facebook post referencing a video of ACSO General Counsel Jacob Rush being interviewed by Stephen Colbert from The Colbert Report in May, 2014 (https://www.cc.com/video/vkcose/the-colbert-report-better-know-a-challenger-florida-s-3rd-jake-rush). The post was still active and posted while under Administrative Investigation. The following Facebook comments were reformatted, italicized and copied in its entirety into this Administrative Investigation.

Document #29 – Kevin Davis posted, "Important dialogue between the 5:05 and 5:30 mark of this classic clip. Jake Rush: "It's your story." Steven Colbert: "So, I can give any reason I want?" Jake Rush: "You can. That's the 1st amendment."

Sergeant Kevin Davis used the timeframe mentioned in his Facebook post to inform his audience that General Counsel Jacob Rush, on record, agreed with Stephen Colbert, that he can "...give any reason I want" under the "1st amendment." The context of the video was referencing a fictional story Stephen Colbert was role playing in.

On February 3, Sergeant Kevin Davis authored a Facebook post with insinuating content in an attempt to avoid identifying Alachua County Sheriff's Office and its employees while under Administrative Investigation. The post was removed while this Administrative Investigation was on-going. The following Facebook comments were reformatted, italicized and copied in its entirety into this Administrative Investigation.

Document #30 – Kevin Davis authored an initial post, "If you were a financial investor in a large organization such as a Walmart, would you be concerned if out of no where the CEO removed an experienced and respected general manager of the store, who worked his/ her way up to that position, and then filled the vacancy with a cashier or stockman? {ended with five (5) face slap emojis}."

Unknown Facebook user by the name JP Mungus replied with a meme picture of a black male with eyes wide open, and a surprised look, followed by the statements "There's More!"

Former ACSO deputy, Shon McGuigan "McGuigan Shon D" followed in response, "To look at the big picture there are many factors that play into my concerns. One,... (post was not captured in its entirety on the page)

Document #31 - "... which causes accidents, lawsuits and sometimes even death to customers."

Former ACSO Captain and Office of Professional Standards Chief Inspector Brandon Kutner followed in reply, "I mean...only if that person had previously been fired by the former CEO for truthfulness issues and lying to investigators... Hypothetically." Kevin Davis responded, "Brandon Kutner that would be REASON FOR CONCERN."

Former ACSO Communications Division Manager Michelle Klement followed in reply, "I'd be very concerned!!! That's why there's so many self checkouts (only worried about themselves and what they can get) – clearly it's not ideal and not working across the country let alone at "Walmart!" Sounds like the CEO was misguided, ill-informed and uneducated how to run his corporation. Very sad!!!"

On March 22, 2023, Andrew Caplan of The Gainesville Sun released an article titled, 3 ACSO officers file lawsuits against Sheriff Watson. Judge orders answers. The Alachua County Sheriff's Office, Department of the Jail, issued The Gainesville Sun to the inmate population. The article mentioned "Just last month, Watson promoted several members within the agency, including naming Detention Officer Jon Hoover the jail's new acting captain of the security operations division. Hoover, who was previously terminated by the previous sheriff, Sadie Darnell, for being untruthful, was given the promotion a week after an inmate died at the jail." Captain Jon Hoover is currently managing a jail population of an estimated 800 inmates, four shifts, several vendors and medical contractors.

Captain Jon Hoover #0560

On April 4, 2023, at 1403 hours, a digitally recorded interview was conducted with Captain Jon Hoover #0560. The interview was conducted by Inspector Virgil Calhoun and Chief Inspector Kelvin Jenkins at Alachua County Sheriff's Office, Department of the Jail.

This Inspector showed and read into the record the Facebook post (Document #30-31) Sergeant Kevin Davis authored, to Captain Jon Hoover. Captain Hoover was asked how he interpreted the Facebook post. Captain Hoover testified, "Um, I interpreted as the one post as if, 'you were a financial investor in a large organization' that comment, I think it is directed solely at me. Um, and also with the post of the comment of Brandon Kutner which is 'I mean...only if that person had previously been fired by the former CEO for truthfulness issues and lying to investigators...hypothetically' that I interpret that as being solely being directed at me as well."

This Inspector asked Captain Hoover if he was friends with Sergeant Kevin Davis on Facebook. Captain Hoover responded, "Uh, yes." Captain Hoover was shown The Gainesville Sun article and this Inspector read a section pertaining to Captain Hoover into record. Captain Hoover was asked what newspaper company was contracted to provided news to the inmate population. Captain Hoover said, "Uh, The Gainesville Sun." This Inspector asked Captain Hoover what the inmate population count was. Captain Hoover estimated, "Um, I believe mid eight-hundreds."

Captain Hoover testified to his scope of control, "Um, I'm overseeing the, uh, Security Operations Division which, uh, provides, care, custody, control over the inmate population. Um, I have over, about 200 people that kind of funnel, direct report to me. Um, as I said, over the population of all the inmates, these inmates are, um, provided these newspapers and they see that the person that is providing, you know, the care, custody, control, you know, my name is in the paper. So, it could be, the perception that the inmates see is not, not good. Its not a good perception. The sole person that is providing their security and their well-being and making sure they're safe and everything and they see this, this uh, language, in the newspaper they get every day that's provided to them, again because its contracted, ya know it's not a good, it's not a good image, not a good perception at all."

Captain Hoover added, "I have never had any negative ill will, um, its not like we butted heads in the past and this is his way. I have nothing but positive interactions with him. So, this caught me by surprise." This Inspector followed up and asked if Captain Hoover ever supervised Sergeant Davis. Captain Hoover said, "I have not." Captain Hoover did explain, "I do remember, I think it was my first day, first or second day, I was with him working the Clinic. He was my FTO {Facilities Training Officer}." Captain Hoover explained he remembered Sergeant Davis wrestling in high school and he did as well. Captain Hoover continued to say he had nothing but positive interactions with Sergeant Davis. Captain Hoover elaborated and said, "...the same applies to Mr. Kutner, Brandon Kutner. I have nothing but positive interactions. So, this definitely caught me, uh, by surprise."

This Inspector had a follow-up question for Captain Hoover, refencing Mr. Brandon Kutner's post. Captain Hoover was asked if he knew who Mr. Kutner was referencing as the former CEO. Captain Hoover said Sadie Darnell.

This Inspector had a follow-up question referencing Sergeant Davis' initial post. Captain Hoover was asked if he knew who the respected general manager was in the Facebook post. Captain Hoover said it would be the person who he replaced as captain, which was former Captain James Beck.

FINDINGS OF FACT

- Sergeant Kevin Davis had been employed as a deputy sheriff with the Alachua County Sheriff's Office since 2004, according to the Employee Master Index (MNI). On April 13, 2013, Deputy Davis was promoted to the rank of Sergeant.

- Facebook was a social media and networking site where users could interact with other users by posting, reacting to, and sharing content with other users.

- According to Facebook Help Center, "If other people share info about you, even if it's something you shared with them but did not make it public, they can choose to make it public. Also, when you comment on other people's public posts, your comment is public as well."

- Sergeant Kevin Davis was identified as "Kevin Davis" on his Facebook page. Kevin Davis during the period of this Administrative Investigation did not have any identifiers associated with employment for the Alachua County Sheriff's Office.

- On January 11, 2023, Human Resources Bureau Chief Reshone Flanders e-mailed, #ACSO Agency Wide, Personnel Order #23-005. Sergeant Kevin Davis was included in the recipient list with the e-mail Davis, Kevin, (kdavis@alachuasheriff.org).

- On January 12, 2023, Alachua County Sheriff's Facebook page posted an announcement of the promotions and assignments. Sergeant Davis posted a meme of a white male next to a dog wearing a hotdog outfit. The Facebook text stated, "Captain Weiner Dog promoted to Major." A second caption below the meme stated, "Weiner Dog." Based on an interview with Major Dorian Keith and her testimony, "So I have never saw this post prior to today but looking at it I don't think he is talking about me. Because I am a female, this is clearly in my eyes a male dog and it's a white male and the caption as well and so I wouldn't think he was talk'n about me. I would think that he was talk'n about Major Yaeger because of the date that was posted and the day of the personnel order that came out."

- Major Jack "Lance" Yaeger testified Sergeant Kevin Davis' Facebook post was about him and that he found out, "...from that of my family, um, as well as um, subordinates and colleagues alike. Um, again it is my belief that this was done with the sole purpose of insulting, embarrassing, not just me but the Sheriff, the agency and law enforcement in general quite frankly."

- Sergeant Kevin Davis replied to former Alachua County Sheriff employee Arabella Blizzard's post, "The place has been decimated due to racism, cronyism and personal vengeance. The greedy cronies feel comfortable playing the game. They know who they are; so does everyone who works around them. They forgot or took for granted, they are severely outnumbered. Their reputations will haunt them for years to come. 30% of 233 employees are supervisors and 100% of employees of a particular race have been promoted with disregard for their test scores, experience, and skills; as long as they participated in the promotional process."

- On February 3, 2023, Sergeant Kevin Davis used an allegory to tell a story about Captain Jon Hoover's past employment history with ACSO. Captain Hoover testified, "Um, I interpreted as the one post as if, 'you were a financial investor in a large organization' that comment, I think it is directed solely at me. Um, and also with the post of the comment of Brandon Kutner which is 'I mean...only if that person had previously been fired by the former CEO for truthfulness issues and lying to investigators...hypothetically' that I interpret that as being solely being directed at me as well." In Sergeant Davis' own words to former ACSO employee, Brandon Kutner, "...that would be REASON FOR CONCERN."

- On March 22, 2023, Andrew Caplan of The Gainesville Sun published the article, 3 ACSO officers file lawsuits against Sheriff Watson. Judge orders answers, mentioning Captain Hoover's past under the former ACSO administration. The Gainesville Sun supplies newspapers to the jail population. Captain Hoover said, "...these inmates are, um, provided these newspapers and they see that the person that is providing, you know, the care, custody, control, you know, my name is in the paper. So, it could be, the perception that the inmates see is not, not good. It's not a good perception. The sole person that is providing their security and their well-being and making sure there safe and everything and they see this, this uh, language, in the newspaper they get every day that's provided to them, again because its contracted, ya know it's not a good, it's not a good image, not a good perception at all."

- It was established Sergeant Kevin Davis' initial Facebook posts about Major Jack "Lance" Yaeger and comments to former Alachua County Sheriff's employee Arabella Blizzard, were not covered by the media nor did he use identifiers linking himself as an ACSO employee. The media has reported and identified Sergeant Davis under Administrative Suspension due to alleged social media violations.

- Details about this Administrative Investigation were reported by the media while this Administrative Investigation was open. Case documents were obtained by the media in reference to two separate closed internal investigations included documents pertaining to this active Administrative Investigation. This information was obtained by the media as public record from the courts and published on March 14, 2023.

- On April 3, 2023, Sergeant Kevin Davis claimed on his Facebook post, "RACISM DOES EXIST!" after he claimed a black female received a corrective counseling and two white males were terminated for social media violations. Sergeant Davis also claimed a 3rd white male was starting the 11th week of paid suspension.

- During the course of this Administrative Investigation, numerous readers commented in the Alachua Chronicle's news articles with arguments amongst each other over alleged racial issues at ACSO. Other media outlets were reviewed during this case. There is no connection between Sergeant Davis' initial Facebook post to any media outlet. No news article quoted Sergeant Davis' Facebook posts.

- Sergeant Kevin Davis authored several Facebook posts during this Administrative Investigation. The following Facebook posts have been deleted:

    - Document 2, 3 and 4
    - Document 30 and 31
    - Document 38
    - Document 42

Inspector's Notes

On April 24, 2023, this Inspector called Sergeant Kevin Davis to inform him to report to the Office of Professional Standards on April 26, 2023, to review evidence pertaining to this Administrative Investigation. Sergeant Davis said he would inform his representative Bobi Frank. A certified letter was sent to Sergeant Davis on April 25, 2023, notifying him of the opportunity that was provided to him.

On May 1, 2023, this Inspector had not received any communication from Sergeant Davis wanting to review evidence pertaining to this Administrative Investigation.

Based on legal advice all Facebook posts other than Document #2 are considered protected speech under the 1st Amendment.

INSPECTOR'S FINDINGS

Sergeant Kevin Davis was recognized on Facebook as "Kevin Davis" and did not release information on his public Facebook page as being employed by the Alachua County Sheriff's Office. Sergeant Davis' Facebook posts, as part of this Administrative Investigation, did not identify the Alachua County Sheriff's Office.

Sergeant Davis did not make his comments under the color of his authority as an employee of the Alachua County Sheriff's Office or take claim to any entity of ACSO as specifically enumerated in Directive 353 V.A.2 - "Conduct Unbecoming an Employee – Employees will not engage in any conduct, on duty or off duty and under the color of their authority..."

Sergeant Kevin Davis did make further Facebook posts while under Administrative Investigation. Due to the media coverage, he was identified as an employee of the Alachua County Sheriff's Office but he never identified as being employed by ACSO. News media outlets discovered in this investigation referenced Sergeant Davis as being placed on suspension due to social media violations. Over 60 public comments on the Alachua Chronicle showed arguments among the readers over alleged racism at ACSO. There is no information indicating any readers ever read Sergeant Davis' Facebook posts. No media citations of Sergeant Davis' post were ever used in any media articles published. The readers were simply made aware of a social media violation through media outlets.

Based on official documents and interviews related to this investigation, this Inspector was not able to establish a preponderance of evidence that Sergeant Kevin Davis' used his color of authority as an ACSO employee; therefore, a violation of ACSO Directive 353 V.A.2 – Conduct Unbecoming an Employee – is NOT SUSTAINED.

Sergeant Kevin Davis' Facebook post of the meme with a white male and a dog dressed in a hotdog outfit was directed at Major Jack "Lance" Yaeger.

As specifically enumerated in Directive 353 V.A.7.b – "Insubordination – Insubordination will be defined as, "...any disrespectful, insolent or abusive language or action toward a superior whether in or out of the presence of the superior."

Based on legal advice this is NOT PROTECTED SPEECH under the 1st Amendment. Based on official documents and interviews related to this investigation, this Inspector was able to establish a preponderance of evidence that a violation of ACSO Directive 353 V.A.7.b – Insubordination – is SUSTAINED

Sergeant Kevin Davis' Facebook post (Document #30-31) has been established as directed toward Captain Jon Hoover.

Based on legal advice this is PROTECTED SPEACH under the 1st Amendment.

Sergeant Kevin Davis used the social media networking site Facebook to make accusatory statements of his own free will and accord. The statements of "...racism, cronyism and personal vengeance..." and challenging the promotional process, "30% of 233 employees are supervisors and 100% of employees of a particular race have been promoted with disregard for their test scores, experience, and skills; as long as they participated in the promotional process" were a reply posted in response to a formerly known Major of ACSO, Arabella Blizzard.

Based on legal advice this is PROTECTED SPEACH under the 1st Amendment.

Honorable Ron DeSantis
Governor, State of Florida
Governor's Legal Office
The Capitol, Room 209
Tallahassee, FL 32399

Attn: Brandi Smith Manley

Re: Florida Department of Law Enforcement Case No: EI-14-0186

Dear Governor DeSantis,

In the spring of 2023, this office received a request to assist the Florida Department of Law Enforcement in its investigation of the Alachua County Sheriff's Office, Sheriff Clovis Watson, Undersheriff Joel Decoursey, Colonel Chad Scott, and Major Lance Yeager, among others. Assistance of this nature is normal and routine, and as such, this office issued subpoenas and compelled the testimony of approximately 30 witnesses pursuant to the request of FDLE, which legally granted immunity to these witnesses. These requests for assistance continued into the early fall of 2023. As that investigation progressed, the evidence became clear that Sheriff Watson's conduct in office would subject him to removal by you due to his malfeasance and misfeasance in office. Much of this evidence involved allegation of malfeasance by alleged retaliation by command staff members against deputies and misfeasance of improper promotions and failure to properly run the agency. As this misfeasance and malfeasance became clear, I informed Sheriff Watson, through his counsel, that it was my intention to present this matter to the Alachua County Grand Jury for the purpose of preparing a report to be forwarded to you outlining his malfeasance and misfeasance in office and requesting his removal. As I prepared to call for the Grand Jury, in October 2023, Sheriff Clovis Watson resigned his position publicly citing health reasons. Other than then Colonel Chad Scott, the subjects of this investigation separated from service from the ACSO at or around the time of Sheriff's Watson's resignation. You appointed Emery Gainey Sheriff of Alachua County.

After Sheriff's Watson resigned, my involvement with the FDLE investigation essentially ceased. There was no reason to continue with a presentation of Sheriff Watson's misfeasance or malfeasance to the Grand Jury, as he was no longer a public official. While that investigation remained open both in my office and with FDLE, there was little to no activity involving my office from October 2023 until recently. Much has changed since that time. In October 2023, I became challenged for re-election. In April, my opponent qualified for the election, as did I. That election campaign will continue until the general election in November. Major Chad Scott is running against Sheriff Emery Gainey for Alachua County Sheriff. Clovis Watson and Joel Decoursey are both public supporters and members of Chad Scott's campaign. In April, I publicly endorsed Sheriff Gainey for re-election as Alachua County Sheriff. Sheriff Gainey has publicly endorsed me for re-election as State Attorney for the Eighth Judicial Circuit. While my support for Sheriff Gainey and his support for me has nothing to do with FDLE's investigation, my continued involvement in this matter would likely be seen by both those for and against Chad Scott as improper. Further, my opponent may consider it ripe for criticism during my campaign for State Attorney.

Recently, FDLE has informed me that their investigation is concluding and moving into formal review, and that after formal review, the report of investigation will be submitted for evaluation for charges to my office. From that conversation, it is apparent to me that FDLE intends to submit this investigation to my office with a request for prosecution for some or all these individuals. Under these circumstances, I cannot ethically prosecute, or determine not to prosecute, any person in relation to this investigation. My prosecution of any of these individuals would subject my office to judicial removal at the request of any defendant due to a clear conflict of interest. Any appearance of impropriety is sufficient cause for me to withdraw from this investigation, much less any actual conflict of interest. Further my refusal to prosecute any of these individuals, even if appropriate, which I cannot determine at this time, would likely be used against me by those who oppose my re-election. Both prosecution or lack of prosecution of these individuals creates a clear and unequivocal conflict of interest that requires that I recuse my office from the prosecutorial phase of this investigation. As such, I request that you re-assign this investigation to another State Attorney of your choosing prior to this matter being submitted for charges against any of the above-named individuals.

There are no courts dates set at this time. I will be prepared to forward the file material upon your notification of re-assignment.

Sincerely,

Brian S. Kramer
State Attorney, 8th Circuit

ADMINISTRATIVE INVESTIGATION FORM

TRACKING NUMBER	2022-IA-001
DATE INITIATED	8/18/22
INCIDENT/CALL TYPE	Juvenile Problem
INVOLVED EMPLOYEES	Ofc. Joshua Lamar #343
INCIDENT DAY/DATE/TIME	Wednesday, 8/17/22, 1118 hours
INCIDENT LOCATION	AT&T Parking Lot
RELATED CR#/CFS#	22APD01227 / 22CFS18591
COMPLAINT/ALLEGATION	Improper/Inappropriate Actions in Job Performance
COMPLAINANT	Robert Hoskins Jr. (Father of Avery Hoskins)
INVESTIGATOR	Detective Fernando Zaragoza #334
WITNESSES	Drew Wilson, Savannah Clayton, Sgt. Justin Horn, Sgt. Jimmy Smith, Ofc. Michael Bohannon, Robert Hoskinson Sr., Suzette Davis and Avery Hoskinson

COMPLAINT

On Thursday, 8/18/22 at approximately 0900 hours, Sgt. Jimmy Smith received a citizen complaint, via phone, from Robert Hoskinson Jr., who stated that an Alachua Police Officer dropped his suicidal underage son (Avery Hoskinson) off at the local Travelodge motel after paying for a room for Avery (Room #220) with his own money and buying him two McDonald's burritos. Robert, Jr. stated that the officer told his son not to leave the hotel then left him there, to fend for himself. He said that neither he nor Avery knew what the officer's name was, but provided the phone number from which the officer had contacted Robert Jr.: 352-731-0986. That number is the APD-assigned cell phone number of Ofc. Joshua Lamar.

On Thursday, 8/18/22, at approximately 0930 hours, I, Detective Fernando Zaragoza, received a citizen complaint via phone call from Robert Hoskinson Jr., who was in New Mexico, who reiterated to me the complaint he'd given to Sgt. Smith earlier. He stated that on Tuesday, 8/16/22, his seventeen-year-old son, Avery Hoskinson, ran away from his home in Georgia and took an Uber to Alachua, FL. The trip was charged to Robert Jr.'s credit card and when he was notified by the credit card company of the current $800 charge for the trip, Robert Jr. cancelled the card, leaving Avery without any money or means to make a purchase. He said that Avery has mental health problems. He said he advised Avery to call the police for help and that an APD officer paid for a room for Avery at the local Travelodge with his own money and then left him there, after telling him not to leave. He added that the officer also bought Avery two burritos from McDonald's, also with his own money. He provided me with a phone number for the officer, 352-731-0986, which I identified as the APD cell phone number for Ofc. Joshua Lamar, #343. Robert Jr., who seemed very intoxicated on the phone, became uncooperative when I attempted to question him for any further information or details and the call was terminated.

On Thursday, 8/18/22, at approximately 1000 hours, Robert Jr. called APD for a third time and reiterated his complaint to Deputy Chief Charlie Nahrwold. I sat in on the phone call, in Deputy Chief Nahrwold's office, and listened to his half of the conversation. No new information was obtained. After being confronted with his apparent inebriation, Robert Jr. ended the call.

On Thursday, 8/18/22, at the direction of Chief Jesse Sandusky, Detective Fernando Zaragoza initiated internal administrative investigation #2022-IA-001 into the allegations made by Robert Hoskinson Jr. on behalf of his juvenile son, Avery Hoskinson.

INTERVIEWS

Witness Interview - Drew Wilson, APD Dispatcher-Trainee
A recorded interview was conducted with dispatcher-trainee Drew Wilson on August 31, 2022, at 8:00 am, by Detective Fernando Zaragoza, in the Office of Professional Standards at APD. The following is a synopsis.

Drew Wilson confirmed that on 8/17/22 at approximately 11:18 hours he was the primary dispatcher on call-for-service #22CFS18591 regarding a juvenile runaway with possible mental illness standing by at the intersection of Main St. and 441, beside AT&T. He said that Avery Hoskinson told him over the phone that he was disoriented, didn't know where he was, had suffered some kind of a manic bipolar episode, and had run away from his home in McDonough, GA, and could not remember why. The officers dispatched on the call were Ofc. Michael Bohannon #328 and Ofc. Joshua Lamar #343. Both officers arrived on-scene at 1124 hours.

D. Wilson stated that Ofc. Lamar went radio-silent and did not communicate in any way with Dispatch after arriving at Vista and cancelling unit checks (at approximately 11:59 hours). Ofc. Lamar did not update his status or location until he cleared the call, at 13:05 hours. D. Wilson also verified that during this time period, Ofc. Lamar silently typed in call notes without advising Dispatch he had done so, as per standard operating procedure. D. Wilson verified that during this time period, Ofc. Lamar did not notify Dispatch that he transported Avery back to Alachua from Vista. D. Wilson stated that he was not aware that Ofc. Lamar had even left Vista until he cleared the call by silently typing in call notes without verbally notifying Dispatch.

D. Wilson was also involved in this case in that he sent a teletype message, at the request of Sgt. Smith, on 8/18/22, to McDonough Police Department and then to Cummings Police Department, requesting an officer respond to his Aunt's residence to verify that Avery had been returned safely.

Witness Interview - Savannah Clayton, APD Dispatcher
A recorded interview was conducted with dispatcher-trainer Savannah Clayton on August 31, 2022, at 8:50 am, by Detective Fernando Zaragoza, in the Office of Professional Standards at APD. The following is a synopsis.

Savannah Clayton confirmed that on 8/17/22 at approximately 11:18 hours she was on duty in Dispatch and monitored the call while (trainee) Drew Wilson handled dispatcher duties on call-for-service #22CFS18591, involving Avery Hoskinson. S. Clayton reiterated D. Wilson's version of events related to the call and confirmed that Ofc. Lamar's radio silence, lack of communication, failure to update status and location, failure to notify of citizen transport and his silent entering of call notes and were unusual and contrary to policy and standard operating procedures.

Witness Interview - Sgt. Jimmy Smith, Training/Patrol
A recorded interview was conducted with Sgt. Jimmy Smith on August 31, 2022, at 10:22 am, by Detective Fernando Zaragoza, in the Office of Professional Standards at APD. The following is a synopsis.

Sgt. Jimmy Smith was the patrol supervisor on duty when call-for-service #22CFS18591, involving Avery Hoskinson, was dispatched. Sgt. Smith said the last transmission he heard on the call was Ofc. Lamar notifying Dispatch that he was transporting Avery to Vista for voluntary examination. Sgt. Smith stated that at the time, he was unaware of Avery's age. Sgt. Smith said after that, he had no further involvement or knowledge of the call.

Sgt. Smith stated that the next morning (Thursday, 8/18/22) he received a call from Avery's father who told him that an APD officer had dropped his 17-year-old, suicidal son off at a local Travelodge, bought him two burritos from McDonald's, told him not to leave the hotel, then left him there. Sgt. Smith stated that Avery's father was apparently intoxicated, belligerent and uncooperative and refused to identify himself, at first. He eventually identified himself as Robert Hoskinson but refused to provide his own phone number. He provided what he stated was the officer's phone number, which Sgt. Smith identified as the Department-issued phone number assigned to Ofc. Joshua Lamar (352-731-0986). Sgt. Smith stated that he briefly placed Robert Hoskinson on hold to take another call, and that when he switched back, Robert Hoskinson had hung up.

Sgt. Smith then called Ofc. Joshua Lamar into his office to ask him about the incident. He said Ofc. Lamar briefed him on the details of the call and told him that Avery did not meet Baker Act criteria but that he transported him to Vista, was turned away, and transported him back to Alachua. Ofc. Lamar told Sgt. Smith that he and Aunt Susie (Avery's aunt, Suzette Davis) had agreed for Ofc. Lamar to pay for a hotel room for Avery so that he would have somewhere to stay until she could drive from Georgia to come get him. Ofc Lamar advised that he paid for the hotel room for Avery with his personal credit card and also bought him food from McDonald's before leaving him there. Sgt. Smith advised Ofc. Lamar that his actions on the call were not proper and instructed him to go to the Travelodge to attempt to contact Avery. Sgt. Smith also went to Travelodge. Avery was gone from the Travelodge upon their arrival. Ofc. Lamar determined that Avery had been picked up by his grandfather, Robert Hoskinson Sr., the night before, and that they were currently enroute to Georgia, to Aunt Suzie's home. Sgt. Smith personally called Robert Sr., verified the information given and also spoke to Avery, confirming he was with him. After they arrived in Georgia, Robert Sr. notified Sgt. Smith by phone that he had dropped Avery off at his Aunt Suzie's house. Sgt. Smith instructed Dispatcher Trainee Drew Wilson to have the local law enforcement in Georgia confirm that Avery was there and safe. Sgt. Smith advised oncoming Sgt.

Justin Horn about the request.

Sgt. Smith stated that Ofc. Lamar's actions on this call were "a complete violation of policy and procedure" and that Ofc. Lamar should have notified him, his supervisor, of events at the time of the call; should have called EMS to check Avery out, reference his claims of "blacking out;" should have Baker Acted Avery, based on the totality of information; should have notified DCF or Interface; should have taken him into protective custody and should have notified Dispatch when he transported Avery from Vista to Alachua. Sgt. Smith stated that Ofc. Lamar should have been aware of all of these policies and procedures through his knowledge, experience and training. Sgt. Smith expressed the opinion that Ofc. Lamar's actions indicated that he was trying to hide or cover up his actions on the call, after leaving Vista with Avery.

Sgt. Smith instructed Ofc. Lamar to write a report documenting the call, after the fact, as Ofc. Lamar cleared the call with no report. In his supplement to Ofc. Lamar's report, Sgt. Smith documented the fact that Ofc. Lamar told him that Avery had given him money after he paid for the room with his personal credit card. Sgt. Smith stated to me that he did not believe that Avery gave Ofc. Lamar any money at all because when Sgt. Smith spoke to Robert Sr., he asked Sgt. Smith if he could pay "the nice officer" back the money he had paid for Avery's hotel room.

I played for Sgt. Smith the Dispatch radio audio recordings of the initial call for service conversation between dispatcher Drew Wilson and Avery Hoskinson, who advises in the first few sentences that he is 17 years old and has no money to get back home.

Witness Interview - Sgt. Justin Horn, Patrol
A recorded interview was conducted with Sgt. Justin Horn on August 31, 2022, at 11:16 am, by Detective Fernando Zaragoza, in the Office of Professional Standards at APD. The following is a synopsis.

Sgt. Horn recounted that at approximately 1900 hours on 8/18/22, he was advised by Dispatch of a teletype response regarding a well-being check requested by Sgt. Smith, on Avery Hoskinson, who was in Georgia. Initially there was some confusion on the part of Forsyth County S.O. regarding Aunt Suzie's address. Sgt. Horn called Sgt. Smith and obtained Aunt Suzie's phone number. He verified her correct address, which was relayed to Forsyth County S.O. who responded there and confirmed that Avery was present and well. Sgt. Horn stated that was the entirety of his involvement in the case, and that he had no other information or knowledge pertaining to it.

Witness Interview - Ofc. Michael Bohannon, Patrol
A recorded interview was conducted with Ofc. Michael Bohannon on September 2, 2022, at 8:14 am, by Detective Fernando Zaragoza, in the Office of Professional Standards at APD. The following is a synopsis.

Ofc. Michael Bohannon recounted that he was dispatched as primary officer, along with Ofc. Joshua Lamar, on call for service #22CFS18591, on 8/17/22, involving Avery Hoskinson. He made contact with Avery who was already talking to Ofc. Lamar. He said Avery stated that he had blacked out and taken an Uber from Georgia. Avery told him he suffered from dissociative identity disorder but had not been professionally diagnosed. Ofc. Bohannon suggested to Avery that he go to Shands Vista, voluntarily, to be evaluated by mental health professionals and Avery agreed, as did Ofc. Lamar. Ofc. Bohannon stated, "It was my fault completely" in that he knew Avery was a juvenile but was not aware that a juvenile could not voluntarily be evaluated for a Baker Act. Ofc. Bohannon then stated that Ofc. Lamar volunteered to transport Avery to Vista, telling Ofc. Bohannon, "I'll take him." Ofc. Bohannon stated that he returned to service shortly thereafter and had no further involvement in the call or communication with Ofc. Lamar regarding the call.

Witness Interview - Robert Hoskinson Sr.
A recorded interview was conducted with Robert Hoskinson Sr. (Grandfather of Avery) via telephone on September 6, 2022, at 9:23 am, by Detective Fernando Zaragoza. The following is a synopsis.

Robert Hoskinson Sr. got a call from Avery's dad (his son, Robert Jr.) on Wednesday, 8/17/22, who informed him that Avery had taken an Uber from Georgia to Alachua, FL and that an APD officer had put him up in a Travelodge. Robert Jr. asked Robert Sr.to go pick Avery up from the hotel because "he was scared." Robert Sr. picked Avery up and brought him back to his home in Ocala, FL. The next day, he drove Avery to Cummings, GA, to Aunt Susie's house. He got a call from "Sgt. Somebody" as he was taking Avery to GA, to verify that Avery was with him and to verify Aunt Suzie's address to have local law enforcement do a well-being check on Avery after he arrived. He stated that Avery did not make any suicidal statements to him.

Witness Interview - Suzette Davis
A recorded interview was conducted with Suzette Davis (Aunt of Avery) via telephone on September 6, 2022, at 9:35 am, by Detective Fernando Zaragoza. The following is a synopsis.

Suzette Davis stated that she is Avery's great aunt. She received a call from his stepfather, followed by a call from an Alachua Police officer, advising her that Avery was in Alachua and inquiring if she could come pick him up. She advised that it might take her a couple of days to get to Alachua from Georgia, due to business concerns. She stated that Ofc. Lamar offered to acquire a hotel room for Avery for a couple of days. She did not ask Ofc. Lamar to put Avery up in a hotel.

Suzette stated that after Robert Sr. brought Avery to her house on 8/18/22, Avery confided in her that for the past couple of years, he didn't want to live. Avery told her that he had researched methods of suicide on the internet and that he made the trip to Florida with the intention of committing suicide because he didn't want anyone in his family to find him dead. Avery also told her that he had previously attempted suicide by taking Benadryl tablets.

Witness Interview - Avery Hoskinson
A recorded interview was conducted with Avery Hoskinson via telephone on September 6, 2022, at 9:50 am, by Detective Fernando Zaragoza. The following is a synopsis.

Avery stated that he took an Uber from Georgia to Alachua, he didn't remember why, that his memory of the incident was "foggy." He recounted calling the police and being contacted by two police officers. One of the officers drove him to "the Department" and then to a motel. He stated that the officer paid for a motel room for him to wait until his family could pick him up. He stated that the officer paid for the motel room and some McDonald's food, out of his own pocket. Avery stated that he did not give the officer any money. Avery stated that he did not have any money. After some prompting, Avery recalled that the officer took him to Vista but then they "had to leave." He could not advise why. Avery told me that he has had suicidal thoughts for the past few years and that his family is aware. He told me that he is receiving treatment and therapy. He expressed gratitude to Ofc. Lamar for his kindness.

Subject Interview - Ofc. Joshua Lamar
A recorded interview was conducted with subject Ofc. Joshua Lamar on September 9, 2022, at 9:00 am, at Swick House, by Detective Fernando Zaragoza. Present for the interview were Sgt. Chad Howell and FOP representatives Sgt. Carlos Hunt and Sgt. Steven Hayes. The following is a synopsis.

It was established that Ofc. Lamar was a dispatcher for approximately five years before becoming a police officer in July 2021and that Ofc. Lamar is currently a probationary police officer due to the fact that his probationary period was extended for six months by Chief Sandusky due to deficiencies in his job performance. Ofc. Lamar's experience handling Baker Act calls was established via Zuercher reports that showed that, in his time as a police officer, he had been dispatched on twelve (12) separate Baker Act calls and had completed seven (7) Baker Act incident reports, three (3) of which involved juveniles.

Ofc. Lamar recounted events surrounding call-for-service 22CFS18591 of 8/17/22. Ofc. Lamar stated that he and Ofc. Bohannon were dispatched to a runaway juvenile call at AT&T parking lot, where they contacted Avery Hoskinson. Avery advised that he was a runaway, 17 years of age, had no money or a way to get back home and that he had taken an Uber from McDonough, GA and somehow ended up in Alachua, FL. Avery told the officers that he believed he suffered from several different mental illnesses, but did not currently want to harm himself. Ofc. Bohannon suggested a voluntary Baker Act for Avery and Ofc. Lamar agreed. He stated that Ofc. Bohannon asked him to transport Avery to Vista, due to his cramped back seat (half-cage). At Vista, Ofc. Lamar was advised that he could not leave Avery there because a juvenile cannot voluntarily consent to be evaluated for a Baker Act. Ofc. Lamar then contacted several of Avery's family members by telephone and arranged that he would acquire a hotel room for Avery so that he would have somewhere to stay until his family could come from Georgia to pick him up. Ofc. Lamar drove Avery to Travelodge, paid for a room with his personal credit card for two nights and also bought Avery McDonald's. He then left Avery at the motel and went back into service.

Ofc. Lamar stated that he is familiar with the APD policy regarding Baker Acts and juveniles. He stated that he knew a juvenile cannot voluntarily submit themselves for a mental health evaluation but took Avery to Vista regardless, because Ofc. Bohannon suggested it.

I asked Ofc. Lamar about the exchange (captured on in-car-camera recordings) that he had with Avery in his patrol car after being turned away from Vista. In that exchange, Ofc. Lamar asked Avery to talk to him and asked him if he'd had any bad thoughts lately. Avery responded, "When I woke up this morning, I just didn't really even want to do anything. I just thought if I just died and disappeared it would be better off for everybody else." Ofc. Lamar's only response to that statement was to ask for Avery's parents' phone numbers.

Ofc. Lamar stated that he did not believe that Avery was being truthful in his statement and said it because he was trying to get Baker acted. Ofc. Lamar stated that he still did not believe that Avery qualified for a Baker Act.

Ofc. Lamar said that he didn't recall deactivating his in-car camera system while still sitting in his car with Avery at Vista "but probably I did, heading back to Alachua." Ofc. Lamar stated that he was aware of the policy requiring that in-car camera system is to remain activated until a call is completed. He acknowledged that Avery was still in his patrol car at the time and that the call had not yet been completed.

I inquired as to the fact that Ofc. Lamar had no communication of any kind with Dispatch, his supervisor, or any other member of the Department from the time he exited Vista with Avery at 12:10 pm until silently entering call notes at 12:48:40--a period of over thirty-eight minutes. Ofc. Lamar maintained complete radio silence for a period of more than an hour, until gong "Available" at 1305 hours. Ofc. Lamar stated that he was making phone calls and taking Avery to Travelodge.

Ofc. Lamar admitted to not carrying out the required procedures or abiding by policy by transporting Avery back to Alachua and to Travelodge without notifying dispatch in any way. He stated that he didn't call it in because Dispatch was busy with calls and he wanted to handle it so it wouldn't "be a burden" to anyone else.

In the supplemental report completed by Sgt. Smith, he documented that Ofc. Lamar told him that he had used his own personal credit card to rent Avery a room at the Travelodge and that Avery gave him money back. I asked Ofc. Lamar how much money Avery gave him, to which he replied, "Avery didn't give me any money." Ofc. Lamar explained that he was a little stressed at the time and he might not have recounted accurately to Sgt. Smith what he meant to convey, which was that Avery's family had discussed compensating Ofc. Lamar for paying for the room and that he had told them it was unnecessary. Ofc. Lamar denied deliberately lying to Sgt. Smith.

Ofc. Lamar admitted that he had violated APD of policy and procedure when he entered six separate call notes, from 12:48 pm until 1:05 pm, without advising Dispatch that he had done so.

Ofc. Lamar voluntarily made a statement in which he stated that he accepted "all responsibility and accountability for the way that the call was handled." He admitted that he had violated several policies and procedures but that he was only trying to do the right thing. Ofc. Lamar added that it was hard to reach out to supervisors or senior officers because of concerns of "backlash" or "people talking about you." Ofc. Lamar stated that he was doing the best that he could.

SUMMARY

As confirmed by the evidence (records, reports and audio and visual recordings) as well as sworn statements made by witnesses and Ofc. Lamar himself, Ofc. Lamar violated multiple APD policies and procedures when he attempted to submit juvenile Avery Hoskins for a voluntary Baker Act then left him at the local Travelodge in a room for which he personally paid.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. On Wednesday, 8/17/22, beginning at approximately 11:19 am, while on dispatched call for service 22CFSA18591 (CR# 22APD01227) Ofc. Lamar attempted to submit juvenile Avery Hoskins for a voluntary Baker Act, in violation of Department policy and procedure. In his interview, Ofc. Lamar admitted to doing so.

2. After being turned away by Vista staff due to Avery being a minor and while still actively working the call, at approximately 12:19 pm, Ofc. Lamar deactivated the in-car camera system in his patrol vehicle, in violation of Department policy and procedure. In his interview, Ofc. Lamar admitted to doing so.

3. At an unknown time between 12:19 and 1:00 pm, Ofc. Lamar transported Avery to the local Travelodge without notifying Dispatch in any way, in violation of Department policy and procedure. In his interview, Ofc. Lamar admitted to doing so.

4. Ofc. Lamar did not keep Dispatch advised of changes in his status and location, in violation of Department policy and procedure. Ofc. Lamar admitted that he had not done so.

5. Ofc. Lamar rented a room for Avery at the Travelodge and paid with his own personal credit card. Ofc. Lamar then left Avery there and went back into service, in violation of Department policy and procedure. In his interview, Ofc. Lamar admitted to doing so.

6. Ofc. Lamar did not notify a supervisor of the call at any time, in violation of Department policy and procedure. In his interview, Ofc. Lamar admitted that he had not done so.

7. Ofc. Lamar did not notify DCF and/or Interface that he was dealing with a juvenile in need of services, in violation of Department policy and procedure. In his interview, Ofc. Lamar admitted that he had not done so.

8. Ofc. Lamar was untruthful to Sgt. Smith when he told him that Avery gave him money after he paid for a hotel room, in violation of Department policy and procedure. In his interview, Ofc. Lamar denied intentionally lying to Sgt. Smith.

Honorable Ron DeSantis
Governor, State of Florida
Governor's Legal Office
The Capitol, Room 209
Tallahassee, FL 32399

Attn: Brandi Smith Manley

Re: Florida Department of Law Enforcement Case No: EI-14-0186

Dear Governor DeSantis,

In the spring of 2023, this office received a request to assist the Florida Department of Law Enforcement in its investigation of the Alachua County Sheriff's Office, Sheriff Clovis Watson, Undersheriff Joel Decoursey, Colonel Chad Scott, and Major Lance Yeager, among others. Assistance of this nature is normal and routine, and as such, this office issued subpoenas and compelled the testimony of approximately 30 witnesses pursuant to the request of FDLE, which legally granted immunity to these witnesses. These requests for assistance continued into the early fall of 2023. As that investigation progressed, the evidence became clear that Sheriff Watson's conduct in office would subject him to removal by you due to his malfeasance and misfeasance in office. Much of this evidence involved allegation of malfeasance by alleged retaliation by command staff members against deputies and misfeasance of improper promotions and failure to properly run the agency. As this misfeasance and malfeasance became clear, I informed Sheriff Watson, through his counsel, that it was my intention to present this matter to the Alachua County Grand Jury for the purpose of preparing a report to be forwarded to you outlining his malfeasance and misfeasance in office and requesting his removal. As I prepared to call for the Grand Jury, in October 2023, Sheriff Clovis Watson resigned his position publicly citing health reasons. Other than then Colonel Chad Scott, the subjects of this investigation separated from service from the ACSO at or around the time of Sheriff's Watson's resignation. You appointed Emery Gainey Sheriff of Alachua County.

After Sheriff's Watson resigned, my involvement with the FDLE investigation essentially ceased. There was no reason to continue with a presentation of Sheriff Watson's misfeasance or malfeasance to the Grand Jury, as he was no longer a public official. While that investigation remained open both in my office and with FDLE, there was little to no activity involving my office from October 2023 until recently. Much has changed since that time. In October 2023, I became challenged for re-election. In April, my opponent qualified for the election, as did I. That election campaign will continue until the general election in November. Major Chad Scott is running against Sheriff Emery Gainey for Alachua County Sheriff. Clovis Watson and Joel Decoursey are both public supporters and members of Chad Scott's campaign. In April, I publicly endorsed Sheriff Gainey for re-election as Alachua County Sheriff. Sheriff Gainey has publicly endorsed me for re-election as State Attorney for the Eighth Judicial Circuit. While my support for Sheriff Gainey and his support for me has nothing to do with FDLE's investigation, my continued involvement in this matter would likely be seen by both those for and against Chad Scott as improper. Further, my opponent may consider it ripe for criticism during my campaign for State Attorney.

Recently, FDLE has informed me that their investigation is concluding and moving into formal review, and that after formal review, the report of investigation will be submitted for evaluation for charges to my office. From that conversation, it is apparent to me that FDLE intends to submit this investigation to my office with a request for prosecution for some or all these individuals. Under these circumstances, I cannot ethically prosecute, or determine not to prosecute, any person in relation to this investigation. My prosecution of any of these individuals would subject my office to judicial removal at the request of any defendant due to a clear conflict of interest. Any appearance of impropriety is sufficient cause for me to withdraw from this investigation, much less any actual conflict of interest. Further my refusal to prosecute any of these individuals, even if appropriate, which I cannot determine at this time, would likely be used against me by those who oppose my re-election. Both prosecution or lack of prosecution of these individuals creates a clear and unequivocal conflict of interest that requires that I recuse my office from the prosecutorial phase of this investigation. As such, I request that you re-assign this investigation to another State Attorney of your choosing prior to this matter being submitted for charges against any of the above-named individuals.

There are no courts dates set at this time. I will be prepared to forward the file material upon your notification of re-assignment.

Sincerely,

Brian S. Kramer

COMPLAINT – Brief description of the incident to include when and where the alleged conduct violation(s) took place.

I was recently advised of concerning Facebook posts made by Michelle Sherfield during the past 15 months. I opened Sherfield's FB page which displayed several posts that were racially insensitive and biased. Those posts were available for public viewing. On 1/5/21, Sherfield posted that she [redacted] was employed with the ACSO. Since identifying herself as an employee, Sherfield has posted four posts that display a racists perspective and are not conducive with fostering healthy and positive community relations. Ironically, Sherfield is employed as Gov. + Community Relations Director.

I swear or affirm that the information I have provided in this statement is the truth and nothing but the truth.
